Suspense is altogether maintained for what it's worth through the captions, with the titling in a straightforward way, carrying this picture along. The story, if there is one, is that of the Sudcree fleet returning to the scene of the Coronel disaster with Fisher's instructions to Sudcree to wipe out the German fleet that gave Admiral Braddock and England about their first defeat of the war on water. The reproductions are claimed authentic, through the co-operation of the British admiralty.

It must be noted that for both countries their admirals chose to go down with their ships. That's the real and only thrill.

Near ludricous is that portion of the picture showing the haste in which Admiral Sudcree equipped the "Invincible," then in drydock. It's so minute in details, even to supplies going aboard, that Sudcree had his boat start off the ways at exactly 6 p. m., the exact minute and the day he told Lord Fisher the boat would be ready to leave.

Nothing new in the film, except the reproduction. Battle scenes afloat and on land have been too numerous in individual productions and in the news weeklies to leave anything other than the reproduction here as a novelty. And one must be patient to watch 9,000 feet of flowing film to see 1,500 feet of action.

As a production otherwise, okay, with direction excellent. Direction here is the best thing in the entire picture. There's a mass to handle all of the time and it is well done, as far as the director did it, in every way.

But the picture calls for a small house, with the Art Theatre type preferred or those of around 1,000 capacity. The picture can only depend upon the men.

Cameo is about a 400-seater. Picture was booked in for two weeks and likely will be held over as expected. Business Sunday afternoon capacity at 3 with about 200 waiting in the lobby. Around 6 another lobby line of 100 was outside.

Tiffany Colored Classics has started its second Coast production at the Tiff-Stahl studios. Duncan Renaldo, Joan Meredith, Jack Van Aire, Mary Dow and Aline Lopez in cast. Title "Medallion," with Hans Reinhard directing.

G. M. Watters and Luther Reed, collaborating on adaptation of "The Glory Girl," Par.

A profoundly moving picture of family life in Germany during the war, giving a sympathetic insight into the effect upon the humble people of rural Bavaria of the great struggle. As an artistic creation the production is magnificent in the amazing effectiveness of its fine realism and in its utter simplicity. As a boxoffice attraction at the high scale its fate is in the balance.

In its favor are some of the finest and most touching passages of high sentiment ever shown on the screen, and the dramatic elevation of Mrs. Mann to picture eminence, which bids to exceed in public interest the sudden stardom of Mary Carr. The abundant excellence of the creation itself and the fascinating circumstances of Mrs. Mann's triumph are enormously valuable assets, and will probably suffice to give the Fox people another "Over the Hill."

Any obstacle that might have been anticipated from the risk of selling a sympathetic treatment of the German side of the war has been minimized by developing an American side to the story and by its happy ending, with the mother happily joined with her surviving son, by now a prosperous merchant in New York. The same thing works out in the tone of the story. While some of the sombre war-time episodes—the news of the death of three sons coming upon the grieving mother at home—are compensated by the lighter, sentimental sequences at the

"NEWARK'S GOOD-BYE TO MELSON"

Good-bye, Charlie Melson

Dear Charlie: Just a few lines to let you know that we are truly sorry that you are about to leave—for a time at least—the stage of the Branford theatre.

When you first came to Newark we were busy conducting a futile campaign against presentations of the type in which you appear. We argued, among other things, that they were, so to speak, thrust down the throats of spectators who had come to see the films. We said that the elaborate stage show had no business in theatres supposedly devoted to photoplays.

We believe yet that at first the presentations were forced on the customers. But there isn't any doubt, Charlie, that you've made film fans like your seyle of entertainment.

That you've created a huge following is evidenced by the fact that Harry W. Crull, the shrewdest showman in Newark, has retained you at the Branford for so long a period. Further proof lies in the fact that that astute business man, Jacob Fabian, has your signature on a five-year contract.

You haven't won us over to presentations. But you have reconciled us to them.

If we must watch them, we prefer the kind that Harry Crull authors. And if we must listen to a master of ceremonies, we'd rather that he be you.

To say that your many Newark friends are going to miss you is as true as it is trite.

Goodbye, Charlie, and good luck.

Charlie Leaves His Faithful Flock

Charlie Melson isn't leaving the Branford without a suitable send-off, by any means. Well-wishers taxed the capacity of the theatre over the week-end to see Charlie in his farewell Merry Mad Gang presentation, cleverly devised by Harry W. Crull and thoughtfully titled "Goodbye, Charlie.

It is also the occasion for Melson to introduce his successors, Junior Nazarro, who was warmly received, but the occasion by right belongs to Charlie. Nearly seven months since he arrived, it has been a long stay for the popular master of ceremonies and it was necessary for him to go back and revive some of the songs he first offered his admirers. There was "Birth of the Blues," his favorite; "Me and My Shadow"—in fact, he had to sing five before his audience was satisfied.

To say that Melson admirers taxed the capacity of the Branford is putting it mildly. They overflowed into the alley in the rear of the theatre to bid their goodbyes.

There is also a picture on the bill this week. It is an interesting story of stage life, with Esther Ralston looking splendid in a brunette wig. Neil Hamilton is opposite her.

The film is an achievement in artless realism. There isn't a moment when it does not live, and the whole production is utterly guiltless of theatrical device. Simple people, kindly and happy, are suddenly engulfed in the conflict, and tragedy comes upon the gentle villagers, among whom stalk the hated military martinets. It is the arrogant military class that plays the villain. The people are the pitiful puppets.

The story itself does not bear telling, so simple and unadorned is the commonplace history of a widow and her four sons. Joseph goes to America before the war, marries and has his own little delicatessen shop, and a baby is born. Then the war comes. The other three brothers go to the front and one by one are killed. There is no "war stuff," the war tragedy is enacted in the homely cottage of the lone mother. Joseph goes overseas in the A. E. F., leaving his wife to handle the shop. The story leaves him while the mother back in Bavaria is slowly broken as the war machine takes her three remaining boys—Franz, the handsome; Johannes, the strong, and, finally, Andreas, the beautiful.

Armistice Day finds her destitute of life and joy, while Joseph returns from France to America to find that his business had grown to a rich chain of stores.

His first move is to send for mother. From sombre tragedy the picture here takes on a tender and livelier quality. Mother has to go to school to learn her letters for American immigration purposes. Upon the Ellis Island examination she goes to pieces and is detained. But quite innocently she wanders out of the detention pen, reaches the city and meanders around under the care of kindly cops, who at length bring her safe to haven in Joseph's very modern apartment, where the frantic Joseph, returning from his search, finds her cuddling the baby before the fire.

Mrs. Mann's playing of the big role is a miracle of unaffected naturalness. Her Frau Bernle lives from the moment the film starts to its finish. She looks the part and she plays it with utter absence of effort or consciousness as a stately and white crowned old mother might go about her household tasks. And if this isn't art so much the worse for the trained and inspired acting profession.

Something of the same effortless simplicity has been communicated to the whole cast. The picture is rich in fascinating characters, such as the pompous but kindly old German letter carrier (Albert Gran) whose agonizing task it is to deliver the casualty notices to Frau Bernle; the Burgomeister of the village (August Tollaire), and the Innkeeper (Hughie Mack), besides a host of others.

In a pictorial sense the production is a revel in beauty and significant detail, with camera shots that are arresting. Such are the views of departing soldiers seen marching through the gay village streets from the vantage point of the church belfry; the panorama of the farming countryside swathed in morning mists; the church steeple with the tolling bells reflected in the still mill pond and a myriad of such color shots. Happy character bits likewise go to the building up of eloquent atmosphere and bit by bit the illusion of reality in place and people is created and never lost through nearly two hours.

Movietone is again employed with excellent discretion. It supplies an appropriate score and interpolates a few sound effects. When the young villagers are bringing in the hay, snatches of their song are brought out; again in the only battlefield sequence a faint voice is heard through the mists crying "mutterchen," and for one passage (where the stricken mother dreams her brood are again gathered about the supper board) a male chorus sings faintly as though at a great distance, or as though a choir were singing in a far off organ loft in church. The treatment follows closely upon that employed in "Sunrise," avoiding emphasis that might clash with the illusion.

There can be no question of the work's merit. There is only one more chance for it to fall short of enormous popularity, the possibility that the screen public will shy off from a serious war picture at this time, when the subject has been pretty well exploited. That's quite remote, very remote, for a picture of this class and strength. Rush.

SPORTING GOODS

Paramount production and release. Starring Richard Dix. Directed by Malcolm St. Clair from story by Tom Crizer and Ray Harris. Titles by George Marion, Jr. At Paramount, New York, week of Feb. 12. Running time, over 60 minutes.

Richard Shelby	Richard Dix
Mr. Jordon	Ford Sterling
Alice Elliott	Gertrude Olmstead
Henry Thorpe	Philip Strange
Mrs. Elliott	Myrtle Stedman
Regan	Wade Boteler
Timothy Stanfield	Claude King
Mrs. Stanfield	Maude Turner Gordon

Light comedy harboring several strong situations which, combined with George Marion, Jr.'s titling, create sure and plentiful laughter.

Dix is ably supported by Gertrude Olmstead in the leading fem role. Cast delivers enjoyable business all the way through, Sterling and Dix dividing comedy honors in one of the two hit comedy situations.

Dix is a sporting goods salesman, also the inventor of a new type of golf suit guaranteed to give players more freedom for arms and shoulders.

On the strength of the car and his obvious acquaintance with Stanfield, a financier, Dix, the girl and her mother, go for a ride into town when their car breaks down on the road.

Sterling, as Jordon, head of a department store and a golf bug, is induced to go out on the golf course and watch the easy style of Dix's garment. Jordon is convinced. It begins to rain and the suit begins to grow longer, the coat finally reaching below his knees and the trousers stretching to the floor.

In another scene, where the menace lays plans to embarrass Dix in a poker game, the latter is called to the phone three times. Each time two of the players leave the table and the other slips a deuce into Dix's cards in exchange for another card. Every time Dix returns to the table to pick up his hand he notices the deuces growing. Mugs humorously when he finally spots the four deuces and wins four grand.

Production handled neatly and carried along at a good rate of speed. Dix's reception by the manager of the hotel and a regiment of redcaps create more laughs.

Not exceptionally strong but high class program fare which should get money. Mori.

ROSE-MARIE

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and release. Featuring Joan Crawford, House Peters and James Murray. Adapted from operetta of same name and directed by Lucien Hubbard. John Arnold, cameraman. At Capitol, New York, week February 11. Running time, 70 minutes.

Joan Crawford	George Cooper
James Murray	Polly Moran
House Peters	Lionel Belmore
Creighton Hale	Harry Gribbon

The way the cast reads at the head of this notice is also the manner in which the Capitol program is listing the "principal players." It's a bad idea for an ordinary program feature that will serve as a fair open week filler, preferably during the hot weather when the mountain scenery won't be hard on the eyes and thoughts of vacation days.

How the uninitiated are going to pick out who's who in this one is a problem. Maybe they're all hiding, including Edmund Goulding, whose name doesn't crop up anywhere. This is the picture M-G-M scrapped after sinking $50,000 in it, gave it out as a press story, started to remake with Goulding and felt a bit sorry about it all. Lucien Hubbard gets screen credit for directing. How much of it actually is his is guess work.

But that cast idea. No character parts on program or in a lead title. Identifying the players as they appear with their names italicized down in one corner of a title is still a pretty fair system.

Especially value when trying to put over a new personality. In this instance it seems to be James Murray. Few at the Capitol this week will be able to pick him out, except by deduction. As the studios seem afraid to leave anything to the imagination of their followers, why give that same public credit for being able to decipher an incomplete cast listing system.

Murray looks like a bet for featured roles. Judging on this performance it's doubtful if stardom will ever enfold him. He's not the type. No one will ever associate Murray with the collar ad boys, but he's a masculine appearing youth whom the men will probably accept more readily than women. Formerly a member of the Capitol's uniformed staff (doorman) this is Murray's first picture there, and he's due at this house again next week in "The Crowd."

"Rose-Marie" isn't as bad as the advance reports rated it. It's just a picture with whatever following Joan Crawford has picked up to help. It's up in high altitudes, with the famed red coated force liberally sharing the story. The heavy dramatic incidents and the slow-motion miniature ice break climax figure to hold enough interest to make it passable with the average audience even if familiar. Eliminating 750 feet would help plenty.

Continuity jumps around and just what becomes of the heroine's husband isn't quite clear. But "the end" has her going downstream with Murray who has been under suspicion for murder since reel two. A questionable inclusion is the inferred intention of attack by Murray on Miss Crawford, the rough and ready boy seeing the light when the girl starts to pray for protection. Titles, uncredited, are rather awful and too many in number. Photography is okay.

Miss Crawford doesn't do badly, Murray is pretty fair and House Peters makes the sergeant reasonably convincing. "Pigeon" Polly Moran also rings in on a dance hall scene, and presumably George Cooper serves as an adequate menace.

Capacity Saturday matinee audience accepted the picture without comment either way, and gave it a light smattering of applause as it closed. Sufficiently trimmed down, "Rose-Marie" should fill in on one of those "dog day" weeks for a break even or slightly better gross with title a possible aid. Sid.

THAT'S MY BABY

Universal production and release starring Reginald Denny. Directed by Fred Newmeyer from original story by Denny; Albert De Mond titled. At the Roxy, New York, week of Feb. 11. Running time, 56 mins.

Jimmy Norton	Reginald Denny
Molly Moran	Barbara Kent
Sylvia Van Tassel	Lillian Rich
Pat	Tom O'Brien
Lucien	Armand Kaliz
Pudge	Jane La Verne
Mrs. Van Tassel	Mathilde Brundage
Perkins	Wilson Benge
Second Butler	Charles Coleman
Valet	Art Currier

Reginald Denny's magnanimousness in permitting the four or five-year-old Jane La Verne to steal the picture from him goes double, considering that the star also authored the story which gives the kiddie actress the opportunities she has.

Little Miss La Verne is a female Jackie Coogan and will be heard from soon and often if handled right. Universal has a better bet in the kidlet than Baby Peggy was. Considering the child actress' performance, the existent shortcomings of the story and direction don't really matter. After all, if the purpose was to give the youngster an opportunity, some concession to faithfulness must be made.

In a somewhat fantastic manner Denny meets little orphaned Pudge. Becoming an unwilling "father" on the eve of his marriage to a social climber and a feminine fortune hunter, whose affection is obviously influenced by the hero's financial rating, the youngster is instrumental in halting the nuptials and uniting the sympathetic nurse (Barbara Kent) with Denny, these being the "parents" the orphan selects for herself.

When there is danger of the action falling down, rescue and accident scenes, among other things, are interpolated and so, for 55 minutes, the audience overlooks much of the realistic standards and is entranced by Jane La Verne's performance. Albert De Mond's breezy titles also help.

The kiddie overshadows Denny, and the rest of the support is accordingly slighted, although Tom O'Brien as the breezy traffic cop makes most of his opportunities.

"That's My Daddy" is not a costly production nor a great one, but will make money, please generally and above all impress because of little Jane La Verne. Abel.

CONEY ISLAND

F. B. O. production and release. Directed by Ralph Ince from story (probably original) by J. J. O'Neill. Lois Wilson and Lucila Mendez starred. Titles by Jack Conway. At Keith's Hippodrome, New York, week Feb. 13. Running time, about 63 minutes.

Joan Wellman	Lois Wilson
Joy Carroll	Lucila Mendez
Tammany Burke	Eugene Strong
Bob Wainwright	Rudolph Cameron
Hughey Cooper	William Irving

"Coney Island" can play any picture house, and that takes in the biggest, for a week. It's a corking action-romantic meller with Coney Island as its title and background.

Just one of those happy things that F. B. O. happened to hit. Though that does not remove any of the glory for J. J. O'Neill, who wrote this worthwhile story, or the excellent direction of Ralph Ince. Without knowing what F. B. O. spent for this "Coney Island," if it cost $300,000 it would not be a whit better—and Joe Kennedy didn't go for that amount—not for F. B. O. this season.

The Coney Island scenes get Ahs from the audience. Especially when the audience is carried up and down the roller coaster. While the big coaster is called "The Giant Dipper" on its front and the admission is 10c., it and its dips look like the One Mile Streak at Luna Park, where the gate is 25c. Of course, this could have been taken at one of the beach resorts on the Pacific.

Applause breaks out several times in front. The loudest is when Lucila Mendez K. O.'s the heavy by kicking him on the chin, and another when the cops arrive to balk the gangsters. The way the gangsters started to wreck the joint on the platform of the coaster is perfect and speaks as well for Mr. O'Neill's outdoor detail throughout. Or perhaps it was Mr. Ince.

Scoring at the Hip was most apt. Music embodied many pop numbers, all adding to the situation at hand. Two or three fights and a general melee toward the finish with the gangsters, but the best battle occurred in the dressing room of the cabaret show between Miss Mendez and another girl. Miss Mendez runs away with the entire film. The cousin, Lois Wilson, has a placid role, one of those sweet parts as a ticket taker at the coaster with the ride's owner in love with her.

Miss Mendez is a flip dancer and utters many of Jack Conway's fast captions, with none of those too high or two fast for the audience. Several get their laughs and the others neatly fit into the atmosphere. In a story of this character the caption writer, if he can do it, and Conway can, should be allowed to go as far as he likes. When will the producers learn that one of the best word things liked mostly by the American public is slang, even if they don't always understand it. It's something by itself to talk about. All book and periodical publishers have discovered that much.

Tale is consistent and handled that way. The ride's prop. must have a clear July 4 to get over. Otherwise the political boss of the Island will cop his coaster. Intertwined is the millionaire who likes the cabaret girl but falls for the cashier and goes to work as an engineer on the ride under an assumed name.

The finish is the picture's only weakness. Probably no one could think of anything else. At least it helps to keep a clean picture clean. It's too quick and illogical, but a minor defect in an otherwise bear in its class.

Besides which this film permits of a clown, carnival or circus ballyhoo in front of the house or on the street. The Hip has a mechanical clown in front making a good ballyhooed flash.

"Coney Island" is by far the best picture the Hip has had. That says very little for a house that has held the worst, but this F. B. O. will do business this week for the Hip because it more than makes good under one of the gingerest of names. And a name that should draw by itself.

THE WHIP WOMAN

Produced by Robert Kane. Released by First National. Story by Forrest Halsey and Leland Hayward. Directed by Joseph C. Boyle. Presented at the Greenwich Village theatre, New York, for a two weeks' engagement, starting Feb. 11. Running time, 63 minutes.

Sari	Estelle Taylor
Michael	Antonio Moreno
The Baron	Lowell Sherman
Countess	Hedda Hopper
Mill Haidane	Julanne Johnston

Pronounced and continuous razzing greeted the unreeling of this crude film on the opening. Subtitles so trite that the spectators anticipated them; director ineptness so conspicuous that it seemed funny; acting that reflected the general quality of the production, all combined to spell turkey in caps. Why talk about quickies and state righters when Robert Kane, a moneyed producer, releasing through an important organization like First National, can go so far wrong.

The story takes place in Hungary, where Sari, a peasant girl, has a large horse whip as a Hungarian equivalent to roller skates. She gives the boys a dose of the lash whenever they get fresh. She drives a plow by day, and at night has a rather indefinite status in a local wine shop. Her hatred of men is intense, and nobody has ever caught her when she didn't have her whip with her.

She beats up a young aristocrat, but later saves him from fulfilling a suicide urge. At this point she knocks him on the head. The hero and heroine throughout the picture wallop one another plenty.

Dragging the aristocrat to her home which, a subtitle tells us, has never been entered by a man, she undresses him and puts him to bed.

The next subtitle reads:

"An Awakening Such as Sari and Michael Had Never Imagined."

The ripening of love is a matter of but a few feet of film. The conventional complications from the direction of the aristocratic family are in due time circumvented, and the picture closes with an assurance that they were married. Land.

OPENING NIGHT

Produced by Hollywood Pictures, released by Columbia. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Producer appears on title sheet as Harry Cohn. Lobby data is scanty. Stars Claire Windsor and John Bowers. Story by Albert Payson Terhune. At the Academy, New York, Feb. 13. Running time, 56 minutes.

Several of Jannings' pictures with an unhappy ending appear to have inspired the idea among producers that the time is ripe for that sort of screen material. Here it doesn't work out satisfactorily. The tale is artificial; always one is conscious that the people and events are being manipulated by the dramatist, director and actors entirely to gain effects and without regard to what people would logically do in real life.

Events are not well knit. For instance, a man, believed to have been lost at sea, returns to find his wife being won by a rival. Because he has played the coward during the sinking of a liner, he voluntarily fades out of the picture, leaving fortune and loved ones behind, and taking a job as washer in a garage. You can't help but think he could have disclosed himself and nobody would ever have known of the disgrace, and so the whole business seems foolish, rather than heart rending as the picture would have it.

Sentiment is spread on pretty thick. By a coincidence the hero in his capacity of automobile washer is called upon to wash his own Rolls Royce, when the car comes back after having taken the wife and her new husband on their honeymoon. He climbs into the ritzy tonneau and picking up the trick speaking apparatus, as was his wont when he was prosperous, he murmurs to the absent chauffeur, "Home," and thereupon drops dead. The pathos is laid on so thick, here as in other places, that it defeats itself and one is disposed to meet it with levity.

The picture has not been happily cast. The lobby billing features Claire Windsor and John Bowers, although the principal character (role is typical of the sort Jannings plays) is done by an actor who never gets into the step or spirit of his character, partly because he is rather an obvious stagey actor and partly because it is an extraordinarily difficult role, of a middle-aged man who has both to draw sympathy, and still establish that audience attitude that will accept his ultimate defeat at the hands of fate. Jannings might do it, but not just a mechanical actor.

The Windsor and Bowers roles are very incidental. The happy outcome is theirs, but nobody cares. The story is loosely woven, does not rise to a climax and is extremely slow in development. The technical production has been nicely handled. Several passages have a first rate trick of expressing dramatic values in symbolism, such as the husband throwing a loving note to his wife on the steamer dock. It is wrapped in a gold coin. The coin reaches the hands of the husband's rival, while the loving message floats into the water. Again the same trick is employed when a child makes the husband a gift of a handkerchief, with which he later wipes his face when he has been struck by missiles from a mob which reviles him as a coward.

MARIA STUART

(GERMAN MADE)

Berlin, Jan. 26.

Resounding flop. Anton Kuh wrote the scenario and Friedrich Feher directed it under the supervision of Leopold Jessner of the State Playhouse, Berlin. Jessner has been much criticized for spending his precious time on this work, as he has not staged a single production at his own theatre this season.

This is particularly justified, as he does not seem to have any idea of film direction.

Madga Sonya, tooted lately as a coming star, is superficial as Maria. Even such a fine performer as Fritz Korner made nothing of his role. Trask.

STAGE HAND 26 YEARS, BUT HAD HUNCH JOB WASN'T PERMANENT

Keith Former Two-a-Day House in Cincinnati Reopening With Picture Policy and All-New Staff—John Speck, Flyman, Made Kidding Comment

Cincinnati, Feb. 14.

"I had a hunch this job wasn't permanent when I took it," said John Speck, flyman for 26 years at Keith's former two-a-day house here.

Keith's lately closed with vaudeville, to reopen in a week or so as a straight picture house with Chaplin's "Circus" the starter.

In a complete change of all employees, from manager to ushers, are a half dozen men who have been with the Keith forces here for from 15 to 30 years.

Musicians who hold 30-week contracts for the house will be placed in other local Keith-Albee-Orpheum theatres to work out the remaining nine weeks of their agreement. Those houses are controlled by the Keith - Albee - Harris-Lisbon-Heidingsfeld group of this city.

FRISCO ALSO HAS ITS UNEMPLOYMENT TALE

San Francisco, Feb. 14.

Variety's report on unemployment conditions in Chicago created considerable local interest, as the situation here at present is the worst in years. Thousands of men and women are out of work. The condition has become so acute that municipal officials are taking steps to immediately launch a pretentious program of street and road construction, so that work can be provided.

In San Jose, 50 miles south of here, the unemployment situation reached a crisis when S. J. Norton, realtor, and "man of God," marched on the San Jose Community Chest leading a ragged army of men out of work. The ragged men had just been ejected from Norton's "clothe the naked and feed the hungry" establishment by city health authorities on the claim that the "home" failed to conform to sanitary requirements. Aroused, the San Jose Chest officials announced an effort would be made to "meet the emergency."

Larry Comer's Breakdown

Larry Comer, vaude single, was removed to Bellevue Hospital, New York City, as result of a nervous breakdown. Arrangemets to move him to another hospital were set aside upon advice of physicians at Bellevue.

Comer was once a partner of the late Emma Carus in vaudeville and had recently been doing a single, carrying his own pianist.

VITA SKETCH SUIT

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Ballard MacDonald and Russell Robinson have filed a claim through Atty. Phil R. Davis against Vitaphone, charging a sketch written by them, titled "Hostess," was used by Sally Fields in a Vita act without royalty consideration.

Davis is negotiating for a cash settlement.

Stickney's Quick Action

Stickney landed on a Wednesday, rehearsed Friday and opened Saturday.

RUSHING CLOUD HAS PLEA FOR INDIANS

Editor Variety:

I have seen a number of signs stating, "See America first." I think that should read, "Know America first." A large number of people don't know America and the people in it.

The average theatrical agent seems to think that all Indians in America were born and raised on a reservation out in the wild and woolly West and should have long hair, wear feathers and the costumes of ancient days.

In New York I heard an agent tell an Indian (college graduate) that he (agent) didn't believe he was an Indian, because his hair wasn't long and he didn't dress like an Indian.

When such an Indian presents an act to an agent, if he can't sing and do a war dance with the ancient day costumes, he is out of luck.

A somersault is a somersault, regardless of who does it, but perhaps with the agent it makes a difference what race does it.

For the information of those that don't know, there are 34,452 Indian children in the public schools; learning the same things the other children are. Attending the gymnasiums and dance halls, the girls are wearing bob hair and doing the black bottom just the same as the white girls. I ask the agents to change their attitude toward Indians and give them a chance.

Rushing Cloud.

LEW CANTOR'S PLAY

Vaude Producer Again Fooling With Legit

Lew Cantor is planning another flier at legit producing. He has a new play by Tom Barry, untitled as yet. It will go into rehearsal the latter part of the month.

All-English Unit Bill

E. K. Nadel is assembling an all-English bill for vaudeville which he will project as a unit under title of "All British Revue."

The cast will comprise 12 players, all bona fide English.

CLAIBORNE FOSTER'S FILLER

Claiborne Foster will enter vaudeville upon completion of her engagement at the Greenwich Village, New York, next week in "Tryst," the playlet in which the legit star has been appearing at the downtown house.

John Kane and Gertrude Moran will be retained as support.

The vaude excursion is a filler-in pending selection of a new play in which she will appear under management of Richard Herndon.

GUS SUN'S 20TH

Springfield, O., Feb. 14.

Next week Gus Sun will celebrate in the Sun theatres his 20th year in the show business.

Florentine Choir Feb. 27

K.-A.-O. offices this week set Feb. 27 as the Palace, New York, date for the Florentine Singers.

Lee Kids' New Act

The Lee Kids, first in pictures and then vaude, are back in vaudeville. They started to break in last week out of town.

Coutts Adds Another

Plays four acts on the last half.

CHAIN AGENCY HAS BUT ONE LAST HALF

12 Booking Agents Paid N. W. Stephens $50 Each for Franchise—All for Single House

The Chain Vaudeville Agency, functioning several months, and supposedly official booking agency of vaudeville and presentation features for the Universal Picture houses, seems progressing slower than anticipated.

Thus far the Chain has but one last half playing five acts, with 12 franchised agents submitting for the one house. They are discouraged about the agency getting any more time for the present.

The Chain Agency was formed by N. W. Stephens in December. Stephens had been connected with the Sun Agency, New York, booking several Universal houses.

At the time 14 Universal houses were announced for a starter; Chain Agency franchises disposed of at $50 each to 12 agents, who figured the Universal outlet a bonanza and worth the half-century fee.

Subsequent investigation among the agents has revealed that the formation of the Chain Agency was Stephens' and not Universal's idea, although the latter agreed to permit him to book presentations and acts into such houses it might throw his way. The one last half stand is all the agency has thus far.

ONE OUT—TEAM OUT

Why Wayne-Callahan Stepped into "Good News" for Four Shows

When Gus Shy became ill last week and out of "Good News" in New York, for four performances, Billy Wayne and Marie Callahan stepped into the show. They are of the Chicago "Good News."

Lauder Held Over

Sir Harry Lauder will be held over and indefinitely at the Knickerbocker, New York, following the expiration of the announced engagement of four weeks.

The indefinite run gives William Morris his longest stand for Lauder since assuming the management of the Scotchman over 20 years ago.

Another new point on the current stay is, that the top is $3.30, as against the $2.20 top charge of Lauder's previous engagements in New York.

THE TUCKERS DOUBLING

The Tuckers, Soph and Bert, mother and son, are doubling this week, both playing in Newark, N. J., but in different theatres. Mother is at the Mosque and the youngster at the Branford. Each is a presentation house.

Next week both will rejoin for the single week at the Stanley, Philadelphia, and after that who can tell?

ED. TIERNEY'S SINGLE

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

While Marjorie White is recovering from an appendicitis operation, Ed Tierney, her husband and vaude partner, will do a single around here the next two months.

TRULY SHATTUCK'S VENTURE

Carter-Anderson's Return

Harry Carter, who dissolved his vaude partnership with Maybelle Anderson last season to enter the agency field, is returning to vaudeville with Miss Anderson again as partner.

De Marcos in Bermuda

Tony De Marco, of the De Marcos, has returned from a vacation and opens in two weeks in Bermuda at the Hotel Bermudiana.

Public Owns K-A, Says Thompson, And Dividends Are Essential

Major L. E. Thompson, the new general theatre manager of the Keith-Albee Greater New York houses, is giving the house managers some intimate information about the circuit. The Major is talking nicely to the boys and they rather enjoy the innovation.

"You know that now neither Mr. Albee or Mr. Murdock owns the theatre, but the public does. So every one must get out and hustle to make money to pay dividends, or the bankers will be on their necks."

It somewhat puzzled the listening managers as to whose necks the Major referred to; Messrs. Albee and Murdock's, the managers' or the Thompson family's.

RELEASED GAGS

"How did that sausage we ate last night agree with you?"
"I think it hurt my liverwurst."

"As I left my hotel room this morning I noticed a man in the next room hanging himself on the chandeller."
"Well, did you cut him down?"
"No; he wasn't dead yet."

Questioner to Japanese Interpreter—Ask him if he turned out the light. (Interpreter does so.)
Witness—(Sputters intelligibly for a full minute).
(Leo Carrillo was one of the first to tell the gag in his monolog, if not the creator of it.)

Any sap could find a pearl in an oyster, but it takes a smart girl to get diamonds out of a nut."

"My name is on that towel."
"Is that your name? Hotel McAlpin?

"You have been eating oranges."
"How can you tell?"
"By the skin on your face."

"Think of the future."
"I can't; it's my wife's birthday, and I'm thinking of the present."

"What is the difference between you and one who dyes wool?"
"Do you know?"

"What gives more milk than one cow?"
"Two cows."

"I'll be right down as soon as I can slip on something."
"Slip on the stairs."

"Do you serve lobsters here?"
"Sure, what do you want?"

"What's the name, please?"
"It's on the envelope, you dumbell."

"Did you ring?"
"No, the bell did."

"Can you tell me the quickest way to the cemetery?"
"Sure; stand on that railway track; there'll be a train along in a minute."

"It's better to have loved and lost—much better."

"Don't be the girl your mother thinks you are—my boy."

"What kind of shoes can be made out of bananas?" "Slippers."

Florence Mayo's Crash

Florence Mayo, of Mayo and West, is confined to the local hospital at Teaneck, N. J., as a result of injuries in an auto accident Monday night.

Miss Mayo and friends were driving back from Paterson, N. J., when their machine collided with a bus. A heavy fog is said to have been responsible. Miss Mayo, in the front seat, was pitched headlong, suffering contusions and other bruises. Remainder of the party were but slightly injured.

Miss Mayo had gone to Paterson to appear at a benefit. Her condition is not serious.

Dow Gets Jersey Rex

After a rather hectic booking experience, the Rex theatre, East Rutherford, N. J., went to the Dow agency last week.

The Rex opened last October and seats 1,400. A succession of operatives jumbled things so that Judge J. E. Butler was called in to legally adjust its matters.

Cottam's Film House Dates

Clyde Cottam, comedy toe dancer, formerly with "Vanities," has been signed by E. L. Hyman, of the Brooklyn Strand, to play some of the Stanley houses.

Millie Leonard's Own Agency

Publix's Permanent M.C.s

Publix's masters of ceremonies are being switched around again, but, this time, when it's all over they'll be permanently set.

Lou Kosloff goes on to the B. & K. Chicago, Chicago, to stay there indefinitely. Gene Rodemich is scheduled to return to the Metropolitan, Boston, for a stay. Al Mitchell will stick in New Haven and a new m. c. as yet unnamed will be selected for the Paramount, New York.

Pan's Racing Stable

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Looks like Alexander Pantages is out to make a bid for some of those purses at Tia Juana track this season. He paid $41,300 for four nags from the Brown Shasta Stock farm.

The quartet are Shasta Rose, Pine, Nut and Bullet. Pantages already owns "Alexander Pantages," not a bad trotter.

Vaude Out at Providence

Loew vaude for the Carlton, Providence, formerly Emery, may be withdrawn from that house this week. Acts booked for that house for subsequent time were being shifted by their agents this week.

Frank Corbett With Fisher

CHINESE SINGER GOES WILD AT N.V.A.

Sun Ki Gee, Chinese singer with Joe Howard, was taken to Bellevue Hospital from the N. V. A. clubhouse Saturday.

Gee became wild, according to the police, and violent. His actions in the club brought Patrolmen John Rogers and Jack Crehan, of the West 47th street station, whose joint strength were needed to restrain the actor.

Gee is 46 years old.

He had formerly been a valet to Howard, it was said. He had acted strangely for the last several days, Howard told the cops. Gee had the adjacent room to Franklin Farnum at the club. Rogers stated that Gee sought to kick his way into the cinema's actor's room.

Racing downstairs with club members and attaches after him, Gee sought out a colored employee. Gee began to berate the negro in Chinese and became violent, Rogers declares.

Howard rode with Gee to Bellevue.

Stage Crew and Musicians Blow Gale-Brennan House

A road call went up on the Strand, Winsted, Conn., last week when the house operators, Harry Gale and Bill Brennan, replaced union stage hands and musicians with non-union help.

Gale propositioned the stage hands some weeks ago to drop from their $6 daily scale to $5. After withdrawal of the stage hands, the musicians stuck upon advice from the union, the latter figuring a settlement would be made. When the musicians walked out in sympathy with the stage hands, the Strand withheld salary of Charles Weisbecker, musical director, with Gale telling him the only chance he had of collecting was to tear up his union card. Weisbecker came back to New York and placed his claim with the musicians' union.

The house attempted to round up a non-union orchestra last week, but without success. It has since been operating with an organist.

Booked by Sally Markus, the Strand plays films the first half and vaude on the other. Owners eliminated opposition recently by purchasing the Opera House, its only opposition, and scrapping it.

Plimmer-Leon Dissolve

The Walter Plimmer-Consolidated Agency amalgamation has dissolved. Plimmer retains his former agency with Lawrence Leon, head of the Consolidated, out of Plimmer's office and future plans uncertain.

Leon and Plimmer joined several months ago. Most of Leon's houses were in the Pa. coal region which has been hard hit because of the miners' strike. Most of the houses dropped off his books.

Fay House Goes Movie

Providence, Feb. 14.

The orchestra at the Carlton theatre has received notice and will be out of the house in two weeks. The management (the Fay interests) announced there will be no more vaude and the house will go straight movie. Top will be 35 cents. The new Loew house is opposition.

The Carlton has been doing only passable business as a vaude house.

"INGENUES" FOR W-C

Jumping across the continent at their own expense, the Ingenues, girl band from Ziegfeld's "Follies," which closed because of Eddie Cantor's illness, open for West Coast at the Metropolitan, Los Angeles, March 3.

Pickles Routed

"Mixed Pickles," tabloid revue produced for vaude by C. B. Maddock has been routed by K-A-O. "Mixed Pickles," most pretentious act by Maddock, is in 12 scenes and carries 14 people.

STAGE PERFORMERS FREED

Indecent Show Charge by Police Not Upheld

A complaint of having given an indecent performance was dismissed against Ruth Cornwall, 21, of 142 St. Anns avenue; Dorothy Kale, 25, of 413 West 92d street, dancers, and Victor Sigler, 34, theatrical agent, of Sussex, N. J., and George Tizard, 48, actor, of 21 Suydam street, Brooklyn, by Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan in the Tombs Court. Sigler was held for trial in Special Sessions on a charge of possessing an alleged indecent picture film.

The four were arrested on the night of Jan. 29 when detectives of the Second Division raided a restaurant at 407 Pearl street where 150 men were attending a stag party. It was claimed the two women were performing a dance in little more than strings of beads. The police claimed the two men were in charge of the affair.

In searching the place the officers found a film which they claimed Sigler was to show to the guests. It is alleged the picture was obscene.

"NUT" SUIT STARTED OVER BIT OF BIZ

In the Birmingham, Alabama, Federal Court, an annoying suit has been started by a local resident, Margaret Bearden Runion, against the Pan-Alabama Amusement Co., Inc., Pantages Theatre Circuit and John L. Fulton-Peggy Parker Revue, for alleged copyright infringement. The complaining authoress charges Fulton and Parker's act which played the Birmingham Pan house infringes on a copyrighted work of her own, and the team are accordingly forced to defend what they characterize as a "nut" suit.

Mrs. Runion is under the impression that the stage effect or illusion of a little white house, practically illuminated with electric lights, and the conventional business attendant to such effect, is an original conception. Fulton and Parker do that bit in their act and the complainant charges them with plagiarism of her supposedly original conception.

They have retained Kendler & Goldstein in New York to act for them through correspondents in defending the Birmingham lawsuit.

Johnny Collins' Franchise

Associated with Collins are Bob Hutchison, who also served in the Keith office as a booker, and Carl McBride, formerly of Tracey and McBride, and latterly with Alf Wilton. Collins was with Wilton for a time.

Marion Harris, Heart-Free

Despite Variety said Marion Harris might marry Walter Scott Kolk, she says it's not so.

And that settles that since the girl has the final say in those little things, and it leaves Marion heart-free, another unusual show business condition.

HOUSTON BUILDING TALK

Houston, Feb. 14.

The announcement of a new $2,500,000 theatre to be built by Interstate was made by Karl Hoblitzelle, president, when he came to Houston last week. The Majestic theatre, Interstate house built about four years ago, is still a first class house. No site named.

FILM MEN AS ACT

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Mahlon Hamilton and Wyndham Standing, pictures, have teamed to present a sketch on the Pantages circuit.

WALLACE EDDINGER'S SKETCH

Wallace Eddinger has withdrawn from "And So to Bed" and will enter vaudeville in a sketch under direction of Albert Lewis, Inc.

Shapiro on His Own

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Henry Shapiro, formerly of the Halperin-Shapiro agency, and more recently assistant booking manager of the Sun-Diamond office here, will open an agency of his own in Chicago.

He will do book for picture houses and independent vaude circuits.

K-A-O FIGUREHEAD FOR DIRECT INDE BOOKING

Detroit, Feb. 14.

An instance of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum name being used by an independent theatre for mere "convenience" and "protection" will be illustrated on Feb. 19, when the Grand Riviera, local presentation house, will start booking direct, though continuing to issue contracts through the Chicago Keith office.

Grand Riviera, owned and operated as a stage band-film theatre by C. W. Munz, has been receiving acts from the Keith agency, with Glenn Burt as booker. Lately the house has become dissatisfied with the Keith-booked acts. Frequently the turns have been found lacking for the stage band type of show and on various occasions presentations planned weeks in advance had to be entirely revamped at the last moment when acts failed to fit in.

Beginning Feb. 19 the shows will be booked direct by Lew Kane, the Grand Riv's producer, with contracts issued through George Lukes of the Keith office. Kane is reported to have stated the K-A-O label over the dotted line will help in salary claims.

Proctor's 58th St. Closing

Another thought is that the house will adopt a grind picture policy, if it reopens. The veteran site has played six or seven acts, with a picture, on a split week basis for years.

Kunsky Adds Vaude

Detroit, Feb. 14.

In addition to picture house interests, Kunsky is gradually establishing a small circuit of vaudefilm theatres in the neighborhoods of Detroit. If materializing as expected, the string will shortly afford acts one to two weeks of playing dates.

De Luxe, Redford, Birmingham, Lincoln Square and Strand are now in the category, playing vaude one, two and three days weekly, with pictures.

The houses are being booked direct through Howard Pierce of the Kunsky office, or through independent bookers around town.

More Contest Nights

The 5th Avenue, New York, will take another fling at the amateur, or opportunity, contest thing, with Harry Shaw to stage it. Shaw may also stage an all-girl all-local minstrel show.

The Broadway, another K-A booked house, has resumed the opportunity night gag each Monday.

SAM SALVIN ON COAST

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Sam Salvin, head of Lyons and Lyons agency, is here for a two weeks' business visit. He is laying out booking and operation plans with his general manager, Wm. Rowland.

CALLS FOR "NAMES"

A hurry-up call has been shot across the country by Alexander Pantages in his Los Angeles offices for "names" to be routed at once for Pan houses in the west. Among those sounded were James Barton and George LeMaire and Rex Van. Neither accepted the offer.

It is known that bookings have been offered a lot of "big time" acts by Pan direct.

RILEYS PRODUCING

Riley Brothers, vaude bookers, have now gone in the producing end as a side issue. Arthur Anderson has become associated with the office to stage the new turns.

Among the acts are "The American Girl" revue, with 12 girls in the chorus, and Jack DeBell and Co. (five people).

Maude Mills with Tab

NO K-A LINE-UP

Murdock Reported Unable to Give Attention to Merged Organization

Reports mention this or that in the forthcoming reorganized forces of the merged Keith-Albee and Orpheum Circuits. It was said yesterday there had been no line-up as yet decided upon by J. J. Murdock, who will attend to it.

Murdock is reported having been unable to find time to date to settle down for the K-A-O work before him. He expects to when the picture business matters he also is looking after are disposed of.

New Rochester House Makes Fay's Change

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 14.

Competition from the Pantages-booked new Rochester theatre has proven too much for Fay's, independent vaude. Fay's changes next week to straight pictures with Vitaphone.

Victoria, playing pop vaudfilm, folded up about a month ago after the Rochester opened, going pictures only.

There are now but two vaude theatres here, Rochester and Temple (Keith's), with the new Keith house well underway.

SUING I. A. FOR $285

Banshee, Inc., has taken action against the stage hands' union to recover $285 deposited with the stage hands' union. Abner J. Rubien is representing the I. A. T. S. E.

The producers originally deposited $570 with the I. A. T. S. E. to cover salary for the stage crew. When the show closed it is claimed failed to sign the contracts announcing the closing and submit them to the crew. I. A. paid the men $285 to cover this oversight, depositing the balance of $285 with the court.

How those bags will fly.

Levey's Road Show

Detroit, Feb. 14.

The Bert Levey Detroit office will send out its first road show of the season this week to split 18 days among Escanaba, Marquette, Iron River and Sault Ste. Marie.

The bill of five acts is composed of Bill Francis, Holman and Holman, Bobby North, Billy Brown and Margaret Hilliard. Their future after the 18-day time is not yet determined.

George Ratcliffe, Levey Detroit rep., booked the show.

K-A-O AFTER DERBY HOUSE

K-A-O interests may take over the Commodore-Hull, Derby, Conn. It closed last week when passing into the hands of a receiver. The house was one of a chain operated throughout New England by the A. S. Friend Enterprises, New York.

Last week a representative of the K-A-O construction department went to Derby to look over the theatre but with nothing definite on the transfer or sale to date.

SEVERED SIAMESE TWIN

Chicago, Feb. 14.

A rare instance of Siamese twins being severed successfully occurred in Chicago, when one of the twins born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Keller of Marseilles, Ill., was found dead at birth.

The operation required a six-inch incision in the living twin, but it survived and is well.

LENTZ'S COMBO ACT

Al Lents is offering a 2-in-1 act combination. As Lents, Charlotte and Winters the trio does one act and Lents and his Columbia recording orchestra are another act.

Stephens Joins Dawson

Lee Stephens has quit his post with William Shilling to join Eli Dawson, Pantages agent.

Broadcasting Trio

Billy Atwell, K-A-O agent, is handling the act.

3D QUIGLEY MARRIAGE TRY; SAME WOMAN; FLOP

Chaz Chase's Wife Alleges Frame in His Divorce Action

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Divorced from the same woman twice and married to her three times, Thomas J. Quigley, former music publisher, now operating a cafe, has again become annoyed and filed his third suit for divorce through Attorney Wm. F. Adler, against Arminta Quigley.

This time Quigley says she blew out on him for a lengthy and unsanctioned absence, starting in 1925.

Mrs. Jennie Feldman Oskye, wife of Chaz Chase, who is suing her for divorce on charges of infidelity, filed a petition for temporary alimony in which she claims she was framed into a hotel room situation by Sam Gordon, alleged theatrical agent, on pretense of being offered a job. Later, the petition states, her husband's attorney and detectives walked in on her as part of the conspiracy.

Ben Ehrlich, counsel for Chase, states this is the same petition read in court three months ago, pointing out Mrs. Oskye was granted $20 weekly alimony previous to belated filing of her petition. Her charges are unfounded, Ehrlich says.

Vincent Youmans, composer, now in France, has instructed his Chicago attorney to file suit for annulment of his marriage to Anne Varley-Youmans in answer to her suit for separate maintenance. A hearing is expected in March.

Mrs. Youmans, professionally Anne Varley, married Youmans in February, 1927. While in Reno apparently seeking a divorce, she had twins. Rumors of subsequent reconciliation evaporated when Mrs. Youmans filed her suit for separate maintenance in Chicago.

May Cassidy Williams, in vaudeville as Dainty Marie, secured a divorce through Attorney Ben Ehrlich from Clarence Williams, restaurant owner, on charges of extreme cruelty. She married in September, 1926.

Wife Sues Cummings

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Roy Cummings and Irene Shaw, his wife and former vaudeville partner, have come to a parting of the ways after nine years. Mrs. Cummings filed a divorce action in Superior Court here, based on general cruelty charges. Her brief states that the marriage knot was tied in East Orange, N. J., in 1919. All was well until last September, when Cummings came here to join Will Morrissey's show at the Hollywood Music Box. They separated at that time.

Among other things, the complaint charges that Cummings has associated with other women, naming Eleanor Downing and Frances Winters. Also, it is related, he is now working in vaudeville with Florence Duffy, showgirl formerly in the Morrissey revue.

Mrs. Cummings estimates her husband's salary at $1,100 per week. She asks for $500 a month alimony, and lists community property, including a house in Hollywood valued at $7,000, and other belongings rating another $7,000. There are no children. Cummings was married once before, and is paying his first wife $100 a week alimony.

WLS TROUPE AS ACT

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Members of the "Showboat," WLS radio presentation, have been booked as an aggregation to appear at the Fox theatre (Great States), Aurora, Ill., for one week.

Harry Saddler, announcer, will act as m. c.

BARTON'S FILM DATES

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Marks Bros. have booked Jim Barton to headline two weeks at the Marbro and Granada theatres starting Feb. 20.

Maxwell and Lee Set

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Maxwell and Lee have been signed by Fanchon and Marco for 14 weeks on West Coast Theatres circuit. They are now playing for B & K in Chicago. William Morris office negotiated.

PAN'S RECORD OFFER FOR 2 U. A. SPECIALS

Portland, Ore., Feb. 14.

With congestion of picture bookings on here, Alexander Pantages has submitted a local record offer to United Artists of $10,000 for Fairbanks' "Gaucho" and $7,000 for "The Devil Dancer," each to go in the local Pantages if accepted, on runs.

House top for Pantages is $22,000, gotten by Gene Tunney (stage). This week at Pantages is Fox's "7th Heaven," on run.

Local congestion for the U. A. product was brought about through delay in the erection of the new U. A. theatre on the Majestic site.

INSIDE STUFF

ON VAUDEVILLE

Al Shean's suit against his former partner, Ed. Gallagher, to recover $8,000 allegedly due on share of royalties on "Gallagher and Shean" song is figured along the line as an ill-advised publicity suit on Shean's part. Gallagher is in Dr. Dold's sanitarium, Astoria, L. I., where he has been declining since admittance several months ago and with slight chance of recovery. Moreover, Gallagher is flat financially with friends taking care of the hospital bill.

Shean has been aware of this. Also that his former partner is practically paralyzed on the right side and with slim chance of ever again being able to earn such an amount as Shean names in his suit.

George Walsh from pictures and Nat Pendleton, ex-Columbia University boxing champ, almost knocked each other out in an effort to convince Keith-Albee vaudeville manager as to the realism of their pugilistic stuff in their new act, "The K. O.," which Lewis & Gordon are producing with Walsh starred. In one performance Pendleton almost kayoed Walsh, literally, leaving the film star groggy for the curtain.

The manager when asked for his opinion was dubious, remarking that it required a little more realism. The next show Walsh almost ruined Pendleton in a desire to conform with managerial specifications and still that worthy was skeptical. Sidney Phillips of the Lewis & Gordon office finally called him in to the dressing room and displayed a swelling on Pendleton's ribs. It still failed to convince the manager.

The Associated Press carried a story that Frank Tinney, blackfaced comedian, was slowly staging a comeback to health in Philadelphia and a subsequent anticipation of a stage appearance, thanks to the constant attendance and aid of an old home town buddy, Eddie Cassady, monologist and singer.

The story declared that physicians had given Tinney up as a hopeless case, yet Cassady day and night has done everything possible to bring the comedian back to normalcy.

The AP story was prompted by a special story that Vincent J. McCafferty wrote for the Sunday issue (Jan. 29) of the Philadelphia "Record." McCafferty's story went into lengthy detail to tell just what Cassady was doing for Tinney and how slowly and tediously the latter was getting along in his comeback fight.

Eddie and Frank were troupers together with the old Dumont Minstrels in Philadelphia when the two boys as principals received $25 a week.

Tinney is now living in South Philadelphia.

Picture house audiences are not uniform in acceptance of stage acts. That may be owing to the size of the house or the sectional preferences. When George Givot, known as a picture house panic in the Chicago territory, appeared at the Capitol, New York, a couple of weeks ago, he did not finish his week's engagement, leaving the bill in the middle of the week. No one attempted to explain it, just calling it one of those things.

What may be another solar plexus for groggy vaudeville is the new cordiality among the picture house bookers towards talking acts. Presentation houses have been more or less closed to dialog or conversational comedians. Recent bookings of talking turns indicate the barriers have been let down.

If the picture houses link hands with the revues, night clubs and radio in taking important next-to-closing turns, the position of vaudeville will be even more precarious than it has been during the last two seasons.

Gladys Hart, wife of the late Harry Coleman, does not intend to retire and will continue the Coleman sketch with a new partner.

The act had been booked far ahead prior to Coleman's death.

Charles Freeman, of the Interstate circuit, offered Will Rogers $5,000 for the week to play vaudeville in Dallas during the Democratic convention in June.

After playing four weeks at the Capitol Billy Taylor, the dancer, is buying a home in Baldwin, Long Island. His wife, Rae Giersdorf, is helping by doubling this week between the Carmine theatre and the Club Madrid in Philadelphia.

Billy says that from now on taxicabs are out and its the subway. Billy and Rae were married last fall.

A small time actor recently had his costumes and scenery stolen from his parked automobile in Detroit. Unable to play without the mountings, he caused the arrest of a fellow performer.

Accused was pinched on a Saturday and, unable to offer bail, was forced to occupy the jug until the next hearing, Monday. He was finally discharged when the Court saw lack of evidence.

The pay off arrived when the victim's seemingly repentent accuser brought him up to a booking office and got him a last half engagement. And a second pay off came when the accuser found he could not procure a date for himself.

Sessue Hayakawa has been routed by the Keith-Albee circuit in his Edgar Allan Woolf playlet and will continue to use that sketch.

PANALA DIDN'T PAY OFF

Pan's Bill in Birmingham in House That Closed

Pan-Ala theatre, Birmingham, playing Pantages bills, closed Saturday, with only part salaries paid acts there.

As the turns had Pan contracts and the acts communicated with the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association, it was believed that Pantages would agree to pay up the remainder of the money due.

This week's show was diverted by Pan to another place.

Picture Agents Miss Lack of Organization

Current conditions were predicted to the agents a few years ago when Variety invited them to organize for protection and held a meeting of the agents for the purpose. It never went through.

A request here and there of late has come to Variety, to attempt to revive the organization plan. The two heaviest complaints now are of copping acts and trouble in collecting commission.

If a majority of the picture house agents wish to make a second try and through Variety, another conference of the agents will be called by this paper.

Houses Opening

Strand, Yonkers, N. Y., playing straight pictures, has gone in for presentations, with the opener on the stage Bunny Charles and his Variety Vendors (stage band).

Hippodrome, Pottsville, Pa., has resumed vaude playing four acts on the last half. Booked by Bud Irwin, Amalgamated.

Following changes in ownership of theatres in St. Louis and district have been announced:

Phoenix theatre, Lawrenceville, Ill., transferred from H. B. Gould and George H. Bauer to P. V. Burlison and George W. Burlison.

The Opera House, St. John, N. B., oldest of local theatres reopened Feb. 13, after being closed for five weeks following a fire. The old theatre opened with the Mae Edwards Players, dramatic repertoire, featuring a jazz orchestra as entertainment between the acts.

Empress, Brooklyn, opens shortly, operated by Vincent Padula and the Padnic Operating Co.

ILL AND INJURED

Jose Dalima, Spanish dancer at the Fox, Washington, had his foot hurt in the stage elevator Friday night, which will keep him from working for several weeks. Though the injury at first was thought to be serious, Dr. David Davis now expects the loss of three toenails only. Accident occurred when Dalima was standing on stage waiting to assist his partner from the lift upon its return to the stage. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital.

Eddie Pierce (vaudeville) had several ribs broken in an auto accident in Los Angeles.

Gladys Clark (Clark and Bergman) fell on the stage at the River side, New York, Sunday, spraining an ankle so severely the act cancelled its following two days.

MARRIAGES

Enise Morise, former principal of the "Oh Dearie" Company, and William Daly, non-professional of Saugerties, N. Y., were recently married there by the Rev. F. L. Howe. Bride's home is in Braintree, Mass.

Margaret G. Pressey, 20, known in radio circles as Georgie Earl, "the mystery girl of KYA," and Le-Roy De Wolf, musical director for KYA, were married Feb. 10 at the home of Floretta Green, KYA ballad singer, in San Francisco. Two days earlier Harold G. Perry, technical director of radio KFRC, was married to Delma Royce, non-professional.

Francis Perrett, press agent, to Marian Nickerson (non-professional), Feb. 13, at Los Angeles. Groom is in publicity department of First National studios.

H. B. Humberstone, assistant director at United Artists studio, Hollywood, to Marie McWilliams (non-pro), Feb. 10, at St. Thomas Episcopal church, Hollywood, Cal.

RICH'S K-A DATE

Freddie Rich and his Hotel Astor Orchestra had to go to London to command attention back home for a K-A Palace booking Feb. 27. The band returns a day or two prior to the Palace date.

Although for long a standard in New York and radio famous through WJZ, Rich never got beyond the outlying houses. His favorable impression abroad called the Rich jazzists to K-A attention.

Even those Americans with good memories may be surprised to learn that the founder of this establishment was Nina Farrington, a noted showgirl of long ago. She appeared in numerous Broadway revues and had many well-known admirers.

NO ENGLISH BOYCOTT

this time and her present engagement she advised her management that she had no permit. Not having applied for it before entering England, it was refused her when requested by the theatre management, as a matter of course and without prejudice.

At the Kew the play Miss Gay appeared in was "The Married Bachelors," and the Home Office would have done the country a service if it had prevented the entire production.

As to the charge that the American management of "Broadway" was obliged to replace its American cast in London with an English company for the Provincial tour, that was done only to lessen the overhead.

On the front page of the New York morning "World" Monday was the story referred to above. It was in detail and mentioned Alden Gray had informed the "World's" London bureau as to most of the misinformation. The story also carried a cut of Miss Gay, although it is not suspected that other than herself is her press agent.

Through the story in "The World" implying the English government had started a campaign (crusade, the daily called it), against American actors, with the added comment that a reprisal movement might be commenced over here against the English actors on this side, Variety cabled its London office.

Noel Coward's Manager

Noel Coward has an impressive personal following in London, especially in the set dominated by temperamental young men. When acting in New York in "The Vortex," which he also wrote, Coward met a young American, Jack Wilson, from Lawrenceville, N. J., and the two have been associated ever since.

Wilson, after graduating from Yale, where he met Stuart Walker, who was putting on plays, acted with Genevieve Tobin. Now he shares a country estate in England and a flat in London, serving as Coward's personal representative and business manager, also as interior decorator, having fitted up both residences. For a time he occupied the luxurious flat of the Somerset Maughams during their absence.

Coward and Wilson were at St. Moritz earlier in the winter, and before that were in Venice with the socially prominent Cole Porters. Cole was once well known on Broadway for his musical comedy airs, and has supplied tunes for Irene Bordoni's new play, "Paris." His cousin, Jack Porter, of Staten Island, has run a cafeteria near Wall street. Mrs. Porter was Linda Lee, of Louisville, first of the three wives of the late E. R. Thomas, millionaire owner of the "Morning Telegraph."

The Morgan Boys' "Break"

As a rule when society men go on the stage, it is against the wishes of their people. But such was not the case with Ralph and Frank Morgan, brothers well known as leading men on Broadway. They are sons of Mrs. George Wuppermann of Fifth avenue. A relative of the late E. H. Harriman, multi-millionaire railroad man, this sensible mother approved of her two sons following their inclinations and changing their names.

Former Show Girl's Shop

Nowadays, as during almost a generation past, one of the sights of London is the smart little dog shop in Bond street with the name "Mrs. Lesmoir Gordon" over the door. There is generally a throng of people looking in the window at

METROPOLITAN

(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Feb. 9.

Four Marx brothers after six years in the legit have been brought into the cinema palaces. Switching practically over night from $3.30 to 65-cent audiences and cutting down from almost three hours to 40 minutes, the boys have done nobly and if they choose to continue will find plenty of heavy kale for stepping out four and five times a day with a background of 18 to 20 people.

Fanchon and Marco brought them to the Met on a $10,000 guarantee for the week and though the boys will not collect on the guarantee that is no fault of their own. As a rule when a picture palace outside of Los Angeles buys a big stage name, they go to work and sell it. However, locally it seems, especially with this house, the West Coast crowd have not taken into consideration much the fact that personalities of drawing power should be exploited. At the opening performance trade was just above normal, with the audience, however, functioning in behalf of the entertainment afterward via mouth to mouth selling and causing the business to climb.

The Four Brothers, Julius, Zeppo, Harbo and Chiso are using 18 people out of the show to surround them in a Fanchon and Marco presentation called "Spanish Knights." They open with their straight man in "one" in the agent's office. They frame to be actors in a Spanish setting. Latter is full stage and gorgeous and was used in "Cocoanuts." It is one of the most pretentious sets viewed in a picture house and bound to impress on the rise of curtain.

After pulling their gag routine in the initial scene the boys come on full stage following a hot musical selection by a Hawaiian sextette of steel instrument players. Julius takes command and the brothers co-operate. It is a flood of gags, mugging and comedy scenes used in their show. With most of the picture fans not having seen the Marx boys before, the response is spontaneous and healthy. Chico does his piano solo, after which Harpo monkies around with the ivories for a while before going to the harp. Then it is a pushover for the pantomist of the family. That boy just can give them all the harp he chooses to and they always want more. For his final number he plays a ballad with the six string instruments accompanying. The old shirt and silverware scenes are also done and click. For the finish with their troupe of vocalists the boys chant "I Want My Shirt" and then go into grotesque operatics. As a picture house bet the Marx boys are bound to break box office records. But one thing necessary for that is proper advertising and exploitation.

As it was Edison week, Frank L. Newman, managing director of the house, pulled a novelty in blending together some scenes from pictures of the last decade in which Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Lillian Gish, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Fatty Arbuckle and H. B. Walthal appeared. They were shots from early pictures of these stars and were cut in such an expert fashion as well as titled that the sequence fitted together in smooth fashion and were responsible for plenty of laughs. To sell this reel Meity Ann Leaf, principal organist here, played the old picture house tunes in a corner of the stage on a piano while Elmer Hurling, announced the titles and described the scenes as the picture was unreeled.

Al Lyons, house master of ceremonies, did not get a chance to do his stuff from the stage so presided in the pit while his boys played a hot overture which allowed a trio of them to do a bit of chanting for a finish. This fellow Lyons is a clean cut personality whether on stage or in pit. Out and out entertainer and clicks that way 100 per cent.

PARAMOUNT

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 12.

"Steps and Steppers," Jack Partington's presentation, consists mainly of tap dancing with a company of 12 mixed hoofers doing the usual formations. For the climax the company taps up and down a broad stairway, Bill Robinson's idea.

Ilomay Bailey, songstress, is light at her best. An unbilled performer, Karnoff, with a small concertina, delivers novel entertainment. First switches from operatic to pop melodies abruptly, causing laughs.

Glenn and Jenkins, blackfaced comedians, spotted next to closing. Some of the comedy material is bad, but delivery is surefire at all times. A third boy, doing a tap shoe shine dance number, also effective.

Gene Rodemich leads the stage band this week in line with the new system of alternating band leaders. In this way a leader stays with a Publix unit three weeks at New Haven, Boston and New York. Lou Kosloff and Al Mitchell are now playing the other two cities during the interim.

Rodemich's classical version of a pop seemed to take well with the customers though it sounded a little over done. The Jesse Crawfords were a bit off at the organ with two numbers.

Adolphe Dumont, new house orchestra director, led with "Mephisto" in accompaniment to the vocal ensemble on the stage. Stage direction, by Paul Oscard, was brilliantly handled. Cloud scenes first pass over the stage, the singers remaining unseen with the exception of Arturo Imparato, basso. Glaring beams of light gradually illuminate a block formation rising to the roof, the vocalists all in costume.

CAPITOL

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 11.

First Publix-Loew unit to invade this M-G-M house, and not so hot. With a 70-minute feature, "Rose-Marie" (M-G), the show ran 2.29, so something was out of proportion. Looked as though the unit was too long and there was little need for the scenic short included. Besides those sidelights, Henry B. Murtagh, formerly at the Rivoli but now here since his return from Chicago, did nine minutes at the organ. Organists at the Capitol have never been in the habit of doing much soloing, hence Murtagh's console seance goes as something of a novelty within these walls.

Unit had Walt Roesner m. c'ing it on its way under title of "The Fast Mail," Frank Cambria credited production. Capitolians, the house band, has changed personnel, so that the pip drummer is no more. Quite a few pit boys doubling on the stage, and Harry Perrella, from Whiteman's band, is at one of the pianos because he's lost his yen for a lower berth. Outfit totals 25 men and will probably be better after the boys begin calling each other by their first names.

As specialists the combined forces of Loew-Publix had the Three Le Grohs, Eddie Hill, Myrtle Gordon, Eva Thornton and Roy Shelton. They didn't run in that order, but the routining was just as haphazard and lacked continuity and punch. Hill's comedy lyrics had some effect in the big house, but either Miss Gordon or Thornton left 'em cold after a couple of songs a la Tucker without the Madame's spice. Whichever girl offered a ballad did so in nice voice but not to much applause.

A band number used up most of the time, Roesner asking various members what they found in their mail and the boys replying by instrumental soloing. Didn't mean anything until the pianist on the left broiled a pop on the black keys and helped it along by giving more expression to the lyrics than voice. Youngster has a good sense of comedy. He could have encored, but didn't.

Meanwhile a troupe of Foster Girls performed twice. Once noisily in a gladiator number that had the girls banging each other on shields. Idea was all right, but Allan might tone down the clang in the defense paraphernalia. The girls weren't any too much at home in their first number, either, unusual in a Foster group. The young male of the LeGrohs had the house's mouth open for his contortions, heavy applause, and Roy Shelton almost broke a leg during his floor sweeping legmania and found that a rolling stone does gather some moss.

Setting for all this was a banked effect which had a platform above the stage musicians and small staircases splitting the band into three sections. Not especially good looking or well lighted. Proportionate drops on the platform were successively revealed by parting drapes as stamps to show the mailing point of the instrumentalists' letters.

Brief overture finished with a scrimmed tableau on Lincoln that was enthusiastically greeted and well done, while a five-minute news reel only left time for two clips from Paramount and four from M-G-M. Publix production staff evidently believes newsreels are a necessary evil and that's all.

Murtagh used kidding slides that eventually had the patrons whispering the lyrics. Enough to indicate that if a rotary club songfest is his objective he'll shortly attain it. But only by comedy. It's generally conceded that laughing 'em into it is the best and easiest way. At least, in the east.

"The Brook," short, with the main stage presentation following. After that the feature during which the soprano obliged with "Indian Love Call" from backstage as "Rose-Marie" warbled to her love that she couldn't keep the screen date on the mountain.

Beth Challis and her husband-accompanist, Edward J. Lambert, open April 23 at the Trocadero, London, booked by A. J. Clarke.

CARTHAY CIRCLE

(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Carthay Circle has a realistic, imposing and convincing prolog in "Happiness," which Jack Laughlin produced and staged as an atmospheric background to "Four Sons" (Fox), special which is running here twice daily. Laughlin has done a sensible job here in staging a brilliant, animating entertainment which holds to the spirit and theme of the screen feature.

The setting of "Happiness" is laid on the Bavarian border in the shadow of the Alps. Some 60 people are used and all contribute toward the entertainment which runs 19 minutes. The scenic embellishment shows an Alpine village and in the center foreground a waterfall. For atmosphere Laughlin uses a group of 20 Bavarian singers and a similar number of native dancers. These people give folk songs and dances, which supply fine foreign atmosphere. There are also four Tyrolean Yodlers, a quintet of native musicians and a group of Kosloff dancing girls, who get away from the toe and ballet work in flimsy costumes, doing their work in atmospheric garments.

Ivan Bankoff, formerly Bankoff and Cannon, is the premier dancer and official jester of the troupe. Bankoff executed a routine of acrobatic, eccentric dance steps that brought the house to the stop point. His comedy is excellent and, if some of the picture moguls got a good flash at his face they probably are sending for him now to take tests. Billy Moody, comedienne, who worked with Bankoff, was a corking feed for him.

Nina and Arthur, adagio team, taught the locals new tricks in holds and hops. Some of them were hair raising and the couple hit on all eight with the mob. Hans Joby and Ellen Joby, doing a folk dance, got a score of laughs with their eccentric antics. Serving as solo vocalists were Don Thrailkill, who is an institution in Laughlin productions, and Mrytle Aber and Emily Clark.

For the opening night the show ran snappily and gave no suggestion for cuts as it was smoothly routined and put over without a hitch. It is best of the atmospheric prologs Laughlin has staged in six months.

The overture which preceded the prolog was played by Carli Elinor and 25 men in the pit. Elinor had a great score which was blended from harmonizing melodies from the Fatherland. The overture ran 14 minutes and was not tiresome either. Elinor also arranged the musical score for the picture, which seemed most appropriate. Ung.

STANLEY

(BALTIMORE)

Program opened with a novelty overture entitled, "Meet the Boys," staged by Harry Lewis, the guest conductor. This consisted of solo parts by Max Rosenstein, Ernie Cooper, Jules Sims, Helmuth Wilhelm, Ernest Phillips, Stanley Simpson and finally, Wharry Lewis, each working in a spot to good effect.

The Stanley Theatre Ballet staged a pantomime dance bit, "In Holland." Costumed as Dutch boys and girls, the Servoa ballet girls, doing a pantomime romance in rhythm, working against the theatre's black velour curtain, in two.

The news reel, then Leon Navara, conducting the stage band for the fourth consecutive week. The show billed as "Jazzing the Blues Away." Full stage, with iridiscent jet black-drop, dressed with futuristic borders in blue with long, red tassels. Black and gold color scheme for the cubicles for the musicians, grouped on pyramided levels as heretofore, grand piano centered at stage level. Navara, smart in evening dress. After "Blue Baby" by Navara and band, the m. of c. introduces with a neat bit of quiet wise cracking Billie Tichenor, blonde dancer. She did the "Varsity Drag" to accompaniment of band. Theo. Alban, tenor, next, rendering "Song of the Wanderer" to band accompaniment, brasses predominating.

Serova girls now on, costumed in green blouses and knee-length dresses, do the Tiller stuff very well to music of "Up In the Clouds" and "Dream Kisses." "A Shady Tree," next, by Navara and band. On the repeat a girl dancer enters. Navara discards baton and dances with her in ballroom manner. Table and chair props introduced. At conclusion of dance Navara leaves girl at table. Comedy drunk in burlesque evening dress after manner of the London 'alls, dances on, as Navara resumes with the baton, the band repeating same air. Girl resenting drunk's advances, off haughtily. Drunk's distorted vision still pictures her and he goes through the dance with an illusionary partner. This went over well.

Piano now rolled down center and Navara does his piano recital act, working in a spot. Did "Kitten on the Keys," announced as "request." For encore, "What'll I Do," with variations. Audience still calling for more.

Navara next used the lost wardrobe gag to introduce comedy acrobatic dance team (Johnson & Hewitt.) Excellent. Finale, with Serova girls in, carrying individual rose bowers, topped with full moon decoration. To melody of "Are You Happy," lights off and title of number spelled by letters on the moon designs.

Show pleased, Navara's own work outstanding.

BROADWAY

(ASTORIA)

New York, Feb. 10.

Jumping off the Times Square merry-go-round and onto a B. M. T. underground tram for the far side of the East river is like plunging into the tall grass of the provinces. Still New York, but what a difference. Home of the Eskimo pie; of neighborhood theatres where customers break seats and rules faster than carpenters and cops can work; where Wednesday and Sunday nights are reserved for steady company, and where bridge offers small distraction to movie trade.

Shooing kids out of the lobby and away from the boxoffice is a major responsibility of the management. Within the theatre, with its sharply terraced floor leading up to the projection level, a couple of bouncers keep a sullen eye on the grown-up kids. Up near the booth, where you have to go if you arrive much after 7 p. m., the patrons pay little attention to the feature, but whistle and applaud enthusiastically during the newsreel when Babe Ruth, the Statue of Liberty and Old Glory are flashed.

The boys visit the girls and vice versa. Mamie runs down front to ask Gertie if she wants to "make up" with Joe, and comes back to tell Joe that Gertie is willing. Whereupon Joe counts his silver by the light of the screen, and then goes down to talk it over.

On the stage, Virginia Kelly sings several pop songs, George Smalden gags (not bad) and plays the sax, and the master of ceremonies provided by Stern and Green, who book the house, tells a pun to the effect that "God gave her a face, but she picked her nose."

The show is "cabaret night," a weekly feature for Fridays and a business builder- judging by the mob. No stage. Just a platform in front of the screen hidden by a scrim. Singing predominates to the almost complete exclusion of dancing because of the restrictions on area. But dialog cross-fire is included. In this the one-day presentation field appears in advance of the de luxe houses where they're still a bit leery of talk.

Frank Duke, whose presence in tuxedo was considered worthy of comment by the m. c., was introduced as from the Palais D'Or. He has a complex voiced tenor. The soprano alternation plus his yodeling sent Duke across. He represented the class of the bill.

Benton and Morgan, man and woman, with the woman doing the comedy, did nicely with some clippings from the scrap book. They dress their turn and make a flash.

All in all, looks like an okay one-night neighborhood lay-out. Bill was played with periodic bursts of pep by the seven-piece orchestra. In between, the organist showed the percussion possibilities of his instrument, giving the drum effect plenty of time. Land.

GREENWICH VILLAGE

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 11.

This 365-seat house got off on the wrong foot Saturday night in its attempt to form an intente cordiale between grand opera, oil paintings, one-act drama and the cinema. The announced purpose of selling such a hodge-podge at $2.20 per seat to "subscribers" seems like a forlorn hope. At any rate, the promoters may find it hard to live down the first unfortunate impression.

N. Brewster Morse and Douglas Brown, the managerial names on the program masthead, seem to be light on showmanship.

They started off their entertainment with Pathe newsreel projected cold without musical accompaniment and naturally a frost. Smart management would have had a snappy opener from the various news releases and served it up piping hot with spirited music. Possibly the absence of the violin and piano (the "orchestra") during the news part due to the hidden pit shutting off view of the screen.

Additionally, the amperage of the projection was too bright and with the short throw was hard on the eyes.

Rafaelo Diaz, Metropolitan tenor, sang a group of songs. Diaz is a great singer whose class is never in doubt. He was the event of the evening.

Rather clever, too, was Jackie Grattan, a lad, representing "the theatre page boy" and introducing the numbers in a cute manner. There was a suggestion in his speeches of an effort to be faintly satirical about things, after the fashion at Mike Mindlin's toy cinemas. The idea was not developed, however, beyond the suggestion stage.

Closing the first half, came the one-act play, "Tryst." In it Claiborne Foster, hemmed in by banalities, managed to obtain a few half-genuine laughs and a lukewarm curtain. The script is without sparkle or meaning and as poor a choice as could have been made for the delicate job of popularizing such a strange hook-up with motion pictures.

Intermission found the audience strictly Missouri. A good, or even a fair, movie might have saved the works and given the strange policy a Chinaman's chance. But upon returning to their seats after free coffee and art in the congested downstairs lounge the customers were treated to "The Whip Woman," presented by Robert Kane and bearing the First National label. It is an inconceivably ridiculous picture and was roundly jeered by the audience.

Had the management stuck to its publicized intention of giving first runs to worthy independents they would have been far better off than in exhibiting this dismal length of celluloid from the vaults of First National.

Everything about the opening, the music, the newsreel, the faulty projection, the stupid playlet and the acceptance of this turk of a picture, attest the lack of practical experience or judgment on the part of the sponsors of this movement to ally the "arts." Accordingly the prognostication points to a brody. The announced policy is for twice-monthly changes of program. The price for a loge, seating six, for four "entertainments" is $110. It requires a sense of humor! Land.

CAPITOL

(DETROIT)

Detroit, Feb. 12.

Capitol offering a good and lengthy bill to offset some strong self-creative Kunsky opposition. With Chaplin at the Adams and "The Jazz Singer" at the Madison, notwithstanding they are running as straight picture fare, there's plenty of competition.

Lots of show in the Capitol's program, overture, Vitaphone, shorts and stage bill running over an hour and a half and Par's Berry-Hatton comedy, "Wife Savers," topping and adding another hour or so.

Overture opened up, Samuel Benavie's symphony orchestra in the esculating pit playing Adam's "If I Were King," and beautifully. "Night at Coffee Dan's" on the Vita proved an unexpected bracer and clinched its spot. Talkies are not a regular attraction at this house, but well received when used.

News reel (International) led up to Don Miller's organ item, not a solo. Miller follows the new western idea in going for production effect, though alternating with community singing at times. The number is titled "Sweetheart Memories," permitting the accompaniment of Stanley Perry tenor, and various members of the house ballet, garbed to represent the different melodies. All stage action behind a scrim, with the girls flashed in and out of the black. It was prettily staged and very well supported by Miller at the organ.

"Wings," bird study scenic, sandwiched between this and the stage bill, nice filler. "Wings" title unnecessary in being so similar to that of the feature of the same name. Stage productions here are accredited to Howard Pierce, head of the Kunsky producing department. Pierce is regarded as a competent bill moulder, and if the Capitol's current presentment is an example, reputation deserved. Pierce follows the general stage band idea, meanwhile inserting his own departures. Among the local twists is the surprising backgrounding and seeming unimportance of the stage band and the attempt at more results from the outside talent.

The Walter Bastian band, 18 and the leader, is not an exceptional musical crew, also away from most stage bands in that the conductor does nothing but conduct. In other cases of similar aspect the theatres have employed permanent m. c.'s in addition, but here a new face is seen in the role every two or three weeks, Bastian frequently steps out with a solo on some instrument, but never is permitted to gab or otherwise front himself.

This trip the m. c. mantle falls on the shoulders of Milton Watson, one time Paul Ash "find" and better acquainted in Chicago than here. Watson recently graduated from the pops to light opera, but was buried minus billing therein, and returned to the pops. He is a romantic tenor and strictly that, hence with shortcomings as a send-in man. He is working at the Capitol as though it were his first try. He announces as he sings, making known a pair of slapstick comic acrobats in the way one would expect to be introduced to Galli-Curci. No reflection on Watson's vocal work, though, for he can croon a sentimental ballad and is good looking.

The eight-girl ballet opened the show in a productional starter, revealing a sightly set. Mounting in form of a large valentine, with the band centered in a cutout, clusters of hearts on the sides and top and a rainbow spot on the spangled back drop. All very pretty.

Watson introduced the first specialty turn, Meehan and Newman. Versatile mixed team, this, and showing a neat routine. Man dances and plays the mouth organ. Woman sings. The pair clicked. Mills and Shea, hoke acrobats, demonstrated this sort of turn is sure-fire, no matter how stereotyped. They forget nothing. Fenton and Fields, cork team, uses its vaude routine almost to the letter, but it seems more effective in presentation.

Tommy Wonder, boy dancer, closed the outside portion and seemed much below his usual form. The kid has acquired a girl partner, his sister. She looks several years older and is several heads taller than kid bro., and a bust as a foil. The girl follows immediately in solo, singing a play-up. Tommy gets into form in a dance with a life sized doll and sells the offering, but fails to show his excellent Russian and eccentric routines.

Production number opened, so the same closed, with the entire crew on the stage.

The Capitol's 3,800 seats were well filled the second show Saturday mat. The house grosses around $25,000 weekly, but averaged much higher until the Michigan succeeded as the "ace" presentation stand. At present it is trimming the Mich in screen quality, with the larger theatre more dependent on its stage.

ROXY

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 11.

The Roxy is a paradox. When the show is strong the picture is weak, which is most often the case. When the picture is pleasingly satisfactory the show lets down. Despite it all and with it all, the Roxy manages to knock out around $100,000 per week. How it does it mystifies at times, excepting that the grand manner of it all is the theatre's greatest ballyhoo. That must be it, or have much to do with it.

This week the third Universal feature in a row, "That's My Daddy," starring Reginald Denny, is distinguished by a kiddie star, Jane La Verne, who will owe her opportunities to Denny in the same manner Jackie Coogan owes it all to Chaplin and "The Kid." The four or five-year old youngster steals everything from the star but his name.

Supporting show is only fair. Lew White, A. J. Parmentier and George Epstyne alternating on the Kimball consoles, and Erno Rapee wielding the baton for the "Carmen" overture are the musical starters. A seasonal number by George A. Billings, impersonating Lincoln, and Forbes Randolph's Kentucky Jubilee Choir are the third interlude. Gamby and the ballet are featured in a black and white study.

Following the newsreel, conventionally assembled, the Cabaret presentation is a flop as to idea and development. It may be Roxy's conception of a cabaret, but that's all. Jack White as m. c. seems capable of doing well in that department, but is limited here. Follows a succession of slow specialties, opening with Beatrice Belkin, soprano-ing in nice voice, and satisfactory for the starter, but after that the sameness of the succeeding specialties retards it altogether. Margaret McKee's whistling, as pleasing as ever before, but out of place, and Frederick Fradkin and his Fiddlers (4) slowed it up altogether. They did two slow numbers, re-encoring the latter. Jimmy and George Trainor, with some zippy buck and wing, couldn't accelerate it after what precedcd, and the colored jubilee singers were also mis-spotted on being held over again.

The 55-minute feature, "That's My Daddy," was distinguished on the organ accompaniment by the intelligent manner of using contemporary baby and daddy songs to fit the light theme. Being a light picture and designed purely for an hour's divertissement, nothing but a potpourrie of "Yes, Sir! That's My Baby," "Daddy, You've Been a Mother to Me," "Here Comes My Daddy," "Baby Face" and kindred tin pan alley effusions would have fitted it better. Abel.

ALHAMBRA

(MILWAUKEE)

Milwaukee, Feb. 10.

Two girls steal the thunder at the Universal Alhambra this week—and how! While this house doesn't go in for stage shows, the presentations usually have an individual touch handed by Fred Meyer, managing director.

Athlone, a singer of blues, is the big card. In a pretty set and with clever changcable lighting effect, Athlone sells several numbers to enormous applause when this reviewer caught the act. Athlone is a pretty blonde.

The other show stopper is Theresa Meyer, organist. Flooded in a spot, Miss Meyer opens with several numbers on the organ. Suddenly she gets up, walks away from the organ and the music continues to come through. The effect is worked by the organist pressing an electric switch at the keyboard which sets a phonograph into motion. The disc music is sent to the organ loft by mechanical devices, and while the organist is away from the keyboard the music heard from "the phantom organ" is in reality a concealed Jesse Crawford record. This stunt went over big.

A clever little act is provided by an unprogrammed song-cress who aids the orchestra under the direction of Sol Shapiro. The score of "The Firefly" is the orchestra theme and the singer offers several choruses. The singing ends as the screen is dropped in place for Clara Bow's revival, "Wine." The feature isn't so hot, but the audience has a pleasant taste left from the show and gets a kick out of the animated print. News and a scenic, "Isle of June," round out a highly pleasing program. Israel.

LOEW'S STATE

(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Feb. 9.

Rainy season just starting in. Eddie Peabody and his banjo still swaying. Peabody has been working a "touring" gag for the past few weeks. This time (week ending Feb. 9) he is on his way to Europe and the stage layout had a nifty flash of a ship deck. Tempo was a little too slow at this show, otherwise well arranged and getting the most of the specialty acts on the bill. Snappy band number opened with Peabody cutting up and getting a lot of volume from the instruments. The boys are hitting their stride with Peabody at the helm and play with pep. An octet of prancing dolls for a sailor number, in which they were well routined and got results. Fanchon and Marco get credit for this. These gals are lookers besides good troupers. The musical arrangement for the gob routine is surefire. It caught on here and brought the girls back for an encore. Hal Sidare, clean cut and a whale of a stepper, pushed the pace up a couple of notches and scored with a high-kicking routine appended by some Russian knock steps. This boy is all legs. Peabody introduced Edythe Flynn, auburn-haired beaut, who spilled two songs and called it enough. This gal appeals more to the eye than the ear at present. She has a pleasant personality and with a little more experience can put over a song. Richard Wally showed a good brand of ball juggling for his specialty, using a set of pool pockets tied around him and scored with his routine with the cues. The boys in the band struck up a hot tune for Peabody to come back with song lyrics, together with Murray Feck. Some of the choruses were a little bungled, but got over.

Pop selection by Leo Lee, tenor with a great set of pipes, merited another number, but the time table probably didn't permit, so that girls were back on view once more and again with neatly placed numbers bringing out some specialty activities. Peabody sluffed off the finale with a guitar duo aided by Jimmy Maisle, his standard partner in instrumentals. For a closer Peabody was projected into the audience on a swing and let got with the banjo. Great finish.

LOEW'S NEW YORK

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 9.

Reputed to be one of the most profitable theatres on the Loew circuit, this daily change grind, operated at 40 cents top and continuous from 9 a. m. to 1 a. m., probably owes much of its success to its snooze-provoking comforts. Low lights, a small, well-drilled pit orchestra, smoking privileges, a round balcony as foot support and ashtrays conveniently located within arm's reach are a few of the fixtures calculated to make and keep picture trade here.

In a way this house is unique because it caters to a class of patrons whom the operators of the newest and largest Broadway theatres believed extinct. She come all who are weary, those who are tired of the glare of electric lights, brilliant plastic decorations and the piercing wail of 97-piece house orchestras.

Contrary to popular impression, the New York, occupying one of the choicest and most valuable theatrical sites in the world, does not depend on trade to keep it out of the "red." The same faces, according to the doorman, are seen night after night, week after week. Picture fans, they are, who have never grown up or never cared to acquire new tastes in film fare. People who seek films as a mental anesthetic rather than entertainment.

Old, hackneyed plots, stars of another day who have long dropped from among the public's favorites, hold no terrors for the mob which makes the Roof its after-dinner hangout. Browsily they sit, or rather loll, in their seats reading the same titles, watching the everlasting similarity of expression. Though they more than half expect and know the climaxes and the conclusions of the pictures, they never seem to tire.

Sedate, elderly couples begin to flutter through the weather-beaten doors soon after the dinner hour. Later, sometimes much later, youthful gaiety makes its bow. The Roof is open until 1 a. m. Hardly ever a stir of applause, just a general atmosphere of complete acquiescence. Lindbergh's features flash on the screen. Little more than a low murmur; the stars and stripes—a solitary, half-hearted attempt at applause.

Despite the type of entertainment provided, usually state right productions or third-rate pictures released by the major producing companies, the draw consists of Broadwayites to a large degree. For years Manhattanites, by residence, have had the habit of strolling in here to assassinate the odd hour painlessly.

Westerns or blood and thunder crook dramas of the heaviest type are best appreciated. And the more these pictures follow type the better they are received. It is reassuring to patrons to doze off and on, later waking in the middle of the picture to be able to pick up the threads easily.

Inevitably doomed to give way to the largest theatre in New York within the next two or three years, the demolition of this house will tear a gap in the hearts of its many patrons, picturegoers up and down stairs, who have derived untold stimulation from the musty walls, the bare, wooden stage, the rickety seats and the solemn, almost sacred stillness. Mori.

REGAL

(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Feb. 9.

Here is a pioneer venture of large possibilities. A de luxe picture-presentation house with colored house personnel and performers, constructing its programs for and catering to the colored race.

The Regal is being operated by its builders, Zubliner & Trinz. It is located at 47th street and South Parkway, in the heart of Chicago's widespread dark district. There has been no stint in construction costs nor show expense. The race has a picture house of 3,000 seats to be compared to any theatre in the city.

On the stage are Fess Williams and his orchestra of 18 men (New Acts). Fess was brought from New York as the master of ceremonies. His mastery of sympathetic announcing, darktown humor, and torch orchestration is one of the new things worthwhile in this city. And his band blows with the heat of a good wind.

In the pit the orchestra is conducted for overture and picture accompaniment by Dave Peyton, colored leader familiar to Chicago. Opening week Peyton tackled the William Tell overture, employing a stage mountain scene set. Clarence Tisdale, tenor, came on dressed as a Swiss shepherd and displayed a great set of pipes.

The Fess Williams stage band presentation was prime entertainment for colored reception. In a house of white patronage it might be classed as too hot, but in its own neighborhood there won't be any squawks. Twelve of the choristers on in front of the band to dance and sing an introduction for Williams. Then the leader himself entered hidden behind a large saxophone placard.

First orchestra number was Williams' popular eastern version of "Miss Annabelle Lee," worked by himself and the orchestra vocally as well as instrumentally. It was torrid stuff and gave the presentation a solid start. Next were Cole and Wayne, two hoofers with a fast tap routine culminating in a series of tough knee falls. The boys were liked.

Presentation of a pop number was then worked behind and above the band by Clarence Tisdale and Mamie Moon. Vocally it was good, but not a strong item on the program. The idea has been worked too hard around here. The 12 choristers closed the number with some regulation legmania.

Blanche Calloway, blues singer specializing in heat, copped a hit with some s. a. stuff directed at Fess. The girl can wail like a love-sick sax and has eyes that speak asterisks. Fess worked with her, clowning expertly.

After a break in the straight stage band material Alex Lovejoy and Marshall Rogers gagged several minutes before a Dearborn street oleo and scored solidly. Lovejoy plays the big political man, with Rogers just out of jail and being induced to take up bootlegging. Trouble with a cop, played by John Powell, furnished a strong finish packed with laughs. In appearance and delivery these boys are surefire for colored and white audiences.

Williams resumed with a band number, "Variety Stomp," and touched it up so well the author of the lyrics should write himself another tribute on the strength of having his name on the records.

The Right Quintet, four boys harmonizing and one at the piano, took fcature spotting. They did two numbers, one a "Rigoletto" travesty with one singing protests from the audience while the other four jazzed up the classic on stage. They finished with a sentimental pop and went off to a tremendous hand. This act is a strong picture house entrant. Two Black Dots, dancing team, closed the specialties with a forte line of taps and acrobatic steps. It seemed questionable booking to have two two-man dance acts on the bill, although both scored.

Finale was "Shaking the Jones Away," worked by the entire company. It was given a hot start by Blanche Calloway, who came on with some fringe and did a grind in front of the 12 likewise hip-waving chorus girls. These gals are a good-looking lot, very light in color, and with a dance abandon usually confined to cafe floors.

In pep and entertainment values this presentation rates among the best seen in Chicago. The southtown district is getting plenty for its four bits.

Sammy Williams, organist, was very favorably received in an introductory solo (New Acts). He's especially adept at jazz. "Valley of the Giants," feature, and newsreel completed.

The 3,000 seats were almost filled at 8 p. m. Monday night, three days after opening, which shows business good but still just a trifle short of what is hoped for. It is impossible to foretell the future of this new class of show business as yet. Loop.

WISCONSIN

(MILWAUKEE)

Billy Meyers, tenor, who is a stock feature of the stage Weisfeldt, has capitalized popularity.

Chorus dances away while prop car drives to door of "club" and footman opens door to admit Dave Schooler, m. of c. and Meyers. Both lads walk down short flight of stairs to floors, and Schooler makes introduction in song. Meyers responds with "This Is My Birthday," to music of "This Is My Lucky Day." Schooler accompanies on baby upright. Two or three songs, and Schooler introduces Irmanette. This girl is pretty and plays a mean violin, opening with a classical number and switching to popular stuff with an acrobatic dance while playing.

The band, with Meyers singing a chorus, comes back with a pop, followed by Rome and Dunn. While not great on looks when dolled out in tux, this team of singers have a great act.

Julia Gerrity, with a coon-shouting voice and genial address, puts over her stuff in a way that makes 'em yell for more, and then Detzo Retter flops down the stairs for a session of tumbling and hokum that rocks the house.

The chorus, Irmanette and Meyers, close with a pretty finale number. Unfortunately, the Wisconsin has sidetracked the organ recitals of Arthur Richter for several weeks. Richter is a drawing card at the console and his numbers are missed. However, with a long stage, show, news weekly and long features, there is seemingly no place for organ recitals. "Rose of the Golden West" screen feature, good. Israel.

VAUDEVILLE REVIEWS

PALACE

(St. Vaude)

When vacant rows stretch from side aisle to side aisle on a Monday night here and a holiday besides, there's something wrong. Although maybe this doesn't upset anybody anymore. You can get used to anything. But there was a line in front of the Palace Monday (holiday) matinee—going to the Roxy.

With Belle Baker and Warings' Pennsylvanians across the top there should have been more business than actually was present. Both acts gave plenty of value inside, even for the $2.75 down front tap. Warings, closing intermission on their second week at the house with one more to go, didn't quit until after 33 minutes, and Miss Baker was just two shy of that next to closing.

The half-hearted house must have been plenty discouraging on the other side of the lights. No real applause until Jim McWilliams made his comedy speech, No. 4, and had to force that. Previously, Margaret Severn and her feminine instrumental and vocal trio presented nicely to results that were unworthy. The vocalist in the turn is a bet for a screen test, the girls overcame difficulties with the pit orchestra and Miss Severn demonstrated some neat turns. Serlany Troupe (New Acts), four men, opened, followed by the Turner Brothers, who caught the brunt of a bad layout in having to follow with additional acrobatics.

The 17-piece band went to nine numbers, three repeated from the previous week and still good. Always a pip stage act, this Waring outfit continues full of ideas and novelty treatments of songs to keep them out front. They're presumably holding back their ace routine, the college thing, for the final week. The boys look good and Fred sells 'em ably, abetted by Tom and the drummer. That they can play, note the mellow brass section, goes without saying.

Cortini (New Acts) magicianed in the second half paving the way for Ralph Whitehead (New Acts). Then Miss Baker with songs that are songs. DeSylva, Brown and Henderson get the program credit. Eight songs for her, amongst which a baker, aviator and "Atlas Is Htiess" stood out on lyrics. Also two ballads from which Belle might have omitted the sob patter. Okay at the American. They like it there and the feature picture is bound to come around, no mater what happens. But at the Palace it's $2 and no picture.

Miss Baker, however, sang over a certain degree of hoarseness and never was in danger. She's looking well, too. With her present group of songs she can go anywhere in vaudeville and stand out from the entertainment angle.

Ben Hassen Troupe substituted for Randolph and Wright, who defaulted in the final spot. Sid.

STATE

(Vaude-Picts)

Sellout and standees at the State Monday night with the holiday and "Student Prince" (M-G-M) on screen.

The length of the screen feature chops this week's vaude to five acts, all good.

Count Perrone, baritone, with Trix Oliver at the piano and also warbling in the duets, likeable in follow up with a so-so routine. Mostly routined to give the count an inning on voice and pleasing.

Nola and Winifred St. Clair livened up the comedy with a back-stage skit. Songs kept in lively tempo by the former's low comedy antics. Corking good comedy turn for anywhere.

LeMaire and Van, in cork, scored with comedy chatter, mostly of an argumentive nature with an insurance bit reminiscent of previous Conroy and LeMaire era, for the finish. Van handles the comedy for top value with LeMaire a corking straight as ever. Another bell ringer.

Natacha Nattova, assisted by G. Rolein, closed with a class dance, including "Moth and Flame" ballet bit which Nova did in several previous editions of "Greenwich Village Follies." An adagio also b:r Act is mounted in production fashion and is class for any opera house or production. Bdbo.

RIVERSIDE

(St. Vaude)

Fair show. Bad biz. Gets monotonous.

Gate boost to $1.65 account of holiday. The extra tap discouraged surplus trade.

Gautier's Phonograph Dogs, familiar and reliable opening turn, got the show in motion. Maud Earl, billed as "vaudeville's highest voiced prima donna," was happy in the consciousness that she was not getting across. While looking as if she is capable of doing a good act and having a record of experience behind her, Miss Earl is unfortunately equipped for material. The high note would speak for itself and would be more effective as a climax instead of spread over the act.

Catalini, novelty French cyclist, would pass muster on the sheer ingenuity of his mechanical revolving table. Additionally the stunts are effective, and with a grand fusion of old clors and the Tricolor at the finale it's smeared.

Edward J. Lambert, the goof comic, using three drops of Gilbertian satire to every gallon of hokum, pleased all palates, the faintly highbrow and the receding skullers. He gave the first half of the bill the flavoring without which it would have been flat.

Louie and Charles Mosconi, with

RALPH WHITEHEAD and CO. (3)
"Variety" (Skit)
16 Mins.; Two
Palace (St. V)

Roger Gray gets credit for this script which aims to kiddingly reproduce an entire vaudeville bill. Two girls assist Ralph Whitehead. This doesn't help. Both Whitehead and Gray are superior to the material. Laughs are not plentiful, the result being the male comic is straining all the time and has nothing but straws at which to clutch.

A burlesque adagio with one of the girls in ballet attire sponsored the most fun, the lady displaying lots of nerve in some of her leaps. Other portions are lifeless. A straight ballad by Whitehead had the drapes parting to reveal the girls in comedy costume as illustrations to some effect, but the total count was and is not heavy.

Act doesn't seem to build and there are laughless moments which had the house restless. Whitehead is a standard performer. Gray has ideas and a natural sense of comedy. Some script surgery and revamping might whip this into shape. Or maybe it came in too soon. It's not especially creditable to either contributor or purveyor as it stands. Sid.

THE USHERS (2)
Magic
16 Mins.; One
58th St. (V-P)

Man and woman work out novel routine using the man's feats of magic and fast "mind reading," the woman on stage and man in aisles. Pip of an opening. Drop in one shows fantastic city of towering buildings, like the film "Metropolis," with windows lighted. Aeroplane is seen to approach in the sky. Passenger elevator in tallest building shoots to top as plane alights. Shoots down again, and man of the team emerges from door in center of drop as though he had arrived from sky.

Goes through neat bit of magic, including trick of threading two dozen needles while in his mouth (Houdini did this and it was supposed to be his property—anyway it's a startler).

Woman then arrives via sky in same manner and after some rather inconsequential talk they go into the mind reading. Method is striking. Girl identifies articles, giving number on currency bills and other intricate details. Replies are swift, coming instantly and without hesitation. Cueing system defies detection by lays for man uses little talk. Both depart as they came.

Entrance and exit alone puts them in. Besides that the work is clean cut and showmanly. Capital act for small time feature. Rush.

SERLANY TROUPE (4)
Posing, Acrobatics
9 Mins.; Full (Special)
Palace (St. V.)

Opens under colored lights, the male quartet in various poses, and finally breaking this with a slow-motion hand-to-hand lift well executed. After that the boys hop down off the rear platform, doff their white wigs and go to work.

Understander works from a leg catch perch, suspending his companions by various contrivances, once holding all three by an arm.

Various formations underneath the top member make the act unusual in appearance, and the quiet and expert manner of working makes it a vaude cinch. Sid.

BAILEY and BARNUM
Songs and Dances
13 Mins.; One
Coliseum (V-P)

Man and woman combination and is not to be confused with Barnum and Bailey, the man-singing duo. Neither has much voice but their dancing is their standbye.

For good measure the girl throws in an imitation of Harry Lauder effective where the customers are not too exacting. Girl goes in for abbreviated dress and looks well.

JOE AND JANE McKENNA
Songs, Talk, Comedy
14 Mins.; One
5th Ave. (V-P)

If nothing else the closing adagio travesty by this youthful couple is certain to hand out some laughs. It could be worked up to even greater proportions.

Youth starts this duo off nicely, the girl being both attractive and cute and evincing an unmistakable willingness to clown. Gab exchange is not so good and could be bolstered. Hard workers, the girl displaying heavy personality. Easily got over here. Mark.

"ECHOES FROM METROPOLITAN" (12)
Grand Opera
20 Mins.; One, Two and Full (Special)
Academy (V-P)

Extraordinarily good idea. For first time in knowledge of this reviewer somebody has hooked up grand opera idea in shape for popular vaudeville. Trick consists of giving brief bits of the principal standard arias with backing of appropriate scenery and interpolating impersonations of the musical old masters by the orchestra leader, after the manner of Willie Zimmermann of a decade ago.

In this case a splendid singing personnel has been assembled. Twelve are about evenly divided, men and women, all having voices that pass muster, and give a general impression of musical dignity at least, even if the acting sometimes is inept.

Procedure is thus: Placard announces Mascagni's "Cavaleria Rusticana" and curtain goes up on drop in stained glass window effect to supply background of church. Leader in orchestra pit bobs up made up as Mascagni and leads orchestra in characteristic fashion (usually with touch of caricature for comedy), all leading into the aria with three principals and a small chorus backing.

Verdi, Von Suppe, Gounod and Strauss all follow in order, with the prison scene from "Faust" as a climax. Each has a change of drop sufficient to suggest the setting, as, for example, a drop with a prison tower with tenor at cut window for "Il Trovatore."

At the Academy the whole offering was received with every evidence of enthusiasm, the foreign clientele there being strong for serious music. Appeal not confined to such an audience. The impersonations from pit help vastly for vaudeville. Good feature anywhere. Rush.

MILTON CHARLES
Organist
Chicago, Chicago

After a brief stay at the Oriental, Milton Charles has moved to the more "select" Chicago. The Oriental, temple of jazz, has Henri Keates again. Chicago showdom has, and probably always will, consider the Chicago theatre as the favorite house of the elite picture patrons. True artistry is striven for at the Chicago more than at any other theatre in the city—short of the Opera.

So, Mr. Charles, when he sits at the Chicago's organ console must be satisfied and so must the Chicago's patrons, for Charles is one of those rare individuals—a technically perfect organist. Aside from his technique he is possessed of an ability to inject desirable little "twists" where they are most needed in an organ recital.

One of the first organists to record his work on standard discs, Charles has achieved a national if not international reputation. While he could get along very nicely without it this reputation is an undeniable help along lines of popularization. On his opening program at the Chicago were "An Old Guitar and an Old Refrain," "Varsity Drag" and Lizst's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" for the finale.

Milton Charles is a showman and a musician in a superlative sense. With an eye to feeling out the discriminating Chicago clientele, he used slides—telling how nervous he was and how anxious to please. Charles might have been anxious to please, he probably was, but he certainly was not nervous. Then, the slides went on to say, that "Some like pep while some think it's passe," and Charles varied his program to please any taste.

MILLARD and MARLIN (2)
Song-Dance-Comedy
15 Mins.; One (Special)
Broadway (V-P)

The well-liked comedy team are back this season with a new drop. Deliver as usual, only in front of a college campus entrance.

Opens with a chance meeting of the goofy student and the washwoman's daughter in a red check dress. Girl's plaintive vocal delivery registers within the first two minutes. Marlin has a chow mein number, used with the tune of "Charmaine." Got laughs.

Gags a little moldly but seemed new to this crowd, so may be okey. General line along same lines as previously, though now containing different material. Filled next to closing satisfactorily. Mori.

WINONA WINTER
Character Songs
16 Mins.; One
Pantages, Los Angeles (V-P)

Miss Winter who has not been active in the past few seasons, returns with a line of material written by Blanche Merrill and makes good. Impressions of some of Broadway's feminine notables give Miss Winter's talents full scope, while her individual selling points put the numbers over. The blonde statelines of Miss Winter assures class appearance, even when she steps out in other characters. Her "Shop Girl" is a whimsical sketch with a light dash of humor while another one about the "easy going gal" rings with a touch of pathos.

One concerning the ups and downs of a chorine strikes a true note. For an encore Miss Winter employs one of her old standbys—the ventriloquist gag with the dummy. This she could eliminate to advantage. It fails to click with her general demeanor and is likely to offset some of the other things. Annette Evans accompanies at the piano, but more or less hidden. Sweet looker, however, and tastefully dressed.

"HAPPINESS GIRLS" (9)
Revue
28 Mins.; One-Two-Three
Broadway (V-P)

Opening is in a flapper school. Schoolmistress does a lifelike imitation of Texas Guinan, which was not, sad to relate, fully appreciated by the customers in this house.

Rough, unpolished comedy resulted in strong returns. After yelling "Squattez-vous" to her pupils, the school teacher asked one of the students to add six and six. The correct answer being received, she bawled "C'mon everybody, give this clever little girl a great big hand!"

Lyrics weak and comedy lines raw, but business registered on all six.

All-girl orchestra is an attractive feature. Start off brightly, but slow up to allow for soloists. Prolongs act unnecessarily, and none of the soloists strong enough to merit special spotting.

A couple of the weaker comedy attempts can easily be eliminated since the act is too long at present.

OTTO and ORETTO and Co. (2)
Novelty S. & D. Sketch
15 Mins.; One and Full
58th St. (V-P)

Otto Bros. formerly did their dancing turn with a dressing room sketch background. Now they have elaborated the sketch, using two old timers, introduced as Hart and DeVere, as characters.

Boys start with their dance routine, which is a whale of a specialty on its own. During unison stepping, one breaks down and other walks off in disgust, refusing to come on when cued. Orchestra vamps several times and then drop rises to show boys in their dressing room for bickering in the Cameron and Flanagan style.

One boy says, "All right I quit the act, I'll team up with my old man." Cue for entrance of Hart who takes boys part in wrangle. Gray-haired woman in evening dress crashes here, business explaining she is mother of other boy. In talk it develops she is an old time trouper, and at length Hart recognizes her as his old partner, forgotten during the intervening years.

Surprise! Warm greetings! Why not put on a four-act. Which is oue to return to "one" where old timers do a cake walk after costume change, and boys contrasting with modern stepping—black bottom tap and eccentric—for the finish. At the 58th street a veritable riot. Will do well anywhere on strength of the stepping which is really exceptional. Rush.

LEWIS and WINTHROP (2)
Song and Dance
8 Mins.; One
Broadway (V-P)

Neat appearance and reliable delivery. Have a new number called the Charleston-Black Bottom waltz, executed with taps.

Eccentric buck-and-wing efforts put the act over after a light start. Charleston-Black Bottom buck dance, as encore, weakens finish. Mori.

CORTINI
Magician
10 Mins.; Full Stage
Palace (St. V.)

Cortini works in tails and relies upon an avalanche of coins as a finish to send him across, going into the audience for this bit. Dropping coin after coin into silver buckets until they finally overflow and rain down from the flies is an effective conclusion worth the trouble it must take to set it up and clean it up.

Previously it is pretty much a matter of standard routine, Cortini not always being too smooth or perhaps nervous Monday night.

CARNEY and PIERCE
Pop Songs
12 Mins.; One
American (V-P)

Two men, in tuxes, one at piano, for routine of published numbers. They slam their stuff over on diction, volume and some good team work. They are finger-snapping, mammy-singers and constitute a peppy and serviceable deucer.

Material indifferent. Land.

valuable co-operation from Dorothy Van Alst and Miss Bernadette, entertained auspiciously. They are giving free lessons, according to an announcement in the lobby. Between five and six nightly and for any and all who apply. They are featuring a not very sharply differentiated dance called the "gigolo," a good long route's throw away from being sensational.

After the recess period Sam Summers and Estelle Hunt resumed the highjinks. Theirs is a quaint turn, outwardly of little weight yet piling up a sizeable quota of laughs.

The hit of the bill was Coram, dapper ventriloquist. Besides having brought the mechanicism of voice-throwing to eminence, this graduate of the London halls possesses a well-indexed file of gags plus a line of humor not dependent upon puns but upon ideas. The audience enjoyed especially his raging of himself.

Lily Morris, next to closing, kept her stage waits pretty well down. The change interludes timed 30, 50, 30 and 40 seconds. These gaps in the continuity of her audience control undoubtedly hurt this English entertainer for the States. Also considering the insular nature of her songs her ability to bang across a good score is a tribute to her trouping.

ACADEMY

Magnificent house, the Academy, with all that means in attracting people from the tenement district around 14th street. And for the six bits gate a remarkable show. This week, first half, the headliner is Francis X. Bushman (in person) with a sketch, "Code of the Sea," perfect for the clientele, both as a draw on billing and as an entertainment on the stage.

Holiday matinee Monday, audience late in gathering, but capacity by mid afternoon and standees waiting for the late show. Eight-act bill to back up the feature, which, with the picture, "The Opening Night" (Columbia), totalled three hours and a half of excellent (and expensive) entertainment. All told in the specialty section there were more than two score people concerned.

Frazers opened, neat for the spot, with an operatic troupe probably trying out set No. 2, Called "Echoes of the Metropolitan" (New Acts). Poor placing for the bill and for the turn, but probably only spot available. Jim and Betty Morgan gave an enjoyable interlude of music and comedy lyrics in their quiet, effective style.

Bushman sketch in early and not a particularly fortunate placing since it was third turn of running sans comedy. Bushman makes a fine, commanding figure on the stage and here has a distinctly superior playlet. Subdued melodrama with a high powered kick at the finish and trickily framed for applause. Fine condensed bit of writing, with splendid exposition of dramatic story in 15 minutes. Ideal for the Bushman fans. In the big Academy the woman's lines were mostly inaudible. They insisted on a speech and the movie idol of yesterday spilled neat comedy talk for five minutes.

Sammy Fain and Joe Dunn, songsters, in simple routine of numbers including Sammy's "Rainy Day," were meat for the customers who always acclaim songsmiths warbling their own compositions. The spot would have been greatly bettered by some sort of comedy interlude, since there had not been a laugh so far. Indeed the whole bill suffered from absence of strong low comedy.

The Royal Pekin Japanese troupe of jugglers and acrobats had nothing by way of merriment to purvey, although they have some marvelous oriental feats in several departments and a fine flash of a background.

Sam Wooding and orchestra were due here, but were switched over to closing and Burns and Kissen were brought up to take the place. Here was a riot. Keeping in mind that there had not been a ripple of laughter up to date, the entrance of the pair in their Greek dude burlesque was the cue cue for a roar, a roar that continued throughout except for the sentimental ballad by Burns, which is slipped in early to make a change of pace. The parodies—one on "Melody Lingers" for example—panicked the house.

Then two news reels, Fox's regular service without the sound effects and then a complete news reel with Movietone. The sight and sound selection for this release is not especially happy. Most of the sound has to be supplied by the imagination. Shots at the falling walls in the Fall River fire were at such a distance that the roar was pretty dim. Sound effects of cutting ice in Massachusetts also is pretty tame.

Then the delayed Wooding aggregation, but making up for the delay by their torrid jazz, hot stepping by the musicians and the crooning blues technique by Edith Wilson. Those sax and cornet wielders of Woodings know their intimate jazz, getting some extreme effects in harmonious discords that are startling. And how that banjoist can extemporize on Charleston twists and black bottom evolutions.

Picture not quite up to the specialty show, but satisfactory release for the clientele. Altogether interesting performance, except for the shortage of comedy material, which dulled the running somewhat. Rush.

BROADWAY

(Vaude-Pcts)

Three new acts on a six-act bill and the screen flicker a dud. Business fair on account of the holiday crowds but not capacity for the afternoon performance.

Happiness Girls, (New Acts), pleaser. At a level toned to the understanding of the patrons of this and similar houses. Out of town they should be a riot.

Millard and Marlin, (New Acts), highly polished comedy team next to closing, with a more subtle and entertaining brand of comedy, but did not rate as highly with the mob as the all-girl act.

In the opening spot Bob and Lucy Gillette delivered juggling while Bob attempted what was evidently intended as comedy in waiter's makeup.

Bradford and Hamilton, song and dance trio, closed.

"Brass Knuckles," (W. B.), screen feature. Mori.

AMERICAN ROOF

(Vaude-Pct)

Barring a few spots the American Roof show Monday ran to small time low comedy. The audience seemed all primed to laugh at any old thing. Gags that bordered on the blue got more than anything else. Not much genuine talent.

Alvin and Kenny opened, comic half getting his best laughs through the close calls he has when stepping in and out of the way of the straight worker on the Roman rings. Much stalling.

The Garner Sisters, with some topical songs and about five gestures, did fairly well although there is not much variation to the routine. This due perhaps to the use of well played pop catalog numbers.

Darrell and Robinson (New Acts), got away with their spot, due to the hoke of the woman and the rough way she kidded herself about her slimness. Then came the real bright spot of the first half, the Paul Specht band.

That Specht crowd gave the show a great boost in addition to its music interpolating comedy that was relished. They closed the first part and closed it well with no disposition to overstay.

After intermission Howard and Brown, colored, scored with dancing. They make a stab at singing, but their stock is hoofing, and get them by abundantly.

Cooke and Langdon were pleasing, a dash of comedy and a bit of song. Scott Bros. and Vernon (New Acts), grabbed off the comedy honors and were a big help to the late bill. Closing was the Gautier animal act, with a pony doing the main work. On the screen "The Divine Woman" (M-G-M). Mark.

HURTIG & SEAMON MAY RETIRE IF MAKING DEAL WITH MINSKYS

Firm's 125th Street Burlesque Theatre in Negotiation —Would Tie Up Harlem for Stock Burlesque Men—Mutual Wheel Shows Liable for One House

Hurtig & Seamon, among the oldest managerial names of current show business, may fade out of the picture if negotiations looking toward Hurtig & Seamon's 125th Street theatre, passing from their direction, reach a successful conclusion.

Interested as principals on the other side are the Minsky Brothers, with I. H. Herk, president of the Mutual wheel, acting for Jules Hurtig, who is ill. The Minskys have the Apollo on 125th street, playing the customary Minsky stock burlesque policy. Hurtig & Seamon's play Mutual shows, having become attached to the Herk chain when leaving the Columbia wheel a couple of years ago.

With both 125th street houses operated by the Minskys, thus shutting off the hard and tight opposition for several seasons, one of the theatres is liable to continue with the Mutual wheel attractions. In the other stock burlesque will remain.

Minsky's Expanding

Minskys have taken over the Grand Street, lower East Side, New York, and will play stock burlesque commencing next week (Feb. 20). They will shift their National Winter Garden stock intact to the Grand Street, and organize a new company for the Winter Garden.

The Grand Street gives Minskys three stock burlesques in New York.

Minskys may take in other territory in Greater New York for a similar policy. It is reported they are negotiating for two houses in Brooklyn, and one on Staten Island.

Hurtig and Seamon

Hurtig & Seamon have been show and theatre operators for many years. They operated theatres in and outside of New York, and at one time had five burlesque shows on the Columbia wheel.

Members of the firm were Jules Hurtig and Harry Seamon, also the late Joe and Louis Hurtig. Messrs. Hurtig and Seamon have been very popular among their companions in the show business. Harry Seamon, for a long period very active in the direction of the firm, of recent seasons had to slacken up on account of his health. Jules Hurtig since has been the prime mover.

Hurtig & Seamon are identified with 125th street and did much to build up the west side of Harlem's principal thoroughfare. The opening of the present H. & S. music hall was one of 125th street's biggest events and before Harlem went dark.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Ballyhooing for main street shows was definitely declared out in a decision handed down by Superior Judge Yankwich. The court declared constitutional a city ordinance prohibiting word-of-mouth advertising on the streets.

The ruling was made in the case of Jack Smith, recently convicted of violating that ordinance. As a result of Judge Yankwich's decision, main street ballyhooers may take an appeal to the Supreme Court when they find themselves barred from sidewalk oratory.

BILLY WATSON'S ACT

"Sliding" Billy Watson has turned down a stock burlesque offer, to do an act in vaudeville.

Watson, until the recent merger of Columbia and Mutual, had his own show on the latter circuit.

Burlesque Engagements

Carrie Finnell Show

Comedian ..... Benny ("Wop") Moore
Second Comedian ..... Billy Gordon
Straight ..... Russell Smith
Utility ..... Ted Lester
Juvenile ..... Anon
Prima Donna ..... Carrie Finnell
Soubret ..... Bee Moore
Soubret ..... Pearl Henderson
Soubret ..... Peggy Woods

All the way from very good burlesque material to turkey grade entertainment. In the suitable material fall the first-rate comedy of Benny Moore, playing "wop" or wise cracking smartly, without dialect; the stepping of Bee Moore and Carrie Finnell's own small allotment of labor, a flash song and shimmy interlude of six or seven minutes at the finish.

The rest is pretty terrible, with especial reference to the production and the most lifeless group of 16 chorus girls that have swung around these corners in many a day. There isn't a voice in the troupe, and with the exception of Miss Moore and Miss Finnell you'd suspect that all the women in the outfit were breaking in, not only for the show but for their stage experience. That group of chorines could keep a single simple routine even—indeed, they didn't even shuffle through their maneuvers in time.

Pearl Henderson and Peggy Woods made a fair stab at number leading, both vehement blondes and tall, rangy girls in figure. One of them dressed smartly, the other untidily, but from the program it was impossible to tell which was which.

A tall, slender girl has to have something exceptional in burlesque to make up for lack of curves. The boyish lines may be great for the Junior League, but the wheel likes its femininity fairly voluptuous. Miss Moore fills out her scanties and her whatzises and got interest accordingly, while the two blonde girls didn't have any talent for synthetic sex appeal.

On the other hand Carrie herself is the other extreme, a woman of proportions much too opulent to make for art. She assayed the undress shimmy for one brief revealing moment, working alone on the stage with the aid of a male pianist. In all good will the suggestion is offered that Miss Finnell abandon the shimmy and devote herself to fully clothed and genteel comedy. Either that or train down. No woman of her lines can coquet, even in United Burlesque.

Benny Moore carries the show. A hard-working comedian with excellent style and a good deal of capital material in the form of quick sallies, funny always and only moderately blue. He went into one of the boxes for a fine bit of sustained comedy, working with Gordon (doing Hebe) in one of the opposite boxes, and the stage occupied by a fake mind-reading turn. The two comics kept up a swift crossfire of wise cracking that was rich in genuine laughs, Moore dropping his dialect and doing wise guy for the moment.

He worked in all the bits, was concerned in a dozen two-man talking items in one, and generally helped enormously to keep the crowd's minds off the uninspiring spectacle of clumsy girls in the ensembles. Gordon backed him nicely, giving the only assistance in the personnel, for the two or three men doing straight merely ambled through the evening. None of them had a voice or appeared to have heard of the technic of straight feeding. No suggestion of a specialty either.

Even Moore doesn't shine in the vocal department, and by way of a specialty interlude does an elaborate impression of Georges Rebax doing the scene from "Sign of the Rose," with special set of flower shop. To be fair, the audience seemed to like this. They were disposed to josh at first, but Moore handled the heavy dramatics neatly and they ended with whole-hearted applause. Isabelle Van and her girls did well and never were so sorely needed to give the femme flash to a unit weak in that particular. Business at the Columbia capacity Thursday evening (Feb. 9). Rush.

Harry Shapiro, Show's Manager

Ryan has two shows on the wheel and will alternate as supervising manager between both.

Paterson's Runway

Billy Watson got an okay for a runway at his Orpheum, Paterson, N. J. It was ordered to start this week.

Theatre Sells Near Beer

At the Apollo, Harlem burlesque stock house operated by the Minskys, they are selling glasses of near beer in the aisles, with a bar also fitted up at the rear of the house. No free lunch, however.

Rex Evans Arrested

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 14.

Gordon Johnston, 37, also known as Rex H. Evans, who said he was a vaudeville actor, living at 221 Amsterdam avenue, New York, was arrested, suspected of being the check worker who has mulcted many Springfield merchants. Johnston admitted larceny, the police say, and his case was continued for disposition.

Johnston declared, police say, that the check racket was the windup of a seven weeks' debauch that began in Albany at the close of his engagement with a burlesque company. He was one time a dancing partner of Pat Rooney and Marion Bent.

During his stay in Springfield, the police say, he had passed at least four bad ones. The first was at the Cooley Hotel, where he induced a clerk to accept a check for $40.

Stock Stampede on In Fertile Detroit

Detroit, Feb. 14.

Stock burlesque, in Detroit, has four companies running and a fifth slated to bow in next week.

The Palace, largest and getting the big slice, was converted to burlesque a week ago by Irons & Clamage, who also run the Avenue here. The Chicago operators' lease on the Avenue expires shortly and their leasing of the Palace is said to be a motion at preventing a freeze-out in fertile Detroit.

Besides the stocks, there is Izzy Seidenberg's Cadillac, wheel house, with business only fair. Stock seems to be doing the most consistent drawing in town.

Sheikee Shakes Show To Shimmy in Stock

Detroit, Feb. 14.

Sheikee was an awful disappointment to the local boys last week when she didn't show up after being circus-billed and ballyhooed to extremes. Her contract with the road outfit held her an extra week and caused non-appearance.

National management was forced to express regrets from the stage, and an announcer said Sheikee would shake plenty to make up for the lost week.

NO CHI. BURLESQUE CO.

The proposed Chicago company of "Burlesque" has been called off by Arthur Hopkins. He has decided that but one company, original, will suffice for an out-of-town four upon completion of its run in New York.

A California company of "Burlesque" is being organized in Los Angeles, produced by Lillian Albertson through arrangement with Hopkins.

"PUSS-PUSS" TITLE

"Puss-Puss" will be the title of the new show Irons and Clammage will produce for the Mutual Wheel. It went into rehearsal last week and will take its place on the burlesque wheel next week.

Cast includes Charles (Boob) Blake, Al Ferris, Harry Kelly, Jimmy Walters, Viola Spaeth, Mabel White, Bessie Rosa and Doris Sisters.

LORETTA BEYES' ILLNESS

Loretta Beyes featured with "The Merry Whirl," was compelled to withdraw from the show last week after suffering a nervous collapse in Boston.

BRIDGEPORT WEEK

Another booking deal was closed by I. H. Herk yesterday (Tuesday) whereby the Park, Bridgeport, Conn., becomes a full week on the Mutual Circuit.

DAN DODY'S QUESTION

Dan Dody, who has been devoting some of his time to staging runway numbers in burlesque houses, has gone in for insurance.

Which one will become a side line is Dody's question.

STOCK IN TORONTO

Stock burlesque will go in as policy at the Globe, Toronto, Feb. 27.

The stock is being cast out of New York.

Koud at Columbia

Sam Koud is now staging the runway numbers at the Columbia, New York.

Fred Clark recently was assigned this work, was shifted to the Palace (stock), Baltimore, operated by the Scribner & Herk Holding Corp.

Robert Harrington, assistant manager, Broadway, New York, has left that house and assumed the double management of the Statc and Rivoli theatres, New Brunswick, N. J. They are booked by the K-A offices.

BALCONY BIZ OFF

Main Lane and the neighborhoods in the metropolitan area.

With the 65 odd plays of the $3 or more grade on view continuously and with Leblang having an average of $9 at least of them at all times in his cut rate establishment, the cut rater is reported not having equalled his gross balcony sales of last season. It is again found from the accounts in the other devices theatres have for catching the strays in the upstairs sections, principally along the special inducement sales talks.

What inroads if any the pictures have made in the orchestra seats of the legit houses are not ventured by the showmen. They say there is no data upon that.

Pictures Universal

On the "road," the showmen say, the blight of the picture upon the legit attraction, local and current, is plainly seen. Most of them blame only the picture for the present road condition, pointing to contrasting times and grosses, also the larger number of plays traveling before the moving picture became the universal amusement for Americans.

Nor will any of the Broadwayites hazard an opinion as to the future dent the film places may make upon the legit in New York, or if the regainess of the picture houses and their stage entertainment, taking in the feature film, will eventually make itself marked all over a legit theatre charging from three to five times the picture admission scale.

BRIDGE AS OPENER

services of E. J. Tobin, president of the Chicago Bridge Whist Association, who opens Great States stage shows at its various theatres with a lecture on bridge. He instructs the beginners, using oversized cards on the stage to demonstrate the play and bidding.

In the mezzanine foyers are 20 bridge tables, and milady, after the show, gathers her coteries about her and makes for the bridge table. An hour or so at bridge, and then home.

Bridge matinees at Great States theatres are becoming increasingly popular. Women, who under ordinary circumstances attend the theatre infrequently, find the bridge conclaves an inducement.

Another angle to the community idea is the "Happy Hour Clubs" for children. Short subjects of interest to youngsters supplement the regular film menu, and the Saturday afternoon stage shows feature magicians, Punch and Judy skits, puppets, and an occasional teller of tales. An elderly woman, dressed as "Mother Goose," takes care of the youngsters. Policemen, specially detailed from the city police department, insure their safe passage to and from the theatre.

BOOZE ON AIR

Worts," but this was canned. None but professional talent will be accepted and no rentals made for other commercial broadcasts.

The government will also open a station this summer, but will confine itself largely to dope on weather and market conditions for farmer listeners.

A program similar to that put on by "Collier's" may be arranged by the Toronto "Star Weekly" through CFCA. "The Star" owns this station, which was the first to operate in Canada.

NOTES

Two Black Dots and Geogie Tapa and Marie Lubow are two acts slated for B. & K. runs in Chicago.

ON THE SQUARE

Neil Kingsley's Beautiful Chewers

Neil Kingsley, of the dramatic department of the New York "Sun," a friend of the Cheese Clubbers, is again on Broadway, after away for two weeks. Friends were about to report his disappearance when suddenly he appeared. Attired in an English tweed suit, a large sized bowler, black low shoes and fawn spats. Kingsley bears a great likeness to Mayor Jimmy Walker, only taller. He reluctantly consented to tell where he had been.

"Fellows you don't know the half of it," said the giant of the dramatic department. "Recently I had a temporary bridge installed. I had been dining and cabareting with some boys of the Cheese Club. The artificial chewers gave me great pain. I placed them in my overcoat pocket to ease up my mouth. As I started home I thought of my bridge. I dug into my pocket. It was gone. I don't know whether they chewed their way out or were stolen.

"How could I face friends with the loss of the beautiful crockery. I remained a prisoner home while the dentist made me a new bridge. Disheartened and glum I decided to phone a friend that might have an extra bridge.

"This pal of mine, Gene Graf, a man of many bridges, cried when he heard that I had made myself an anchorite for a few molars.

"'Neil,' said Graf, 'I have a box with several bridges. You can take your pick.' I hurried to Gene's home in Astoria and their selected the bridge I am now wearing until 'Doc' gets mine finished. They ought to give medals to men like Gene," said the stalwart Neil, concluding his narative.

Framing P. A. Run Ragged

At lunch yesterday in Sardi's the boys framed Irwin S. Strouse, the Casa Lopez press agent, something pretty, enlisting Ralph T. Kettering, the playwright, as a pseudo-detective to "pinch" Strouse on a headquarters complaint of disseminating false publicity in the Mlle. Simone Roseray "suicide" in Central Park Lake. The intention originally was to get a friendly cop, but the unie was feared would attract attention and Kettering was impressed into service, but the pseudo-dick doing great straight with a cocked derby and a hard pan to fit the scene. Strouse went for it, considering the good-natured ragging the gang subjected him to following the p. a.'s insistence that the Casa Lopez dancer's suicide was on the up-and-up.

Strouse accompanied the "dick" outside for half a block and then decided on a ruse, insisting he was not Strouse, returning to Sardi's and pointing out Walter Kingsley as the wanted man.

Break for Stenog

Poor stenog! Working in a Times Square newspaper office. Her dear old dad dies. She has to scrape for the $225 funeral expenses. She confides timidly to a friend that her old man, who was a very light drinker, had left "some" liquor, and she, teetotaler, would like to sell it. Friend goes up to see. All he finds is 19 cases of "Old Pebbleford," which, even before the war, was worth twice as much as ordinary Bourbon, and any Bourbon is now priceless, because practically extinct. He brings a thirsty connoisseur up to the little Harlem flat. Said T. C. offers $2,500 sight unseen. She opens one bottle, he gets a little on his tongue, calls his limo and walks out with the lot—for $3,600!

Talked Millions While Hungry

They were discussing the Mrs. E. S. Harkness record inheritance of $90,000,000 or thereabouts, and the manner in which her husband's Standard Oil holdings and other securities doubled within a year.

The guy who brought it up with consummate financial erudition, further expounded on the details and how Mrs. Harkness might have had more but for the $32,000,000 she had given away in benefactions.

In kidding someone asked him if he had the price of his lunch and he admitted that he was going to wish the check on somebody else for just that reason.

Putting on the "Bee"—Quick

They're not taking any chances at the Hotel Manger. The bill clerk bills all guests after three days, regardless of how much baggage or how often the guest has stopped at the hotel.

The new system has been in vogue for some time and has resulted in a number of check-outs by indignant guests awakened early in the morning by the bill clerk. The hotel is doing business and appears indifferent to the manner in which guests accept the three-day request for settlement.

Percy Johnson's Cane Collection

Percy Johnson, president of the Chemical Bank, whose pet hobby is collecting canes, received a promise from Charlie Chaplin for his original cane, on exhibition in Gimbel's department store. The cane, with the rest of Charlie's original costume, was shipped back to Hollywood before the gift was known.

When Johnson finally gets it, the Chaplin cane will become a companion to sticks once carried by the Prince of Wales and other celebs.

Hickman as Bus Boy

William Edward Hickman, former theatre usher, musician and jack of all trades, on trial for the murder of 11-year-old Marian Parker, was employed as a biscuit passer and bus boy in Muller's Coffee Shop, known as the official theatrical eating house in downtown Los Angeles.

Hickman worked on the night shift for about three months and was well known to local actors. At various times he helped out with the midnight musical entertainment supplied by volunteer talent.

A Dumbell on the Level

In the lobby of a theatre housing a new hit. A man with a top hat presented an agency slip to the porter. The slip called for two reserved seats. The porter called out: "Tickets for Mr. Dumbell." That was his monicker.

The treasurer bawled out the porter, saying "get away from here, I'm too busy." The high hatted chap got peevcd; "I want those tickets. Dumbell is my name and I don't see anything funny about it."

Osterman Squares It

Jack Osterman thought he'd square the many parties he has crashed with a little shindig of his own which started Saturday night and ran until unconscious, i. e. until Osterman had to m. c. at the Winter Garden Sunday night.

Osterman printed special menus a la nite club, called his suite Osterman's Dive, captioned the joint with comedy and near-comedy placards, including some choice 'phone numbers, and added to the atmosphere by the tables and chairs Nicky Blair sent over.

A Fast Clock on a Swift Street

Some day all four faces of the Paramount tower clock will read the same or vary only within a few minutes of one another, rather than by the hour and half hour. It was 3:30 Friday aft by the north clock and 8 sharp on the east face. Facing Broadway at any time is a swift proposition, with the clock probably seeing plenty.

Cheesers and Their Gag

Harry Hershfield resigned as pres. of the Cheese Club which lunches daily at Sardi's and Walter Winchell was "voted" the new chief, whereupon Kingsley took up his eating abode in a cornor remote from the gathering. With the gag, an ill-inspired practical joke reflecting on Major Edwin Bowes of the Capitol because of Kingsley's reputed "election" has some of the boys incensed, since Bowes, as first vice-president, would automatically become president to succeed the resigned Hershfield.

Restaurant's Fishing Tank

A 25 foot tank, four feet high and three feet wide, will be the centre of attraction in the new Hotel President restaurant for the purpose of affording fishing facilities to guests who can catch their own trout and other fresh water fish for immediate preparation.

Joe Freeman returns to the Square as an all-night restaurateur with the President venture, having been restricted for five years when selling his Freeman's landmark on Seventh avenue to Gertner's. Freeman confined himself to kitchen operations in the metropolitan nite clubs.

Molly Picon, Uptown, 2 Ways

Date and management have not been decided. She will do her stuff in English and Yiddish.

Big Money—Many Touches

When reports of big money pass around in Times Square it's usually followed by touching requests. This is said to be one of the causes deciding B. S. Moss to blow away for a while. He was recently reported receiving $3,000,000 in cash from Keith-Albee.

Bootlegging shaves and shines is a new industry for Times Square on Sundays since the new regulation prohibiting operation of barber shops or shoe shine parlors on the Sabbath. The bootleggers are subletting offices on Sundays with the tariff for shaves ranging from 50 cents to $1 and shines 25 cents. Several places operating have been playing to good grosses.

Getting away from the usual pencil racket a blind beggar has been observed around the square crossing and re-crossing intersections. Some one always helps him across and the same beggar gets an opening for a touch.

On 47th street a small dairy lunch continues in full operation with the rest of the building, of which it was part, entirely demolished by wreckers.

Fountain pen desk sets are being given away to new savings accounts by a bank on Eighth avenue.

Only a Tab

"Daily News" some time ago sent a young man down to Palm Beach to report society news.

He is still reporting it—under the name of Nancy Randolph.

JANE O'ROARK'S RUBBERS

Russek's Withdraws Warrant on Bouncer for Fur Coat

Magistrate August Dreyer in West Side Court permitted representatives of Russek's department store, 390 5th avenue, to withdraw a warrant issued against Jane O'Roark, charging her with grand larceny. Miss O'Roark owned a night club in West 51st street near 7th avenue, the police said.

Nov. 21 Robert Casper, detective for the department store, appeared before Magistrate Dreyer and asked for a warrant for the O'Roark woman's arrest. He signed an affidavit stating that on Sept. 28 the woman went to Russek's and purchased a fur coat valued at $110, on which she left a $10 deposit.

It was agreed that the coat was to be delivered the following day when the balance would be paid. The affidavit said that on Sept. 29 the coat was delivered and the woman gave a check in payment. The store sent the check to the bank and, the affidavit stated, it was returned marked "payment stopped."

When the department store was unable to satisfy its claim or secure the merchandise they sent Casper to court to make application for the warrant. Friday he explained restitution had been made and asked permission to withdraw it. Magistrate Dreyer agreed and the proceedings were dismissed. Miss O'Roark was not in court and it was announced that service of the process was never made.

Attached to Casper's affidavit were papers signed by representatives of three other department stores. Howard Brower, detective at Gimbel's, stated that June 1 last the woman had received merchandise amounting to $211. Another was signed Eugene Orth, detective for Stern Brothers. This was to the effect that Miss O'Roark obtained goods valued at $20 July 1, and the check she tendered was returned marked "account closed."

The third was signed by Thomas F. Marron, detective for Saks', stating that on Sept. 30 merchandise valued at $92 was obtained and the check tendered returned from the bank with payment stopped.

The three additional statements were made in the form of corroborating affidavits.

LOOPING THE LOOP

(IN CHICAGO)

Inviting Uncle Sam

"The Hollywood Barn has always been loyal to Uncle Sam and we want Uncle Sam to know us better, because—when he does—we know that Uncle Sam will say that the Hollywood Barn is America's best cafe, with the best of food and the best of entertainment."

Bootlegging Stockings

For some time stocking peddlers have been canvassing the Woods theatre building. Stenographers in that building have been buying them.

Recently the building issued an order prohibiting canvassing. Now the sock purveyors come armed with brief cases, looking very much like respectable booking agents. They smuggle in the silken hose and walk out with the stenogs' long greens.

Laying Off Hi-Li

Jai Lai (Hi-Li) is no panic in Chicago. Of 18 pari-mutuel cashiers at the Rainbow Gardens (cafe) where the Spanish game has been playing but five remain. The Loophounds can't understand it, since there is plenty of horse and dog racing in the burg. About 150 days of horse racing during the year.

Many who watch Hi-Li can't keep away from the impression there are too many possible strings and wraps to it. Also that the mutuel box might be cleaned at anytime if the strings are property worked. Some towns have gone very strong for it, maybe figuring you can't lose much if only betting $2, like that only wheel in town, but braced, that they tell about Peoria.

The Loop portion of State street has acquired its first touch of Coney Island. What formerly was the State street entrance to the Randolph theatre was converted some time ago into something like a penny arcade. There are automatic photographing machines, a weight guesser, three guys who teach you all about a guitar in five minutes, a picture framing department, a silhouette artist, and a handsome chap who will stamp your name on almost anything for two bits.

Edible apples in juggling acts have their sorrows! A juggling duo played the Academy, situated in Chicago's "bowery." It has a 90 per cent male audience, 89 per cent of which is foreign. They took the date for three days at $25. In the act the boys throw apples into the audience, and request the audience to throw them back to be caught on a fork. The team filled the engagement and several months or so later were booked for a return engagement. They refused the date at the same money and were called on the booking floor for an explanation. "Well" they said, "We can't afford to play that house, they eat our apples and refuse to return any of 'em."

Chicago now has 15 masters of ceremonies and stage band leaders in picture houses. They include Paul Ash (Oriental); Verne Buck (Sheridan); Fess Williams (Regal); Roy Detrich (Avalon); Al Short (Capitol); Ted Leary and Maurie Hillblom (Stratford); Jules Buffano (Chicago); Al Kvale (Norshore); Bennie Krueger and Frankie Masters (Tivoli-Uptown); Bennie Meroff and Charles Kaley (Granada-Marbro); Mark Fisher and Al Belasco (Harding-Senate), and Joe Kayser (Diversey).

Getting Action in the Loop

A Chi boy, who has had his tiffs and scrapes with the law, was escorting a New York showman around the Loop. Noticing some coppers in front of the Capitol building he grabbed the New Yorker's arm and edged his way through the crowd. "We'll see what this is all about," he said authoritatively. "I'll give you a little lowdown on the town."

Seems there were a couple of holdup men in the building and Detective Wm. Schoemaker, standing outside, recognized the boy who had a tendency to get in scrapes. "Well, well," he said, "look who's here." So the Chi boy was led off to the hoosegow, where he waited four hours for the New Yorker to bail him out.

See Chicago first.

Theatre marquees, housing numerous niftles through limited word space, have been unusually wise-cracking in Chicago of late. A new Orpheum Jr. announced its vaude-film bill as "Orpheum Presents Five Big Acts of Vaudeville 'Slightly Used'." Another vaude theatre billed "Leatrice Joy 'Changing Husbands'," with Godfrey Band. And Watson Sisters—"Women Who Give."

BOTTLE BABIES DISMISSED

Four Men Were Rummying It on 47th St., Said Cops

Lack of evidence freed seven men arrested in front of the exit of the Palace theatre on West 47th street. The raid was conducted by Detectives John (Darby) Owens and Carl Heiden of Captain Edward Lennon's staff. The men were taken in a patrol wagon to the West 47th street station.

Charged with disorderly conduct they gave their names as Tom McCann, 27, 97 Third avenue; John Brady, 31, 369 West 50th street; Chris Waldman, 27, 15 Sherman avenue; Robt. McInness, 26, 2151 Washington avenue; Joe Varnesh, 22, 5819 Spruce street, Philadelphia; William Hildreth, 34, 67 Orchard street, Newark, and William Ford, 23, 540 West 47th street.

The sleuths told Magistrate Renaud that the defendants were sipping rum from a bottle. They said many complaints had been received by Captain Lennon about the actions of the men.

The defendants denied the charge. They all had different excuses.

WALTER BENNETT'S BAD FALL

Accident happened about noon yesterday (Tuesday).

GREENWICH VILLAGE AS IZ

By LEW NEY
(Self-Designated Mayor of G. V.)

Two letters within the week from two youngish writers with ambitions. One of 20 writes from near Woonsocket. Another of 19 questions from San Antonio.

Says the Rhode Islander, "It is discouraging here! I have no money; no friends; and no one seems to understand me—although my family is marvellous to me—but being horridly poor can not help me a whit. I haven't even a trade, having spent all my life trying to write.

"What I am headaching about is this: would you advise me to try Greenwich Village? I would have board for about two weeks! There aren't words to tell you how hopeless things are for me here! Anyone, in Woonsocket, who tries poetry is considered definitely 'off!' I can't hold on to this dump much longer."

And from the Alamo comes this, "Thus far my literary printings total exactly one—a verse in 'The New Yorker' last August for which I received $12. If I leave, all I can bring of any material value will be $100 and a typewriter. Would I gain or lose by breaking away from things academic and having a year, at least, of freedom?"

They will come—eventully, if not now. One such lives now in a basement on Bedford street where the monthly rent is less than a decent tip for the head waiter of a night club. Another has two rooms in an Italian tenement on 11th street, happy there with his wife and child, and they live on less than 10 berries a week.

A Story

Now that pseudo-intellectuality has finally broken into the columns of Variety, I would keep its fall a rolling. However, highbrows, don't take this praemunire prestidigitation too literally—prognosticate. It is merely a hook upon which I would hang a story, albeit a long and penetrating one.

One of our Village newsdealers was animatedly discussing with several neighborhood visitors one early hour last week the so-called eugenic baby and its picture in the tab that reflects. The argumentation was so intense that the dealer, the plumber's wife, tailor's daughter and bootlegger's widow failed to notice my friend, Mary, when she came in for envelopes.

Mary is an intellectual, proofreader by chance and writer of lyrics by choice. The pseudos noticed her and with ont breath called out, "What do you think of the eugenic baby?" But Mary, being one herself, preferred not to opionate.

Newsdealer, however, insisted and followed her to the envelope counter. With a hungry-for-knowledge smile the poor pseudo approached her. "Mary," he faltered, "What does it mean, eugenic?"

Even "The Times" might make merry over that. And I tell this timely true story lest someone might believe that our Latin quarter's inhabitants are all walking lexicons.

Atmosphere

Atmosphere just is, that's all. It is a characteristic of evrything and yet can not easily be created. It develops, permeates, controls, exudes and identifies. But you can't make it like you do batiks, hot biscuits or incubators.

And that is why most shops and tea rooms anywhere in general and our Village in particular fail to be anything else but the mere commercial places they are. Often the loss of a temperamental waitress or the addition of a player-piano or fresh paint or cleaned windows kills the atmosphere of a joint.

The needy and greedy business folks make odd and ridiculous attempts to create atmosphere by bizarre decorations, plain dirt, and exhibitions of intolerable lewdness or laziness.

Compare, if you can, the calm colors, the simple effectiveness of decorations and the sincere service of William and Mary's Coffee House on University place with the bad paintings, the exaggerated candlesticks, the professional waitresses, the puritanical posers, the prying slummers of any of a dozen struggling-for business restaurants elsewhere in the district.

Compare the noisy night clubs and speakeasies and remodelled Brevoort with the secretive Ivory Tower, the calm and aging Mad Hatter, the quiet Little Quakeress. Compare anything real, radiating, stimulating, simple and inspiring with something crude, bizarre, fetching, foolish, stupid, dulling and damning. If you can do this honestly and accurately you have a sense and an understanding of atmosphere.

Panhandlers

Panhandlers are such ingenious and persistent people that I wonder at times that they don't make an honest living. A corpulent German approached me on W. 8th street the other night as I was waiting on the sidewalk for the rest of me. His hand was bandaged and he was about to tell me all about it.

"Look here, pal," I interrupted as I recognized the old timer, 'I'm working this side of the street. Try the other side and give me a chance."

He answered me in apologetic German and passed on a few steps, only to plant himself in front of Alice McCollister's entrance, knowing that delicate and refined people dine there. Plastered to the door he peered in with a lean and hungry look until cash customers arrived.

Three ladies could not reach the latch because of his premeditated blockade. They eventually begged the bum's pardon for asking him to stand aside. This gave him a chance to raise his bandaged hand and ask for aid. It did me good to see them pass him by, but the beggar stepped back to his spot to nab the next ones.

He has better luck when guests come out and shove the door in his face. They do not know his racket and gladly add coins to apologies to soothe the invited injury.

One Man Indicted for Jewelry Store Hold-Up

Saverio Ravalli, 32, 1269 39th street, Brooklyn, was brought to General Sessions Court to plead to an indictment charging him with robbery in the first degree. Ravalli was indicted by the Grand Jury following identification by Samuel Feingold, manager of the Commonwealth Loan Co., 1675 Broadway.

Jan. 17, two men, armed with revolvers, entered the loan office near 52nd street, forcing Feingold and a clerk to the rear of the store. While one stood guard the other emptied the various compartments of the safe of jewelry valued at $50,000. Feingold, who made an effort to answer the phone when it rang, was struck over the head with the butt of a revolver, inflicting a severe scalp wound.

Several days ago Detectives Winberry and Opperman, West 20th street station, received a tip that Ravalli was one of the men implicated in the robbery. They went to 34th street and 8th avenue. When Ravalli appeared they arrested him. He denied all knowledge but when brought before Feingold, the manager had no hesitancy in identifying him. Ravalli has been arrested several times and served two and a half to five years in Sing Sing.

Detectives said they knew the other man and expect to have him in custody within a short time. None of the stolen jewelry has been recovered.

Evelyn Donnelly Lenient

Stating that she had no desire to prosecute, Evelyn Donnelly, actress, of 171 Riverside drive, withdrew her complaint against Joseph McCann, 3, counterman, of 348 West 58th street, and Rudolph Greenhaus, 22, counterman, of 143 East 43rd street. The pair were arrested charged with the theft of Miss Donnelly's Chrysler coupe, valued at $1,500.

The police stated that the defendants told them they thought they knew the owner of the car and felt no objection would be offered if they took a "joy hop!"

In West Side Court Miss Donnelly told assistant district attorney Gene McAuliffe she was reluctant to prosecute believing the defendant's story. Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud permitted the withdrawal.

Tom Patricola and his sister, Miss Patricola, threaten to build an apartment house as the nucleus of a new theatrical colony at Atlantic Beach, Long Island development on the South shore.

Village Losing Semis

Semi-professional groups of the Greenwich Village section are gradually dying out since the slummer trade has been off down there and with two folding up. The passouts are Commerce Theatre Guild and Barrow Street Players.

Both groups had their own experimental theatre in the Village and even with small capacity could not turn a profit lately.

PAPERS "BURN" AT LOPEZ OVER FAKE SUICIDE

Roseray's Lake Dip Brings Complications—Hits All Front Pages

The Mme. Simone Roseray (Roseray and Capella) attempted "suicide" in a Central Park lake early Sunday morning was one of the best framed publicity stunts of this nature ever put over. The dailies, after falling hard and generously for the stunt, are plenty peeved at Vincent Lopez who is the innocent victim of an over-zealous publicity man, and whom they are going after in retaliation for what the newspapers think is the third of a series of similar "pipe" press stunts.

Several of yesterday's (Tuesday) dailies exposed the phony suicide, although it had a serious aftermath since the foreign dancer was ill from exposure contracted as a result of the overlong immersion in the park lake.

The stunt was ingeniously primed. The "rescuer," Thomas Moore, 25, a security company investigator of 22 Post avenue, New York, is said to be a brother of Joe Moore, the amateur ice skating champion, who is Lopez's most intimate pal and buddy. Moore "happened" to be in the vicinity of the suicide attempt.

The stunt is ascribed to Irwin S. Strouse, publicity purveyor for the Casa Lopez at which nite club Roseray and Capella opened last Monday.

Lopez is the butt of the newspapermen's ire, who recall two previous sensational press stunts. One involved Lora Sonderson, whose diamond ring he was alleged to have kept, or in whose presence the showgirl lost it, and last month the phony Jack Osterman assault on Betty Randolph story broke.

Casa Lopez has had an up-and-down season, doing but mildly at best. The Roseray and Capella booking was the last stand for a make-or-break and Strouse, the p. a., evidently was working under the knowledge that a phony suicide is no longer a statutory misdemeanor, although subject to official scoring and beaucoup publicity.

Another stunt, said to have been called off by Miss Roseray at the opening, called for her losing the abdominal tunic which would have left her absolutely nude. As it was, the opening number was an extreme in undress.

To the Times Squarites the funniest part of the frame was the dailies printing it first without investigation and squawking afterwards.

Tabs' Idea

Curiously enough the tabloid sheets all qualified their accounts of the suicide story with the interpolation that if it were a publicity stunt it had all the pathos and realism of a true occurrence. The regulation dailies, including the most conservative, fell for it head over heels.

Strouse pulled a nifty and timed it psychologically for a Monday a. m. breaking, doubly insuring the possibilities because of the Monday observance of Lincoln's birthday.

Not Partner's Mother

A report persisted along Times Square that Mlle. Roseray was the mother of her dance partner, Jacques

PALM BEACH

Palm Beach, Feb. 11.

The Kiwanis benefit performance to be given here next Tuesday in aid of the fund for undernourished babies is expected to exceed the success of last season's show. Tickets will cost $25 each, regardless of location.

Several stars have been recruited from New York to join the players already arranged for. Among them are two Friars, William Collier and Bugs Baer, coming down especially for the show. Collier accepted the invitation, saying: "I've played them all, but this is the first long-distance benefit that ever got me."

Joe Leblang, who was in New York last week to secure additional talent, stated that those interested in putting the show across were "a lot of New York Palm Beachites." Also on the committee are Sam H. Harris and Arthur Hammerstein.

All hotels are doing well and the season which reaches its height about Washington's Birthday looks like a hummer. Royal Poinciana yesterday held over 1,000 guests with accommodations for about 1,200.

An indication of the business done by the East Coast hotels here may be obtained from the following: Rates at the Breakers and Poinciana average $20 a day, single, American plan; double, $30.

Both golf courses here are owned by the hotel system and others than those registered at their hotels have a tough time teeing off. Hotels insist their guests be taken care of first. Same situation applies to the Breakers Casino, guests of other hotels here offering as much as $150 for bath house facilities that costs Breakers, Whitehall and Poinciana guests $50 for the season.

Despite a federal raid, John and Christo have a winner in the Venetian Garden, the room holding capacity several times after the prohibition forces invaded the place. After it was learned no padlock was contemplated things were pepped up and over 100 were turned away Wednesday night, which Ralph Wonders, master of ceremonies, had designated as "Night in Bagdad." Total cost of the special night was $28.50 for wires and decorations. Out of the red this early.

Lou Schwartz, of the Club Richmond, New York, here, and said to be looking for a spot for next season.

Miller and Farrell were booked into the Embassy Club, Miami, by Harry Rosenthal, who is also handling their business for afternoon parties in Palm Beach. Rosenthal and Irving Caesar, who arrived here this week, are engaged in writing the music and lyrics for "Sweet Marie," musical comedy version of the "Butter and Egg Man," the

BROADWAY GUIDE

(Changes Weekly)

For show people, as well as laymen, this Guide to general amusements in New York will be published weekly in response to repeated requests. It may serve the out-of-towner as a time-saver in selection.

No slight or blight is intended for those unmentioned. The lists are of Variety's compilation only as a handy reference.

PLAYS ON BROADWAY

In that department, both in the comment and the actual amount of the gross receipts of each show, will be found the necessary information as to the most successful plays, also the scale of admission charged.

NEW FEATURE PICTURES OF WEEK

Capitol—"Rose-Marie."
Colony—"Hunchback of Notre Dame" (return booking of Chaney feature).
Paramount—"Sporting Goods" (Dix).
Rialto—"The Last Command" (Jannings) (run).
Rivoli—"Sadie Thompson" (Swanson) (run).
Strand—"Patent Leather Kid" (Barthelmess) (second week).
Roxy—"That's My Daddy" (Denny).

NEW SPECIAL FEATURES WORTH SEEING

NIGHT LIFE

The Parody, with the inimitable Clayton, Jackson and Durante as the features, is recommended at all times. Parody also has a girlie show to augment "those three boys."

Vincent Lopez's Casa Lopez must be "made," if only for the Lopez dance music. Roseray and Capella, new dance sensations at Casa. For a change of pace and a Bohemian atmosphere, don't miss the Club Barney, in Greenwich Village.

The hotels like the Roosevelt (Ben Bernie) and Pennsylvania (Johnny Johnson) should not be overlooked for relief purposes for straight dining and dancing purposes, before or after theatre.

The Little Club has a fast show. Ambassadeurs, former Le Perroquet, is a roomy cafe, with ritzy black-an-tan show.

The class spots are the Montmartre and Lido, the latter with the unique Fowler and Tamara as the dance features.

Van and Schenck are strong at the Silver Slipper, with an excellent supporting show. The Everglades is faring mildly; the Frivolity is continuing its usual healthy trade, and the inimitable Benny Davis at the 54th St. Club always produces a fast entertainment.

Up in Harlem the Cotton Club has a whale of a hotsy-totsy brown-skin revue.

RECOMMENDED DISK RECORDS

Victor No. 21166—Jean Goldkette and his ultra dance purveyors from Detroit offer "My Ohio Home" and "Here Comes the Show Boat," bracing fox-trots. Latter is replete with atmospheric color in arrangements, and the vocal interludes further distinguish the dance tuners. Goldkette always produces excellent dansapation, and these are corking samples of his style.

Columbia No. 1197—Ralph Pollock, a Publix m. c. and stage band leader, has fox and waltz couplet in "An Old Guitar and an Old Refrain" and "Why Should I Say That I'm Sorry?" Pollock personally contributes vocally.

Brunswick No. 3678 and 3680—Introducing new organ soloists on disca, manning a Kimball, and doing "Just a Memory" and "Dancing Tambourine," and "Blue Heaven" and "Are You Happy?" as the selections. Eddie Dunstedter is recording artist, heretofore unknown, but who will be heard from soon and often.

Brunswick No. 3684—Numbers like "Blue Heaven" and "Among My Souvenirs" are made to order for Nick Lucas, the "crooning troubadour," to his own guitar accompaniment and the piano assistance of William Wirges.

Victor No. 21164—Tom Waring, tenor soloist of Waring's Pennsylvanians, elevated to solo work and not as mere refrainist with dance recordings, does his stuff to the concert accompaniment of the band. "Away Down South in Heaven" and "A Shady Tree" are the selections, a couple of choice ditties.

RECOMMENDED SHEET MUSIC

"Away Down South in Heaven" "I'll Be Lonely"
"Here Comes the Show Boat" "Changes"
"Keep Sweeping the Cobwebs Off the Moon" "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella"

JOYS AND GLOOMS OF BROADWAY

By N. T. G.

We met Joseph Le Brix, who, with his partner, Costes, flew from France to America by way of the South Atlantic and South America. Dagmar Godowsky, who knew the aviators in Paris, brought Le Brix to the Frivolity Club. After meeting Lindbergh, Ruth Elder and Brock and Schlee and listening to the inside story of their flights an evening's conversation with the little Frenchman was a real delight.

He was sort of cuckoo about our American girls. All visitors let loose a rave about our girls, but Le Brix happened to be on the level about it. About 10 surrounded him in a girl number. When they got through he had no tie and was smeared with lip stick.

Second, our tall buildings. This is another bromide, but again it was on the level with him. He has one more rave, and that is our friends —Brock and Schlee.

Sitting in a Broadway cafe surrounded by a girl show, he told of his admiration for these two gallants who hopped the Atlantic, made daily flights averaging 600 miles across Europe, India, part of Asia, and wound up in Japan. "The best flight yet," said Costes, in his broken English.

The boys are in America absolutely without guidance. They know hardly anyone here, have made nothing out of their marvelous flight and are undecided about the future. Whereas all other trans-oceanic flyers have written books, gone into vaudeville or in other ways made money, these boys haven't earned a cent and are constantly under a great expense. Le Brix requested us to act for them to the extent of arranging for an Amrican manager to handle their social and business affairs.

Their plans are to fly across America by way of Cleveland, Detroit, where they want to meet Brock and Schlee, Chicago, St. Louis, Denver, Salt Lake City and San Francisco. They will then ship to Japan and fly home the rest of the way around the world, in an attempt to break the record of Brock and Schlee from England to Japan. We believe this is the first time their plans have been published, as they have given no interviews whatever in America, largely because they speak practically no English.

Anastasia's Press Agent

The rumor is out that a famous international press agent, noted for the scale on which he pulls his press stuff, is behind the Princess Anastasia business. The why and wherefor of the hoax, if it is a hoax, is as yet unknown, but we're liable to hear about a picture any day now relating to the Russian royal family.

Meantime, palming off this woman on the people of two continents costs practically nothing and has already won thousands of columns of newspaper space. Now the problem is to hook it up with a box office somewhere. It will happen any day now.

Tex When Young

"When I was your age I was a stage wait."

Walter O'Keefe's Double Hit

Walter O'Keefe, who played master of ceremonies for us in Loew's Melba, Brooklyn, is getting a break. For some years he played around the night clubs for midget salaries but finally wrote the hit, "Since Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," which is cleaning up and making him important both ways. Always a good performer, he needed only a song hit to call attention to himself.

Every night at 10, on WHN, a representative of the "American" reads a brief summary of the news events. One night he was absent, and we did, it.

The first item was an announcement of the death of Wallie McCutcheon. He was one of our best friends, and best man at our wedding.

Anatole's Breaks

Said Anatole: "I once had a night club, and the revenue officers closed me for six months. I leased it out and the revenue officers came and tore the insides out. Now they're after me to pay income tax, I am happy to come here tonight to return the compliment."

It was a yell.

No Piking Insulter

A cuckoo little kid of the cabarets was out singing when a drunk threw a crumpled up bill at her. Indignant, she walked off the floor while the headwaiter bawled out the profligate.

The singing kid peeked out from behind the curtains, spotted the bill and sent a buss boy to retreive it. It was a five, so she went back and finished the song. You can't insult this kid with $5.

Frankie Conville Came Through

While we were conducting amateur nights and opportunity contests in the Loew theatres some years ago there was one little fellow we could never get rid of. He was always there, trying, and nearly breaking his neck with his acrobatic dancing. He stuck around a year, playing benefits, clubs, amateur nights, anything he could get. We got him a job one week for $40. Tickled to death.

Knew His Wife

A broker had just married a kid out of a chorus. He thought of taking her abroad. The rumor got around, and a teacher of French phoned him:

"I hear you are going to Paris, and I would like to come up and teach your wife French."

"She's got to learn to speak English first," said the guy, hanging up.

Inside Stuff

Wouldn't this make a wow story for the tabloids?

World famous concert artist is wed to famous society girl, father an amabassador to prominent European country. Divorce. Concert star secretly remarried almost two years ago to girl named in papers, a former pupil. They have a child. Now living in New York.

Roxy's Thoughtfulness

Roxy remembers. The chief of the big playhouse pays attention to little things. The Missouri Rockets, now the American Rockets, were a tremendous hit for him for four weeks. On the night they opened in "Rain or Shine" he sent them a magnificent basket of flowers. It came apart into a corsage for each of the 16 kids.

Lopez got a terrific publicity break on Roscray's suicide try. It sounded to us, who have known him for 15 years, like straight out press stuff.

Useless Benefits

Eddie Cantor's illness is unquestionably due to overwork. The extra work which broke Eddie's health consisted of benefits. Two years ago we wrote in Variety that Eddie played 165 benefits in one season. That took so much out of his physical self that he's all in.

And to what purpose? We have, perhaps, conducted and appeared at more benefits than any other Broadwayite. Most mean nothing and serve no good purpose. The services of stars are rarely appreciated.

Protecting Actors

May we suggest a central clearing house, preferably the Actors' Equity, or a committee of the same, to which all requests for benefits may be referred. In this way the actor benefits doubly—he has an "out," if the committee turns down the benefit, and the committee can decide for him which ones are worth while. If a direct appeal is made to an actor it can be referred to the committee.

There are an unusual number of sick actors right now. We have just recovered from our first illness in 20 years and feel heartily ashamed of letting ourselves get sick. There's no excuse for it. Anyone with average means can stay well with a little intelligence. For the actor, however, spending half his life in a stuffy theatre, under a mental strain, it's tough. Some play golf, a boon to the profession. But for others, who haven't the money, we again advance the idea of our farm.

Here the men and women of show business could go at any time, winter or summer, for a day or a month, paying so little for board it really wouldn't be felt, be close to nature, gather up fresh air and sunshine, and, in their lay off periods, fortify themselves with health for the periods of work. Eddie Cantor would be working now, and supporting that tremendous troupe, if he'd got enough sunshine and air and exercise, which the ordinary actor can only obtain through our plan of a farm.

There's a former camp, containing several splendid buildings, 60 acres of land, a swimming pool, tennis courts, etc., out our way, right in the heart of the farm country, laying idle, which may be had absolutely rent free for one year. It's a marvelous spot for men and women of show business to lie around and store up health so badly needed during the long, hard seasons. Will the N. V. A. or Managers' Protective Association investigate? We doubt it.

Sharshik Pleads Guilty; Cheated Wife's Mother

Herman Leon Sharshik, 37, fly-by-night real estate broker and husband of Mabel Withee, pleaded guilty before Judge Max S. Levine in General Sessions to grand larceny in the first degree. He was remanded to the Tombs for sentence Feb. 21. He is wanted in several other cities for shady real estate transactions.

Sharshik got into trouble with the New York police when he "sold" to Bernard S. and Abraham Block, real estate dealers of 285 Madison avenue, the premises at 361 West 23d street on his representation that he held a contract of sale for the property. It was this "contract" which he assigned to the Blocks. He represented to them that he had gotten the contract from the Fidelity Trust Co., of Philadelphia. The latter company declared the "contract" a fraud.

Sharshik used similar means to defraud others, including Miss Withee's mother. Sharshik said he lived at 171 West 57th street, New York, but he actually resided at Bayside, L. I., where his wife and her mother also live. He is alleged to have given Mrs. Withee a forged deed to a house after taking her money.

Sharshik was born in Philadelphia and was formerly connected with the J. R. Tucker Realty Co., at Camden, N. J. He became known on Broadway through his spending proclivities. It was during the height of his spending popularity he became acquainted with Miss Withee.

ALLEGED MUSICAL THIEVES

2 Men Said to Have Stolen Many Instruments From Nite Clubs

By the arrest of Harold Walsh, 20, 346 West 71st street, and Meyer Plass, 20, 346 West 71st street, police believe they will be able to account for numerous thefts of musical instruments from various night clubs. They have recovered about $5,000 worth so far.

The two were arrested by Detectives Salomon and Pollak, East 67th street station. A few days ago the detectives were passing 3d avenue and 85th street, when they noticed the two men about to enter a pawnshop. Both carried musical instruments in leather cases.

Salomon and Pollak followed and questioned them. Their answers were not satisfactory and the sleuths were more convinced when neither could play a note. Taken to the station house they admitted, the police said, that they had stolen the instruments from the Club Lido the same morning.

The instruments stolen were valued at $800. Further questioning revealed that they also had stolen musical instruments from the Camel Studio, West 71st street, Embassy, Florida and Lopez clubs.

In most instances they pawned the instruments in various parts of the city. They admitted, police said, that they confined their activities to musical instruments because they could be disposed of easily and there was little chance of detection.

A charge of burglary was entertained against both and when they were arraigned before Magistrate Renaud in West Side Court, they were held without bail for hearing today (Wednesday).

INSIDE STUFF

ON SPORTS

Wires are buzzing up and down Canada trying to untagle the scratch list coming from the New Orleans race tracks. They can't do it so the bookmaking game is falling into collapse up there. Explanation given is a program fight. An outside outfit is fighting the track to sell all programs. The track boys can't see that and to ball things up, issue a fake scratch list. Later in the day their own program comes out with the proper scratches. Five minutes later the lads in Canada's snow belt are rushing toward the government liquor shops.

Grey hound racing may make its debut in Canada this summer if Harry Watson, English dog promoter has his way. He is here at present getting quite accustomed to various governments refusing him a franchise. Watson has taken to naming all his own racers with initials the same as himself.

When seven bandits raided the Wisconsin Athletic Club, a gambling joint, they lined the victims against the wall, hands high. Approaching one of the habitues, the bandits said; "Watcha got? Fork over, and fast."

"I haven't got a cent, not even a safety pin," was the retort. "How come?" asked the bandit.

"I'm a boxing promoter," replied the victim. He is "Rocky" Temple, running the Wisconsin Boxing Club which shows at the Empress.

The bandit walked on without further hesitation.

Will Go to the Dogs If Kennel Club Wins Suit

St. Louis, Feb. 14.

St. Louis and St. Louisans are going to keep on going to the dogs if the Wellston Kennel Club wins the ouster suit against it now pending in the Missouri Supreme Court. The club, which last season launched a prosperous dog racing track, has filed its answer to the ouster quo warranto proceedings instituted against it last fall, seeking forfeiture of the club's charter.

Answer filed by the club sets out its corporate purposes and makes a blanket denial of Gentry's charges that it has misused its privileges by permitting betting on the whippets. The Missouri Supreme Court last year ruled that "certificate" betting was legal.

The Wellston track is the only oval ouster suit on which the state has made any progress since the attorney general filed four suits of similar character last fall. The state has been unable to obtain service on the officers or agents of the three other tracks—the Ramona Kennel Club, the North Kansas City Greyhound Club and the Fairview Kennel Club, which operates a track near Kansas City.

STUDIO HOCKEY LEAGUE

Paramount, Universal, Westerns Will Play 16-Game Schedule

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Coast producers are sponsoring a hockey league composed of semi-professional skaters.

The league embraces three teams to be known as Universal, Paramount and Westerns, who will play a 16-game schedule at one of the local ice palaces.

RICKARD'S FLA. BUY

Miami, Feb. 14.

Tex Rickard became a full-fledged citizen here last week when he bought a house on Bayshore drive at Miami Beach. Two hours after the purchase Tex and the family moved in.

Deal was by cash, which set the town talking and making a lot of Miamians wish they were in the fight game instead of struggling to sell climate.

CANZONERI BEATS BASS ON A CLOSE DECISION

Feather Title Copped by the Brooklynite, but He Is Nearly Knocked Out

By JACK PULASKI

Tony Canzoneri, of Brooklyn, won the world's featherweight title from Benny Bass at the Garden Friday night because that is the way the judges figured it. On actual points, between the second and ninth rounds, that might have been correct. But the Philadelphian came through so fast in the last six rounds that it seemed he earned a draw. Some believed, the decision.

It was an exciting affair for 126-pounders. Few little men are as strong or hit as hard as these two. When Tony recently met and outpointed Johnny Dundee the New York state boxing commish declared the kid champ. But the National Boxing Association, which always reverses the New York czars, issued a proclamation which made Bass the title holder. So, as the "leading contenders," the pair fought it out. The way Canzoneri performed it was clear that he stalled in fighting Dundee. When he had that fight sewed up he let Johnny alone.

In the first round Bass took the lead. After that it looked like Tony's match because he toppled Benny in the third round. With a good lead piled up, the unexpected happened. Tony forgot to duck a right hand. It caught him on the button in the 10th and he was all grogged up. Bass tried to win right there, but the bell saved Tony. From then on the title switched around and Bass had the upper hand. Plenty of courage, this kid from Philly.

The bell was also a life-saver for Benny in the third. He was up at the count of eight and in the confusion, Arthur Donovan, referee, failed to hear the bell. He waved the boys together as their seconds climbed into the ring. Just a mistake. Later it was declared that Bass had fractured his right shoulder blade in the fall and he was hauled to the hospital. How that kid went through the fight in such condition is a ring wonder. That he was able to sock Tony so hard seven rounds later made his performance almost unbelievable.

Either boy is qualified to be champion, and Bass must be rated the equal of Canzoneri on the basis of such a courageous fight. They'll meet again and anything can happen because both are there.

Time Killers

The prelims and the semi-final were just boxing matches. In the 10-rounder that preceded the title event Al Winkler, of Philly, won a hard-hitting match from Bobby Burns.

Odds climbed for the main event, and when the boys entered the ring Tony was two to one favorite. When they next meet it is liable to be even money. Though not capacity there was an excellent house.

GRAY MATTER

By MOLLIE GRAY

(TOMMY GRAY'S SISTER)

At the Palace

Belle Baker sang a new song at the Palace Monday that she said is a Palace song. Her gown is an elaborately beaded green crepe with the small flat shoulder flowers in pink and orchid colors continuing around the back of the neck to the other shoulder. She wore a diamond and emerald bracelet.

Margaret Severn is again using a mask in one of her dances, as she did several seasons ago. Her first costume is rather startling, of purple tights, blue satin blouse and red curly wig. Another or blue and white satin was worn with the mask, and her third graceful exhibition was in white chiffon with a deeper pink pattern than the velvet bodice and hat. Neal Sisters, who sang and played while Miss Severn changed, were lovely in frocks all made the same but of different colors, delicate shades of yellow, green and orchid. In each the tight bodices were satin, and the skirts silver edged ruffles used differently, and each shoulder flower contained some violets.

Ralph Whitehead's new act is like the old gag about the two taxis. Its two authors must have let it run between them without catching it. Georgia Ingram wore a regulation white ballet costume for a burlesque that has been done better by acrobats, and later a gold-beaded beige chiffon gown with panels from both shoulders. A frock of soft taffeta with net of the same shade of light blue forming the hem under the scallops and continuing to the waist at the side was very pretty.

Fred Waring's marcel wave may be one of the reasons his orchestra is so popular. Of course, there are 18 other good reasons among the Pennsylvanians.

At the State

Count Peronne's accompanist and announcer is as much a part of the act from both eye and ear judgments as he is, but she has no billing. She was very nice Monday in rose net and silver, the silver showing under the net skirt, with slippers and fan the same shade.

Nola and Winifred St. Claire are doing the same act, but one sister has new frocks.

Natacha Nattova was either breaking in a new partner or maybe new wings. She seemed nervous.

Columbia's Powder Bill

Some of the girls are still dying to get into "Red-Headed Blondes" at the Columbia. Carrie Finnell, who must be on a sugar and starch diet, keeps herself for the dessert of her own show. Occasional lines on the program encourage the audience to wait for "the big treat," and certainly the adjective wasn't lying. An opening announcer said to throw away the programs, and he was right.

Girls' costumes were the usual unlovely assortment except for the first act finale when they were all silver in a black and silver set. One number, dressed in narrow vari-colored ruffles, was pretty enough, and another used a lovely shade of blue, but just enough of the fabric to show the color. Pearl Hendersen did the blackbottom standing on her head. Isabelle Van returned to the "Rest Your Head Upon My Pillow" that she gets so much fun out of, so her runway girls wore night-dresses of silk and georgette after fringe costumes of white, her's ankle length, but the girls very short.

The runway mob must have a big powder charge, unless they buy it by the barrel.

Tough on Life Guards

It is going to be a tough season for the life guards if Erin Jackson's "1928 Bathing Beauties" are the advance models. Miss Jackson has no competition in her own shows to looks at the Columbia, being a very attractive girl, but she almost underdresses Isabelle-illuminated-runway-Van. They work so much alike they seem sisters under the transparent wraps.

A blue velvet backless gown of Miss Jackson's was caught with a diamond buckle at the hip where the cascade drapery showed a gold lining matched by her slippers and the white shawl also has its share of jewels.

Pink georgette over blue satin with sash and bow of the satin made a simple, girlish frock worn with a big rose crowned hat, appropriate for singing of "Irish Mother." Other costumes she probably carries tucked into her glove.

The girls had ballet costumes, using the half-black and half-white plan for both skirt and bodice, and looked best in those of black velvet with long sleeves and short, ruffled skirts with white lace collars and cuffs and black velvet tams.

The fast work of the Mason Dixon Dancers delighted the Columbia audience, and the attractive girls didn't make it any easier for the chorus, either.

Miss Dexter's Blackbottom

Little Miss Dexter Hall and Dexter, at the State finally induced the house to accept her blackbottom, so she changed her almost childish navy blue dress with it's blouse of a lighter blue, showing stiff collar and cuffs, to a more sophisticated costume of black lace and silver. The silver was used for a wide girdle and a tom, the lace for the rest of it, including the bolero bodice. A black velvet white furred Russian dancer appeared briefly with Mr. Hall's band, but except for Miss Dexter there wasn't any very prominent reason for hiring this hall.

Margie Coate sang and her coat of delicate pink velvet, with white fur collar and cuffs, came off so that her white crepe gown could be seen. A panel to the waist from the right shoulder in back, was matched by one in the skirt, that hung even longer, giving the uneven hemline so much in vogue. A narrow belt of the crepe met in a jeweled buckle and a diamond bar pin added brilliance.

Roxy's Mysterious Show

The Roxy stage resembled a magician's hat for its "Fantasy Viennese." Apparently nothing there, but still a singer in glistening silver appeared high up in the center, and her clear voice entitled her to a high spot. Another singer, down on the stage, was found by a red light, and then Fradkin, who makes his violin sing any language. Gamby next emerged from the darkness and spread her silver edged white ruffles to the breeze of her own making. A quartet of violinists joined Fradkin in his red spot and still another vocal solo—but not much singing—by a little lady in bonnet and long white dress. It was all quite mysterious and a not unwelcome change.

Ballet in tulle and satin were in all the colors of the rainbow, each girl's silk wig matching her costume. Semi-circles of roses added to the grace and beauty of the group.

A Much Named Role

Gloria Swanson certainly makes good use of her opportunities as "Sadie Thompson." Even those not of the Swanson persuasion will admire her when she eulogizes the reformer who has as many names as a woman with a divorce habit. In the play he was Davidson, on the screen Hamilton and on the program Atkinson, none of which Sadie called him in her wild moments. And living up to their reputation, the marines saved the situation.

Sadie used a black silk and lace nightgown that isn't at all in keeping with the rest of her clothes, but it did photograph well. A line naming the gum Sadie uses would be worth a fortune.

A Film of Samples

Since there was so much reference to samples in it, "The Rush Hour" might be called a sample picture. It had a sample of Marie Prevost as she used to be, in a bathing suit, but now she rides a surf board. Marie was seasick as a stewardess but once she got into those fur trimmed coats and beaded gowns and velvet wraps the voyage became smoother.

Secna Owen kept the more elaborate part of her wardrobe for herself. Her black taffeta wrap with its deep full double ruffle, silver edged, in a continuous line around it being one of the items, a two-skin cross fox scarf another. Her fancy cloth coat with the loose ends of the cape back making drapes back of each arm she carried better than Marie's shorter figure could. It seems there is a rush hour on the Riviera as well as on the river so the five reel boots of a picture had no trouble getting into both of them. For what reason or result wasn't very plain.

How Ye Shall Know Them

By their merry-go-rounds ye shall know them—German directors. Also at least one scene in the crazy-quilt pattern and as many as possible showing the Al Woods influence. Mary Philbin is lovely and appealing, just innocence itself. Norman Kerry will probably need naturalization papers after "Love Me and the World Is Mine," he's so perfect an Austrian. Women's wear of Vienna in 1914 is of no interest now. It's surprising it could have been then.

Virginia and Doughboys

"Legionaires in Paris" will delight legions who never got nearer to it than a garter. Virginia Sul sheds feathers like doughboys shed tunics. Her plaid taffeta frock was good looking with its one ruffle, about a third the length of the full skirt and big shoulder bow of self-material. A smart coat used the dull side of black satin for all but the double shoulder cape which was of the lustrous side. White embroidery started at the large button that closed it and continued around the bottom. A dress of dark horizontal stripes was also smart, having a narrow hem of white.

Turn Down Europe

Ruth Goodwin and Mary Dunkley, specialty girls in "Lovely Lady," were offered European contracts, but decided to continue with their show.

ETHEL GOT SORE, BUT NOT WHERE SPANKED

Imposter Did Rehearsal Bit—Then Called on D. A.—Ran Into Queer Complex Guy

A curious case of a man with a queer complex cropped up on Broadway. The accused used the name of Russell Markert, who staged the dances in "Rain or Shine" with Tom Nip. The man purporting to be Markert phoned the Wales Winter agency, saying he wanted a girl to be used in two new bits, supposed to be inserted in "A Night in Spain," current in Chicago. Ethel La Deaux was sent by the agency and told to report to "Markert" at the Cohan theatre.

Miss La Deaux did so, and was not surprised when told she might find the man at the 48th Street because of the hustle to open "Rain or Shine." When sent back to the Cohan she was approached on the street by a well-appearing fellow who said he was Markert. By phone later, after "inspection" in the smoking room of the 48th Street, to which the man managed to gain access, Miss La Deaux was told to report the next day at Bryant hall for rehearsal.

Explained Bits

She was told to get into rehearsal clothes, the man stepping into the hall meanwhile. He then explained the bits. In one she was supposed to approach the sultan, falling on her hands and knees until they were black and blue. The other bit was that of a flapper and her father. Because she came home late the business called for him taking her across his knees and roundly spanking her. When he asked if he slapped too hard, the girl replied she thought that could wait until she got to Chicago.

On her way out of Bryant hall Miss La Deaux was tipped off that the man was not Markert. Becoming angry, she started to rubber, and was told at the Shubert office that Markert had nothing to do with "A Night in Spain." That sent Miss La Deaux to the district attorney's office. There she was told that the incident indicated a form of degeneracy and that the man's apprehension would be desirable.

Miss La Deaux is waiting for the fellow to try to call her to rehearsal once more. He appears to know the show business. Other than the spanking bit he did not touch Miss La Deaux.

RANDOM REMARKS

By NELLIE REVELL

What's the matter with that Presidential chair, anyway? Every time it is mentioned to a politician he runs, yelling, "No, no, no! I don't choose to run," at the top of his voice. It is just about as popular as the electric chair.

I have no intention of running for it—I wouldn't even run for a street car—but as Dave Warfield used to say: "If you don't want it, I want it." If they'll just put rockers on it and out on the porch at the shady side of the White House, I'll be glad to sit in it at least four years."

If, as has been frequently whispered, those bankers who are financing the picture industry should decide to run pictures as they run banks, we may expect all kinds of intriguing changes. If the sun refuses to shine, we could easily expect to find a Gilbert, a Roland, or a Dix earning his salary behind a savings account window on the first day of the month or Saturday afternoons.

For all we know, a Mary and Doug might await us in the bond department; and the Keatons, Chaplins and Semons might navigate amusingly about the corridors to make the widows and orphans feel they "really have a friend in the neighborhood bank."

I can think off hand of six or seven young men who might go in for banking in a big way if they thought they could talk compound interest and high finance with Gloria Swanson, Greta Garbo and Pola Negri.

That these high-salaried stars would find something to do with their spare afternoons is a foregone conclusion, if and when the gentlemen from Wall Street decide to let them fool around with more money.

Their engagement, I am told, is broken. They are members of two prominent theatrical families who live in my hotel. When their backs have been turned we have laughed at their arrogant way of ignoring us. But now a dreadful thing has happened. Perhaps, the difference in their ages has only aggrevated the matter, for she will be four in March while he will not be four until August.

Until a few days ago they openly admitted their betrothal, but she started hostilities by calmly informing him she was going to marry another little boy, and he, wishing to make himself understood, walked up to her and bit her on the cheek! She still bears her scar of love.

Ah! Now, it comes out. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Chelsea Methodist Episcopal church, said recently that Will Hays had told him he "had been impelled to interest himself in motion pictures because his son and his nephew preferred to become movie actors rather than heroes."

All of the dramas in Hollywood do not reach the screen. Attending the gate at the DeMille studio sits a cripple. As he accepts the pass handed to him by the visitor he always smiles. More than one visitor has been puzzled to know how a gateman could know a visitor's name, but a closer scrutiny would have revealed the face of Billy Elmer, who had played in "The Virginian" and other dramas. He met with an accident which crushed his legs and injured his back, and Billy Elmer knew his acting days were over.

Add to your list of well known actresses retiring from the stage to a business career Suzanne Westford. Miss Westford, the youngest and favorite sister of the late and always lamented Lillian Russell, has joined the Cler Travel Bureau. MAKE-UP EXPERT ON TOUR FOR WOMEN

Meadows of Hollywood With Hook-Up Lecture and Stars —20 Weeks

Ed Meadows, Hollywood make-up artist, starts on a 20-week tour of the country April to play the auditoriums with lectures on beauty make-up and how it applies to stars.

United Artists, Tiffany-Stahl, DeMille, Warner Bros. and First National studios are in on the hook-up, stars of these companies to be referred to in the talks.

Arrangements with 20 daily newspapers in the territory to be covered provides for 100,000 words of copy to be used daily, 15,000 words to be front page.

At the same time Meadows is to conduct a daily syndicated newspaper feature on beauty, with a question and answer department. Arrangements for this material have been made with the King Features Syndicate (Hearst). The series will run for approximately a year.

In the program with the newspapers Meadows is to personally endorse cosmetics to be advertised heavily while he is in the city. Space to be taken by the cosmetic dealers will run from 6,000 to 10,000 lines daily. Picture stars are to be played heavily both in the regular advertising and in the newspaper copy.

Meadows appeared in the Finkelstein & Ruben houses last season as a stage attraction.

15 YEARS AGO

(From "Variety and "Clipper")

Except for a momentary improvement in business, it was conceded that the "road" was washed up, and most managers agreed that inferior "No. 2" companies had helped to that result. Cohan & Harris at this time resolved never again to send out a road company in their Broadway successes. They figured hits would enjoy a longer life if played only by the original casts, and besides, notable successes would always be potential money getters out of town for revival, particularly if they had not been played by second or third organizations.

Broadway was in the midst of a box office boom for the moment, due in part, it was believed, to the large number of dark houses, making good trade for those running. Among the dark ones were Winter Garden, awaiting new show; Broadway (playing film) and New Amsterdam. Smaller theatres without a tenant for the week were Daly's, Wallack's and Weber's.

Douglas Fairbanks, playing the Chicago Grand Opera House, in "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," became interested in pictures to the extent of undertaking an amateur camera tour, following the example of Clifton Crawford, who proposed to make a round-the-world trip, with a cameraman.

"Delphine," at the Knickerbocker, led the musicals at $16,000; "The Whip," at the Manhattan Opera House, was doing between $24,000 and $26,000 a week, a phenomenal figure.

Ragtime craze was spreading through the world. London was already in a state of surrender to syncopation. Now it was getting into cafes and theatres of Paris, Berlin and Vienna.

50 YEARS AGO

(From "Clipper")

The theatre was newly emancipated from oil lamps. But the calcium effect was new and there was some opposition to the apparatus as dangerous. The gas tank used for the calcium exploded during a performance of "Evangeline" in Baltimore; one was killed and the coroner's jury expressed the view that the device was dangerous.

The Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia had been something of a flop. Now a vast amount of the relics on exhibition were to be sold at auction.

An article on the Old National theatre, New York, built in 1836 and the first opera house on the Continent, calls attention to the fact that the site was in the middle of the "red light" district when it was built at Church and Leonard streets. (By 1888 the district had moved up to Greene above Chambers.)

Robert G. Ingersoll was lecturing at Chickering Hall. Modjeska had finished a run at the Fifth avenue theatre in "Camille" . . . . Harry Miner announced his intention to build a new theatre on the Bowery near Broome street . . . The "Clipper" said editorially, "It is high time a city like New York had an enclosed ball park."

The "Clipper" offered a pennant for competition in the International baseball league and besides put up gold medals for the players of the nine positions who made the best records for the season. (In effect, the selection of an All-American team).

"Publicity" and the Dailies

In having publicity stunts put over on them, the dailies, news services and tabloids have only themselves to find fault with. If the papers did not so greedily print the kind of stuff press agents and others plant for them to swallow, there would not be so many plants.

Anything sounding even near-sensational that may be hung upon the stage or screen with screen preferred, the papers hop on. The screen more so than society, to mark the extent the thing has gone to. An ordinary wedding engagement is enough for a scare head, while a marriage is a streamer and a divorce a special edition.

And so, with the publicity hounds not certain what they get in the type way after suiciding, they merely try suicide to find out. If it works as well as it has lately with the "Broadway suicides" which are so plentiful, some of those who tried it for fun and publicity may really bump off just to be certain of an obituary notice.

Tabloids may be blamed for this in part. Or in whole. You can't go wrong blaming a tab. But the established news services must stand a share of the grief. It seems as though rivalry there too is breeding carelessness. Anything that's curious or scandalous might be adopted for their motto. And after that the New York standard size dailies not even checking up on their stories but rushing into the street. Sometimes rushing with a story that carries its doubt right in the language of the writer. But there it goes! Sell the paper!

It can easily be believed that one tab or more has incited certain stories, to get the beat and the flash. And if the tab didn't, it isn't such a long chance to say its reporter did the suggesting, for his own purpose, whether for his personal advantage or the advantage of the paper, or a piece of change on the side.

It's not so long ago and in New York there sat in a nite club two people; man and wife. They had planted a separation-with-divorce probable phoney for the papers. Both were interested in a picture New York would see for the first time the following week. The morning papers came out and were brought to them. "Didn't I tell you? That was a pipe," he said, seeing the headlines streaming and screaming across that his wife intended to leave him.

There are 100 lines stringing away from the centre about these things, but the only certain way is not to print them when there's a doubt. To find the doubt—investigate.

When press agents did it legitimately, in the legit theatre, the dailies were always on their toes, suspicious. Now they seem to be on their backs, helpless. Maybe through the competition or the tabs or the news service or perhaps there are too many dumbbells at city desks nowadays.

But this illicit publicity can be stopped and should. The show business as a whole and in a business way does not want it.

It's something that Will Hays should have taken up long ago for the welfare of the picture industry.

INSIDE STUFF

ON LEGIT

Lillian Albertson, who succeeded her husband, Louis Macloon, as a producer when Actors' Equity refused to deal with the latter, has assumed the same demeanor as Macloon in her attitude toward the daily newspapers.

Recently Miss Albertson had promised Harris Carroll, dramatic editor of the "Evening Herald" an exclusive story. Carroll had agreed that he would give it a line across the top of his daily page. However, the next day Carroll picked up the morning papers and found the same story. He immediately yanked his banner line with the result that Miss Albertson called him on the phone and started to tell him where he got off. Carroll paid little attention, so Miss Albertson cut the advertising of her attractions in the "Herald" down to the minimum space, with the "Herald" not getting excited over it. She found this publication necessary for the sale of her entertainment, and later increased the space again.

Malcoon, about two years ago, had a battle with Guy Price, then dramatic editor of this paper, which resulted in the Macloon advertising coming out of the publication as long as Price remained on the paper, which was up to nine months ago.

The estate of Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) receives 2½ per cent royalty on the gross of "A Connecticut Yankee" at the Vanderbilt. This, in addition to two per cent each to Herbert Fields, Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, book, score and lyric writers, is probably a record high royalty—8½ per cent—on a musical attraction. With "Yankee" grossing $26,000 and better at $5 in the limited Vanderbilt, the $500 income weekly to each of the contemporary writers is exceptional royalty. The two per cent to Hart for his lyrics is in itself a record for wordsmiths, although composers like Jerome Kern get three per cent for themselves and Irving Berlin collected 5 per cent for the last Ziegfeld "Follies."

When the company manager of a legit attraction that recently played a four weeks' engagement in a Pacific coast house went to the apartment hotel where the star had lived to square the rental bill, he found an extra charge of $350 for alleged damage caused by the throwing of paint all over the apartment. It seems the actor in question is somewhat of a portrait painter and during his engagement in the town in question finished a painting for a prominent resident for which he received $1,000. During the course of the painting, it is said he flung paint on the walls, carpets and furniture, causing the damage. As the star had already drawn practically all salary due him it was up to the company manager to square the bill before the show could move out of town.

Of the two classifications of press agents, the stunt men who rely on freak frames to land copy, and the quasi-literary publicist, the latter include some shining examples among fancy copy writers.

Samuel Hoffenstein, long Boswell for Al Woods, recently resigned to write and exploit independently, paved the way for that sort of thing, and rates as the dean of the literary press agents. Hoffenstein is a poet of no mean ability and has had several volumes published. Milton Raison (Schwab & Mandel) is ditto and had a book of poety issued. Others are Arthur Kober (Grosby Gaige and Gurthrie McClintic), prolific magazine writer; Bernard Sobel (Ziegfeld), ditto; Marion Spitzer, working on her second novel; Richard Maney (Jed Harris), Bob Sisk (Theatre Guild), Washington Pizet (Gilbert Miller); author of a novel, "Aristocia"; Howard Benedict of Farnol & Benedict, Sidney Skolsky and Nat N. Dorfman (Holtzman & Dorfman), Benny being the business getter.

Hugh J. Ward in Australia is now a builder of apartment houses. Nearly all of his time is devoted to that. He is about entirely out of Antipodean theatricals and no longer interested in the Williamson concern of that country.

SHAKESPEARE'S MOUTHFUL

With the managers howling for suitable play scripts for immediate production, a condition more acute at the present than ever before, the opportunity to chide the producers for their scant attention to plays and playwrights cannot be overlooked.

With houses dark and choice theatres available under the most favorable terms to producers, the independent managers, particularly, are hungry for scripts. Any number of requests have reached Variety from these sources for recommendations of anything new in the form of plays or dramatists.

The big league producer naturally has first call on the cream of everything. Like everything else, it graduates from the big boys down. It is only once in a blue moon that a producer has the perspicacity, or the good fortune, to garner a script like "Broadway" which went the rounds and was rejected. Still, with the dearth of creative talent in the form of playwrights so acute right now, the same thing will occur next fall when the producing managers, fed up with the summer's prolific writing output of the stage scriveners will mechanically peruse the scripts or consign them to a third assistant stenographer for her reaction. Said stenog, with a tabloid leaning, will decide that the s. a. is limited in the love stuff and probably never give a thought to problem purpose, dramatic situation or objective of it all. Give them an O'Neill script and find that out.

Yet, every mid-season, or shortly after the holidays, with the weak sisters falling by the Broadwayside, the same hue and cry goes up. Indie producers and established managements, with dark houses flatteringly available, and bankrolls crying for production investment, cannot find use for both.

Bill Shakespeare vo-do-de-o'd a mouthful about "the play's the thing." Contemporary showmen are singing the chorus right now.

INSIDE STUFF ON PICTURES

for a lot of sharpshooting film salesmen parading under the cloak of film distributors, and in many cases it is impossible to receive negative costs, let alone a profit. Most of the contracts signed with sharpshooters call for negative cost and a 50-50 arrangement on all moneys taken in thereafter. If the picture costs $15,000 to produce and grosses $30,000, the distributor retains 50 per cent for his efforts and the producer gets the other 50 per cent to pay the bills with nothing left for his efforts.

The most the distributor has invested is office rent and traveling expenses.

Sam Katz's idea with the new managers' training school is to encourage musicians with showmanly attributes for these posts. Katz is of the opinion that a performing musician has the desired knack of a Publix theatre manager, and Nathaniel Finston has circulated a call to the circuit managers to recommend any and all musicians for the training school.

Advertising expenditures by Chicago picture houses is so heavy as to seem all out of proportion in some instances.

One theatre with an average "take" of around $4,000 weekly recently spent $1,700 in one week, alone, on newspaper advertising.

D. W. Griffith went to the coast with an amply cut print of "Drums of Love." Also with the idea of remaking the tragic finish of the picture into two separate finales.

The film will be slipped into a program house on the coast in its New York amputated form, first with one of the new endings and then the other. There was no decision up to the time of Griffith's departure whether to try it in 90 minutes with its present conclusion.

A certain advance man for First National put on a fine campaign in a Pennsylvania city for a picture and made a lot of friends on the newspapers. Later, he left that firm for another and a new film. In the meantime a new advance man for the first company came in to work on a picture, the first advance man telling him to use his name if it would help.

Result, when the first man went to a paper for a contest, it told him his successor had used his name, and, thinking of doing him a favor, gave the follow-up boy's picture the break. First advance man was left out cold.

E. A. Dupont, the German director, will have to stand for comparisons between his best known directorial work over here on "Variety" made in Germany, and his latest made over here, "Love Me and the World is Mine." In the paralleled pictures, the main point that will come out is that Emil Jannings, the star of "Varicty," must have had much to do with that film's direction, as well, since Dupont, alone, with "Love Me" seems to have accomplished but little and nothing at all to be mentioned alongside of "Variety."

One of the large producing companies recently elevated a former assistant director to the post of director on a program picture. After the picture was completed, one of the studio officials asked the production supervisor in charge of the film how it turned out.

The supervisor replied, "Much to my embarrassment, there are no retakes necessary."

The cut carries the name of Brown in the same size display type as the name of the picture, and identifies him as "one of America's foremost directors who made 'Flesh and the Devil' and 'Trail of '98'." The tie-up was made by Fritz Tidden, press agent for Brown.

Some statesmen in Washington are reported to have been advised by the opposing forces in the picture business to the Brookhart Bill, of letters and wires passing between exhibitors, in which are contained the information that some members of Congress may be relied upon to back the measure.

The communications are said to have been mailed to those at the Capitol mentioned in the originals.

One of the larger independent studios on the coast has an executive committee of seven that passes on all stories submitted. If one of the seven does not approve, the story is rejected.

Scenario writers on the coast who depend on sale of originals, have found this system hard to beat. A couple of the wise ones sent their stories to an agent in New York, with the request they be submitted to the eastern scenario head of the company there. In a number of instances this executive has purchased the stories, and sent them along to the studio for moulding into adaptations.

ZIEGGY TANGLED UP WITH TWO WRITERS

Complaints Filed Against Producer—Holding Out Royalty of One, but Paying Other

Flo Ziegfeld, busiest of the musical comedy producers this season, is all tangled up in authors. Two complaints have been registered against him with the Dramatists' Guild and will probably be disposed of by arbitration.

P. G. Wodehouse and Sigmund Romberg are the complainants. The latter was concerned with the score of "Rosalie," while Wodehouse came from London to do the lyrics for "Three Musketeers."

The music of "Rosalie" is the dual composition of George Gershwin and Romberg. It appears that Zieggy did not fancy the contribution from Romberg and no royalties have been paid him according to the complaint.

The manager's alibi is that Romberg left rehearsals of "Rosalie" one day to look over "The New Moon," Schwab & Mandel's musical comedy then in Philadelphia where it was taken off for repairs. That, contends Zieggy, broke his contract.

There appears to be nothing in the Basic Minimum Contract requiring an author or composer to attend rehearsals. The clause in that respect provides that the author shall have the privilege of attending rehearsals. That was inserted to protect the author should any lines be changed without permission. Though Gershwin and Romberg have a joint contract, Zieggy pays Gershwin but holds out on Romberg.

Brought Writers Over

The original score for "Rosalie" was written by Josepl. McCarthy and Harry Tierney, who worked most of the summer with Guy Bolton. After they had completed eight or nine numbers, McCarthy lost his father and their schedule was upset. When the score was delivered Zieggy tossed it aside and made the remark that "all the numbers are lousy." McCarthy and Tierney apparently did not have a contract and no complaint is known to have been registered by them with the Guild.

Zieggy cabled Wodehouse to hurry to this side last August to write the lyrics of "Three Musketeers," which was to have been first on his production list. Zieggy was to pay Wodehouse's passage both ways, which he failed to do. The long delay is said to have been costly to Wodehouse who delivered the lyrics and sailed back to London several weeks ago because of contracts over there. Ziegfeld is reported to have told Wodehouse that if he got on a boat there would be no royalties.

Recently the Ziegfeld office sent out a yarn to the effect that William Anthony Maguire was alone writing the book for "Musketeers." Several others were mentioned at various times. Among them was George Grossmith, another English author called over by Zieggy for the express purpose of writing the "Musketeers" book.

When informed that the complaints had been filed, Zieggy said something about not caring two figs for the Guild.

To Junk "Criss-Cross"

"Criss-Cross" will be scrapped as starring vehicle for Fred and Dorothy Stone after this season with the Stones getting a new show next season.

The scrapping after a single season is unusual for a Stone show. Their previous shows have lasted two or three seasons, but C. B. Dillingham is convinced "Criss-Cross" is a weak sister.

Chi Treasurers Dance

Chicago, Feb. 14.

The ninth annual dance given by the Treasurer's Club on Saturday night at the Stevens Hotel was a gala affair. There were around 1,500 couples with all theatres represented by stars from the various attractions.

Sob Stuff Racket

The sob sister racket in promoting parties is working successfully for a cut rate agent in the Times Square area, with the theatre party takings a better angle than cut rates.

The promoter has a group of crying dames on his staff working among the downtown banking and commercial concerns for promotion of theatre parties.

'CAPTIVE' DOES $11,000 RECORD FOR BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Feb. 14.

"The Captive," staged by Edwin H. Knopf's repertory company at the Auditorium, has created the dramatic sensation of years in this town. Apparently anticipating dirt and police interference, half the town tried to jam into the theatre opening night and standing room sale was stopped by 7:30. There was no interference and the notices were all highly favorable. Business continued at capacity throughout the week, Saturday matines running to $1,600. At a $1.50 top about $11,000 was grossed on the week, likely a record here.

Knopf is holding over the production for a second week with "The Firebrand" underlined. Jose Ruben, Ann Davis and Robert Rendel scored in "The Captive." The Knopf season, in doubt for a number of weeks, is undoubtedly over the top and headed for success.

MISS STEWART'S PLENTY

No More Legit Plays This Season For Rosalie

Rosalie Stewart will retire from theatrical production for this season after the close of "Behold the Bridegroom" in about two weeks.

Her revival of "The Torchbearers" to have included some of the cast of "Behold the Bridegroom," is off.

George Kelly, author of the "Bridegroom" play, is going to Europe this month.

Miss Collier's $1,400

The matter of $1,400 in salary due Constance Collier from Edwin H. Knopf on the recent "Spot on the Sun" comes up with Equity this week. Miss Collier was guaranteed four weeks at $700 by Knopf, with the play closing at the end of two weeks.

When payoff time came Knopf claimed Lee Shubert, who was in on the show, had guaranteed salaries, Shubert claiming his guarantee covered two weeks only and that he was not responsible for any additional arrangements made by Knopf.

MUSIC BOX AGAIN DARK

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Hollywood Music Box is again dark this week. "Who," mystery play written and produced by John P. Riewerts, of San Francisco, closed Saturday night after playing to two weeks of indifferent business. The show will fold up and members of the cast will return to 'Frisco. It is understood that young Riewerts, backed by his father, dropped something like $11,000 in trying to put the show over.

McCutcheon-Metcalf Benefit

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

A midnight benefit performance, sponsored by the Masquers Club, was given at the El Capitan by courtesy of Henry Duffy. Proceeds go to the family of Wallace McCutcheon, who committed suicide, and Earl Metcalf, film actor, killed in a fall from a plane.

Walter Weems was chairman of the entertainment committee, and the entertainment Murray and Milton Sills acted as masters of ceremonies. A number of film and stage players appeared.

PICTURES IN ALL; ONLY 2 BEFORE

Opening "Street Angel" at Globe March 5—"Mother Machree" Following Into Another Un-named Theatre—"Four Sons" at the Gaiety and "Sunrise" at Times Square

OTHER BIG FILMS

William Fox shortly will be operating four of the legit group of Broadway theatres at a $2.20 top scale for Fox's special pictures. His third will be the Globe, with Fox's special picture production, "The Street Angel," supplanting the Dillingham "She's My Baby" (Beatrice Lillie) show there March 5.

The fourth Broadway house has not as yet been named, although secured by Fox. It will play the Fox special "Mother Machree" and shortly follow the Globe's film period.

Fox's other two Broadway legits now playing its $2 pictures are the Gaiety, where "Four Sons" opened Monday, and the Times Square, with "Sunrise" still running there.

It's the first time a single picture concern has operated four Broadway legit theatres simultoneously. Previously, the record was two.

While there is no definite information on the selection of the fourth Fox house, it is believed to be the Central. At present Universal's "Uncle Tom" is there. It is due to leave in about a month. The Central is a Shubert house.

Among the other special Fox pictures that will duly appear on Broadway is "Mother Knows Best," the Edna Ferber story that is the tale of a well-known femme star and her guilding relative who has always thought she has known best for her daughter's on and off welfare.

R. W. Tully Emerges from Retirement With New Play

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Richard Walton Tully, who wrote and produced "Omar the Tentmaker," "The Masquerader" and "The Bird of Paradise" after three years of seclusion, has returned to show business with another new play, which is to be produced at the Mason here early in March.

The play is being sponsored by the Coronado Producing Corp. Score is by Anita M. Baldwin, Pasadena society woman and heir to the "Lucky" Baldwin millions, who also wrote the music for "Omar the Tentmaker."

Many prominent business people in the State said to be investors in the company.

Tully, besides producing all his plays on the stage, later did them on screen, releasing through First National.

HARRIS-KAUFMAN HIDING

Jed Harris and George Kaufman left Saturday for Florida, leaving no forwarding address.

They expect to be gone about two weeks, avoiding Palm Beach, Miami or any of the social resorts.

Mack Makes It 100%

Paul Nicholson in Show

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Paul Nicholson, who retired from the stage four years ago to go into pictures, is back on the rostrum, in "The Scarlet Woman," a Pauline Frederick starring production, now in San Francisco.

Gags for "Clown"

San Francisco, Feb. 14.

Lionel Barrymore will not play "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," in two of the fairly big towns in the San Joaquin valley in California, as the local manager doesn't think there are enough comedy gags in the play.

Tentative dates were set, but after looking over the Barrymore piece at the Lurie in San Francisco, the stick man decided not to play it.

"I've been trying to figure out some good gags that might help the show," he told Ken McGaffey, "but I can't think of a single one."

DRY AGENTS CRASH IN ON BACK STAGE PARTY

Boston, Feb. 14.

Prohibition enforcement officers and Boston vice squad members crashed the gate at a back-stage party of the "Sidewalks of New York" company at the Colonial theatre about 1 o'clock in the morning.

Nothing has happened yet. They didn't find any hard stuff, but they did find two kegs in the center of the stage. The officers removed samples for the chemist to analyze.

From the office of the Federal district attorney comes the statement that the official analysis is being awaited. From the raiding officers comes the report that the beer tested 2.85.

The party was just coming along nicely. A member of the Governor's Council, well known in theatrical circles, is supposed to have been present. He is said to have opened the doors when the cops knocked. He inquired whether the flatfeet were on business or pleasure, and when told "business" nearly collapsed.

No action yet, anyway, and the "Sidewalks" company is hitting the trail Saturday, so it's nobody's business.

"MEEK MOSE" FOR STOCK

First Negro Play to Go Into Release to Resident Co.

"Meek Mose," the colored drmaa at the Princess, New York, has been acquired for stock by the National Play Company. This incidentally will be the first negro drama to be stockrighted in the history of show business.

Belasco's 370th Show

Atlantic City, Feb. 14.

Last night, the 13th, at the Apollo, David Belasco staged his 370th production, a unique mark. It's the first comedy from his hands in many years, called "The Bachelor Father."

Edward Charles Carpenter is the author. He was born Dec. 13, some year; there are 13 in the cast and it calls for a stage crew of 13 to run the production.

Blodgett Show, 1 Week

"Please Stand By," presented by Arba Blodgett, closed Saturday, after one week, split between Hartford and New Haven.

The piece was first known as "Chance." The company is protected under the usual two weeks' salary minimum by security filed with Equity.

Still "G. V. F." Troubles

The "Greenwich Village Follies" is still undergoing revision and cast changes, with Eddie Lambert and Rene Riano already walking out. Clark and McCullough are reported wanted by the Shuberts for the comedy roles. Arnold Johnson's Orchestra may also leave, the Shuberts claiming that Johnson left the best part of his band in New York at the Park Central hotel.

ACTOR-AUTHOR STAGING AT SHUBERT REQUEST

Theatre Operators Offer Carte Blanche to Promoters to Supply Vacant Houses

The Shuberts are reported taking extreme measures to keep their houses lighted. There are a number dark now and except for one week (Christmas to New Year's) nearly every week has seen one or more houses untenanted since the start of the season.

The managers' proposition is that of financing actors and playwrights to put on shows the Shuberts think favorably of. Playwrights are said to have been given permission to select their own casts and directors and in addition to royalties they would receive a percentage of the earnings. By this plan the Shuberts are said to expect to make up for their own notoriously weak production department, particularly with reference to dramatic offerings.

The first backing of the kind was that of Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis in the modern dress version of "The Taming of the Shrew." More recently there was "The Optimist," which opened at the Century last week under a profit sharing plan. It is reported the Shuberts backed Hassard Short, whose "Sunny Days" opens this week.

"Furies," being put on by John Tuerk, is one of the forthcoming shows with the Shuberts interested. Tuerk is responsible for "The Command to Love," presented by Brady & Wiman and has a third interest in it. "Kidnappers," written by Max Marcin and Samuel Shipman, is to be ostensibly presented by Marcin, but Shubert coin is said to be back of the show. Same thing applies to "Young Love," to be put on under the guidance of Kenneth McKenna, who is to appear in it.

Salmond's $850 Stand

Felix Salmond, violincello virtuoso and professor of the violincello with the Juilliard Foundation and the Curtis Institute of Music, must continue to pay his wife, Lillian Salmond, $850 as temporary alimony and $1,000 counsel fees, according to the Appelate Division's (New York) ruling denying the musician's prayer for a modification.

Mrs. Salmond, formerly an English actress, married the 'cellist when he was at Daly's, London, in 1912. They have two children, Jean, 14, and Muriel, 7, who are in America with their mother. She is suing for a separation.

The wife set forth that her husband's income is $40,000 a year, he admitting to $25,000 in 1926, his highest year. She states the Curtis Institute pays him $12,000 annually and the Juilliard Foundation $10,000 per annum; also that his Columbia records and instruction studio were productive of other large sources of income.

Dallas Showless After Eighth Flop of Stock

Dallas, Feb. 14.

Marking the eighth successive flop of dramatic stock in Dallas, Joseph D. Miller, producer of the Miller Players, closes the doors of the Circle with the completion of "Know Your Onions." It left the city of almost a quarter million people without a legit playhouse, and with very little chances of seeing another stock company this season.

This leaves the Circle an empty house, to be used, temporarily, mostly by the local Little Theatre, while that organization is awaiting the completion of their new playhouse.

Ted Lewis Leaves

Ted Lewis and his band will leave "Artists and Models" at the Winter Garden Saturday and on Sunday they will entrain for Palm Beach for a winter engagement. The bandsman is said to have had several disputes with J. J. Shubert, finally deciding to hand in his notice.

GERMANY

C. HOOPER TRASK

Berlin, Feb. 2.

Renaissance Theater.—"Das Fossil" ("The Fossil") by Karl Sternheim. This author before the war was a white hope of the German drama. Lately he has not produced anything of value. This play concerns a general who rides a hobby horse and a young bolshevist who falls in love with his daughter. Not so good. Well played by Max Guelstorf and Franziska Kinz.

Kammerspiele.—"Bronx Express" by Ossip Dymow. Surprisingly enough quite a success. Much of the satire on American life lost but enough to get across nicely. Scenically Hans Hilpert's production competent and Kurt Bois as Junkel Fliamkes just as like Broadway as Berlin can be. Albert Steinrueck miscast in leading role of button maker.

Berliner Theater.—"Is Zat So?" by Tabor and Gleason. A flop. German version proved that success of American play depended primarily on slang and playing of New York cast. Max Adalbert, favorite Berlin comedian, did the best he could with the boxing manager, but got comparatively little out of it. Hans Brausewetter as the boxer was sympathetic but little else. Only the exceptional American play has appeal in Germany.

Volksbuehne.—"Man Is Man" by Bert Brecht. One of the very best plays written by a German author in late years. In India four soldiers who man a machine gun plunder a temple and one is captured. To fill the gap so that they will not be suspected of the crime an Irish packer temporarily replaces the other man. When finally discovered there is no chance of their comrade returning, they bamboozle the Irishman into permanently taking his place. This they accomplish by getting him to sell an elephant which does not exist and then executing him in mock fash'on for this supposed swindle. When he comes to, they convince him that his former self is dead and that he is now really the missing soldier. The beginning is intensely amusing in a Kipling manner and if the end, which wanders off into futile symbolism, were changed, the play should be a possibility for America. Splendidly produced by Erich Engel with a cast including Heinrich George, Helene Weigel, Lambert-Paulsen, and Hans Leibelt.

Nollendorf Theater.—"Heimweh" ("Homesickness") by Franz Jung. Director Piscator has excellent idea of conducting side by side with his regular performances an experimental organization which shall give young actors and authors a chance to appear before the public. First choice unfortunately bad as the play was weak and the acting mediocre. This does not discredit the excellent scheme.

Koeniggraetzer Theater.—"Schloss Wetterstein" ("Castle Wetterstein") by Frank Wedekind. Nothing more than a collection of three playlets loosely hung together. Attract two are without particular originality. Last grips on account of its diabolic if overdone sensuality. Performance was event owing to the extraordinary playing of the leading role by Pamela Wedekind, daughter of the author. Here is one of the coming stars of the German theatre. Fritz Kortner also gave one of the best performances which this uneven but very talented actor has ever achieved. Once again, how long will it be before an adequate performance of Wedekind is given in America?

Lustspielhaus.—"Unter Geschaftsaufsicht" ("Under Supervision") by Arnold and Bach. Usual product of this most successful of German farce firms and as usual with the leading role for the favorite Berlin comedian, Guido Thielscher. It will run the customary three months in Berlin and then clean up in the provinces. At least 200 of the 300 possible theatres will play it. These contraptions are purely local and without possibilities for America. Technique is out of date and always contains the conventional misunderstandings and mistaken identities. Thielscher is a bad actor, merely funny on account of his short rotund figure.

Kurfuerstendamm Theatre.—"Bei Uns—Um die Gedaechtniskirche Rum" (With Us—Around the Memorial Church). Revue by Friedrich Hollaender and Moritz Seelers. Intimate satirical revue now common on Kurfuerstendamm. No better or worse than the others. Some of the scenes are witty and amusing; some merely stop gaps. All allusions purely local. The most promising things about it are the lyrics and music of young Friedrich Hollander, who should develop into a real composer of popular hits. Well enough performed by a cast including Willi Schaeffers, Annie Mewes, Hubert von Meyrinck and Annemarie Haase.

Kuenstler Theater.—"Evelyne." Operetta by Bruno Granichstaedten. With one leap this composer springs up into first rank. No doubt about it, this operetta should go to America. His orchestration includes saxophones and celesta, in best modern jazz tradition, combined with all that's worth keeping of the Viennese school.

Several real hits, of which at least two should find their way to the dancing floor. The libretto, by the composer, is gay and modern.

Evelyne, rich millionaire's daughter, grows tired of her insipid society life and goes out to earn her living. She tries everything. Through all her vicissitudes a young jazz musician follows her. Program states that this is all founded on a novel by Philip Oppenheim, and may be. Fine cast, with Rita Georg and Max Hansen, put the show over completely.

Thalia Theater.—"Das Kamel Geht Durch das Nadeloehr" (The Camel Goes Through a Needle's Eye"), by Frantisek Langer. Author of the tragic "Peripherie" has here turned out a light little comedy of no particular importance. In the slums of Prague a witty old hag makes her living by arranging that her husband have fits for the benefit of charitably minded ladies. Her daughter is cleverer and catches the son of a millionaire family.

Play shows real observation and is often humorous. It has no advance for its author, but gives evidence that he might develop into a really first rate writer of comedy. Neatly played at this out-of-the-way theatre by a company including Else Boeck-Neft, Bruno Ziener, Berti Halovanek and Werner Pitschau.

Theater des Westens.—"Munchhausen," operetta by Felix Doermann; music by Ernst Stephan. Munchhausen is in literature the typification of the great liar. But here he becomes merely rather a sentimental swindler. In love with a countess, but, realizing that his passion is endangering for her the love of another man more worthy of her, he pretends to be a brute and is spurned. Heavy dramatic second act climax.

When will the German composers realize that the time for this sort of buncombe melodrama has passed? Its absence is what makes "Evelyne" such a big success. The music by Stephan is considerably better, and if the book were revised it might be worthy of American production. Erik Wirl and Rose Ader distinguish themselves in a generally competent cast.

Berliner Theater.—"Der Herr von ———," by Friedman Frederich. Play for the comedian, Max Adalbert, which gives him an excellent opportunity to shoot off his Berlin tongue. His speeches fall over each other, and, although the individual gag may not be aimed for the belly region, the general effect is highly enjoyable. The farce concerns a German burger with the prosaic name of Emil Krause, who gives himself the German title of nobility, "Von." From this moment he is successful in all his business and amorous enterprises. And that's all there is to it.

HAMBURG

"Broadway," by Dunning and Abbott, had its German premiere here at the Thalia, although it has been played (fall) in Vienna. Reception good, if not enthusiastic. The critics high-hatted it a bit, but admitted that it was well put together.

Of course, such a play can never get across in translation as it did in its native language, as the slang is quite impossible of translation; moreover, the translation in this case by Clement is unexcusably inadequate. Where he couldn't translate he cut.

The only figure that really got across was that of the cabaret hoofer, Willi Mertens. The Berlin production will be given by Eugen Robert at the Bellner Theater in the spring.

ESSEN

The three maritime one-acters by O'Neill, which he has collected under the title of "S. S. Glencairn," had their German premiere in this small city. Best received was the "Caribbean Moon," which had already been given at a matinee in Berlin. "The Long Trip Home" was considered sentimental. "Bound East of Cardiff" somewhat thin, but "In the Zone" was admitted to have a good dramatic idea.

O'Neill is being pursued with his usual bad luck and it looks very doubtful whether he will ever really get a foothold here.

Capes-Wainright Engagement

They will be married this month at St. Malachy's Church, New York.

Another O'Neill Play

A vaudevillian with literary aspirations, just back in New York, after a season of the grind houses, went to see "Strange Interlude." Asked what he thought of it he said:

"Well, it took O'Neill to put over a supper show."

MOROSCO BLOWS NEW "COMEBACK"

Angel Quits When $40,000 Bankroll Used Up—Oliver Has Auto Only

Oliver Morosco has muffed another chance to comeback as a legit producer through the walkout of A. Pelletier, New York perfume manufacturer, who had been financing Morosco.

Pelletier met Morosco several months ago in New York and engaged him to stage a series of French operettas. As association progressed Morosco diverted his "angel" from the operetta idea to finance a musical, "The Morning After," in Los Angeles, where Morosco was to attempt a comeback in a spot he considered more friendly than New York.

Before entraining Pelletier advanced Morosco $5,000 to pay off minor obligations. Morosco had engaged several players in New York for the proposed musical, but had neglected to post bond at Equity with rseult that the actors did not entrain.

Back on the coast Morosco cast his show with local availables and proceded with rehearsals. During this period, according to reports, the wires were hot for additional finances, so much so that Pelletier dispatched his secretary to the coast to find out what had become of the $40,000 originally advanced to Morosco.

Investigation revealed that Morosco had purchased an automobile and also had made an initial payment on a house. The sec. immediately long distanced his findings to Pelletier, with the latter pulling out of the venture pronto and with the show closing.

"The Morning After" was a musical version of "Please Get Married," with book and lyrics by Morosco and music by Kenneth Burton. Before going coastward Morosco received $500 advance royalty from Harms for the music rights and instead of splitting with Burton gave him an I. O. U. for his share, with a promise that Burton would be reimbursed when the show was produced. Burton and his wife, professionally Kitty Clark, left lucrative assignments in New York to go to California.

Second Chance Tossed

This is the second promising chance tossed away by Morosco. In the other instance Henry Hurd, California real estate man, went behind Morosco on production of "His Queen," which flopped after a couple of weeks at the Hudson, New York, season before last. Salaries to cast were unpaid and when Hurd was notified by Equity he claimed that Morosco had more than plenty to take care of all obligations. Hurd charged that Morosco had been unable to account for $20,000, which had been part of the original bankroll Hurd had put to Morosco's credit for the production.

"VANITIES" FOR COAST?

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Earl Carroll has sent several wires to friends here requesting them to procure a theatre for him as he wished to bring "Vanities" to the coast in April.

No theatre as yet has been offered.

Shuberts Buy Drama; Adapters Dispute Royalty

Shuberts have acquired the rights to "Twelve Thousand," a German drama by Bruno Frank, adapted by William A. Drake, formerly foreign book editor of the "Herald Tribune," and Eric Posselt, a contributor to the "American Mercury." They intend using it for Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis.

American rights were originally held by Guthrie McClintic, who decided against it after reading the translation. A disagreement between the two adapters on the subject of division of royalty is said to be holding up immediate production.

MRS. PARKER'S DIVORCE

Named Frances Morris Stock Ingenue—Suit Undefended

Portland, Me., Feb. 14.

Russell F. Parker, director of the Jefferson Players here, and a player in the company, was the defendant in a suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Edith L. Parker, of Huntington, L. I., here.

The libel, which charged desertion, non-support and cruelty, was uncontested by Parker. Testifying in her own behalf, Mrs. Parker named Frances Morris, ingenue with the Jefferson Players, as being in part responsible for the deviation of Mr. Parker.

The witness had called on Miss Morris, she declared, and asked her to "give up" Parker. The actress refused, witness testified. The Parkers were married in Harrison, N. J., in 1908. They have one daughter, Ruth, aged 13. Mrs. Parker asks for the girl and alimony. She is employed in Huntington as a deputy tax collector at $25 per week.

Tourist Flood Basis Of Montreal Stock

A summer season of musical comedy stock has been arranged for His Majesty's Montreal, starting next spring and continuing into September. Heretofore no legitimate attractions have appeared in that city during the vacation months, and it is regarded as a promising field because of the increasing number of tourists pouring into Montreal.

Charles Emerson Cook, who has been general press agent for the Frazee attractions, and Bert E. Lang, manager of His Majesty's, will direct the stock, which will be called the Savoy musical comedy company. They have secured the Montreal rights for "No, No, Nanette," "Wildflower," "Queen High," "Sally," "The Girl Friend," "Good Morning, Dearie," "Yes, Yes, Yvette," "The O'Brien Girl" and others.

The company and chorus will be recruited in New York by Cook.

"Unborn Child" for B'way

George M. Gatts is planning a Broadway revival of his road winner, "The Unborn Child." Show played the road for eight seasons prior to shelving a couple of seasons ago when the road went bad.

Gatts is lining up a name cast doing the experiment as a freak. "Unborn Child" is reputed to have cleaned up a fortune for Gatts as a road attraction.

TOO MANY MUSICALS

GOV'T'S TAX CLAIM ON SHUBERTS, $200,000

Figured on 50% of Excess Paid Managers by Ticket Brokers —Claim to Be Contested

The government, through the collector of the internal revenue department, has rendered a bill reported to be over $200,000 against the Shuberts, based on money paid the Shuberts by ticket agencies. Under the law if a theatre accepts more than the established price for tickets, 50 per cent. is to be paid the government. The Shuberts will contest the claim.

During the investigation of the ticket situation last summer, Federal Attorney for New York Charles H. Tuttle brought out that the brokers paid the Shuberts $55,000 within a year for the concession to resell tickets at a premium. Managers have contended they have the right to sell such concessions the same as for candy, etc., but the Shubert auditor admitted the sums charged the ticket brokers were a certain percentage per ticket. Testimony revealed each agency was taxed a certain sum by the Shuberts and at the end of the season the number of tickets sold by each agency was checked up and if the money paid in advance was more than 7½ cents per ticket, refund was made.

Several Years

Tuttle stated at the time that the Shubert lawyers be consulted by them and one-half of the money be turned over to the tax collector. The investigation brought out that in addition to the brokers' concession money, the Shuberts made theatre treasurers kick-in with half of the gratuities paid them by the agencies. The total for the year appeared to total $87,500, and the reputed size of the government's bill rendered probably covers several years.

Most of the brokers have settled the claims against them filed by the government. During the investigation when some 20 odd agencies admitted they had failed to file returns on excess premiums and pay the legal 50 per cent. to the government, the internal revenue department made assessments against the brokers.

The assessments are reported having been settled on the basis of around 10 per cent. of the amount demanded. The highest amount against any individual agency was $224,000. It was settled for $11,000. It appears that the total claim covered a five-year period and it was agreed that the government's claims should only cover the 14 months' period under investigation.

Furthermore the government, in computing the assessments, failed to make deductions of moneys paid the managers in the form of concessions nor the gratuities to box office men. As the government is attempting to collect its half of that money, it was conceded it should be deducted from the assessments as actual working expense.

Commercial Rival for St. Louis Civic Opera

St. Louis, Feb. 14.

The Municipal theatre, in Forest Park, owned and operated by the city of St. Louis for the past nine summer seasons, is to have opposition this year for the first time. Charles Sinclair, stage director of the municipal operas, has announced that he has leased the Garden theatre, St. Louis. The Garden season will open the first week in June, just about the time the Municipal theatre opens, and will offer light musical shows.

Casts recruited of principals from New York and choruses enlisted here in St. Louis will be engaged for both theatres.

Young Gleason's Bow

Russell Gleason, young son of James Gleason and Lucile Webster, will make his real Broadway debut late in May, when his father and Earle Boothe present him in "Wilbur," a comedy by Anne Morrison and John Peter Toohey. This is the dramatization of a series of stories Toohey had in "Pictorial Review."

Dorothy Day replaces Marion Coakley in "The Racket," at the Ambassador.

Miss Coakley, it is said, is leaving to get married.

EDDIE CANTOR'S PHYSICAL EXAM AS CONVINCER HE CAN'T PLAY

Comedian Appears Before Equity and Ziegfeld's Physician to Refute Zieggy's Complaint He Didn't Want to Work—Now in Havana

Following doctor's orders, Eddie Cantor departed for Havana Friday to begin a rest period of at least three months. The day before he had gone through an unusual proceeding in the offices of Equity, willingly appearing there in answer to Flo Ziegfeld's complaint that he was physically able to continue in the "Follies." Cantor had left the show on the advice of his physician and the "Follies" tour was suddenly cancelled. His medical adviser had told him his resistance was low and a common cold might result seriously. That explained his sudden decision to go south.

Ziegfeld complained to Equity that Cantor contemplated a trip to the coast after going southward and that the star intended making pictures. Cantor denied any such intention.

After it was shown that his condition rendered further stage work at this time precarious, Cantor declared to a special committee at Equity that upon recovery from recurrent pleurisy he would present himself to the manager, ready to go to work, and further, that during the life of his two years' contract with Zieggy, if he should appear in pictures, vaudeville, radio or even a benefit before first giving the manager a chance for his services, he would not only pay Ziegfeld for the loss entailed through the sudden closing, but would pay for the "Follies" production.

It is reported the "Follies" was in the box for $238,000 when it closed. Cantor offered to post a bond covering his promise. That was not deemed necessary, but he insisted the statement be taken down by a stenographer as a record.

Back Burned

In answer to Ziegfeld's claim that Cantor could have given him a week's notice and in that way protected him as to the company's salaries, the star stripped before the committee and exhibited a large burn on his back. That came as the result of a medical high-powered lamp. He took the treatment Sunday in an effort to clear up the condition of his chest. The next day he advised Ziegfeld that it would be impossible for him to make the Philadelphia date.

Dr. Jerome Wagner, Ziegfeld's physician, and Dr. Lowry were present at the Equity session. X-rays were shown and the doctors and patient repaired to Wagner's office. Dr. Wagner later phoned Equity he concurred with Cantor's physician as to the patient's condition in every respect.

It was stated that Cantor would come around in a warmer climate and he is expected to be recovered by May.

Shubert-Variety Case Is Again Adjourned

Another adjournment of the trial of the $100,000 damage action brought by the Shuberts against Variety was mutually agreed upon last week. It is now set on the Supreme Court calendar for next October.

SEARLES PRACTICING LAW

John Searles has withdrawn from Equity's offices and is now a practicing attorney on his own, having taken quarters in the offices of Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr.

Searles handled the security and cash bonds deposited with Equity to protect players for the two weeks' minimum and the complaints in cases of unpaid salaries.

He is succeeded by William Moore.

MARGARET LAWRENCE OFF

Margaret Lawrenec has switched plans. She will not enter vaudcville, but instead will star in "The Behavior of Mrs. Crane," which Walker Lindsay and Eugene Parsons will produce.

4 SHOWS OUT

One show closed suddenly on Broadway Saturday, and at least three more will go down this week.

"La Gringa," presentcd by Hamilton McFadden at the Little, was withdrawn after a week and a half.

"LA GRINGA"

"The Baby Cyclone," George M. Cohan farce, goes to the road from Miller's after 23 weeks. Drew fairly good money, averaging around $10,000 for several months, with the top gross $12,000.

"THE BABY CYCLONE"
Opened Sept. 12. Mantle ("News") characterized play as "Cohan at his best." Mostly second string notices.
Variety said: "Should be good until Lent."

"57 Bowery," presented independently at Wallack's, is due to stop Saturday, although the backers are seeking another house. With takings around $3,000, that is discounted.

"57 BOWERY"
Opened Jan. 26. Woollcott ("World") termed it "third rate truck." Winchell ("Graphic") rated it "helpless."
Variety (Abel): "will not flourish."

"So Am I," also independently presented, is listed to close at the Comedy at the end of the fourth week. Business estimated at under $4,000, and another attraction is booked in for next week.

"SO AM I"
Opened Jan. 27. Hammond ("Herald-Tribune") said: "An infirm allegory." Anderson ("Journal") called it "insipid and anaemic prank."

HARLAND'S ANGELING

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Kenneth Harland, picture aetor, now starred in the stage play "Triumphant Bachelor," will angel the attraction personally for a road tour following the closing at the Playhouse. "Excess Baggage" comes into the house in two weeks.

Coast to Coast Negro Show

The Mamie Smith show, an all-colored outfit, has been booked for 10 weeks at the Lincoln, Los Angeles, opening April 1.

This is one of Jack Goldberg's shows playing colored houses through the east and south.

Howard L. Potter is in the south taking care of the advance for the Mary Garden tour, while also with "The Barker," both under the Wagner management.

Edna Leedom Out of Show; Shuberts File Complaint

Edna Leedom, featured with "Lovely Lady" at the Sam H. Harris, left the show Friday, reporting illness. Doris Patson, in the cast, was elevated to the lead and continued in that role Monday. Over the weekend Miss Leedom sent word to the Shubert office she had developed an attack of acute appendicitis.

The Shubert office complained to Equity asking for a physical examination of Miss Leedom, on the grounds that the show was built around her and would have to close if she did not return. A physician appointed by Equity and one representing the Shuberts called at the Leedom apartment but were refused admittance to her bedside by a nurse. The latter stated Miss Leedom's own physician was out of town and that she declined to have any other doctors attend or examine her without his consent.

The matter was to have come before Equity's Council Tuesday, but on that day the Shubert office was expectant Miss Leedom would return to the cast that evening.

BURNS MANTLE'S ERROR ON BIRTHDAY DATES

Annual of '26-'27 Disagrees on Ages With Same Book of '20-'21

Legitimate actors seem to be more or less volatile about birthdays and ages. Between Burns Mantle's Year Book of 1920-21 and the latest volume for 1926-27 some 27 actors and actresses of prominence became either older or younger.

Donald Brian was 40 in 1920 and apparently was 55 in 1926. Henry E. Dixey was three years younger in 1926 than he was six years earlier in 1920. Similar outwitting of time was accomplished in other cases, while others speeded up time and jumped ahead.

"Rain or Shine" should weather the stiff Broadway competition for a long time and click heavily at $5.50 top. It has something of everything in the musical line seen before and a distinctive asset in Joe Cook, its star. Without Cook the impression might not bo so unanimously favorable, although the ingredients are happily selected.

Jones and Green, recognizing the trend of production standards as established by the new school of writers, made the lyrics a feature in themselves, as well as the music, overbalaneing the libretto. The Gleason-Marks book creaks in spots and becomcs almost banal towards the finale, saved only by Cook's broad grinnacing, which comes at a favorable stage when almost any-thing wouldn't matter, so impressive has been the foregoing presentation.

With Broadway never boasting so many musical hits in its history, nor at such fancy scales, comparisons are onee more in store. Hence it is patent that "Rain or Shine" started out insuring itself by somewhat patterning its stuff along favorably accepted standards of the day.

"Glad Tidings" is a take off on "Good News" song from the production of that name, as is some of the general motif. "The Roustabout Song," with its male choir, reminds of the "Song of the Vagabonds"; the circus wagon set and the ballyn is Marilyn Miller's "Sunny," and so on.

Joncs and Green, or their director, Leftwich, have extracted the best ingredients to season the production and while the change of pace might superficially suggest a hodge-podge result, it works out very interestingly. There are a few dull moments when Cook's absence becomes slightly noticed, but they are not permitted to run overly long.

Jones and Green have done something with the Don Voorhees pit orchestra that nobody else, outside of Schwab and Mandel with the Greenwich Village Follies, have had the courage to essay; i.e., ultra futuristic orchestration scored for saxophones and torrid trumpets and not the accepted oboe and woodwind style of musical accompaniment.

Admittedly, the masses may not fully comprehend the significance of this trick jazzique, but subconsciously they sense it has a new and advaneed meaning and at all times it serves the purpose of jacking up the proceedings with snappy syneopation which the orthodox baldpate maestros have failed to produce in the past. When Voorhees plays for a dance specialty he plays ultra dance music and not a mere aecompaniment haphazardly orchestrated.

From Tin Pan Alley come the songwriters, Jaok Yellen, Milton Ager and Owen Murphy, the latter having some production experience, but Ager and Yellen possessed of long experiencc in fashioning words and music for the masses. And since the masses make or break a show, why not the same routine for production music? A $6 customer will whistle just as loudly as a gallery worshipper in a picture house. So much for the creative ingredients of this musical.

With the score dominating the book, the latter could safely fall shy of the mark, considering the sturdy easting, headed by Cook who, like so many other alumni of vaudeville or burlesque, was a revelation at $5. That takes in Tom Howard, a burlesque vet who was seen in the last "Greenwich Village Follies." Cook, too, has had revue experience, "Vanities."

Watching Cook work, and with utmost appreciation of his artistry, one can't help conjecture what Will Mahoney might do with equal opportunities. Where Cook extends himself in other departments, other than dancing, Mahoney qualifies handily on the stepping and can also do songs in a manner all his own. Cook, on the other hand, is more legit as a comedian, relying on lines, business and general versatility for favorable impression.

"Rain or Shine" has to do with Nancy Welford's circus, of which Joe Cook is manager, being up against it and Tom Howard as the A. K. Angel buying in. Howard is Amos K. Shrewsberry, A. K. for short he calls himself. Then there is Joe Lyons as the machinating ringmaster who is sour on Warren Hull, a corking juvenile, as a pseudo-roustabout, actually a wealthy scion in disguise, courting Miss Welford.

From the public square, and the first of several familiar, but well done money changing bits by Cook and Howard—going better at five bucks than at 50 cents in burlesque—the action takes to the circus ground.

Miss Welford and Hull introduce "Glad Tidings," one of the several good numbers. "So Would I," by Cook and the chorus, is a comedy interlude and "Add a Little Wiggle" peps it up immediately with a snappy coooh ensemble led by Helen Lynd. Miss Lynd in this number, as well as in "Feelin' Good" (more approaching "Good News" than "Glad Tidings) reminds of the Williams Sisters in the stomp stuff, but the similarity is not too close. She is the same hoydenish personality, a bit too hotsy-totsy for the average legit musical, because of the strong nite club suggestions, but is excellent here. In the "wiggle" number, the Markert Rockets and Tom Nip's Girls are chiefly responsible for the ensemble success, as with the rest of their opportunities. "Rain or Shine," the theme song done by Miss Welford and Hull, is another outstander and cinched Hull as an unusual type juv. He qualifies along the same lines as Harry Fender in that department.

Ethel Norris, after a favorable start, cinehed her opportunities with "Oh Baby" opposite Edgar Gardner, the second juvenile. Miss Norris is from the nite clubs and past predictions for production success are amply fulfilled. The same "cuteness" that impressed in the intimacy of a eafe floor clicks even better aeross the foots. Vernon Jaeobson, leading the "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," number, was another solo hit and Hull's leading of the "Roustabout Song" fetehed a flock of encores.

Some of the color of the big top scenes is lost in the second stanza because of the society atmosphere which motivates the action along conventional lines. The triangle stuff with the roustabout-millionaire hero, the circus aerial star and the society dame is introduced here.

Two striking curtains were introduced in the second half. One was a realistic elephant scene and the other a fantastic clown doll formation will have them talking as much as they will about that Rube Goldberg-patternod scene wherein Cook motivates, through an intricate process, the triangle sounding assistance of Dave Chasen. It's an elaboration of the old mallet-on-the-dome stuff as done by Cook and Chasen in "Vanities."

It was in the first act finale that Cook, with the crew striking and the animal trainer walking out, gives the show all by himself. The ball balancing, juggling, hoke and general nonsense with Chasen as chief assistant cinched everything for the star and the show.

In toto, Jones and Green have a winner in "Rain or Shine" and a whale of an attraction in Joe Cook. The comedian will go far in legit, his first starring opportunities proving what four Hawaiians can do for one American comic.

Abel.

SHOWS IN N. Y. AND COMMENT

Figures estimated and comment point to some attractions being successful, while the same gross accredited to others might suggest mediocrity or loss. The variance is explained in the difference in house capacities with the varying overhead. Also the size of cast, with consequent difference in necessary gross of profit. Variance in business necessary for musical attraction as against dramatic play is also considered.

"A Connecticut Yankee," Vanderbilt (16th week) (M-882; $5.50). This musical outstanding attraction of season; $23,500 and over. Extra matinee Monday expected to pep up box offices this week.

"A Free Soul," Klaw (6th week) (C-830; $3.30). Doing moderate business as first indicated; cut rates aid; last week nearly $8,000; apparently satisfactory.

"And So to Bed," Bijou (16th week) (C-605; $3.30). Grosses are quoted around $9,000; at that pace show of kind can go through profitably.

"Artists and Models," Winter Garden (14th week) (R-1,492; $5.50). Probably another four weeks or so; new "Greenwich Village Follies" slated to follow; current revue in cut rates, with takings jumping over $25,000.

"Atlas and Eva," Mansfield (2d week) (CD-1,050; $3.30). Failed to favorably impress; first week estimated around $4,000; must improve to stick.

"Behold the Bridegroom," Cort (8th week) (CD-1,043; $3.85). Last two weeks billed but may stay longer, because approved; started out around $14,000 but slipped and recently dipped under stop limit of $10,000; better than that now indicated.

"Burlesque," Plymouth (25th week) (CD-1,041; $3.85). Will easily run out season; somewhat off from earlier speed but making plenty; over $18,000.

"Cock Robin," 48th St. (6th week) (CD-960; $3.30). Chance to make satisfactory showing; business ahead of some of newer shows; average over $7,000.

"Coquette," Maxine Elliott's (15th week) (D-942; $3.85). One of season's most solid dramatic successes; capacity right along with takings exceeding $19,000 by virtue of standee trade.

"Diversion," 49th Street (6th week) (C-704; $3.30). Not attracting much attention; appears to be limited draw show with indicated takings around $6,000.

"Dracula," Fulton (20th week) (D-914; $3.30). Substantial box office attraction; has good chance to go through season; business over $13,000 right along.

"Escape," Booth (17th week) (D-704; $3.30). Drama of English writing among successes; although considerably under early pace figured to last into spring; $10,000.

"Excess Baggage," Ritz (8th week) (C-945; $3.30). Dramatic novelty; commands good trade from agencies; while not capacity, making good money at better than $13,000.

"Five O'Clock Girl," 46th Street (19th week) (M-1,490; $5.50). In big money from start; grosses consistent, averaging $38,000.

"Funny Face," Alvin (13th week) (M-1,400; $5.50). Another smart coin getter; virtual capacity after Monday; weekly average $38,000.

"57 Bowery," Wallack's (4th week) (D-770; $3.30). Final week here; may find another berth although grosses of $3,000 hardly warrant it; revival of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" moves up from downtown next week.

"Good News," Chanin's 46th Street (24th week) (M-1,413; $5.50). Newer musical hits have not affected business nor advance selling; capacity, meaning $40,000 weekly.

"Happy," Daly's 63d Street (9th week). Playing to very little money; company reported on cooperative basis and individual bit didn't amount to much Saturday.

"Hit the Deck," Belasco (43d week) (M-1,000-$5.50). One week more to go; to subway circuit and road; holding around $21,000; house reverts to drama Feb. 27 with "The Bachelor Father."

"Interference," Lyceum (18th week) D-957-$4.40). May last through spring; English show not quite up to pace when at Empire, but doing best business Lyceum has had in couple of seasons; $12,000 to $13,000.

"Jimmie's Women," Frolic (21st week) (C-602-$3.30). Up on roof with play that does not require exceptional money, sticking much longer than anticipated; cut rated; $6,000.

"La Gringa," Little (CD-530-$3.30). Taken off Saturday, playing week and a half; "Spring 3100" booked in, added to week's premieres.

"Lovely Lady," Sam H. Harris (8th week) (M-1,051-$5.50). Though balcony cut rated, business downstairs good; takings over $20,000 apparently satisfactory for this musical; Edna Leedom out of show may cause its closing.

"Manhattan Mary," Apollo (21st week) (M-1,168-$5.50). Demand not as strong as formerly, newer musicals having call; still among leaders, with estimated pace of $37,000.

"Marco Millions," Guild (C-914-$3.85). Last week third week "Marco" nearly $19,000, extra matinee counting; "Doctor's Dilemma" (11th week) current, these shows alternating.

"My Maryland," Jolson's (23d week) (O-1,777-$5.50). After dropping under $14,000 business jumped recently, two-for-one tickets giving house semblance of capacity; rated over $20,000 again.

"Paris Bound," Music Box (8th week) (C-1,000-$3.85). Sell out and cinch for balance of season, with summer holdover possibility; getting $23,000.

"Porgy," Republic (19th week) (C-896-$3.30). Money maker for Theatre Guild; virtually all-colored dramatic company's distinct novelty; business lately over $13,000.

"Quicksand," Masque (1st week) (CD-700-$3.30). Presented by Anna Held, Jr.; written by Warren F. Lawrence; opened Monday.

"Rain or Shine," George M. Cohan (2d week) (M-1,111-$5.50). New musical comedy hit; opened Feb. 9 and standees second night; looks like strongest attraction house has had in years.

"Revels," Shubert (12th week) (R-1,395-$4.40). No better than even break; continues with idea of establishing show name for future editions; estimated around $18,000; liberally cut rated now.

"Rio Rita," Lyric (55th week) (M-1,395-$4.40). Longest run musical on list; still making money, but due on tour late in March, with "Three Musketeers" slated to follow here; last week about $28,000.

"Rosalie," New Amsterdam (6th week) (M-1,702-$6.60). Big agency demand, with no slackening; Ziegfeld's newest musical rated close behind same manager's "Show Boat"; $48,000, nearly.

"Salvation," Empire (3d week) (D-957-$3.85). Only because of agency buy is this attraction getting any support; little selling at box office; maybe $8,000; "Napoleon" mentioned to follow in soon.

"She's My Baby," Globe (7th week) (M-1,416-$5.50). Another three weeks, although removal to another house possible; estimated under $25,000 lately; house leased for pictures (Fox), starting March 5.

"Show Boat," Ziegfeld (8th week) (M-1,750-$6.60). With dollar added to tickets for first 15 rows, musical leader hit record figure for eight performances last week; quoted over $53,000.

"Spring 3100," Little (1st week) D-530-$3.30). Melodrama suddenly added to premiere when "La Gringa" passed out; opens tonight (Feb. 15).

"So Am I," Comedy (4th week) (C-682-$3.30). Continuance after this week doubtful; light trade indicated, principally cut rates; under $5,000; "Maya" next Monday.

"Strange Interlude," John Golden (3d week) (D-800-$4.40). Interesting new drama looks assured of run. After Theatre Guild's subscription season should gross real money; second week over $11,000 (only six performances weekly).

"Sunny Days," Imperial (2d week) (M-1,446-$5.50). Opened Feb. 8, averaging nice break from critics; good business indicated.

"Take the Air," Waldorf (13th week) (M-1,111-$4.40). $21,000 weekly average; very good money considering scale and capacity; will go well into spring.

"The Baby Cyclone," Henry Miller's (23d week) (F-946-$3.30). Final week; Cohan's laugh show made rather good showing; grosses not big, but satisfactory; recently around $9,000; "Our Betters" next week.

"The Clutching Claw," Forrest (1st week) (D-1,015-$3.30). Presented by Barbour and Bryant; written by Ralph T. Kettering; opened Tuesday.

"The Command to Love," Longacre (22d week) (C-1,019-$4.40). Strong lower floor from first; light trade upstairs nicked pace; going along to about $14,000.

"The Golden Dawn," Hammerstein's (13th week) (O-1,265-$6.60). While not among musical leaders, getting good agency support and trade quite satisfactory; over $30,000 claimed.

"The Ladder, Belmont (71st week) (D-517). Still giving all tickets away gratis during what is advertised as a "period of revision," which appears to have extended from time play opened.

"The Madcap," Royale (3d week) (M-1,117-$4.40). Run not indicated; business second week rated between $11,000 and $12,000; came in after long tour.

"The Merry Malones," Erlanger's (21st week) (M-1,500-$5.50). Musical competition exceptionally heavy this season; "Malones" rated among most popular; around $25,000.

"The Mystery Man," Bayes (4th week) (D-860-$3.30). Claims satisfactory trade; with liberal cut rating. Estimated pace about $5,000.

"The Optimists," Century Roof (3d week) (R-422-$5.50). Midnight performance Friday; roof (Casino de Paris) getting light trade; estimated around $10,000 last week.

"The Queen's Husband," Playhouse (4th week) (C-879-$3.85). Some doubt about this one sticking; fairly good call for lower floor; pace $10,000.

"The Racket," Ambassador (13th week) (C-1,067-$3.30). Reported billed for Philadelphia in three weeks (March 5); fared moderately well; claimed $10,000 and better, with evident falling off lately.

"The Royal Family," Selwyn (8th week) (C-1,087-$3.85). Set for run and should go into summer; leading non-musical field with over $24,000.

"The Shannons of Broadway," Martin Beck (21st week) (C-1,198-$3.30). Expected to last well into spring; hooked up to make money at comparatively moderate grosses; around $10,000 recently.

"The Silent House," Morosco (2d week) (D-893-$3.30). Opened Feb. 7, winning favorable notices; went to capacity third night and looks like money meller; estimated at $17,000.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan," National (22d week) (D-1,164-$3.85). Leads season's melodrama's; topped list for some time and continues to big money; $22,500 last week.

"These Modern Women," Eltinge (1st week) (C-892-$3.30). Presented by Kenneth MacGowan and Robert Rockmore; written by Lawrence Langner; opened Monday.

Outside Times Sq.-Little-Special

"The Merchant of Venice," Broadhurst (5th week). Shakespearean presentation with George Arliss doing fairly; not exceptional.

"Caponsacchi," Walter Hampden's (4th week). Original idea of month's revival changed; date extended.

"Taming of The Shrew," Garrick (17th week). New piece in preparation; subscriptions invited, same players retained.

Civic Repertory, 14th Street. Repertory.

American Laboratory theatre. Repertory.

"Hoboken Blues," New Playwrights; opens Friday (Feb. 17); written by Michael Gold.

"Meek Mose," Princess.

"The Ivory Door," Charles Hopkins.

"Passing of the Third Floor Back" will be moved from Village to Wallack's next week.

Shows in Rehearsal

"The Wrecker" (Guy Bates Post).

"The Scarlet Fox" (Willard Mack).

"Mulligan & Garrity" (Donald Gallaher).

"Roulette" (Leon De Costa).

"Gentlemen of the Press" (Jackson & Kraft).

"Jungle Fever" (Paige-Janis Productions).

"Another Bottle, Doc" (Thomas McElphany).

"Napoleon" (James W. Elliott).

"She Stoops to Conquer" (George C. Tyler).

"Three Musketeers" (Florenz Ziegfeld).

2 TURN IN SAME ROLE

Grace Valentine has turned back the lead of "One More Bottle, Doc" (formerly "The Medicine Show") objecting to the pruning process made on the part after she had previously rehearsed it.

Miss Valentine is the second actress to walk out of the show for the same reason. Isabel Dawn who succeeded Miss Valentine in the renewed rehearsals, was the other.

Stocks Open

The Playhouse, Sioux City, Iowa, formerly the Rialto, reopened with stock Feb. 12, by a new company, under the direction of Cal LeVance and Paul Sander, both of Chicago.

"SOME GIRL'S" $15,000

Molly Picon, Yiddish Musical Star, Averages Around $2,200 Weekly

Despite the slump in Yiddish show business, its particular musical comedy luminary, Molly Picon, does business approaching the sensational. In five performances a week (Friday night and two shows each on Saturday and Sunday) her latest musical, "Some Girl," grosses $15,000.

The rest of the week is devoted to repertoire, as is the custom of Yiddish legit houses where no attraction plays all week 'round, excepting on the special holiday weeks when Miss Picon has accounted for $30,000 grosses at $3.85. The margin of profit to a Yiddish musical success, considering the limitations of everything, is stupendous, excepting that the field is very limited and can only afford one or two hits.

Miss Picon is guaranteed $750 a week, but, with her sliding arrangement, grosses $2,200 to $2,500 most of the time.

CHI OPERA'S $203,000 SETS A BOSTON RECORD

Boston, Feb. 14.

One whopper of a week in Boston with Mary Garden and Chicago Civic Opera Company at the Boston Opera House breaking a box office record for a single performance. Wednesday night the yodeling troupe took $13,000 and the week's total was $103,000, up three grand. Sell out for six out of eight performances.

George White's "Scandals" in the opening week at the Shubert collected $32,000. "The Sidewalks of New York," in final week, held even at $24,000 at the Colonial and undoubtedly could have kept it up if allowed to stay in.

Jane Cowl, in "The Road to Rome," boosted gross close to capacity. "Yours Truly," with Leon Errol, ran stronger than was anticipated and seems to have taken a foothold. Errol's popularity in Boston is a big asset. Majestic is running strong now, however, for more than two months.

William Hodge, in "Straight Thru the Door," has settled down at the Plymouth. "4 Walls," at the Hollis, had the general acclaim of the critics, but a tough week. It was generally felt the show deserved more but the Hollis carries no command. Just for the sake of seeing the place filled again Grant Mitchell in "The Baby Cyclone" has been billed back and a good gate for a short stay is assured. "Wings" fell off a bit at the Tremont last week but is still making money. Open roads, no cars on saw horses, no snow, its a great winter for the theatres.

Last Week's Estimates

"Scandals," Shubert (second week). Running along at the usual revue pace; $32,000.

"The Road to Rome," Wilbur (fourth week). A steady climb for Hannibal and though he never reaches Rome he is delving into the gold one associates with Nome. Practically a sell out; $19,500.

"Yours Truly," Majestic (second week). Leon Errol brought in a lot of old friends to the tune of $22,000.

"Four Walls," Hollis (second week). A good show gone wrong. Low for the week and close to low for the season at this house. Leaves this week; $9,000.

"Sidewalks of New York," Colonial (fourth week). Holding up well and in last seven days. Hasn't fallen below its gross of this past week; $24,000.

Chicago Civic Opera Company, Boston Opera House (gone), broke all records for the season and house with $203,000 for two weeks, and $13,000 for a single performance last Wednesday. Last week; $103,000.

"Straight Thru the Door," Plymouth (second week). William Hodge hit off a pace to start and piece is expected to stay in for some time; $14,000.

J. Henry Lee has left the Leslie Morosco casting agency to embark to the casting agency field on his own.

"JUST FANCY" SELLOUT IN CHI; "DECK" STOPS

Both Cases Are Surprise—"ConstantW ife" Continues High—Several Dark

Chicago, Feb. 14.

One new opening last week and several closings announced for the next two weeks. Business at the loop legits, with the exception of four theatres, is terrible. "Silver Cord" reopened the Studebaker and looks like a hit.

The bottom dropped out of "Hit the Deck" at the Woods, and the show is leaving Feb. 25, with the house dark for a week and the wild animal picture, "Simba," opening March 4. The decline of receipts at the Woods cannot be explained by smart showmen in town.

The outstanding feature of the loop is the way Ethel Barrymore with "Constant Wife" at the Harris is holding up. Business since the opening has not dropped below $20,000, which is excellent for this type of show.

"Desert Song," "Night in Spain," "Criss Cross" and "Just Fancy" are the outstanding musical shows and all doing a steady business, with little variation in the take in.

"Just Fancy" at the Olympic is one of the surprise hits. The show has been cut-rating the balcony only, the main floor being virtually sold out ever since show has been in town. The following shows have their notice up: "Criss Cross" at the Erlanger, after having lengthened its stay, leaves to be followed by "King of Kings"; "Behold This Dreamer" leaves with nothing slated to follow; "Cardboard Lover" at the Adelphi has three more weeks to go, with "Trial of Mary Dugan" carded, but not definite; Garrick goes dark following closing of Jolson's "Jazz Singer." It looks like a bad season with very few exceptions. Carroll's "Vanities" at Illinois is doing near capacity, the first time this show has ever gotten a real break in this town.

Estimates for Last Week

"Constant Wife" (Harris, 8th week). Still going at good clip, bettering $20,000.

"Criss Cross" (Erlanger, 8th week). One of the surprises of the Loop. Booked in originally for six weeks and run extended three more. Goes out next week with regular money; $33,000.

"Cardboard Lover" (Adelphi, 2nd week). Show dropped off after first week looked like a hit. $16,000.

"Kongo" (Central, 6th week). Still going along and making a profit. Cost of operating light. Dropped off to $5,000.

"Hit the Deck" (Woods, 15th week). Bottom out on this one. A Loop mystery. Show opened like a winner; $20,000.

"Silver Cord" (Studebaker, 1st week). Looks like it will get real money for at least six weeks. Had an ultra audience for the opening, with quite a bit of "paper" that held the first week's money down; $9,000.

"Peggy Ann" (Selwyn, 4th week). Impossible for house to make money at the present intake. Show leaves shortly with "Good News" to follow; $13,000.

"Two Girls Wanted" (Princess, 1st week). After playing seven weeks at the Cort moved and took some patronage. Show has been going along nicely and making money; $10,000.

"Just Fancy" (Olympic, 6th week). Building their business up by cut-rating the balcony only. Show doing excellent considering the scale of prices. $26,000.

"Behold This Dreamer" (Blackstone, 8th week). Goes out in two weeks. Run has made Glenn Hunter quite a draw in this town. Business steady at $10,000.

"Wooden Kimono" (Cort, 1st week). This house will make a little money with any show. "Kimono" got fairly good notices with the mystery fans turning out; $10,500.

"A Night in Spain" (Four Cohans, 12th week). Show looks good for many more weeks. Aileen Stanley getting a lot of publicity, and fitting in perfect. All dailies carried story from London papers that she was the only American girl to get invitation at Royal Command performance to be held Mar. 1; $30,000.

"Desert Song" (Great Northern, 24th week). A perfect score for this house and show. Doing virtual capacity, last week $28,000, and slated to leave around April 15.

O'Neill Quitting New London?

Danbury, Conn., Feb. 14.

Eugene O'Neill is disposing of all his real estate holdings in New London. Apparently he does not intend to return there.

Three parcels of real estate, including a dwelling, were sold last week. O'Neill is still keeping his home at Ridgefield.

45 SHOWS IN HOLIDAY CUT RATES, 14 AGENCY DUMPS

Brokers bewailed the system of ticket buy-outs this week after what is known as a "slager" occurred Monday evening (Lincoln's birthday). The matinees were fairly good, but during the afternoon the boys knew they would "have to eat 'em." Dumps were made into the cut rate market, where 45 attractions were listed before 8 o'clock. Of that flock 14 shows were dumped by the agencies, who failed to get rid of allotments.

There are 26 shows on the buys' list this week, a number considered too big for the number of actual money shows on Broadway at this time. There are as many successes as usual, but the gap between them and the field is wide and the chances of agency loss are not inconsiderable. Early in the season it was indicated that buys' system might pass out, but the agencies could not get together as a unit on the matter and there is little over former seasons as regards the buys.

Weak Sisters' Way Off

Broadway's business generally has slipped somewhat under normal, but the weaker shows are principally affected. There are still some dark theatres and there are sure to be a number of untenanted houses throughout the season.

As for the leaders, business is bigger than ever. "Show Boat" is away out in front. Using a $6.60 top scale for 15 rows, a new gross record for a usual eight performance week was established, the takings bettering $53,000 last week; "Rosalie" remains a good second, getting slightly under $48,000; the other musical leaders are closely bunched, with "Good News" still a sell-out at $40,000; "Five o'Clock Girl" and "Funny Face," $38,000; "Manhattan Mary" slightly less; "Golden Dawn" claims $30,000; "Rio Rita" off a bit at $28,000; "Merry Malones" and "Artists and Models," $25,000 (latter now being cut-rated); "She's My Baby," $25,000, but going out soon; "Connecticut Yankee" over $23,500 (capacity); "My Maryland" jumped over $20,000 (liberally cut-rated); "Take the Air" also over $20,000; "Lovely Lady" around that figure; "Revels," $18,000; "The Madcap," $11,000; "The Optimists," around the same, which is not so good for a revue.

"The Royal Family" holds the non-musical leadership at more than $24,000; "Paris Bound" capacity, too, at $23,000; "Trial of Mary Dugan," $22,500; "Marco Millions," nearly $19,000 (an extra matinee last week); "Burlesque," $18,500; "Coquette," $19,000; "Command to Love," $14,000; "Porgy," $13,000; "Dracula," $13,000; "Excess Baggage," $13,000; "Interference," $12,500; "Strange Interlude," over $11,000 (six performances); "The Queen's Husband," "Behold the Bridegroom" and "Shannons of Broadway," $10,000; "And So to Bed," $9,000; "A Free Soul," $8,000; "Cock Robin" and "Diversion," $7,000; the field straggles down to $3,000 for attractions such as "57 Bowery," "So Am I," etc.

"Rain or Shine" Looks Good

There were some hit possibilities among last week's premieres. "Rain or Shine" drew some corking notices at the Cohan and looks like the best thing that house had had in years. It opened Thursday and was capacity the second night. "The Silent House" at the Morosco figures among the money shows too. In seven performances the takings were estimated over $17,000, big money for a melodrama here; "Sunny Days," a middle of the week entrant at the Imperial, claimed capacity Saturday night, but its status is in doubt; "Atlas and Eva" does not figure to have a chance, takings at the Mansfield being around $4,000; "La Gringa," an arrival of the previous week, was taken off.

In addition to "La Gringa," a sudden closing of last week, "The Baby Cyclone" will leave the Miller this week, the house getting "Our Betters" next week; "57 Bowery" is listed out at Wallack's, which is due to get "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," now downtown; "And So Am I" must vacate the Comedy which will offer "Maya" next week. Two dark houses will be relighted, the Hudson getting "Whispering Friends," highly touted, and the Biltmore offering "Rope"; "Sherlock Holmes" will be offerd in stock at the Cosmopolitan, and "Marriage on Approval" is a possibility.

In the Agencies

"The Silent House" and "Sunny Days" out of last week's crop were added to the buys in the premium agencies. Several of the newer productions now on a buy basis are due off soon, good news for the brokers. The list: "Funny Face" (Alvin); "Manhattan Mary" (Apollo); "Hit the Deck" (Belasco); "The Optimists" (Century Roof); "Good News" (Chanin's 46th St.); "Salvation" (Empire); "The Merry Malones" (Erlanger); "The Five o'Clock Girl" (Forty-fourth St.); "Rain or Shine" (George M. Cohan); "She's My Baby" (Globe); "Golden Dawn" (Hammerstein's); "Sunny Days" (Imperial); "Interference" (Lyceum); "Rio Rita" (Lyric); "Coquette" (Maxine Elliott); "The Silent House" (Morosco); "Paris Bound" (Music Box); "The Trial of Mary Dugan" (National); "Rosalie" (New Amsterdam); "The Queen's Husband" (Playhouse); "Excess Baggage" (Ritz); "The Madcap" (Royale); "Lovely Lady" (Sam H. Harris); "The Royal Family" (Selwyn); "A Connecticut Yankee" (Vanderbilt); "Show Boat" (Ziegfeld).

Cut Rate List

Regularly listed in cut rates up to Tuesday were 33 attractions, a gain of three aver last week. Included are several new shows, placed on sale prior to the premiere. The list: "My Maryland" (Jouson), "Harry Delmar's Revels" (Shubert), "Take the Air" (Waldorf), "Lovely Lady" (Harris), "The Madcap" (Royale), "Happy" (Daly's), "The Optimists" (Casino de Paris), "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden), "Baby Cyclone" (Henry Miller), "Jimmie's Women" (Frolic), "The Shannons of Broadway" (Martin Beck), "The Ivory Door" (Hopkins), "Taming of the Shrew" (Garrick), "And So to Bed" (Bijou), "Atlas and Eva" (Mansfield), "So Am I" (Comedy), "The Racket" (Ambassador), "Interference" (Lyceum), "Cock Robin" (48th Street), "A Free Soul" (Klaw), "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" (Davenport), "Diversion" (49th Street), "The Mystery Map" (Bayes), "57 Bowery" (Wallack's), "Behold the Bridegroom" (Cort), "Meek Mose" (Princess), "Salvation" (Empire), "Mrs. Dane's Defense" (Cosmopolitan), "The Shanghai Gesture" (Century), "Quicksand" (Masque), "The Clutching Claw" (Forrest), "Parisiana" (Totten), "Escape" (Booth).

Minn. Auto Show Helps

Minncapolis, Feb. 14.

In its second week, "The King of Kings" (road show picture) got but around $6,000 at the Metropolitan, $6,000 under its first week.

Local theatregoers showed themselves hungry for farce. "Take My Advice," at the Shubert (Bainbridge dramatic stock), gave the house one of its best weeks of the season, grossing nearly $6,000, about $1,000 more than G. Bernard Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" the week before.

A tabloid musical comedy version of "Lightnin'" brought about $5,800 to the Palace (McCall-Bridge Players). Aided by boxing, wrestling and other special nights, "Sugar Babies" (Mutual wheel burlesque) did about $4,800 at the Gayety.

"Gorilla" Recalled

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 14.

At the Capitol last night, "Sh—The Octopus," by Ralph Murphy and Donald Gallagher, had its premiere.

It's so close to "The Gorilla" it's almost identical, with two hick sleuths in the comedy roles.

The play may please admirers of "The Gorilla."

L. A. RIVALRY HURTS

Conn. Yankee Down to $8,200—$4,000 for Harlan Show

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

"Connecticut Yankee" is a flop locally, the second week at the Mayan representing red for the house at reported takings of $8,200.

A lot of musical competish for this burg brought in figures of $25,000 for the third week of "The Desert Song" (Biltmore), $19,000 for fourth week of "Chauve-Souris" (Belasco), $15,000 for "No, No, Nanette" (Shrine Auditorium).

In the dramatic houses, with smaller scales on an average, the El Capitan quoted $6,000 on the second week of "Two Girls Wanted." The Morosco, with "Funny Little Thing," got $6,400.

"The Triumphant Bachelor," starring Kenneth Harland, from pictures, grossed $4,000 at the downtown Playhouse, while the Hollywood Playhouse beat that figure about $300 with "Undertow," in its third week.

TAX TREASURERS' GIFTS AS PREMIUM EXCESS

Bill Box-Office Men at 50 P. C. of Amount—Also Call Gratuities "Income"

Despite the fact that U. S. Attorney Charles H. Tuttle stated during the theatre ticket quiz last summer that moneys paid New York box office men by ticket brokers as gratuities were not taxable because rated as gifts, the Internal Revenue Department thinks otherwise and is proceeding to collect a tax.

In November and December past, bills were sent to certain box office treasurers and when the tax asked for was not paid, bills of restraint were issued. It appears the government first contended that the money paid the treasurers was actually based on the number of tickets sold and therefore as an excess over the box office price, one-half should be paid to the government (the law states that if the house gets more than the printed price, or a broker sells at more than 50 cents premium, one-half the excess shall be paid the government).

A change in opinion among the revenue men appears to have occurred since some of the bills were based on the 50 per cent. levy law, while others were issued on the basis of straight income tax, although the same amounts were involved. An error was pointed out in that respect, since if the government claimed one-half of the money originally it should not have asked income tax on but half such sums.

Nevertheless, $35,000 was posted as a bond covering the Broadhurst theatre on behalf of Aarons & Freedley and Lee Shubert, the leasces, whom the government holds responsible for its treasurers as agents. Similarly $25,000 was posted by the Hudson theatre by Mrs. H. B. Harris. The claims involved covered the years of 1926 and 1927.

Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr., attorney for the several box office men concerned and the managers—Aarons and Freedley and Mrs. Harris—advanced a strong argument against the tax claims. He contends that the money is actually in payment for services rendered to ticket agencies by box office treasurers, or if not is a gratuity not based on the price or number of tickets delivered to the brokers by the treasurers.

Affidavits have been sworn to by ticket brokers that such payments have always been made for good will and services rendered. That the money should therefore be regarded as gratuity is backed up with further argument that such tax should be on the basis of income, if at all.

Perpetuate Mission Play

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

The Mission Play Foundation of Los Angeles filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state. Purpose is to maintain a permanent organization for the presentation of the Mission Play at San Gabriel.

Board of directors of the Foundation includes E. L. Doheny, George I. Cochran, W. I. Hollingsworth, Benjamin F. Bledsoe, Milton Kauffman, Joseph Scott, John G. Mott and George B. Le Baron.

"G.V.F." $25,000, CUTS PHILLY STAY; "LOVE CALL," $20,000

"Good News" Deferred as Romberg Piece Run Is Extended—Irish Players Draw First Reviews, Get $10,000—"Chicago," at $14,000, Good

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.

Business was generally satisfactory again without smash hits.

That there were no outstandingly big grosses might be explained by the fact that there were only two musical shows in town, and that one of the theatres, the Erlanger, had a feature picture.

"The Greenwich Village Follies," at the Shubert, came in highly touted, and opened to a splendid house. The regular reviewers weren't so enthusiastic, and the general word was that this revue wasn't topnotch. On the week the gross was $25,000. Good, but not sensational. As a result, instead of keeping the revue here for four or five weeks it was decided early this week to take it out on the 25th, giving it three weeks. Only musical competitor is "The Love Call," an opcretta, down at the Chestnut Street Opera House.

"The Love Call," by the way, is now expected to remain for another month, although it slipped last week to a mark just under $20,000. The booking of the special company of "Good News" has been postponed for the time being, but is still expected to follow the Romberg opcretta some time in March. "The Love Call's" success in this city has been a real surprise.

Of the non-musicals a number clicked, without any being in the sensational class. George Tyler, for example, was delighted with the success of the Irish players presenting "The Plough and the Stars" for the first week of a fortnight's engagement at the Broad. It wasn't unusually big trade, to be sure, but it was better than most of the business in New York, near $10,000.

"Chicago," at the Walnut, winning the second string men, got first rate notices and a gross of about $14,000, which was considerably better than this melodramatic burlesque had done in a number of places of late. The booking is for two weeks only, but "Chicago" might have stayed a little longer. This week should surpass the first week's figure.

"The Spider," at the Lyric, was decidedly off first three days but came back strong the end of the week and claimed between $15,000 and $16,000. In its last two weeks.

"The Nineteenth Hole," in its first week at the Garrick, did a nice week's trade, better than many expected and undoubtedly profitable. It was rather lost in the mob of openings, but drew pleasant notices.

The Erlanger, offering "The Patent Leather Kid" instead of "The Follies," which was cancelled, did exceptionally well under the circumstances. The gross, without a Monday matinee, was about $16,500 and it looks as if this picture could stick it out for four weeks.

This week's new shows were Irene Bordoni in "Paris," Adelphi, and "Juno and the Paycock" by the Irish players.

Next week the Walnut will offer Max Marcin's new melodrama, "Kidnapper," and the Broad will have "Tommy" for a similar period. On the 27th Harry Delmar's "Revels" has just been announced to take the place of "The Greenwich Village Follies," and there will be two return engagements, "Abie's Irish Rose," for two weeks, at the Garrick, and "My Maryland," indefinitely, at the Lyric. On March 5 "The Racket" is booked at the Walnut, "The Baby Cyclone" at the Broad, and, according to pretty definite report, the new George Tyler revival "She Stoops to Conquer," at the Erlanger for one week. On the 19th "The Road to Rome" comes to the Adelphi, and "The Desert Song" to the Shubert.

Estimates for Last Week

"Juno and the Paycock" (Broad) (2d week for the Irish Players in repertory). "The Plough and the Stars." Business good without being sensation. About $10,000 claimed. "Tommy" in next Monday.

"Greenwich Village Follies" (Shubert, 2d week). At start this looked big, but that opinion has begun to dim a bit. Admits isn't so hot and show is now limited to three weeks here. About $25,000 last week.

"The Nineteenth Hole" (Garrick, 2d week). Frank Craven comedy, inexpensive show, claimed nice profit on the week. In for three weeks in all, then a return of "Able."

"Chicago" (Walnut, 2d week). Burlesque-melodrama has been satisfying here with $14,000 last week better than it has done other places. House undoubtedly helped by prestige gained through Gilbert and Sullivan engagement.

"The Love Call" (Chestnut, 6th week). Sigmund Romberg operetta still reversing New York's opinion. Off last week to a little under $20,000, but still highly satisfactory.

"The Spider" (Lyric, 4th week). Off the beginning of the week, but came back nicely. Gross was claimed at between $15,000 and $16,000. Stay extended to Feb. 25.

"Paris" (Adelphi, 1st week). New Irene Bordoni comedy with songs opened big here and looks set for four weeks' stay. House was dark last week.

"Patent Leather Kid" (Erlanger, 2d week). Film feature very satisfactory in first week due largely to fine last minute press work here when it came in instead of "The Follies," did about $16,500 or a little better.

PAULINE FREDERICK IN $14,000 FRISCO START

San Francisco, Feb. 14.

Legits held strong last week and comfortable profits all around. "Broadway," in its fourth week at the Curran, continued to lead, despite scaled at $2.50 top, though first six days of "Sunny" at the Columbia, scaled $1 higher, ran it a close race. Pauline Frederick is building strong at the Geary (formerly Lurie) where she is in for four weeks.

Duffy attractions fared well, especially "New Brooms" at the Alcazar. Business for this one has not varied $500. President holding up nicely, though end of "The Night Stick" is in sight. Second week at the little Green Street showed a small profit despite low intake, through practically no overhead to speak of.

Estimates for Last Week

Curran—"Broadway." Continues to be the talk of the town. Last week at around $16,000 considered immense.

Geary—"The Scarlet Woman." Looks as though Pauline Frederick will have no difficulty for four weeks for which she is booked. Wednesday and Saturday mats crowd overwhelmingly feminine. Word of mouth advertising and excellent notices helped to $14,000 on initial six days.

Alcazar—"New Brooms" is easily good for from four to six weeks more; at present speed there is no telling when Duffy will yank it. Intake past week better than $6,000, up several hundred.

President—"The Night Stick." Has had four profitable weeks and has still two to go. Last week at $4,500, good.

Green Street—"The Bridal Bed" has not caught on as did its predecessor, "The Married Virgin," though at $2,000 Producer Goldtree didn't lost any kale.

'DIPLOMACY'S' $45,000 RECORD IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Feb. 14.

When something comes in and breaks all records of the National extending nearly 75 years that show is getting business. "Diplomacy," by George Tyler's all-star cast, did that, getting even more than did the same producer's "Trelawney of the Wells." At $4.40 with six nights and three matinees, the grand count came very close to $45,000.

Result of this was that "The Student Prince" with DeWolf Hopper at Poli's didn't get so much. Another angle that took the edge off was a two weeks' engagement of the film of the same name just previous at one of the picture houses. Those mix-ups don't help the legits here. Not over $20,000 at the usual high gate of the Shuberts here for such productions.

"Broadway," however, refused to be snowed under at the Belasco, copping about $11,000 and going into a second week.

Chicago Legit Changes

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Changes in legit bookings bring the Irish Players to the Blackstone, opening Feb. 20, succeeding "Behold This Dreamer," "Oh, Kay," follows the picture, "Jazz Singer," into the Garrick and Feb. 26 "Good News" opens at the Selwyn Feb. 20, following "Peggy Ann."

"Vanities," in for four weeks at the Illinois, will be held indefinitely, with "Diplomacy" slated to follow.

plays by those within the organization.

"These Modern Women" might be classed as somewhat highbrow, yet it is forthwith and brought to a logical conclusion. First two acts are best. While the third lets down there is little drop in the interest. There should be enough public to keep it going through spring, though not perhaps to exceptional money.

The play and story concerns Harold Haynes, novelist; his wife, Roberta, an ultra modern woman, she says; their kid son, Bobby, and the secretary, Annabelle Marvin. The Haynes have been wed for nine years. Roberta insists on being known by her maiden name, Coakley, what with her social engagements, lectures before women's clubs and so forth, with affairs on the side.

It is Roberta's affair with an English author visiting here that has made Haynes a preoccupied, worried man at the start of the play. The kid is a little pest, left to a highbrow governess. Roberta discusses motherhood with Richard Cornwall, her passing lover, but the explanation of her real status comes from her husband, who says she bore the child for the glory of it and has been glorifying herself over it.

Haynes frankly asks Roberta if she is in love with Cornwall. She denies that and then propounds her theory of a modern woman. It is that she may have affairs with other men and still that would not impair her real love for her husband.

There is a promise of an attempt to again be happy together, but Roberta had planned a week-end away with Cornwall. She knows husband won't go along because disliking the hostess of a Long Island cocktail drinking home. Roberta deliberately suggests Haynes having an affair with Annabelle, his attractive secretary. The latter finally accepts that idea but warns Roberta that it will not be an affair—that she will try her utmost to capture the man completely. That worries Roberta, who comes rushing back from the station, rather than go on the week-end.

Novelist and Annabelle go into the bedroom and lock the door; the second act falling on Roberta hysterically pounding for admittance.

In the morning it is clear to Roberta that it was a trick to make her realize her misdeeds, for she devines nothing wrong had happened during the night.

But Haynes, convinced of his wife's adulteries, demands a divorce and wins a confession of love from Annabelle, who in her sweetness tried to save a home and hide her own feelings. Haynes takes the child to a hotel. Tears from Roberta, but the finale finds her swinging back into her natural stride, just a free lance dame.

Crystal Herne provided quite a portrait of a "modern woman." Roberta seemed authentic in many ways. Her slimness made her appear born to the life. She was delicate, yet hard. Minor Watson was admirable as the novelist Haynes.

Rouben Mamoulian, who directed the play, gave Watson the cue for the character, an easy going writer who even when hurt to the quick rarely raised his voice. Helen Flint was the charming Annabelle, intelligent, understanding and all woman. Alan Mowbray did quite well as the British author, caustic at times and unable to understand American women such as Roberta. Norman Williams was the kid, Bobby, very well coached.

QUICKSAND

Anna Held, Jr., production by Warren F. Lawrence, staged by the author, opening Feb. 13 at the Theatre Masque, New York, in three acts and five scenes. Settings by Tellent. Interior decorations by Miss Held.

Mary Spencer	Anne Forrest
Doctor Shaw	Seth Arnold
Chucy, Clayton's valet	Allan Atwell
Robert Clayton	Robert Ames

(By arrangement with Dwight Deere Wiman.)

John Austen	Frank Andrews
Parker, Austen's valet	J. F. Robertson
Roger Spencer	C. W. Van Voorhis
Tony Angelo	Herbert Lindholm
Doctor Williams	Fred McDuffie
Policeman	Fred Raymond
Roberts, a detective	Stanley Andrews
Jane Baker, secretary to Clayton	Betty Utmore

Pretty thin, in three acts and five scenes, starting late and winding up at 10:30. All about a lawyer who for no particular reason calls off a vacation trip to defend the charming leading lady's stage husband, with the expected romantic complications that Robert Ames (who is featured) falls in love with Ann Forrest.

Requires no particular sosphistication to conclude that the two leads must clinch for the final curtain. This, the author, Warren F. Lawrence, who also staged the works, accomplishes by pinning a past misdeameanor on the husband whom the hero-attorney, meantime, has gotten off on a murder charge.

Production cost a minimum to mount, requiring a couple of modest interiors and set pieces to suffice for the intermediary scenes.

Second Productions, Inc., is the holding corporation of which F. W. Lawrence (probably the author's initials reversed) is general manager, suggesting an authorship-management interest.

A capable cast struggles with an ineffectual assignment. The leads, Seth Arnold as the dryly humorous medico, and the supporting minor characters all do well with their sides.

The script was against them from the start, as was the audience, which grasped everything there was to it after the basic seed had been planted.

THE SILENT HOUSE

Benson	Charles McNaughton
Ho-Fang	Clarke Silvernail
Mateo	James MacDonald
T'Mala	Helen Chandler
Mary Charity	Gerald Oliver Smith
George Winsford	Allan Dinehart
Dr. Chan-Fu	Howard Lang
Ki Wang	Bryan Lynch
Jacob Herrington	Wyrley Birch
Senor Leon Feroda	Luis Alberni

Shades of A. H. Woods in the early days and his "Chinatown Charlie," also "Queen of the Opium Den" and other very meller mellers. "The Silent House" is one of those things and how, and it's well done. Production perhaps not so forte in spots, but settings okay and acting good, of its kind.

This looks like a money show for there is a public for this type of thriller, as proven by the mystery play successes of the past 10 years.

Thursday night, the third evening of the play, the Morosco was sold out. Takings doubled the figure of the second night. The performance was overtime because of a late start and intermission waits were strung out. A few in the house got restless and started walking, as they always will when a drama goes beyond 11. But they liked the show.

"The Silent House" is not a mystery play but has mystery play elements. Melodrama is the right term. Comedy is extremely weak.

Some worn cracks were inserted in the original English script (the play has been running for nearly a year in London), but they didn't seem effective. The sharp comedy of "The Bat" was a big element in sending it across for a smash. So "House" cannot expect to repeat the success of that play. The curtain line, "gentlemen prefer bonds," got some chuckles and will probably stay in.

There is considerable of Chinese mysticism. A dead man falls from a cubby hole clutching the missing bonds, about which the play is built. A button causes shots to ring out from over the mantle piece. A lethal gas chamber is shown in action and the house perfumed with ammonia scent, by the way. Knives are thrown and one lands in the hero's back. Green lights, pistol shots, treachery, a girl under hypnotic influence and one or two other murders all go to work the more gentle viewers into a series of squeals.

George Winsford is bequeathed his uncle's house and fortune. A fortune in bonds is hidden in the house. The quest for them involves not only Winsford but others, principally Dr. Chan-Fu, a Chinese physician who claims the fortune had been filched from his people. The will ordered that two servants be retained, Benson the butler, and Ho-Fang, a Chinese valet. It is Ho-Fang who breaks through the roof and saves his new master and the girl from the lethal gas. It is he who outwits the scheming, cruel doctor.

First act is a bit slow, because explanatory. Thereafter the show proceeds with a plenitude of thrills. Many a girl clutched the arm of her escort and many arms were pinched black and blue; same cause. Outside of the waits Doc Hunt did a good directional job. Cast holds more than one clever player. Howard Lang as the villainous Chink doctor, did a corking job of his characterization. Clarke Silvernail, as the silent, Clever Chink in the silent house, stood out brighter than all the other lights in the show and outside under the canopy. Allan Dinehart was likable in the role of young Winsford, although with no heavy stuff on his sides. Charles McNaughton was Benson the butler an amusing character, that of an ex-boxer, famous because he was the only man beaten by Joe Beckett. Helen Chandler, the only girl in the show, was just as sweet as she could be, while Gerald Oliver Smith had a "silly ass" part and had a good time with it. Luis Alberni was present as an excitable foreigner, in on the plot.

"Silent House" should go through the balance of the season, and it may stay longer. Ibee.

SUNNY DAYS

Three-act musical presented and produced by Hassard Short, featuring Frank McIntyre, Jeanette MacDonald, Lynne Overman, Billy B. Van and Sammy Randall. Adapted from the French of Hennequin and Veber. Music by Jean Schwartz; dances by Ralph Reader; book and lyrics by Clifford Grey and W. C. Duncan; additional numbers by Eleanor Dunsmuir; settings credited to Watson Barratt. At the Imperial, opening Feb. 8. $5.50 top.

Nanine	Marjorie Finley
Babette	Peggy Cornell
Georgette	Evangeline Raleigh
Lulu	Maxine Carson
Robert	Sid Hawkins
Angele LaRue	Rosalie Claire
Rudolph Max	Billy B. Van
Ginette Bertin	Jeanette MacDonald
Mario Vano	Lynne Overman
Leon Dorsay	Frank McIntyre
Paul Morel	Carl Randall
Premier Dancer	Charlotte Ayres
Madame Dorsay	Audrey Maple

Good-looking show, beautifully lighted, with beauty skin deep. Doesn't look as though "Sunny Days" will cause any disturbance one way or the other. Among those musicals which run along and peter out quietly within 12 weeks.

Faults are in the book, dialog and music. Production can't stand off those charges. First act has reams and reams of dialog. If it hasn't, it seems that way—just as bad. Musically there's a number that's almost note for note on "Sweet and Lowdown," and the first night mob exited kiddingly humming "Varsity Drag," in reference to another tune. So the cast is practically handcuffed. Competent people with inefficient material; outside of Carl Randall, who flashes a great dance routine in conjunction with Peggy Cornell for the high spot of the evening. Neither are Ralph Reader's dance formations to be scoffed at. Some neat stuff by the 16 mediums and eight boys. This helps, but not enough.

A break for Jeanette MacDonald who sweeps down at the finale in one of those Hassard Short bridal outfits. Nice ingenue, Miss MacDonald, looking well, of good voice and dancing competently enough upon demand. Overshadowed, perhaps, by Rosalie Claire, from vaudeville, due to a more dynamic personality and the femme comedy lines. Works like Winnie Lightner.

Lynne Overman, as a song and dance juvenile, is a problem. Good looking boy whom the women like but with the male jury still out. Yet surprisingly meeting his responsibilities. Quiet delivery, engaging personality and able to handle comedy that's missing in this script.

Frank McIntyre—always reliable and standard. Proving it again and better than this role permits him to be. Billy B. Van just in and out but gets his chance late doing a quick "stew" effectively for which McIntyre straights.

Randall's part is nothing. Not so his dancing. New wrinkles dot his routines. Charlotte Ayres adagios with him for approval and Audrey Maple's stately appearance is an asset.

Four specialty girls lead the chorus—Marjorie Finley, Peggy Cornell, Evangeline Raleigh and Maxine Carson, with Miss Cornell prominent because of her hookup with Randall. Hard workers, this foursome, who energetically pace the mob through trying schedules. Eight of the show type round out the chorus, a total of 32.

Book concerns a banker (Mr McIntyre), who likes the girls and quietly finances a florist shop, using the name of his conservative cashier (Mr. Van). A mixup between the financier, Ginette, of the shop, and a young author (Mr. Overman) in love with the girl, eventually frames Ginette into being adopted by the banker's wife under the supposition the girl is her husband's daughter by his first marriage. Complications push the blame on the cashier when it becomes known the girl has been seeing Paris platonically but at high speed, squaring the banker, and she then weds the author, who has planted everything to see if it will hold up a plot for his novel.

Show has various degrees of speed, picking up smartly on the dancing, but completely becalmed every so often by uninteresting dialog. This becomes better as it grows late. Script needs touching up, especially the first act, and a couple of melodies that would at least demand an ear without causing recollections.

Short has achieved some impressive lighting effects, costuming is excellent and from a sight angle "Sunny Days" is probably as pleasing to the eye as anything in town. But its unholy three, book, dialog and music, is the bad news. Sid.

PLAYS OUT OF TOWN

PLEASE STAND BY

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 9.

"Please Stand By," a drama by Roger Huntington, Jr., at Parson's theatre, Hartford, Conn., Feb. 9, 1928.

Thomas Trumbull Gage, Jr. ..... Arthur Campbell
Jane; Ridgeway ..... Ethel Taylor
Henry Warder ..... Raymond Bramley
Elizabeth Morgan ..... Molly Hicks
Mrs. Gage ..... Harriet Ross
Peter Reilly ..... Joseph Crehan
James Egan ..... Carlo DeAngelo
Mollie, his wife ..... Gladis Moore

Fletcher ..... William Sellery
Sergt. Crockett Stafford ..... Cherry Campbell
Trooper Smith ..... Andrew Talley

Roger Huntington, Jr., whose name is not familiar as a playwright, had a new play produced at Parsons Feb. 9.

The scene is layed in the Adirondacks; a comfortable lodge in the wilderness with a really nice mother, an unfortunately unstable son, one good girl in love with the boy and a bad one engaged to him; and for guests a couple of bootleggers of the prosperous sort, one of whom doesn't drink. Add to this a faithful butler who "confesses" a killing before he has taken the precaution to find out who is dead; a chauffeur who has "done time," and his wife who is a graduate of Blackwell's Island. The richer of the two bootleggers needs the unstable boy's girl to boost his own social and political career, and accordingly the tendencies toward drink on the part of the boy are unduly encouraged. Then rich bootlegger is murdered and a youthful sergeant of state police nabs the son as the easiest suspect.

After this the play is up to the temperate bootlegger and the loving girl, and at the end of the last act they have managed to clear the unfortunate boy of both the murder charge and the undesirable fiancee. But the police do not get the real murderer. His faithful wife regrets her rashness in giving him away and kindly puts out the lights while the chauffer lights out. Tableau of disappointed sergeants, successful lady of Blackwell's, bad fiancee defeated and good girl winning the affections of rehabilitated hero!

The new play sadly needs speeding up. This doesn't mean that good and effective scenes of leisurely action need to be rushed, but that the whole pace of the thing needs attention.

Arthur Campbell's unfortunate hero isn't quite a real character yet, but Raymond Bramley's cold villian has a consistent value. Joseph Crehan has a role that ought to be built up; he plays honestly and well and shows the possibilities of the character. Ethel Taylor's good girl comes out well in the third act.

The radio of the piece acted naturally if not satisfactorily. It made a lot of bad noise and didn't have anything to do with the case except to give the play its name, "Please Stand By."

BACHELOR FATHER

Atlantic City, Feb. 14.

It's in the bag. Belasco has done it again. No matter how you look at it, "The Bachelor Father" looks sure to click. A great comedy had its premiere last evening at the Apollo to a capacity audience.

"The Bachelor Father" starts off with a laugh, proceeds in an hilarious manner and winds up with a roar. The story's there. Has a great cast to back it up. Done in the typical Belasco style.

The action deals with Sir Basil Winterton, wealthy English baronet who, in his many journeys around the globe, has acquired numerous mistresses, several of whom have offspring that he has never seen and yet supported for many years. In search of a new experience, and at the suggestion of his physician, he commissions his lawyer, John Ashley, to travel to the far corners of the earth and gather together his three children.

Ashley, in pursuance of his orders, journeys to Italy, America and England and returns with two daughters and a son by Basil's casual alliances, Antoinette (Tony), Maria and Geoffrey. Winterton, who had heretofore detested children and was lord of all he surveyed, found conditions entirely changed after their advent. He becomes a proud and loving father, proud because of the youngsters' accomplishments and loving because of their irresistible characters for all of which he takes the credit as their father.

The love interest had not been overlooked as Maria and Geoffrey, from a deep attachment on sight, a feeling that they consider merely a sisterly and brotherly one until subsequent events prove that Geoffrey is not really Basil's son, but one who had been palmed off as such on the baronet for financial reasons.

This Geoffrey learns after Maria, the daughter of a famous Italian prima donna, leaves the now merry household to fill her first engagement with a celebrated opera company in Florence. Geoffrey follows to make the future star his wife.

The outstanding role was enacted by June Walker as "Tony" Flagg. She ran away with the show and scored a tremendous personal triumph. As a product of New York's East Side, she possessed all the typical American bluntness of speech and insisted upon calling a spade a spade. The choice comedy bit fell to her share.

Next honors go to C. Aubrey Smith, the English baronet. His portrayal of this part won him well deserved applause. The role of John Ashley, the lawyer, was finely played by Geoffrey Kerr. Special commendation is also given to Rex O'Malley as Geoffrey, and Adriana Dori as Maria, with the surrounding cast a thoroughly competent one.

FUNNY LITTLE THING

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.

A three-act comedy-drama in two scenes by Agnes Christine Johnston presented by the Morosco Theatre Company. Staged by Augustin Glassmire at the Morosco, Los Angeles, Feb. 7. $1.25 top.

F. Clifford Sharp ..... Mitchell Harris
Anders Burr ..... Harry Garrity
Connie ..... Bernice Foley
Abraham Levy ..... Wm. H. Strauss
Jerry ..... James Bush
Smith ..... Kay Hammond
Guen Dawes ..... Margit Quinn
Harry Dean ..... Gayne Whitman
Officer ..... Fred Pymm

Agnes Christine Johnston, the author, is a scenario writer for M-G-M. She has been doing stuff for the silver sheet for a long time. Lot of it has been very good, too. Miss Johnston tried her hand at a play a few years ago. It was produced at the Majestic and went with the landslide. Looks as though this one will do the same. It will never reach Broadway is one sure thing. It did show possibilities for stock in the first act, but as it went along, it weakened, with second act lacking in significance and strength, and with the third act just one of those formula affairs with the author struggling along to find some nice way of bringing hero and heroine to a fitting climax.

The story concerns a girl of an ingenuous mind being made a chump of by her employers and always figured as an emotionless machine. A man busts into her apartment with gun. She talks him down and finds that he is a society guy who was on the bum and had been attracted by the aroma of doughnuts. Cop and other enter and she pretends she married the guy to save him. Next day she brings him to office and gets him job. A Jewish merchant comes in to give her an order, she turns him over to the man, whom she wants to make good. He sells the customer and, of course, becomes sales manager.

An efficiency nut who figures everything must be done on schedule is introduced. They then bring in a dizzy gold digging blonde who vamps the office. The heroine gets sore and quits. When she walks out the joint goes into bankruptcy. The heroine, of course, returns in nick of time. The Jewish merchant, it develops, has bought the business, makes her his partner and she keeps all the help, but the efficiency guy and the dizzy blonde.

The lines and situations smack of a most retentive memory so far as smart crackling screen titles are concerned. Ralph Spence, Joe Farnham, George Marion, Jr., Jack Conway and Al Boasberg, might find themselves at home were they to sit through this play.

Kay Hammond as "Smith," the point of motivation, is the entire works, it is due to her deft handling of artistry that the play does not keel over in the first few moments. This girl is a real trouper and pulls it from the fire every now and then. Gayne Whitman playing opposite has just an unsuitable part, unworthy of his talents. Wm. H. Strauss struggles through in the role of Levy and has a hard time of it. Miss Quivey is a nifty little blonde to look at and just the type that Anita Loos wrote about. Augustin Glassmire did a remarkably good job in staging this opus.

SCARLET WOMAN

San Francisco, Feb. 7.

L. C. Wiswell presents Pauline Frederick in a new comedy in three acts by Zelda Sears and Reita Lambert. Staged by A. Leslie Pierce. Presented at the Geary (formerly Lurie), San Francisco, Feb. 6.

Mrs. Doty ..... Frankie Rasmuni
Henry Duncan ..... Maurice Foster
Adam Doty ..... Henry Hall
Rex Buckingham ..... Henry Adams

It looks like Lou Wiswell, for many years associated with the late Henry Savage in the East, now located on the coast, has come through with his second hit of the season.

In "The Scarlet Woman" Wiswell has provided Pauline Frederick with a stage comedy that should rank high. As portrayed here last night at the Geary, "The Scarlet Woman" gave every indication of catching on with a bang. It is snappy, subtle comedy, at times a little broad, and yet with enough drama.

The title is a mis-nomer in that it is not a story of a wanton woman, excepting as she is viewed by the gossips of the neighborhood, and her own share in helping along this belief, in her desire for some of the attention she was denied when she was "only her father's daughter." Miss Frederick makes of the part a woman one cannot but love and admire.

The trouble starts when Agatha returns to the little town in the Berkshires after a year's absence in New York following her father's death, and brings with her an adopted child—aged three months. A real baby is being used in this part, the cutest, cunningest of babies who instantly won her way to the hearts of the opening night audience.

Agatha comes home with "her baby." To make matters worse she stubbornly refuses to explain when her supposed friends start gossiping. There is a coterie of well-meaning but meddlesome neighbor ladies, their susceptible husbands, a couple of youngsters, who believe in Agatha's guilt, but want to help her, and the professor of a nearby college, who has come to write the biography of the girl's father, but who remains to fall in love. Matters finally reach a crisis for Agatha when the boy, Felix, warns her the women have determined to take the baby from her and place it in an orphanage. At about the same moment the professor proposes, telling Agatha the story about her is ridiculous, but when she asks him if he would marry her, even if the story about the child's parentage, as circulated in the neighborhood, were true, he is unable at first to decide, but eventually love wins.

Norman Peck, in the role of the young druggist, who is always inquiring about the baby, which directs suspicion against him as its possible father, covers himself with honors.

Another outstanding part is that of Hattie, Agatha's housekeeper, portrayed by Lillian Elliott, and handled flawlessly. Hope Drown as the sophisticated flapper of the present day, with her own ideas of Trend, love and sex, is amusing.

"The Scarlet Woman" may safely be rated as "over." It clicks and should continue to click at the Geary. Miss Frederick is at her best. Edwards.

12 CHI PADLOCKS AND NOW IT'S TOO LATE

Nite Club Owners Wouldn't Organize When Asked—At Present They Can't

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Twelve of Chicago's largest night clubs and cafes are facing padlocks as a result of a recent federal raid. On two occasions Chicago cabaret owners had opportunities to organize for mutual protection and failed to avail themselves of the opportunity.

Organization for general protection was first agitated by Mike Fritzel of the Friar's Inn, Bill Rothstein of the Moulin-Rouge and Al Tierney of Tierney's Town club. These three men pursued an active organization campaign and endeavored to convince fellow operators that the only way to forestall permanent padlocks was through organization.

Fritzel, Rothstein and Tierney's activities along this line followed a similar raid to that just recently pulled. This first wholesale raid was accomplished by federal agents over a year ago. The three cafes operated by the trio were padlocked shortly after the raid and have remained so ever since.

A few months ago, Fred Mann, owner of the Rainbo Gardens, Chicago's largest night club, attempted to bring the café men together again. Mann pointed out that the strength of union would be most desirable in the event that further

L. A. NITE LIFE SHOT

Plantation Only Open Week-Ends—Everything Flopping

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Night life in Los Angeles, Hollywood and nearby points continues to be the bunk. The Plantation, in Culver City, which has been holding out for a long time, is feeling it to such extent at present that it is only staying open on Saturdays and Sundays. It formerly operated every night in the week.

The racket is shot. Biz is a flop everywhere with the surviving places zigzagging in and out all the time. Every once in while a new joint pops in on the quiet, but soon bows out.

Cabaret Singer Led Choir, Became Pastor, Arrested

Davenport, Ia., Feb. 14.

Rollo Rilling, choir leader, pastor until a jam in this occupation made him bond expert in a local bank, is under arrest in El Paso, Tex., and his "love-interest" disrupted since federal agents arrested him on complaint of the bonding company which was the pastor-tenor's surety during the time he was a bank employe. One of the technical charges against him is embezzlement.

Rilling was once a member of the International Kiwanis quartet. In El Paso and New Orleans, too, he was known as L. H. Farwell. He sang for a time in cabarets in those cities.

Bonding company got after him when it had to make good on a $500 municipal bond which disappeared while in Rollo's custody. Rilling abandoned his wife and family here, leaving them almost destitute in the locally ritzy McClellan Heights district.

County Fathers Slap Lid On Rural Dance Halls

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 14.

Tales of necking parties, drinking, wild nights, etc., as a result of rural dance halls, have led the Winnebago county fathers to clamp the lid down tight on these amusement places.

A year ago the legislature placed the supervision of rural dance halls under authority of the county boards of supervisors, providing that permits must be issued by the board for every such place. Several operated in this county, but when two promoters sought to establish a new one at Cherry Valley this month the board closed its doors to the public and told one another about the countryside gossip.

By a vote of 31 to 5 it repected the Cherry Valley license, and announced that no renewals would be issued this spring.

Tent's Receivers

St. Louis, Feb. 14.

More winds of woe are blowing against the Tent, St. Louis's only downtown night club. An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the club in the Federal Court. Suit is directed against the Arabian Club, Inc., by the Goddard Grocery Co., with a claim of $335.20; the Dennison-Loepker Electric Co., claims $1,499.34, and the St. Louis Costume Co. has a claim of $276.20.

Two receivers, Theodore J. Evers and Robert Olsen, were appointed by Circuit Judge Evers.

In court proceedings the creditors charge that the Tent management recently paid $25 to a linen service company, making that company a preferred creditor and thus committing an act of bankruptcy.

To prove that an exclusive nite club can be put over successfully, the Embassy Club, East 57th street, which John W. Rumsey is operating on behalf of a committee of social lights, now totals 3,000 members at $100 per annual membership. With this $300,000 intake annually the place is virtually under-written as a sure-fire success.

The improved financial status is also the result of a happy compromise on social register requirements. Without cheapening the place, the policy has been made a bit more liberal, chiefly the result of a mixed committee of society people and celebrities from the stage and the arts. Heretofore, the committee consisted chiefly of society people exclusively and petty jealousies and differences interfered with the extension of the membership.

The same complaint that the society mob are no spendthrifts still goes. With the membership fee covering their couverts, there is a $2.50 charge only for members' guests, whatever is spent is only on food and waters, and that doesn't come to much.

Davenport, Ia., Feb. 14.

A world's marathon dancing record was set last week when Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Williams, Moline, Ill., shuffled their feet for 52 hours and 53 minutes in the Coliseum here.

Beside swollen feet and cramped muscles they got $100, the lure for 50 couples who started out at 10 o'clock Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Richards, runners-up in the event, got 46½ hours of exercise and nothing else. The towners paid two-bits a head to gaze and gag.

Dance Hall Bombing

Detroit, Feb. 14.

Following the bombing last week of the dance hall at 13-Mile and Rochester roads, Royal Oak, C. J. Caster, proprietor, informed police he has had trouble with musicians over the employment of non-union men. This and other theories are being investigated.

The explosion came at three a. m., with no one in the building. Damage estimated at $10,000.

Undress Dance Number

Reports of Bill Duffy, of the Silver Slipper and Frivolity, buying in on the Casa Lopez and operating the room with Vincent Lopez, are not so. The deal grew cold and Gene Geiger continues as Lopez's business manager.

Anatole Friedland's Revue and Roseray and Capella, Continental dancers, open at the Casa next week. The dancers were imported by the Shuberts for a production. They have an undress dance number rated sensational.

ETHEL NORRIS' DIVORCE

As Cal and Ethel Norris, the team was a cafe standard, Miss Norris going it alone in the nite clubs the past two seasons until landing in production.

THEATRE MEN'S ROAD HOUSE

Chicago, Feb. 14.

A. G. Spencer and Jack Miller, theatre operators, are to open a new roadhouse in the old Grand Opera House building at Sterling, Ill.

It will be operated strictly on a dine and dance basis and is to be dubbed "The Tent."

HERE AND THERE

Tommy Weir, tenor, of Rochester, N. Y., is in New York recording for Edison, Columbia and Victor. Wier, formerly with Al Fields and Primrose, has been featured over WHN, WOR and Rochester stations the last year.

Bill Stewart and band have signed for next summer with the John Robinson circus.

John W. (Dad) Ellison and musical trio are in St. John's, Newfoundland, for an indefinite engagement. The Ellison outfit may go to South America from N. S.

Halsey Mohr has joined the professional department of Remick's.

WAITER PLEADS GUILTY

Attempted to Extort Protection Money from Woman

Emil Poulet, 35, waiter, of 1755 Maiham avenue, pleaded guilty to attempted extortion in General Sessions and was remanded to the Tombs for sentence today.

According to Antoinette Bailly and Mme. Madelaine Beakhurst, proprietors of the Comme Chez Moi restaurant, at 14 West 52d street, Poulet demanded $1,000 from them when he called at their place on Jan. 23. Poulet threatened to inform the police and Federal agents that the women had been violating the liquor law. He promised to protect them from interference by the police and federal agents for six months provided they came across with the $1,000. They informed him they did not have the money in cash, but asked him to call the next day. When he did detectives were present to arrest him.

Minneapolis Nite Club Hideaways Cause Storm

Minneapolis, Feb. 14.

At a joint hearing of the city council license and health and hospital committees on complaints lodged against "The Stables," a local night club, the aldermen served notice on all cabarets that the law prohibiting public dancing here after 12:01 a. m., will be vigorously enforced.

"The Stables" is a former livery barn turned into a night club. On its third floor it has a large number of stalls which are used for private booths. Alderman John Swanson of the license committee disapproved of these booths. The council, however, refused to order their removal.

Police Chief F. W. Brunskill said that the only complaints received by him against the place concerned music and noise after midnight. The management declared that patrons were permitted to bring their own ukeles and other instruments and to play them and sing after 12 o'clock, but that the regular orchestra music ceased.

AM. BAND IN BIARRITZ

Edmund Sayag, manager of the Ambassadeurs, Paris, in America recently to sign a show for this summer, will sponsor a Club Commanders in Biarritz the tag end of the summer. This proffer is conditional, depending on the success of the new Irene Bordoni "Paris" musical, in which Irving Aaronson and his Commanders are featured.

This was the reason Aaronson couldn't return for the third straight season to the Ambassadeurs, being signed with the musical which opened Monday at the Adelphi, Philadelphia, for a four-week run.

Waring's Pennsylvanians are signed for the Ambassadeurs for eight weeks.

Jury Sentences Glasser To 10 Yrs. Within an Hour

Chicago, Feb. 14.

Joseph G. Glasser, well known loop hound, formerly owner of the Sunset Cafe, a black and tan rendezvous, was sentenced to 10 years at Joliet by a jury in Judge Miller's court.

Glasser was convicted of a serious charge after a legal battle lasting over a year. A motion for a new trial was heard. Assistant State's Attorney Dougherty, who prosecuted Glasser, has announced that he will insist on definite disposition of the new trial motion on Feb. 18. It took the jury less than one hour to hand down its verdict.

I will go fifty-fifty in royalties with any composer who can write a popular melody to the following verses, that will make the song an overnight sensation.

For a Rube Song Hit
"In a Little Cozy Corner"
Words by Fred E. Merling

I am heading for the city,
Where the lights are all aglow,
There is where I want to linger
With the dearest girl I know.
When the moon is high above you,
When the azure sky is clear,
I vow to the stars I love you,
I'm so fond of you, my dear.

CHORUS

In a little cozy corner,
There beneath the grand old sign,
I'll be happy then with you, dear,
I'll hold your hand in mine.
Then I want to hear you whisper,
Now be good and I'll be true.
In a little cozy corner,
I'll be contented, dear, with you.

Now I have so much to tell you,
How I like to see you smile.
Then the songs I've heard you singing,
Make me happy all the while.
You are just the girl I fancy,
And I like your winning ways.
You have won my heart, my dearie,
I'll love you all my days.

DESYLVA, BROWN & HENDERSON'S FIRST YEAR FINDS REMARKABLE RECORD

Actually Among Publishing Big Four in 10 Months—Started with $50,000—Never Invested Over $18,000—Ill Wind Blew "Souvenirs" Into No. 1 Song of Country—Founded by Four Boys from 37 to 30—Anniversary Dinner Tonight

Celebrating its first business anniversary tonight (Feb. 15), with an invite dinner and entertainment at Janssen's midtown Hofbrau, the youngest and one of the most successful music publishing firms, De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, Robert Crawford president, marks its first milestone with a record of business acumen and progress that will go down in the annals of the music business.

Proving that despite all the hue and cry of business depression and tin pan alley pessimism, there is still a vast market for worth-while songs, DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, within a period of one year—actually 10 months concluding with 1927—took their place among the Big Four of the music publishing industry.

Got Over on $18,000

There are several unusual things that punctuate the history so far of the firm. Starting with $50,000 cash as a bankroll, and another $50,000 available for "call money," Crawford at no time permitted his bank balance to drop under $32,000. In other words, Crawford put over his firm with an $18,000 investment, starting with an organization of 35 people, which was not increased for two months, until now the payroll staff of the firm numbers 107 people.

In this first year, De Sylva, Brown & Henderson has produced what is now among the leading song sellers of the country, "Among My Souvenirs," according to jobber report. "Souvenirs" had totaled up through a week ago 605,000 copies.

Capitalizing an Ill Wind

The publishing firm first issued a song, "Together," written by B. G. (Bud) DeSylva, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson, scheduled in place of "Souvenirs" as the firm's plug number. It followed after Irving Berlin, Inc., had gotten through exploiting Berlin's "Together, We Two," both playing lyrically on "Together."

Crawford, formerly sales manager with Berlin, Inc., as a courtesy, advised Berlin's that either one or the other hold back its song. Berlin, Inc., issued "Together, We Two" first, and in this wise Crawford was forced to plug "Souvenirs" which ordinarily would have been held back. Ironically enough, because of this quirk of circumstances, "Souvenirs" not only asserted itself sensationally but swamped Berlin's "The Song Is Ended, But the Melody Lingers On," a song that is not the hit it might have been were it not for the similar-themed and better seller "Among My Souvenirs."

Sellers

Since songs are the keynote of the music business, a resume of De Sylva, Brown & Henderson's catalog speaks for itself. "It All Depends On You" was a 590,000 copy hit. Anything over 400,000 in these days of 25 and 35 cent music is sensational. Then "Broken-Hearted," still selling and grossing to date 580,000 copies and estimated to hit 600,000. "So Blue" sold 300,000 copies; "Tin Pan Parade," "Without You Sweetheart," "Baby Feet Go Pitter Patter" and "Together" are other outstanders.

To top that, "Good News," the Schwab & Mandel production in which Bobby Crawford is personally interested for a sizable "bit," has produced the unprecedented record of five big selling songs, "Varsity Drag," "Good News," "Lucky in Love," and "The Best Things in Life" at 24 cents wholesale have grossed 270,000 copies, with "Varsity Drag" the biggest, but "Best Things in Life" expected to ultimately top it, being the ballad. The fifth is the surprise seller, the waltz, which has created calls for the sheet music.

37 to 30

De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, is comprised of a quartet of young men in their 30's, of which Crawford is the oldest at 37, and Ray Henderson, the tunesmith of the trio, the youngest at 30. Lew Brown and Buddy De Sylva are the lyricists, of which Brown is the "idea" man for novelty and comedy songs, and De Sylva for the straight stuff, a combination that is regarded as well nigh perfect as a songwriting machine.

On the strength of Crawford's quick click, comment and conjecture have been created as anybody or anything else that would match it, with the dopesters baffled by the theorem.

Having removed from the open market the crack trio of writers whose names are lent to the corporate firm, Crawford almost cinched it for himself from the start.

An expert training with other music firms paved the way for a conception of business acumen and shrewd operation that is noteworthy. A 10-20 percent rule for expansion is unique in itself. Thus, of every $10,000 profit, 10 percent of that went for reinvestment in the business, i. e. $1,000 was put right back into the overhead weekly for extra staff, expansion, etc.

Also unique in the history of the music business is that De Sylva, Brown & Henderson did what no other firm has been able to do in the past: operate successfully from the start on its own capital and not borrow.

120 Percent Ahead

As a business proposition, the combination, both as writers and partners, have benefited considerably. The three writers top their income of any previous season by 30 percent each, on straight royalty as staff writers. As partners, the increase was 90 percent again of any previous annual income. In other words, De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, as individuals in their own firm, are 120 percent ahead of any material resources of any year before in their lives.

The organization, besides the four members, includes Elmer White as a professional manager and Dan Winkler, assisting Crawford on the sales end.

Apropos of the affiliation with Harms, Inc., and the Dreyfuss Brothers, it was a tactical move in exchange for a 10 per cent interest to the Harms executives, whereby the songwriting firm reaps the benefit of invaluable foreign publishing arrangements, production affiliations in which field Harms, Inc., is the peer, and many other advantages. Otherwise the firm is its own sole operator.

In productions, De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., besides "Good News," will shortly handle the new White "Scandals," an Aarons & Freedley musical, another Schwab & Mandel production, and an independently sponsored show. Without the Harms alliance this would have been an impossibility heretofore.

Open House

A resume of this nature, unusual for Variety, is printed for its news value because of the unusual and unprecedented rise of a new firm in its first year.

At the banquet tonight Crawford has assembled his entire personnel and their friends and well-wishers for a 7-10 p. m. get-together, after which it will be open house.

Hallett on Bookings

Word Roll Royalties

Statement that American Society suits against Milwaukee companies on royalties for word roll mechanicals is a test action appears to be in error. Shapiro-Bernstein state that the principle of payment for use of lyrics as part of a mechanical roll has been established since 1915, the precedent having been set in the case of F. A. Mills vs. Standard Music Roll Co. of New Jersey.

The Milwaukee matter is merely a formal suit to compel payment of word royalties.

BANDS AND ORCHESTRAS

Routes for Next Week (February 20)

Permanent addresses of bands or orchestras not engaged will be published without charge.

No charge is made for listing in this department, except when name is displayed.

For reference guidance the initials in the Band and Orchestra routes represent the following: H—hotel; T—theatre; P—park; C—cafe; D. H.—dance hall; B—ballroom; R—restaurant.

As far as possible the street addresses in the larger cities are also included to insure definite location.

NEWS FROM THE DAILIES

This department contains rewritten theatrical news items as published during the week in the daily papers of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and London. Variety takes no credit for these news items; each has been rewritten from a daily paper.

NEW YORK

After blowing up the supposed suicide attempt of Roseray, night club dancer, beyond all reason, the tabs turned around the following day and with self righteous indignation exposed the affair as a publicity racket, naming Irving Strouse, Vincent Lopez's trumpeter, as the inspiration. The girl dances at the Casa Lopez. The gag is the publicity worked both ways for the Casa's $2 couvert.

The tabloids, by the way, seem to have gone coocoo on the by-line thing. They deal out the regular daily bunch of mineographed press matter to office rewrite men to dress up, and it is spilled with fancy type layout heads and with 12 point by-lincs. The routine announcement of Edna Leedom's departure from "Lovely Lady" on the ground of illness came out under a by-line in the "News," built up with fancy imaginings of a row in the cast.

Mrs. Dorothy Bernie, wife of Dave Bernie, Ben's brother, awarded divorce, unnamed co-respondent.

Luella Gear, star of "The Optimists" and wife of August Heckscher, millionaire philanthropist, paid reward of $1,250 to a lunch stand owner in Long Island City, who found and returned her lost bracelet.

Federal Attorney Tuttle wants to handle the case of the raid on the Chez Helen Morgan club, and obtained a postponement of the hearing before U. S. Commissioner for that purpose.

The marriage and its subsequent annulment of Mabel Withee and H. L. Sarshik, together with the fact that the actress turned down marriage proposals of an Egyptian prince, were revived when Sarshik was convicted of grand larceny in General Sessions.

John and Herbert Locke, brokers, whose affairs are in the courts in connection with fraud tangle, are said to have given expensive foreign cars, grand pianos and other trinkets to prominent actresses, including Mary Eaton, Peggy Hopkins Joyce and a dozen others.

Zieggy's squawk over Eddie Cantor's sudden closing with the "Follies" got plenty of newsprint discussion.

Geraldine Farrar moved to nonsuit $10,000 action of her former cook, who charges she contracted eye trouble in Geraldine's employ when she used a towel used on the diva's sick poodle.

Anna Cortez, hostess in Greenwich Village night club, dead from gas in her apartment, 22 University place. Police believed it accidental.

Good human interest story in early evening papers about burlesque troup evicted from hotel on Broadway, Williamsburg, Brooklyn, by early morning fire. Recalled the Ward O'Malley stories in "The Sun" about the fires that used to occur regularly in the old Saranac Hotel at Broadway and 42d street.

LOS ANGELES

Bebe Daniels and James Hall, appearing in "50-50" under the direction of Clarence Badger, were injured when pinned under debris of a set knocked off a truck on location by the branch of a tree.

Thomas Golden and Earl Peters, believed by police to be members of a gang of auto thieves, were nabbed by police officer Leo Kelly after they had offered to sell a car belonging to Cyril Chadwick, screen actor.

Syna Oliver, picture extra, was cleared of charges of driving while intoxicated when she appeared for trial before Judge Baird. Her attorney moved for dismissal and the court granted it. Charge followed an accident in which a man was injured.

Following in the footsteps of her sister Vivian, Rosetta Duncan, of the Duncan Sisters,, broke off her engagement to William Beri. Miss Duncan's explanation was that both were too busy with work to think about marriage.

Roy D'Arcy, known off the screen as Roy Guisti, withdrew his divorce complaint against Mrs. Laura Rhinock Duffy Guisti, and consented to have her file action against him instead. Her complaint charges extreme cruelty. Property settlement was agreed upon out of court.

"Jack" Bennett, otherwise Jacob Berman, of the Julian Oil affair, filed suit for $6,000 against Hallam Cooley, picture actor, charging usurious rate on a loan. Bennett says he borrowed from Cooley $20,000 for 22 days and repaid that sum with an additional $2,000 "bonus." Bennett asserts that the two grand was a violation of the California usury law and asks three times the amount in compensation.

Jack Wagner, scenario writer for First National, was sued for divorce by Winifred Wagner, who charges desertion. She asks $100 a week alimony.

George Melford, film director, is defendant in suit filed by Rockcliffe Fellowes, actor, for $4,000. The complaint states Fellowes loaned Melford the money in 1926, receiving a six months' note.

Tom Mix contested the appointment made by the superior court of Albert A. Kidder, attorney, as guardian for his daughter, Ruth. Mix was brought into court by his former wife, Olive Stokes Mix, to raise the ante for his daughter's support. Case comes up for a hearing Feb. 14. Until then Mix agreed to pay his daughter $100 a week.

Olive Borden, who recently left the Fox studios, is going to Europe. She will be accompanied by her mother, who has been ill.

Clarence R. Hennecke, scenario writer, filed action in superior court contesting the interlocutory decree of divorce awarded his wife, Ruth N. Hennecke, granted last July.

Reports from Reno that Renee Adoree was divorced there from Julius G. Dennert, farm hand, caused the actress to ask for the man's arrest. While Reno police were looking for him to ask questions, Dennert, who had circulated the statement about Miss Adoree, made a hurried exit out of town after marrying a California girl immediately after his divorce.

In the meantime, it was learned that the woman whom Dennert really divorced was working in Los Angeles.

Irene Presnaikoff, known on the screen as Irene Preston, was before Judge Beecher's court seeking overdue alimony from Ygor Presniakoff, actor. Court ordered him to pay $15 a week. Couple got into marital difficulties some time ago when Mrs. Presnaikoff took a shot at her husband.

Renee Adoree was named in a dispatch from Reno, Nev., as the woman whom Julius G. Dennert, former farm hand, had divorced there. While Dennert was reported to have made that statement, also substantiated by his attorney, William McNight, Miss Adoree, in Los Angeles, denied knowing the man or ever having married him.

The actress was married once to Tom Moore, from whom she was divorced several years ago.

Mickey Daniels, kid star of "Our Gang Comedies," is back in Hollywood after a six months' tour in vaudeville. He will remain on the coast doing picture work until next year. Then another vaudeville jaunt.

After selling a house to George K. Arthur, film actor, Pierce W. Van Doren, contractor, was ordered by Judge Fletcher Bowron to turn over proceeds of the sale to his estranged wife. Latter brought Doren into court on contempt charges for failure to support.

Hollywood police have reopened investigation into the death of Helen St. Clair, film actress, whom a coroner's jury found a suicide last April. Police are acting on information given them by the girl's father, Albert T. Daniels, New York shopkeeper, who is now here.

Voncell Viking, the gal that started out from New York four months ago on horseback for a coast-to-coast trip, arrived here after making the jaunt in 120 days. She plans to make a try for the klieg lights with Ted Wells, picture actor.

LONDON

London, Feb. 7.

Congreve's witty comedy, "The Way of the World," originally put on at Wyndham's for a six weeks' revival, closed Feb. 4 after six months' run. It will be followed by "Listeners," a new play by Reginald Berkeley (author of "The White Chateau"), and the chief players will be Nicholas Hannen, Maisie Darrell and the author.

"Yellow Sands," Eden Phillpott's comedy, closes at the Haymarket Feb. 25 after 16 months' run. It was the only play that ran completely through 1927. It will be succeeded by a new detective play by A. A. Milne, produced by Nicholas Hannen. The cast includes Norah Swinburne, Jack Hobbs, Spencer Trevor.

An innovation is promised for London theatreland in the form of a scheme to do away entirely with painted scenery, plain backcloths being substituted. Varying scenes will be projected from a machine which, it is claimed, will be undistinguishable from the old style scenery.

Sir Gerald du Maurier will present his new vehicle at the St. James' theatre Feb. 11, a three-act by Walter Ellis called "S. O. S." The supporting cast will consist of Gracie Fields (recruited from touring revue), Betty Stockfield, Grace Wilson, Griffith Humphreys, Ernest Mainwaring, Herbert Waring, George Curzon, A. Harding Steerman, Herbart Marshall.

The new London theatre, to be called the Dominion, which will be erected shortly on the old Meux Brewery site in Oxford street, will be the largest modern theatre in the country, with a seating capacity of 2,600. Big musical plays will be staged there. The prices will be cheaper than the prevailing West End ones, with 1,200 stalls at eight shillings and sixpence, instead of the 12 and 15 shillings.

A new play of strong sex appeal, written by an English government official in Rangoon under the name of Somers Quesst, is to be staged shortly by Thomas Warner, former stage director for Sybil Thorndike, and now going into management. Title is "Gossip," and the action takes place in India. Olga Lindo will be the star.

C. B. Cochran's Revue of 1928 opens Manchester Feb. 27 for three weeks, the only out-of-town date prior to its London appearance, which is scheduled for March 22 at the London Pavilion. Billy Shaw, American, has been added to the cast.

At the end of the Macdona Players' season of Shaw at the Little B. A. Meyer will present "The Man with the Red Hair," an adaptation by Ben Levy of Hugh Walpole's latest novel. Theodor Komisarjevsky will produce.

Detroit, Feb. 14.

George W. Dickinson, secretary-manager Michigan State Fair under the past administration, will receive one month's back salary and $2,000 expenses, according to an order issued by the State Administrative board at Lansing.

Shortly after his term expired, Dickinson was sued by the present administration for an accounting of property, and money due him was held up. Records of the office were missing and have never been found, but Dickinson produced duplicates to clear himself.

The court order recommending payment to Dickinson also rewards his secretary.

Big Top Openings

Peru, Ind., Feb. 14.

Zack Terrell, manager of Sells-Floto shows, announced circus will start season at Chicago April 11 to 29. The show will come to Peru April 30, and the next day in Indiapolis.

Hagenbeck-Wallace shows will be managed by Daniel Odum and Sam Dill. The show will open at Cleveland April 14. The Robinson show will open April 27, but the place has not been determined.

Hot Meat Stand Licenses

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 14.

Barbecue owners with shacks on every main road are combining to fight licensing, following a meeting of township trustees in the county here, which went on record as favoring the licensing of the barbecue stands.

The attorney for the "rib resorts" states the shacks do not have to be licensed unless the law is stretched to mean that a barbecue is classed as an amusement resort.

CIRCUS OPENINGS

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.

Slayman Ali and his troupe of 12 acrobats have been booked for the Hagenback-Wallace Circus opening at the Auditorium, Cleveland, April 14.

Sells-Floto Circus will open at the Coliseum, Chicago, on the same date.

PARK OPERATORS FAIL

Danville, Ill., Feb. 14.

Carmichael & McMahon, operators of an amusement park four miles east of Charleston, have filed petition in bankruptcy in the Federal court, listing $21,248.93 liabilities and $1,500 assets. Harry A. Carmichael and Con J. McMahon also filed individual petitions in bankruptcy, the former listing liabilities of $17,077.16 and assets of $5,650, and the latter scheduling $14,337.22 liabilities and $107 assets.

Club Manger, New York, has changed its name to Varsity Club because of a suit started Jan. 16 by Louis Manger of the Manger Hotel. It sought to restrain Clint Judge, cafe man, from unauthorized use of the name.

OBITUARY

ERNIE WILLIAMS

Ernie Williams, 52, for 20 years a booker and reviewer of acts for the Marcus Loew Circuit, died Feb. 14 at the family home, 255 Fort Washington avenue, New York, of heart trouble.

For the past week his condition was acute. His health began to fail two years ago.

Ernie Williams was one of the veterans around the Loew offices, he and Irving Weingart becoming associated there about the same time. Through his illness Mr. Weingart was always at his bedside and with him just before he died.

Mr. Williams prior to joining Loew's was a trouper, his early amusement connections having been with a circus.

It was Mr. Williams who originated the tryouts for Loew some years ago when they were a big drawing card at the National, New York, and the Columbia, Brooklyn. On those eventful nights many unknowns appeared and later became headliners or stars.

Ernie was born at Tom's River, N. J., but most of his life was spent in New York.

About 17 years ago he married Grace Nelson, then prominent in musical comedy roles and who later did a single act in vaude. To that union a daughter was born 15 years ago. Mrs. Williams and the daughter survive.

The funeral will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow (Thursday) from the Richard R. Coughlin Funeral Parlors, 40 West 58th street, New York.

Interment in Woodlawn cemetery.

ADELE ARAMS
(Mrs. A. H. Palmer)

Mrs. A. H. Palmer, 54, of the Pasadena Community Playhouse, known on the stage a decade ago as Adele Arams, died Feb. 13, after several months of illness resulting from heart disease, at her home in Pasadena.

Deceased had been identified with the Little Theatre movement since its inception and, until 13 years ago, was on the stage, making her last professional appearance in "The Perfect Lady." She has appeared in 50 plays at the Community Playhouse and was former president of the Drama League of Pasadena.

Mrs. Palmer's husband, A. H. Palmer, survives.

GLADYS FFOLLIOTT

Gladys Ffolliott, veteran actress, died in a London nursisng home Feb. 1, aged about 70. Six weeks ago she fell and fractured her thigh in the frosty spell, and never recovered from the after-effects. Deceased was a versatile actress of much experience, having been 50 years on the stage and played in all phases of entertainment from circus to drama.

She appeared with Nellie Farren in "Very Little Hamlet," with Marie Tempest in "Becky Sharp" and in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" with Mrs. Pat Campbell. Her recent successes were in "Outward Bound" and "The Ghost Train," in which she also appeared in New York.

CLAY T. VANCE

Clay T. Vance, 68, who for some 40 years has acted as manager and advance agent of shows, and who at one time produced his own plays, died in Polyclinic Hospital, New York, Feb. 9, from intestinal trouble.

Vance was from Columbus, Ohio, and was associated with Paddy Sullivan in the producing of road shows. At different times he handled shows for Charles E. Blaney and Gus Hill and was with many independent attractions. In late years he had been working with road films, his last engagement being with the road department of Paramount.

Interment in Woodlawn cemetery.

ALBERT SONDERN

Albert Sondern, 41, former manager of the Pabst theatre, German Stock, died at his home in Milwaukee last Friday after an illness of eight weeks. Sondern came to America 18 years ago from Herbstein, Germany.

After appearing with several New York German theatrical troupes he came to Milwaukee and after serving as a cast member for some time was named manager. Upon his illness, Fritz Fischer succeeded him. He is survived by his widow, Alma, and three children.

William White, 58, stage manager for years at Loew's Lincoln Square, New York, died February 8 in Greenpoint hospital of blood poisoning. White was injured in the leg while working at the theatre and gangrene set in which caused his death.

Widow and seven children survive.

Ralph Charles Sheldon, 31 violinist and member of a theatre orchestra in Hudson, N. Y., died there Feb. 7, after an acute attack of diabetes. Sheldon served with the Marine Corps in the World War. In addition to his theatre work, Sheldon was a member of the Hudson Philharmonic Orchestra.

Morris Conners, for 40 years owner of the Theatrical Transfer Co., Altoona, Pa., died there last week. All traveling show managers knew Conners.

Thomas Kinney, 40, of Danbury, Conn., was killed Feb. 6 in an auto accident at Port Chester, N. Y. Kinney at various times had charge of the tickets on several circuses.

DEATHS ABROAD

Paris, Feb. 5.

Marie Hamann, 72, former French opera singer, died at Nice.

M. Detroyat, 25, French comedian, died suddenly of embolism.

Mme. Verbitzkaia, Russian novelist, died at Leningrad. Deceased was famous 20 years ago.

Mme. Norah Lyons Pome, former ballet mistress, died in Paris.

Mme. Pasdeloup, widow of the well-known French conductor, died in Paris, where she was living in modest circumstances.

Mrs. Ellen Kirk Downs, art critic widow of P. Downs, vice-president of Great Northern Railroad, died at the home of her daughter here.

Alfred Guignard, 50, French journalist.

Constantino Palumbo, Italian composer, died at Pausilippe (Naples), where he had retired.

Never before has vaudeville experienced such an acute shortage of comedy teams. Recent bills have been overloaded with "companies," as at the Palace last week, where five troupes and three singles were offered as representative vaudeville. The Majestic bill this week, billed as a "big laugh show," has only one comedy team. Other acts on the program give generously, but the net result is dull monotony because of repetition.

Without Blanche and Jimmy Creighton the bill would have been a flop. This standard rural comedy team was in next-to-closing, and gave Sunday afternoon customers the first real laugh opportunity.

Petty and Lester Reat and company, musical novelty, opened. Lester plays the bottles, showing energetic talent in his forte, "Second Hungarian Rhapsody." Petty handles xylophone and accordion moderately, and the supporting man and girl sing and dance.

Madie and Ray, juvenile pair, dance and spin ropes for a pleasing little deucer. The kid is okay on his taps, and the girl demonstrates a supple body in her solo. These kids are adaptable to picture houses. Stanley House and company work a familiar book in which an actor is paid to love a gal so her boy friend will be jealous. House delivers fair comedy in fly fashion. Three girls and another man in the company sing and dance.

Luciana Lucca, substituting for the Four Bellhops Sunday, was on fourth in a mild way, singing songs in various tongues and winding up with a combination of falsetto and alto. He didn't get much out of the spot here. Another of the numerous sketches with song and dance interludes, titled "The Nineteenth Hole," is good entertainment for Association houses. There are three men and two girls, with the plot about a dame who married three guys and meets them all at the golf club. All of the men have the humor gift and the two girls fill in well.

Smith-Colton company, closing, is a diversified turn with enough suitable portions in the haphazard routine to carry it. For a finish, eight people come on with stilts and large heads to parade about the stage. Rest of the time is taken up by very weak comedy leading to the horse bit.

"Love" (M-G), the feature, and a break for the house. Business fair Sunday afternoon.

Business this Sunday at the Palace fair. House a little over three-quarters full, with Eugene O'Brien headlining. Spring weather lured 'em to the open spaces. Marrone and LaCosta & Co., two very smooth little dance teams who wear costumes of various races and periods, making numerous changes, open nicely. They carry with them a pianist who does a solo, and warbles to his own music.

Boyle and Della, opening with a wop comic working from the audience is too drawn out. The chatter in Italian finally over, the duo on the stage are joined by the trouble maker. Two of them play banjo and guitar, and all three sing in the closing, which just gets over. Hermanos Williams (3M), Argentine dancer, is a hit, and ably assisted. A fall, from an elevated drop to the arms of an associate, is a breath taker.

Billy and Elsa Newell, in comedy songs and dances, are aided and abetted by effective costumery. Their "As Was" version of days gone by is a laugh, likewise their "As Is," ultra modern comedy. One change into Spanish costumes, is followed with clean cut capers and chatter. Eugene Ormsbee's playlet—"Restitution"—registered. Four men of varying ages, and a Hindu servant, as the supporting cast, acquitted themselves creditably.

Dave Apollon and company (9) have a flash act par excellence. Dave, a Russian dancer, is assisted by two attractive girls, who are adept steppers, and a sextet of Filipino musicians. Apollon, in his opening, plays a piano with one hand, and a mandolin with the other. Various bits of Terpsichore, all meritorious, are injected. A girl, in man's clothes, does an interpretative dance that is neat. The other girl, Lucretia Craig, deserves mention for her toe dancing. Apollon does not dance enough, and he can dance! His broken English is sure fire laugh material. Wilton and Weber, offering "Mr. America," got their share of laughs, and La Belle Pola, dancing monkey, closed.

Two bits top for a feature and five acts at the Academy. Most of the customers don't know the difference, and the house is making money. On last week's last half Paco and Florence company, Spanish dance team with a four-piece string orchestra, headlined. Working in "two," the dancers appeared cramped and showed little grace or pep in three Spanish numbers. The mixed string quartet concocts pleasing music, and the act is well dressed. With more speed it would be okay for family audiences.

Bob George, monologist with a plastic mug, went over well here in chatter and song. He finished with some face contortion and monkey imitations that went straight to the heart of Halsted and Madison natives. Two rather mature ladies and a young girl, working as the Baker Trio, offered a line of harmony not so catchy.

Ross and Ross, punching bag act, has intrinsic merit that will carry it in the family houses. The act handicaps itself for better bookings in being routined and delivered for a small time audience. The younger Ross is announced as a champion in his line, taking care of five bags while blindfolded.

Sid Davis and company, three men and two girls, working a comedy act with special scenery, are relying on recognized burlesque bits for their punches. Outside of this material had difficulty in getting laughs. They have a jailhouse drop, with the two comics coming in and getting jobs as guards. Besides working in the bits, both girls take solo dance spots for fair work. A straight who doubles in taps completes the company. The act needs quite a few book changes to satisfy in other than small houses.

Last half entertainers at the American were anything but exhilarating. Margaret Taylor, grotesquely costumed, opens with song and dances that are hard to take, and then goes into good work on a tight wire. Lord and Taylor have a weak offering, the man tries wise-cracking and trips into the audience with gags, singing and whistling from the two of 'em.

Jack Mundy and company, a city slicker, a rube and a pretty girl, resort to mediocre chatter, and then fall into one of those rehearsals of a play. The play stunt should be cut in half. The rube comic is reasonably funny and the girl sings well enough. Fair small time material.

Next up is Fid Gordon, comedy violinist, who plays well at the start. Gordon has a man and woman planted in the audience, who ask him to play various songs, selection of funny titles being the idea. This fiddler has some personality, and if he had the right kind of material could be developed.

Jack McCluskey and company close the bill, and McCluskey is the entire show at this house. He is, perhaps, the cleverest ventriloquist making the rounds. Lips closed tightly, he puts a ventril dummy through its paces most creditably. Two girls, neat lookers, tap dance prettily. Then there's a girl with a violin, in Spanish attire, whose work is of concert merit. A song and dance laddie does his stuff effectively, as does the girl in the role of piano accompanist. Some of the material needs brushing up, a few new gags, and the ensemble is set. Business about half. Picture, "Wild Geese" (Tiffany).

The Arthur Gale Players, stock, open a road tour Feb. 16 at the Rialto, Elgin.

Ferdinand B. Steindel (College Inn orchestra) has filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing $1,642 in liabilities and no assets.

A. J. "Happy" Meininger, former business manager 101 Ranch, has been appointed Great States' manager at Elgin, Ill. Meininger was at one time with Lubliner & Trinz and the Ascher brothers here.

M. C. Kuiken, former Pittsburgh agent, has joined the Carrell agency club department.

Great States theatres have booked "The Silver Cord," now at the Studebaker, for a tour of their houses, opening early in March. Arthur Gale stock players will also play Great States time, preceded and followed by feature pictures in all houses.

Reports that operating leases of the Circle Theatre Company on Indiana, Circle, Uptown and Ohio theatres have been sold to Publix were unconfirmed by local representatives. Robert Lieber, local firm vice-president, was in New York this week.

Rumor that the four Indianapolis houses will be placed in separate companies and that Skouras Bros., St. Louis, will operate them, with Publix and Skouras holding 50 per cent of stock. Real estate properties will remain in hands of the local company, it is said.

INDIANAPOLIS

By EDWIN V. O'NEEL

Circle—"The Patent Leather Kid."
Apollo—"Old Ironsides."
Indiana—"The Gorilla."
Colonial—"By Whose Hand?"
Ohio—"Metropolis."
English—"The Squall" (last half).

Colonial changed to Saturday opening policy this week with Ham and schedule were filed in Terre Haute Feb. 8 by the Indian Theatre Company of Terre Haute. Liabilities were listed at $626,548 and assets $326,344. Everett A. Davisson was named referee in bankruptcy. Management of the house not affected.

Twenty-five affidavits charging Sabbath violation in operating a picture show have been filed against Frank Parrish, of Milford. He has continued to operate since December, when he was acquitted on a similar charge. He was convicted in November.

Theatre managers have no time to serve on a jury in Indiana even though a Governor's case is at stake. Ace Berry, Circle Theatre Company general manager, was called for jury service in the bribery trial of Governor Ed Jackson this week. After sitting in the jury box several hours it appeared as if Ace would be absent from his office several days. Finally, after conference of attorneys with the judge, Berry was released.

NEW ORLEANS

By O. M. SAMUEL

Tulane—"The Barker."
St. Charles—"A la Creole" (Saenger Players).
Saenger—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."
Loew's State—"Sporting Goods"-vaude.
Strand—"Ramona."
Liberty—"The Circus."

While the show was in progress at Loew's State last week a pistol dropped from the pocket of a patron and one cartridge exploded. The packed house was kept quiet through the presence of mind of Seymour and Cunard, who proceeded with their act as if nothing had happened, and the audience paid minor attention to the incident.

A little praise from the boss helps at times. Tom James, manager Loew's Atlanta, grabbed quite a bit of space with Jim Corbett as headliner. Ed Schiller commended his good work in a letter. A copy of Schiller's missive went to the other southern managers. The chap in Birmingham determined to top James and did. Then the fellow in Memphis went further than the guy in Birmingham. Finally Rodney Toups of Loew's State achieved the impossible with the former champion by getting more stuff across than the other three together.

B. B. B., who motored to New Orleans from Los Angeles to spend two weeks, has signed for another six months as m. of c. with Coffee Dan's in L. A.

The St. Charles is currently presenting "A la Creole," by Flo Field, local authoress, who is also a principal in the cast.

The Saenger was a year old last week and offered "The Circus" as its main birthday attraction. It is being sent over to the Liberty for an additional seven days.

OKLAHOMA CITY

By GEORGE NOBLE

The District Court at Norman, Okla., gave decision that there could be no more moving picture shows in Norman, a University town, on Sundays. Case appealed.

The Orpheum Theatre, Oklahoma City, has closed contract with the Home State Company for 12 Gotham productions.

M. C. Upchurch has purchased the Liberty Theatre at Lone Wolf, Okla.

Harry W. Diehl, San Antonio news cameraman, was saved from death by being dragged while unconscious from being too near to a burning oil well near Corpus Christi which he was trying to photograph.

R. & R. will begin Feb. 15 construction of a new $100,000 theatre at Big Springs, Texa.

W. H. Wooten has purchased the Strand Theatre at Canyon, Texas, from Otto White.

S. L. Costley, 66, first manager of a motion picture show in Austin, Texas, died at Austin, Texas.

SAN FRANCISCO

Dwight W. Welser, canvasman with Al G. Barnes circus, is taken care of for this winter. When the Barnes outfit went into winter quarters near Los Angeles last November Welser hit the main highway for the north, seeking adventure. At San Bruno he encountered hardships, including hunger, and deliberately kicked in a store door, figuring this crime would net him at least 90 days in the hoosegow. It happened to be the postoffice door he kicked in, and on Dec. 22 he was indicted by the federal grand jury here. Welser laid in jail until a few days ago, when he was arraigned before U. S. District Judge Frank H. Kerrigan. The judge had something of a heart. He sentenced Welser to serve 90 days, dating from the date of his arrest, by which time the circus would be once more getting ready to start out.

Market street has a new "World's Museum." It opened a few days ago at 745 Market with a display of freaks that includes High Johnson (7 feet 10 inches high); Bom Bo, glass eater; Athelia, aborigine; "Bluey Bluey," midget; Barney Nelson, armless wonder; "Zomo," sword box illusion, and others. To date the play has been good at the gate.

Visitors to KYA studios in the Warfield Theatre building got a laugh at the recent West Coast Theatres broadcast when the studio attendant was kept busy lowering and raising the "mike" to catch the alternate announcements of Frank Whitbeck, who stands 6 ft. 2 in., and the selections of Gino Severi, violinist and musical director of the California theatre, who is abou 4 ft. 6 in.

West Coast Theatres (Northern California Division) has changed the hour of its weekly broadcast over KYA, from 10.45 midnight on Tuesdays to Mondays and Wednesdays at 8.30 to 9 p. m. Disappointment for listeners-in Wednesday night, when Kolb and Dill (currently at the Granada) failed to broadcast during the West Coast half-hour, though advertised. The two comedians refused to co-operate.

Opening performance of "Sunny" at the Columbia marked by scenery falling down during action of play, due to stage hands not being familiar with stuff.

Police along the Mexican border have been instructed to watch for Martin Olsen, former house officer at Pantages, who decamped recently with $3,500 belonging to the theatre, which he secured from a vault in a local bank, after it had been banked there for the night. Word received here by Olsen's mother-in-law was that the missing man and his wife were in Nogales, Ariz.

Henri C. LaBel has come to Pantages as featured organist. He was formerly with Pan at Los Angeles.

Local theatrical mob was in for another mopup during the recent upward flurry of Bank of Italy and Bancitaly stocks. The picture gang hereabouts is heavily "heeled" with the two issues.

Homer Curran erected a new Neon street sign in front of the Geary (formerly Lurie) legit house at Geary and Mason. The Geary is the only legit house in town with such a sign, and the only other theatre having one is the Embassy, Vitaphone and pictures, on Market street.

Leah Winslow (legit) has replaced Mildred Von Holland in Henry Duffy's production, "The Night Stick," at the President.

Three weeks was enough for St. Millard's sex film and disease lecture at the Capitol. "Is Your Daughter Safe?" failed to click and moved out to make way for another picture.

Joseph M. Schenck, vice-president of the Republican State organization of California, wired from Chicago as enrolling with the Herbert Hoover for president supporters in this section.

Oakland engagement of the Chicago Grand Opera Co. for four days in March will mark first appearance here in several years of Mary Garden. She will be heard in "Resurrection." Claudia Muzio, Rosa Raisa, Charles Hackett, Giacomo Rimini and Richard Bonelli will also participate.

Universal's Cameo, Market street 15c. grind house, has temporarily added a tab musical comedy (blackface) to its current program.

Chief of Police Dan O'Brien, father of George O'Brien (Fox), has been reappointed head of the bluecoats for another four years. The chief has held his office since 1921.

Andre Ferrier revived "La Mascotte" at his Theatre Gaite-Francaise for a three weeks' run. Thirty take part.

ATLANTA

Erlanger — "Rose-Marie" (2d week).
Howard—"The Dove" and Publix unit.
Capitol—"Sharp Shooters" and Pantages acts.
Georgia—"Under the Tonto Rim" and vaude.
Loew's—"Latest from Paris" and Loew acts.
Rialto—"What Price Glory."

The Metropolitan, one of town's oldest first run picture houses, closed its doors Saturday night after a losing scrap of several years' standing with chain theatres.

The Met began to wobble worst last summer when a row with the musicians left the pit vacant for several weeks. Attendance fell off and after musicians came back the house couldn't hit its stride again. A further effort to get customers was reduction of scale to 10-20-30 basis, but that racket did little good.

Sig Samuels, owner, has not indicated what will become of the house.

Management of Bonita, tab house, offers $100 reward for info as to who exploded those "stink bombs."

The "Constitution," morning sheet, and Loew's have hooked together in presenting "Frolics," amateur revue, next week. Victor Hyde trained the local prodigies.

With the picture houses now all given over to Saturday openings one of the first innovations by Nelson Bell as picture editor of the "Post" was the establishment of a special page spread with layout, etc., on that morning. This breaks with the "bull dog" on the streets Friday night at 9 o'clock and is carried in both editions. The usual Sunday picture section stands, but with different pictures in layout and new copy.

Attempt to close cabarets and night clubs, as well as hotel dining rooms given over to dancing on Saturday at midnight hit another snag last week when the corporation counsel hoping to make a test case out of the arrest of Maurice Kafka, of the Club Lido, got a set back when Kafka pleaded guilty and paid a $15 fine.

Morris Simon, attorney for Meyer Davis, of Le Paradis, Club Chantecler, and many orchestras, during the latter's fight to stop an injunction forbidding him to serve ginger ale and cracked ice, also represented the Lido.

The Walter Kolk mentioned as about to marry Marion Harris, who denies it, is, in addition to being a banker, the former drummer of Meyer Davis' Le Paradis band here. Kolk is announced as returning shortly.

Representatives of the builders are now in New York to lease a new 3,000-seat house intended for pictures to be erected as a part of the new development at 15th and H streets, where the old Shoreham hotel awaits wrecking.

Sufficient surrounding ground has been acquired with plans held ready for those leasing it to approve.

Picture and legit houses here will not be able to fire any form of firearms within their portals if new police regulations as drawn are finally adopted.

BALTIMORE

By BRAWBROOK

Ford's—Fritz Leiber (Shakespearean rep).

When the Metropolitan Opera comes to this city for a four-performance engagement in April it will be sponsored by the newly incorporated Opera Club. Dr. Hugh H. Young is president, with Kal Parr, Dr. A. R. L. Dohms and Captain Isaac E. Emerson, vice-presidents. Frederick R. Huber, Baltimore representative for both the Met and Chicago Opera, is secretary-treasurer of the new organization. A $60,000 guarantee has been written. The Lyric will be scaled from $10.

Leonard B. McLaughlin, manager of the Auditorium Theatre, reports a gross of about $20,000 for the Ames Gilbert and Sullivan week at that house. This was not as big as expected, as capacity was looked for. Draw of "The Captive" around the corner affected receipts here.

ATLANTIC CITY

By VINCE McKNIGHT

Apollo—"The Bachelor Father."
Stanley—"Love and Learn."
Earle—"Arizona Wildcat"-vaude.
Colonial—"Les Miserables."
Strand—"The 13th Hour."
Capitol—"London After Midnight."
City Square—"Great Mail Robbery."
Steel Pier—"Icebound."

The Virginia theatre closed yesterday (Tuesday) and remains dark for six or seven weeks for interior alterations, including the installation of new seats.

The Hotelmen's Association of Atlantic City, in an effort to provide more winter amusements, are sponsoring a series of dramatic road shows in the Steel Pier Casino at $1 top. The first of these, "Granite," with a New York cast, met with fair success at its three performances last week. This week "Icebound" is given by the Plays and Players of Philadelphia.

"The Firefly," with amateur and professional talent, was presented at the Globe theatre last week by the Morris Guards.

BROOKLYN

By JO ABRAMSON

Werba's Brooklyn—"Diplomacy."
Majestic—"Say Paree."
Teller's Shubert—"Broadway."
Cort (Jamaica)—"Tommy."
Werba's Rivera—"Queen High."

E. F. Albee—"Two Flaming Youths" and vaude.
Loew's Metropolitan — "Student Prince" and vaude.
Momart—"The Last Laugh."
St. George Playhouse—"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."
Fulton (stock)—"The Love Child."

About the most important thing happening this week in the borough of Brooklyn is the presentation of Sardou's "Diplomacy" at Werba's Brooklyn with an all-star cast.

Hotel Shelburne, one of Coney Island's oldest inns, will be offered at foreclosure sale Feb. 17.

BUFFALO

By SIDNEY BURTON

Teck—"Broadway" (second week).
Erlanger—"Lulu Belle."
Buffalo—"The Last Command."
Hipp—"Chicago After Midnight."
Great Lakes—"Wife Savers."
Loew's—"The Latest from Paris."
Lafayette—"The Fortune Hunter."
Gayety—"Step Lively Girls."
Court Street (stock)—"The Female Bandit."

Announcement was made this week that the Bagg Amusement Company will erect a community picture house at Main and Ferry streets at a cost of $500,000.

TORONTO

By G. A. S.

Royal Alexandra—Seymour Hicks, "Mr. What's His Name," "Sleeping Partners."
Princess—Dark.
Victoria—"Take My Advice" (Glaser stock).
Empire — "Disraeli" (Keppie stock).
Tivoli—"The Circus" (indefinite).
Regent—"Sadie Thompson" (2d week).
Pantages—"Cohens and Kellys in Paris," vaude.
Loew's—"Baby Mine," vaude.
Uptown—"The Gaucho," stage show.
Hip—"The Four Flusher," vaude.
Palace—"Love," vaude.
Runnymede — "Beau Sabreur," vaude.
Massey Hall—Rachmaninoff.
Eaton Hall—Mary Lewis.
Capitol—"On Your Toes," vaude.
Gayety—"Night Hawks" (Columbia).

Hart House players, University of Toronto, are rehearsing three short plays by Canadian authors for production March 1. Carroll Aikins is directing.

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra, a comparatively new body without financial backing, renews weekly concerts this week.

The little theatre movement, dormant here many months, has taken a shot in the arm and come to life. Four outfits have started to move. The result will be ponderous stuff. "Merchant of Venice," "Romeo and Juliet," "David Garrick" and "Doctor's Dilemma."

Impost of a duty on American magazines has resulted in doubling of prices on all nickel periodicals here with no reduction in sale of Satevepost, Liberty or Collier's.

"Wings" horned into Ottawa, the Canadian capital, when Parliament opened and got $9,000 during the week.

The Parc Royale, Hull picture house catering to the French, was burned to the ground Sunday. It was empty at the time. Cost $30,000 to build in 1904. Insured.

Attempts of the Shuberts and the Erlanger home office to starve Ontario to death so far as road shows are concerned has brought real money to stock companies here. At present both Vaughan Glaser and George Keppie are making money in out of the way spots. Keppie is sold out for the second week of "Disraeli." Edmund Abbey plays the Arliss part. Running about $19,000 in two weeks.

Famous Players have added another to their chain of 110 houses in Canada in the Capitol, seating 1,600, at Cornwall. Clarence Markell, former owner, Palace, is manager. The Palace has been closed. Cornwall is in Ontario at the Quebec boundary line.

Leonard Bishop, former manager, Regent, Ottawa, has gone to the Hollywood, Detroit.

After holding up the picture several years for no other reason than "German make," Canadian censors have passed "The Last Laugh." So far none of the first-run houses have taken it up.

Toronto has been cut from the list of road shows for George Tyler's revival of "Diplomacy." The Princess, Erlanger legit house, remains dark.

NEWARK

By C. R. AUSTIN

Broad—Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Co.
Shubert—"Whispering Friends."
Proctor's—Vaude-"Coney Island."
Loew's State—Vaude-"The Student Prince."
Newark—Vaude-"Shanghaled."
Branford—"French Dressing"-vaude.
Mosque—"Girl from Chicago"-vaude.
Fox Terminal—"Sunrise"-Movietone (2d week).
Rialto—"The Circus."
Capitol—"Quicksands"-"Honeymoon Hate."
Goodwin—"The Dove."
Empire—"The Patsy" (stock).
Lyric—"Red-Headed Blondes."
Orpheum—"Dixie Vagabonds"-films.

Equity stopped the Empire Players from playing Sundays. While Newark is open Sundays for vaudeville and pictures, the legit houses do not run. Accordingly the town is closed for legit, and stock follows, according to Equity. The Empire has agreed to close and run matinees Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The house is now using vaudeville Sundays, and opened Feb. 12 with 13 acts booked on percentage by Sam Bernstein. The Shubert hasn't been doing so well with its 10-act bills Sundays, and the 13-acts bills at the Empire will cut in considerably. The Empire stock impressed, but business was not strong.

A curious booking brings the Gilbert & Sullivan Co. to the Broad, and Cohan's farce, "Whispering Friends," to the Shubert, which is regularly used for musical comedy.

Wieting—"The Vagabond King" (return) "Hit the Deck" (2d half). Beginning Sunday, "The King of Kings."

B. F. Keith's—Vaudeville-films.

Temple—Pop vaudeville-films.

Loew's State—Opens Saturday with "West Point"-"Milady's Fan," Publix presentation.

Crescent—Independent vaudeville-films.

Savoy—Palace Burlesk ers (stock).

Strand—"The Noose"-Vitaphone.

Rivoli—"Foreign Devils."

Palace—"Ritzy."

Syracuse—"Two Arabian Knights"-"Man Crazy."

Regent—"Woman on Trial"-"One Round Hogan."

Nargard—"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary."

Dewitt Newing's stock at the Temple starts March 5 with "The Barker." E. F. Albee is reported to have personally handled the deal which turns the pop vaude-picture theatre over to the former partner of Frank Wilcox, with whom he operated the Wilcoxians at the Shubert's Wieting here for four years. Last year Albee, in association with the Cahills, who own the house, had their own company in opposition to the Wilcox troupe, and are reported to have dropped about $40,000.

Newing, with a lease extending to September, will follow a guest star policy—something new here. He will have Robert Warwick in "Omar the Tentmaker," Frances Starr in "Marie Odille" and, perhaps, Nita Naldi in "A Fool There Was." In picking "The Barker" for his opener, Newing pulled a nifty, inasmuch as there is unusual interest here in the piece. Kenyon Nicholson gathered much of his carnival data hereabouts and wrote the play in this city while posing as the "brother" of his wife, Lucile Nikolas, who was playing leads with the Wilcox stock at the time.

With Loew's new State offering a presentation policy, B. F. Keith's here will stick to straight vaudeville and pictures rather than resume a semi-presentation and band plan recently tried out with unusual success. After a conference in New York, John J. Burnes, manager, who was responsible for the plan, announced it was definitely off.

The passing of the Temple from the vaude-pictures ranks is another factor in the Keith decision, while still a third is the upward jump in the figure asked for the services of Jack Crawford and his recording band. Since Crawford appeared here his price has gone above the $3,000 mark, with Paramount reported offering him $3,500. At present Crawford is playing out contracts at Hot Springs.

B. F. Keith's bill for the first half was down to five acts, with three of them revues and one of the latter a home-talent production. The turns were Mollie Williams' Revue (Miss Williams was the third burlesque star in a row to headline at Keith's—Abe Reynolds and Billy Arlington preceding her; the California Nighthawks, seen here about a year ago as a presentation act at the Strand, and the Sonya Marcus Revue, produced locally, and splitting a week's "time" between here and Rochester.

The Avon, Watertown, will add five acts to its picture for the last half of the week. John A. Thoma is manager.

Mrs. Ada Shiman Kincaid, concert pianist and former wife of Gen. J. Leslie Kincaid, former adjutant-general of the 27th division and now of the United Hotels, was married here last week to Jay Lansing Crouse.

Utica is slated for two new neighborhood houses. One, the Carlton, opens on the site of the old Savoy. A second is to be erected on the corner of Albany street and Kossuth avenue.

The Rome Players, Rome little theatre group, have leased the old home of the Rome Perfection Laundry and will adapt it to workshop purposes. The Players will do a group of three one-act plays—"The Bracelet," "The Pot Boiler" and "Spring"—Feb. 21, while on April 9 they produce "Seventh Heaven."

Six full-length productions, including a costume play and involving the services of more than 500 students, is the outline of the 1928-29 dramatic program at Syracuse University, announced by Prof. Sawyer Falk, director of dramatics.

The Avon, Utica (Schine), broadcasts a midnight vaudeville program every Monday night from Station WIBX. The public is invited in to watch the broadcasting, and the stunt is resulting in S. R. O.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Herschel Stuart, Pacific Northwest manager West Coast houses, with Louis Cohen, of the real estate department for W. C., were both in the city, making an inspection of houses in this territory. They are making a survey of conditions in the local theatres and reporting same to William Fox, who now controls the chain.

E. E. Marsh, three years manager W. C. houses in Astoria, Ore., has been shifted to the local suburban Hollywood as manager. Edgar Hart, former manager, Hollywood, becomes Marsh's successor.

John Hamrick's local Blue Mouse reports a loss of several hundred dollars from its safe without a single clue as to who pulled the job. Local dicks swear it was the slickest job ever done here.

Casper Fischer, general manager, Washington Theatre Enterprises, Inc., affiliated with Tiffany-Stahl in the erection of the Mayflower in Seattle, as well as a house in Astoria, Ore., will be in the city in the next few days. Fischer will be accompanied by Gerald Field, Seattle architect; Creigh Nelson, stockholder, and Ivan Hyland, president of the company. They are dickering for a large theatre site on which to erect a 3,000-seat local house. The Fischer interests, together with the Capitol Investment Co., will also erect a 1,000-seat house.

Ollie Wallace has inaugurated a series of Sunday noon concerts at the Wurlitzer. Wallace is an organist as well as a master of ceremonies.

Buddy Stuart, brother of Herschel Stuart, is handling "Motherhood," sex film.

The West Coast Broadway now owns and operates their own radio station, known as KWJJ. The station is located in the Broadway theatre, and presents as a regular feature acts from Fanchon and Marco time, which happen to be playing the house.

The deal for the acquisition of the Portland Hotel property by a group of local business people for the erection of a large hotel and theatre project now looks cold. It was said J. A. Charlesworth, local realtor, who promoted the big Publix-Heathman Hotel proposition, was endeavoring to line up some theatre circuit to take a long-term lease on the proposed theatre, but not a taker could be found.

Irvin Waterstreet, formerly with Publix in Canada, is city manager foe W. C. houses. He succeeds Sidney McDonald, called to Seattle by Herschel Stuart. Sam Maurice is now in charge of the Oregon territory.

Universal-Multnomah theatres are going in for stock plays for some of their suburban houses. A contract has been signed with the Guy Hickman's Comedians for the appearance of this company at both the Egyptian and the Lincoln theatres.

A few changes in the local operating staff of West Coast Theatres has been announced by Herschel Stuart, Pacific northwest chief for W. C. Sidney McDonald is shifted to Seattle, where he will act as Stuart's assistant. Irving Waterstreet is McDonald's successor here. Sam Maurice is temporarily in charge of the Oregon West Coast houses, with headquarters in the Liberty theatre.

Tiffany-Stahl is becoming a producer-exhibitor in this territory. Aside from having an interest in new houses in Seattle and Astoria, Ore., D. C. Millward, northwest manager for Tiffany, has taken a 20-year lease on a 1,000-seat theatre starting in March.

Eddie Hitchcock, in Los Angeles to conduct the publicity campaign at Loew's State for Eddie Peabody, has been transferred here, where he will handle exploitation for the opening of the new Paramount.

LOS ANGELES

Professionals have the free use of Variety's Los Angeles Office for information. Mail may be addressed care Variety, Loew's State Bldg., Suite 1221-22, Los Angeles. It will be held subject to call or forwarded, or advertised in Variety's Letter List.

Sunday night the Orpheum had a waiting line in front of the box office. Something rare for the Orph. But it had Fannie Brice headlining for the second week and that was why. The rest of the bill didn't seem to matter and with the exception of one or two. The bookers apparently eased up on expense after sending Fannie off to a flying start with a great supporting bill for her initial week. The first section of this show was saved by the Three Sailors, knockout acrobatic comedy act, who started a riot of laughs. Bert Mason, Bob Robson and Harry Blide are the trio. For the type of stuff these lads do they can hold their heads up high. The act started in picture houses in the east several years ago, but were grabbed by K-A and Orpheum soon after.

Lester Crawford and Helen Broderick had it a little tough to follow. This comedy chatter duo are troupers of the old school and managed to get the most out of their material. Miss Broderick's droll straight was responsible for what laughs there were. Repartee is swift and clicks.

Helen MacKellar in Elliott Lester's condensed version of "The Mud Turtle," No. 5 and preceding intermish. The playlet failed to hit here, though Miss MacKellar was her usual self as the waitress who marries the country simp and finds it hard to break in the family circle. Of the cast of five but two were outstanding. George MacQuarrie, as the hard hearted blustering father, and Peggy Warner, as the rube kid sister.

Leo Carrillo opened the second half ahead of Miss Brice. Carrillo is known on the coast and likewise his stories. They went strong for him. Carrillo began with some fast and witty talk that had his audience hopping mentally to catch up with him. His wop dialect was standard and for a kickoff he pulled a Chink gag, using a real Mongolian out in front for a laugh. Pulled back for an encore he recited a sob ballad by Eddie Guest.

No matter how many times Fannie Brice may appear in this town she's a natural to wow every time. A number of picture people whose faces are not so familiar around the Orpheum put in an appearance this time and they, as well as the lays, walked out convinced that Fannie can still extract a smile and a sob at will. Fannie's routine was practically the same as the week before, and always good for many more to come. "Mrs. Cohen at the Beach" tickled the folks most and probably Fannie, too. She had to beg off after three encores and gave them "My Man" for a finale.

They started to walk out but changed their minds when the Arnaut Brothers came on to close the show. The boys held everyone tight to the finish. Their bird imitation stands alone and sure fire anywhere, anytime.

Cortello's Circus revue, otherwise a mediocre dog turn, opened. Cortello does some preliminary tumbling and balancing but the pups are what count. The "deuce" was filled by Harrison and Dakin, mixed comedy team, with about everything by way of hokum.

Once in a while a weak vaudeville bill may crop out anywhere. This happened at Pantages. Pan's fans have been getting more than money's worth. There were six acts on the bill, but actually it was one: Winona Winter (New Acts), headliner. Madge Bellamy in "Silk Legs" (Fox) was the screen attraction. Monday afternoon, first show, business was not average. The two-bit entrance fee from 12 to 1 is back in vogue again. The ante at this time was raised for a while during a period of "name" attractions.

Miss Winter stuck out in this show like a lighthouse. Her new routine of character songs caught the fancy of the matinee mob, and they expressed their favor out loud. She could have done more than her alloted period of time, but preferred to bow off after one encore.

Ahead and back it was a tossup. Openers were Amazon and Nile, man and woman contortionists working on dim stage in a woodland setting. For a curtain-raiser both are in crocodile outfits maneuvering around and lending a realistic touch to things. Regulation routine follows, neatly executed, but slow in tempo. Hanson Sisters, three, gave a harp recital in No. 2, okay from musical standpoint, but again retarding things. The girls look good and are capable at the instruments. Classics are their best.

Rubin of Rubin, Larry and Andre saved the next position from a flop. First named is clever, working in blackface, with a uke while spilling a line of chatter. Larry is an indifferent hoofer and Miss Andre likewise. Rubin stopped the show with some clog steps near the finish and was brought back for more. "Revelations" was a flash girl dancing act presented by Kathryn Lambert. Milton Bronson, Russian prancer of ability, is featured, with the gals also singing. Full stage layout was attractive, but the femmes failed to reveal anything. Mediocre specialties and too much of the same thing. Bronson does everything to speed matters up, but is not enough. Routines should be revamped. On the closing end were Olympia and Jules with an assortment of tricks, including Russian and South American greyhounds, and featuring "Jiggs," a minute pup.

Windsor Square theatre, where the Louis O. Macloons presented "The Desert Song" and played to bad business, forcing the producers to move into a downtown house, is being investigated by City Prosecutor Lickley as to possibilities of zoning violations. Residents of the exclusive Windsor Square district filed a petition to revoke the permit of the theatre, which belongs to the Ebell Club, complaining of noise, which blocked traffic and created a general nuisance. Officials of the Ebell Club, pretentious structure costing around $1,000,000, said it was understood with the City Planning Commission at the time the theatre permit was issued as to the purpose of the enterprise. The Macloons leased the house for a period of three months, but only remained for a couple of weeks, leaving some $2,500 in unpaid rent for which the Ebell Club is now suing. The Planning Commission will hold a hearing on the controversy Feb. 16.

The Writers present four plays Feb. 15-16 for this month's series. "The Artist," by A. A. Milne; "Waterloo," by Arthur Conan Doyle; "The Flattering Word," by George Kelly; and "Miss Baxter," by Maude Fulton and Titus Parker. The casts include Eleanor Boardman, Edward Everett Horton, Miss Fulton, Marjorie Bennett, Robert Elliott, Frank Reicher, De Witt Jennings, Lionel Belmore, Hal Crane, Richard Tucker, Helene Sullivan, Dorothy Wolbert, Marjorie Montgomery, Will Walling, and Dennis d'Auburn. James Durkin, director.

James McKowan, manager of the Hill Street for the past three years, has been sent to the Orpheum, Vancouver, to replace W. A. Barnes, who is suffering from a nervous breakdown. Ray Jones, assistant house manager and press agent, will be in charge of the Hill Street.

Two special matinees of the "Idiot" at the Belmont have proved successful and will be followed up by a series of art theatre plays. Reginald Polo, who is directing the shows which L. E. Behymer is presenting, is preparing "The Great Adventure."

Bob Lynch, who owns the M-G exchange in Philadelphia, arrived this week via the Panama Canal. He contemplates spending a month here.

Hollywood Repertoire Players will again put on Andreyev's "The Waltz of the Dogs" at the Hollywood Playhouse, Feb. 19. Play is directed and staged by Paul Spier, also in the cast.

Jack Laughlin was presented with a gold chain bracelet by Bavarian members of his prologue to "Four Sons" at the Carthay Circle. The token is said to have come from the royal family of the former King of Bavaria.

Ocean Park Business Men's Association again sponsor a marathon dance contest April 19. The event starts in a Los Angeles ballroom and winds up in Ocean Park. Last year's affair was stopped by police when contestants dropped from exhaustion.

Vernon Country Club has reopened under new management of Bill Paine. The floor show has Mel and George, Val Roberts, Jeanne Chambers, and Dave Snell's orchestra.

DALLAS

BY RUDOLPH DONAT

Palace (Publix): "Helen of Troy"; stage, Art Landry with "Shadowland."
Majestic (Interstate): "Let 'Er Go Gallagher"; stage, Ned Wayburn's "Buds of 1928."
Melba (Publix): "The Gaucho."
Old Mill (Saenger): "French Dressing."
Capitol: "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris."
Arcadia (Dent): Vita.
Pantages (tab): Buddy Morgan Revue.

Josephine Oliver, violinist, who was "Miss Dallas" in Publix's opportunity unit, "America," last summer, departed for Paris in preparation for a professional career.

Bert Lytell, appearing in person at the Majestic, was a topnotch drawing card for what would have been a mediocre bill last week. He announced he will produce two films for Columbia this summer.

SEATTLE

DAVE TREPP

President—"Tommy."
Orpheum — "Night Flyer" and vaude.
Pantages—"Gateway of Moon" and vaude.
Fifth Avenue—"Baby Mine."
United Artists—"Student Prince."
Blue Mouse—"Girl from Chicago" and Vita.
Columbia—"Surrender."

George Lipschultz was here the past week, on Pan, and incidently talked to Mayflower management relative to opening of the house now building. Casper Fischer, manager, reports progress satisfactory, with opening date about May 1. The new house will be the ace house of the string. Roy Brown is in the home office. Roy Watkins has the music contract, which will include handling the 60-piece orchestra, while Lipschultz will be conductor.

Third Avenue theatre is the new name of the ex-President (before that, Heilig), at Third and Madison. Pop stock with 30-cent top is on. Opened Feb. 14 to fair trade. F. M. Crabill is manager.

Two of the leading players in the country in ddamatic stock, Howard Miller and Leona Powers, were married in Boston on Nov. 6, the news is just now leaking out. Both are starring with the Henry Duffy Players at the President.

Monaca cafe and cabaret has opened in basement of Eagles building, being conducted by University students.

The vote on the quizzing of patrons as to why they came to the President theatre, conducted by Manager Bill McCurdy, resulted as follows: Because of Duffy policy, 334; clean and funny plays, 275; upon advice of friends, 79; because of New York runs, 12; newspaper advertising, 49; newspaper critique, 20; show window cards, 4; sensible prices, 237, and radio advertising, 22.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Duffy were in Seattle a few days the past week, to see the premiere of "The Showdown" at the President. Olga Printzlau's play proved excellent, and appealed to men and women alike.

MINNEAPOLIS

Metropolitan—Dark.
Shubert—"Mister Antonio" (Bainbridge dramatic stock).
Hennepin-Orpheum — Vaudeville (Olsen & Johnson) and "On to Reno."
Pantages—Vaudeville and "The Daredevil's Reward."
Palace—"The Show-Off" (McCall-Bridge musical comedy tab).
Seventh Street — Vaudeville and "The Black Jack."
State—"The Jazz Singer."

Grand—"Get Your Man" (2d loop showing).

Harry Sherman, director of special relations for Publix, was in Minneapolis to confer with local musician union officials relative to the orchestra for the new $2,000,000 Minnesota theatre to be opened late in March.

The Metropolitan (legitimate road attractions) has a "dark" period of more than a month ahead. The only future booking announcement is the all-star revival of "Diplomacy" late in March. It has been a slim year for this house as a result of the local stage hands' strike and the shortage of touring attractions.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Rochester—"The Gaucho," Pan vaude.
Regent—"Wife Savers."
Piccadilly—"A Texas Steer."
Fay's—"Judgment of the Hills," vaude.
Temple—K.-A. vaude.
Gayety—Burlesque (Mutual).

Interest in "eugenic babies" here is fanned by the forthcoming debate March 2 at the Baptist Temple between Judge Ben. B. Lindsey and Rev. Clinton Wunder on "The Companionate Marriage." In his last debate with Clarence Darrow on "Has Life a Purpose?" the dominie and former film censor came off second best.

The first Sunday movie show in Canandaigua will be shown at the Playhouse Feb. 19. It looks like the preachers have lost their fight. The Common Council last week authorized Sunday films in accordance with the recent referendum.

Guy Fraser Harrison, conductor, Eastman theatre orchestra, recently admitted to American citizenship, celebrated the event at the "pop" concert Sunday with an all-American program.

Rochester Exposition cleared $6,593.70 last year, according to the report of Secretary Edgar F. Edwards. Bands cost $3,676.97; vaudeville, $5,784.20; special attractions, $1,863.67. New officers: Honorary president, Mayor Joseph C. Wilson; president, Elmer E. Fairchild; secretary-manager, Edgar F. Edwards.

The Schine Theatrical Enterprises have served notice on tenants of the Smith Opera House block, Geneva, to vacate so the theatre can be remodeled and reopened next fall with 2,500 seating capacity. The old gallery will be removed. Mutual burlesque Monday afternoons has been the only attraction of late.

Broadcasting of grand opera and concerts helps attendance at theatres, according to General Manager Eric Clarke (Eastman).

Nikitas D. Dipson (Batavia), president of the Genesee Theatrical Enterprises, has contracted for Vitaphone in the new Family theatre, Batavia. The company also has Vita equipment at its theatres in Jamestown and Hornell and will install it in the Greenberg, Pa., house.

Charging flagrant violations of the building law, the city building inspector has ordered work on the new Empire building, which will house the new Majestic theatre, stopped. The nature of the violations was not made public by the inspector.

The Granada (neighborhood) has gone into the stage band policy with Eddie Harris and Gang on the stage. Harris is m. c., sings, dances and doubles in the orchestra, doing a practical one-man show.

The Eight English Rockets have replaced the Abbott dancers as the chorus of the Wisconsin stage show.

Universal opens its new Sheboygan theatre at Sheboygan, Wis., Feb. 18. Jack Gross, formerly of Springfield, Mo., will manage.

Garnet Streit, 16, artists' model, who caused the arrest of several local artists and sculptors a year ago for posing in the nude while yet a minor, has married William Volkman, Lakewood.

P. A. "BURNS" PAPERS

Capella, which an international showman who has known the team for many years denied.

Yesterday (Tuesday) the tabs particularly kidded the story as a publicity stunt, exposing it, while some of the regular and more conservative sheets, seemingly in a desire not to tip their gullibility in falling for the press stunt, continued with a follow-up yarn buried away that Mlle. Roseray was discharged from the Lexington hospital and would probably appear at the Casa Lopez that night (Tuesday). She did not dance Monday. Business at the Casa was fairly good Monday after the stories broke, but not traceable one way or another to the publicity.

From Broadway to Hollywood, the favorite preparations for stage, street, and screen are made by Virginia Lee, Inc. The famous Virginia Lee Greaseless Speed Make-up means five minutes before the mirror instead of half an hour, and a smooth natural make-up without grease paint, powder, and cream. It will not rub or sweat off. Screen stars know it photographs best! Easily removed with Virginia Lee Theatrical Cold Creme Soap and water, or Virginia Lee Creme. This famous make-up, used by Leo Carrillo, Dorothy Sebastian, Alice Morley, and other stars, comes in 30 base shades at 60c and $1.00 per jar, with 12 lining colors at 30c per jar. It is made only with harmless vegetable coloring. It includes also the popular blends, and some marvelous juveniles. Save time and do yourself justice with

A survey of Broadway and the many dance orchestras along the main stem, and also in the outlying big restaurants, speaks for itself. B. A. Rolfe was the first to make a truly big impression at the Palais D'Or, the re-named Palais Royal.

Paul Specht opens at the Jardin Royal tonight (Wednesday), another "name" band at a place which is a success under C. M. Joe's management where it flopped in white hands dating back to the Cafe de Paris, through the Cinderella and Trianon ballrooms, and as Paul Whiteman's and the Club New Yorker, until going Oriental.

Yoeng's, formerly the ultra Churchill's, now has a crack dance band, Sid Hall, as the feature; Chinaland, in the Cadillac hotel, has Nat Martin; up on 95th street and Broadway, the Mah Jongg Inn features Duke Yellman; the Mayflower Inn, in Washington Heights, holds Charles F. Strickland; the Fordham Gardens, in the Bronx, has Saxi Holtsworth as the dance attraction; large King's Tea Gardens, in Brooklyn, offers Al Lynn, and similarly throughout Greater New York choice positions in the better class Chinese restaurants are available for first-rate dance orchestras.

The cafes being "shot" there isn't much to offer in that department. The Chinese restaurants are better propositions from the standpoint of the hours, although sometimes three sessions daily at lunch, dinner and supper are necessary, but in gross hours under the 11-to-beyond-dawn grind of some of the upholstered joints.

CHICAGO PADLOCKS

Business Shot

Chicago night clubs of any appreciable size are awaiting padlocks. Prospect of combatting the federal court actions looks slim. Fred Mann has been approached by his competitors with a plea that he head the defense movement. In interviews Mann said he will not. "I'll retain an attorney and fight my own battle," he told them, "it's a case of every man for himself now."

Realty and property valued in excess of $5,000,000 are involved in the present situation. Business at the night clubs has fallen off to an appreciable extent with patrons tired of raids. Those who do continue to make the rounds still carry the hip flasks and the cabarets still furnish the set-ups.

Federal agents are now engaged raiding the smaller outlying cafes.

Theatre transfers in this district last week were Family theatre, Romulus, Mich., from J. W. Porter to C. A. Mitchell; People's, Coral, Mich., from J. W. Mosher to Joseph Shaver, and Regent, Port Huron, Mich., purchased by John Strang from W. S. Butterfield. All playing straight films.

Frank Stewart, formerly district sales manager for P. D. C., has been engaged by Jack Goldhar as salesman for United Artists.

LaSalle Garden will switch from vaudefilms to dramatic stock next week, with Robert Sherman Players. The C. W. Munz neighborhood house has been playing Keith vaude.

The Garrick, dark for several weeks, will reopen Feb. 26 with "Abie's Irish Rose." This will be "Abie's" fourth trip to Detroit.

Stage and screen adaptations of "The Jazz Singer" both in town this week. Jessel on week stand at the Lafayette, while film is in eighth and final at the Madison.

When the Roosevelt goes into stock burlesque next week, the twin booked combination, Cinderella and Roosevelt, will be a thing of the past. For years the two houses have played the same vaude bills each week. Roosevelt taking the first half and Cinderella the last. Sol Berns, Detroit manager for Sun, will continue to book the Cinderella, but singly.

Week-end vaude at the Lincoln Square, Birmingham and De Luxe, Kunsky neighborhood houses, will be booked by Art Rowland.

Charging Canadian theatre owners with sharp practice, Premier Ferguson issued a statement that the amusement tax on admissions of 25 cents and less will be restored if certain practices continue. It is claimed numerous exhibitors have raised the price of their tickets to equal prices prevailing prior to the abolishment of the tax.

Lewis and Dody, in the Capitol's stage band presentation last week, join "High Lights" when that Publix unit reaches Chicago. They replace Clifton and DeRex.

The death of Johnny Ryan last week ended the career of Detroit's most colorful and successful gambler. Ryan was the Arnold Rothstein of this city. Ryan, 35, worth over a million, was a laborer in St. Louis 10 years ago.

Mrs. Mollie Best was awarded a divorce from Charlie H. Best, local fight promoter and manager, by Judge Jayne in Circuit court. Only once since their marriage in 1917 has Charlie returned home before two a. m., according to the Mrs. His usual hour, she said, was five.

Local interest devoted to the Temple theatre this week, where Irene Kessler, daughter of Charlie Kessler, local political leader and cafe owner, is making her stage debut. She is appearing as a specialty worker in the Ethel Grace Rhythm Romers, girl band. Another angle is that Miss Grace is Mrs. Charlie Mack.

In the property suit of Arthur Scott against his brother David, there is a side issue requesting restrainment of the latter from operating the Broadway Strand theatre because the house has been running at a loss. The petition was filed before the Strand changed to a stock burlesque policy last week. The major suit of the one brother against the other involves an injunction against David Scott's plans to construct a 37-story office building on the site of the Hudges building. Arthur Scott claims he was not notified of a meeting to decide on the building, despite that he holds a large part of the company's stock. The Scott boys shared in a $2,500,000 estate upon the death of their father. A year ago they were in court fighting each other over $1,600.

KANSAS CITY
By WILL R. HUGHES

Orpheum—Vaudeville and pictures.

Loew's Midland—"Beau Sabreur," and "Stepping High," stage unit.

Mainstreet — "Patent Leather Kid."

Newman — "The Latest from Paris."

Liberty—"The Opening Night," picture.

Pantages—Vaudeville and pictures.

Globe—Vitaphone and pictures, with Lole Bridge musical stock.

Gayety—Mutual burlesque.

A huge, frosted cake, was the principal attraction in the lobby of the Orpheum this week, in honor of the thirtieth birthday of the house.

Several shifts in the management of the Riviera, Omaha, and the Capitol, Des Moines, have been announced by the Publix-Blank interests, which control the two theatres. In the change Harry B. Watts, formerly manager of the Rialto and Strand, Omaha, before transferred to Des Moines, comes back to Omaha as manager of the Riviera, succeeding A. G. Stolte, who has been in charge since the house opened in March.

A. G. Stolte, in poor health for some time, will take a month's vacation in the south before taking an assignment with some of the eastern Publix theatres.

HIGH UPKEEP OF HOME 16 MM. FILM BY CHILDREN'S FOOLING

400-Foot Reel May Lose 100 Feet Through Being Kicked Around—On 24-Hour Home Rental Picture May Be Run Through 10 Times

Distributors and handlers of 16 mm. stock for home projection machines are finding the life of an average 400-foot print comparatively brief, with replacement costs mounting continually.

They figure children are responsible in a large measure for the speedy depreciation of stock. The kids, with or without parental consent, run a picture over repeatedly, so that on a 24-hour home rental a picture may be projected as many as 10 times.

Another cause frequently reported and believed common, due to the amateur projectionists, is the piling up on the floor of loose film, improperly spooled, with one or more persons stepping on the loose film. Cracked and sprocket-marked parts are then cut out, the film spliced to-

Oil Man's Free Films Close Two Okla. Houses

Ponca City, Okla., Feb. 21.

Free pictures which are being put on by Lew Wentz local oil magnate, whose income is fabulous, are proving disconcerting to Fred Pickerell, manager of Ponca City's film theatres. Already two of the five theatres under Pickerell's management have been closed. Of the remaining three, the Poncan is new and has a capacity of 1,200. The town has a population of 17,000.

Wentz is putting on his pictures in the local convention hall four days per week entirely free of charge. He shows anything he can get and the best the market affords. Film salesmen say it is impossible to turn down his offers. Pickerell is said to have turned down a proposition made by the oil man to show pictures in the former's theatres.

Welcomes Sight-Sound Screen as Boon to Travel Weary Speakers

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21.

Fox may be interested to learn that one of the strongest boosters for its Movietone is George Bernard Shaw. In fact, if the famous Irishman ever lectures in America it will be through the Movietone, or some similar talking-picture device.

An admirer wrote Shaw asking if he would consent to speak over the radio when arrangements were made for rebroadcasts between England and America. In reply the following, and surprising letter was received:

"Mr. Bernard Shaw desires me to say that he sincerely hopes that Movietone will supersede the present plan of dragging lecturers around the States from one town to another and shaking hands with them, finally returning them to their homes in a badly damaged condition. If he ever lectures in America it will be on the screen." The letter was signed by G. B. S.'s secretary, Blanche Patch.

Shaw's reply reveals that he has moved from 10 Adelphi Terrace, long his residence, to 4 Whitehall Court, London S. W. I.

Another Hop

Rumors about a flight from Paris to New York in the early spring, in which a famous aviator and a woman of sensational prominence will be aboard, came from the newsreel management approached by the manager of several previous big flights for bonuses on the exclusive rights to the flight, it being proposed that a camera man be carried.

Newspapers and syndicates also have been felt out, with no names disclosed, not even the name of the ship, which is American-built.

Views of Hickman Brought Matter of Subjects to Head—Anything Objectionable Submitted to Conference—Majority Rules—Causes Trade Much Trouble, Says Hays

OFFENSIVE TITLE

As a result of an order issued by Will H. Hays at a meeting during which he told the newsreels they must stop fostering yellow screen journalism or he would be compelled to bring pressure to bear on the heads of the respective companies, newsreel editors are now obliged to call general meetings on any subject matter which might be deemed objectionable.

If the majority at these meetings

The series, which is to be released with Fox Newsreel service, will run over a period of a year.

John Spurgeon, foreign news editor for Fox, has arranged the deal following six months of persistent endeavor. The plan was turned down unhesitatingly when first proposed, Spurgeon was formerly editor of the N. Y. "World" and organizer of the staff covering the

RADIO STATIONS COSTLY, BUT MAILING LIST PROFIT WORTH IT

Fan Letters Commercially Capitalized by Large Advertisers on Air—Bamberger and Gimbel's Station Deficits Easily Charged Off to Publicity

Two of the largest department stores in America situated in the east, own and operate their own radio broadcasting stations at losses estimated between $200,000 and $300,000 annually, but consider it the cheapest form of advertising exploitation. They convert the departmental loss to a huge profit through other channels.

L. Bamberger & Co., the big Newark, N. J., store, operating WOR, and the Gimbel Brothers of New York and Philadelphia, operating WGBS, are the mercantile broadcasters, who, while losing extensively each year on their stations are enabled, through the resulting mailing lists gained from fan mail response, to capitalize this reaction into many thousands of dollars.

Both of these stations along with any other broadcasting station, from the NBC network links down, have been approached from time to time by outside commercial enterprises with proffers for purchasing the lists of names of radio fans who

KING OF GYPSIES WANTS TO ORGANIZE

After $1,000,000 First and Then to Keep 50,000 Fortune Tellers In One Park

Steve Kosiov, self-crowned King of the Gypsies, with his capital in Paterson, N. J., has a scheme to organize the Gypsies of the United States into one big colony, with an amusement park of their own.

Kosiov wants the government or some philanthropist to put up about $1,000,000 to set up his fellow-gyps in the phrenologist business on a big scale.

Kosiov believes that the Gypsies would settle down and obey the laws if thus encouraged.

There are 50,000 Gypsies in the country, with 5,000 in the Greater New York district. Most of them claim they are palm-readers.

Kosiov personally is known as a clever fixer. He furnishes Gypsies for society bazaars and club bookings. He has succeeded in interesting a number of politicians in his plan, but has not yet solved the problem of uniting the Gypsies, who are divided into about 50 tribes. Practically none are citizens, it is said.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 21.

Until consolidation of the Mutual and Columbia burlesque wheels, the theatre operated as a Mutual stand. It was originally named Orchestra Hall and was built in 1849.

CARROLL COONEY'S HOBBY

Lumber Co.'s V. P. Maintains Dance Band, and Profitably

Another "millionaire maestro," although maturer than Roger Wolfe Kahn, is Carroll Cooney, vice-president of a lumber company headquartered in the Woolworth building, New York. Cooney was all-American centre of Ted Coy's 1909 Yale football team.

Cooney has a dance band, maintained as a hobby, and a financially successful one, considering the society demand for his personal appearance with the outfit. Cooney plays sax, mandolin and violin among other instruments.

The Cooney orchestra will be heard every third week as the feature of the White Rock concerts, a recent addition to the NBC's radio advertisers.

LONDON AS IT LOOKS

By HANNEN SWAFFER

London, Feb. 10.

The All-Sacred Blacks

To give you an idea of the extraordinary way in which negro turns are now considered sacred in London, I may say that when I saw Josephine Baker, her first appearance being in a charity show here, I stated that "Josephine Baker is by no means a Florence Mills," and received a bitter letter of complaint, asking what right I had to criticize a charity function.

The truth is that the promoters of the film, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," devised a pardonable publicity stunt by arranging an all-negro matinee Sunday for the Thames Flood fund, gathered every negro turn from all parts of the country and, learning that Josephine Baker could not get to London in time, sent over an aeroplane specially, pulled her out of bed, and brought her back by air!

London-Alabama

The scene on the stage, when all the negroes assembled at the end, was extraordinary. It was just like Birmingham, Alabama, except that most of the colored people were in fashionable West End clothes, dressed like the Prince of Wales.

Baker's approaching arrival was announced every half hour or so, and when she came in, carried on the arms of two men, because she had sprained her ankle, there was terrific excitement.

No "Florence Mills Memorial"

Josephine forgot her ankle, however, when she did her Charleston. She sang so-so, but danced with vim.

Properly advertised, this matinee would have created a sensation. As it was, it was merely an interesting study in colored psychology.

Noble Sissle, formerly of Sissle and Blake, was the master of ceremonies, most enthusiastic. He had been up for nights arranging this matinee, which he considered a negro triumph in the way colored folk have been received in England.

Greenwald Makes a Hit

No actor's name was on the "Abie" bills or on the advertisements. Yet, so admirable was Greenwald's performance that they gave him a two weeks' contract at the Coliseum, made him the big star and then gave him another week's engagement—and a return date.

You can't keep a good man down.

"Sauce" Falling Off

"Sauce for the Gander" ("The Cradle Snatchers") with Iris Hoey, who gave a remarkable performance, was uproariously received. Yet nearly all the critics, excepting myself, slated it, calling the show indecent and all sorts of things. William Mollison altered the plot and cut the lines, even after the censor had passed it, much to the annoyance of the two authors.

I said I thought the play would run a year. So far, it has slumped.

After all, it is no worse than farce used to be, never mind what anybody says.

Not Noel Coward

"The Second Man," in which Noel Coward is starring as an actor, has caused curious talk. Many people seem to think that Coward wrote it, but was afraid to put it out under his own name. They had never heard of Behrman, I suppose, not knowing he was a writer of class. It is strange how stories like this circulate.

Variety "Command" Talk

The program for the Variety Command Performance also caused trouble. Four artists, who have appeared at other performances, were included. Four equally good ones were left out. I cannot understand how these programs are arranged.

My disclosure of the attempt to make it an international program, originally, changed that plan.

It is now an all-British bill. But one troupe of dancers is in that was in last year, when there are others equally good. Jack Hylton was put in at the last moment, in place of Syd Roy's Lyricals, who were surely entitled to a show. This is not said in criticism of Hylton.

Lilian Burgiss has appeared before, and so has Will Hay, Gillie Potter, George Carney, Max Wall and the Eight Lancashire Lads might reasonably have been chosen. There is great heartburning about it all.

Americans Want "Lumber Love"

For the first time in the history of musical plays since the days of George Edwardes, an offer has been received for a British musical play before its London production.

"Lumber Love," which I forced on managers, was sold to a musical publisher, Lawrence Wright, before he had heard one tune! One of the biggest New York producers cabled an offer. The Australian rights, too, are now being negotiated for.

All this bidding has come from the people who have never seen the show. So it shows what my reputation is worth. If I say that something is good, I suppose somebody believes it.

"Tin Gods" Was Clay Feet

"Tin Gods," the second play by the author of "Potiphar's Wife," was a fiasco. The first night audience applauded it. I do not know why. The paper said it was nonsense.

The plain fact is, I think, that the play is a good film story, but the production lost all the thrill and the talk wore away the punch. An American producer might have put it over.

CURBING NEWSREELS

decide against an item the minority must agree to abide by the ruling. If there are any opposing newsreel editors Hays has advised he expects to be called on.

The conference of the newsreel men was called by Hays because of the use of shots of William Hickman ("the Fox") who was recently found guilty for the brutal murder of Marian Parker, 12-year-old California girl.

Hays claimed that news shots of this and similar cases caused the industry more harm than any feature turned out in recent years. He added that the title of a picture, "Man, Woman and Sin," had resulted in more trouble than could be ironed out in five years.

The Hickman scenes were released by International after Pollock, editor, had queried E. B. Hatrick, of Cosmopolitan, on the matter. Hatrick was cold on the proposition, but it was explained as a try to determine whether there would not be a market for a newsreel devoted exclusively to sensational news.

Inspection is difficult and requires much time, with the result that the loss of whole sequences out of a picture is not noted in time to place the responsibility.

Russell Janney is going to London to present two musical attractions. "White Eagle," musical version of "The Squaw Man," off recently at the Casino. The production will be sent abroad as is.

Gypping agents in America should turn green with envy.

When a certain London agent gets a sap American, or other foreign act going along for a few weeks he figures the time ripe for a quick one. The victim is awakened in the middle of the night by his agent, accompanied by two "detectives." PARIS

By E. G. KENDREW

Paris, Feb. 13.

Isola Brothers have bought the French rights of "Hit the Deck." The song, "Hallaluyah," the present rage here, influenced the deal.

Jack Hylton's band will probably be the feature of the second edition of the Moulin Rouge revue next May. Mlle. Galatry, Oriental dancer, has joined the cast.

French authorities have decided to refuse a license for all war pictures, but those which were commenced prior to Dec. 31 last will be passed by the censor, if of proper character, for exhibition in France.

English Players at the Theatre Albert I, prior to their tour on the Riviera the end of February, will produce Harold Dearden's "Two White Arms," with Edward Stirling, Daphne Riggs, Isobel Edmonds, Stella Rho, Bernard Merefield, Gilson MacCormack, Reginald Rivington, Margaret Vaughan and Wilfred Bentley in the cast.

After appearing in Belgium the troupe returns here in April, mounting "The Life Saver" of Hubert Osborne, assistant director of Yale University's theatre, and author of "Shore Leave."

Alphonse Franck, lessee of Theatre Edouard VII, becomes chairman of a consortium directing the new Folies Wagram (to be inaugurated next month), the hall being built on the site of Duval restaurant; Boulevard Poissonniere, and the Bobino, recently restored in the Montparnasse and one of the oldest establishments in Paris. Malet, of the Bouffes Parisiens, will be musical director of the three.

SOUTH AFRICA

By H. HANSON

Cape Town, Jan. 20.

Christmas and New Year holidays combined with nice summer weather brought a large number of visitors. Outdoor entertainment reaped money.

Percy Hutchison at opera house in "The Silent House" and "Cock o' the Roost." Direction African Theatres, Ltd. Business good.

Rivoli, with vaude and pictures, doing well. Appearing during the season: Handers and Milliss, Three Bradleys, Sisters Simpson, Fynch and Payne, Barclay, Terry and Yorke, Bruno Sartl, Italian, Klein and Douglas, Amy and Cal Carter, Ronald Frankan and Cabaret, Kittens, Jerry and Co., Jack and Jill.

Alhambra (A 151). Business good. Pictures shown: "The Wanderer," "The Pelican," "Vaudeville," "Little Annie Rooney," "Thief of Bagdad," "Roses of Picardy," "Love of Sunya," "Cohens and Kellys," "Missing Link."

Building operations going ahead for new super cinema, erected by African Theatres. Rumors are around that a central site has been secured in Capetown to erect a theatre for staging grand opera to cinema shows. It is intended to form a limited liability company in connection with the new venture.

Kinemas, Ltd., opposition to African Theatres, is putting through much publicity in connection with schemes for a chain of cinema theatres through South Africa. Latest is the registration of a company styled Kinemas (Cape suburbs), Ltd., with the information the capital, $125,000, is being privately subscribed and three cinemas to be built in Capetown suburbs.

The program of this concern since its start, about six months ago, is somewhat ambitious, as announced. It remains to be seen if it will be fulfilled according to advertised publicity.

Olive van Eyssen, clever South African actress, making good in England, has been compelled to return to this country, due to ill health.

Business satisfactory, although big exodus to the coast for the holidays. "Puss in Boots," panto., doing well at His Majesty's. Cast: Peggy Whiteside, Diana Maxwell, George Wallett, Basil Osborne, Leslie Hatton, Justus Gerrard, Marjorie Fulton, Phil Ralfis Duo, Jimmy Taylor, Edgar Stanmore,; premiere danseuse, Ivy Coumee.

Kinemas, Ltd., recently took action for an interdict against African Theatres, Ltd., in connection with the war film, "The Somme," to restrain them from advertising by newspaper or posters a picture called "The Battle of the Somme," an alleged infringement of the film purchased by the applicants. Several exceptions were brought forward by the defendants, which were finally upheld by the court with costs against Kinenias, Ltd.

National Sporting Club of Johannesburg finding difficulty in securing suitable boxers from England, engaged two men in the States, Bennie Burns, lightweight, and Frankie Wine, heavyweight. Burns will be matched early this year against a local man, Ernie Eustice, and Wine will enter the ring against the South African champion, Johnny Squires.

With regard to the fortune left by Mrs. Howes of Brewster, New York, widow of one of the partners in the Howes and Cushing Circus, who died last year, leaving $9,000,000, it was rumored Charlie and Lily Joe, professionally Charlene and Charlene, who came to this country in 1918 as a juggling act under contract to the African Theatres, and have resided in Johannesburg ever since, were beneficiaries under the will.

Charlene states that this is incorrect, as neither he or his wife would benefit. He met his great-aunt, the late Mrs. Howes, once when he was in America some years ago, and he never expected to be included in her will.

African Theatres has put over a theatre deal in Rhodesia. Four theatres have been bought outright, Palace, Bulawayo; Empire, Bulawayo; Palace, Salisbury, and Royal, Tatoonma. Edith Clifford, the clever American comedienne, is a big hit at the Empire. Carl Kellard is at the piano.

At the Empire also are Adrienne and Meazza; Byron and Byron;

4 NEW PLAYS, 2 REVUES IN PARIS SHOW LINEUP

Paris, Feb. 21.

Five new plays and a new revue theatre have occupied the French capital over the past ten days or so, the newest being "Le Carnival de l'Amour," melodrama, at the Porte St. Martin. Piece was moderate success and takes its novelty from having as its hero a handsome gigolo, and as its heroine a young demondaine.

In the list of others are the new Folies Bergere revue, a dramatized novel, several farces and a society stage venture.

Love Carnival

"Le Carnival" is the work of Charles Mere, originally announced as "Mlle. Jasmin." The plot concerns Jasmin, daughter of a woman of the half world, who falls in love with Roger, a handsome and elegant gigolo. Roger refuses to marry the girl when he learns she is about to become a mother, and instead she weds an elderly millionaire, to whom she is faithful for years.

Later on she meets Roger again, but the debonair gigolo is ruined through his disreputable business schemes. She tries to save her former lover, confessing her past to her husband in order to enlist his help. Husband is about to cast the woman off in anger, when he drops dead of apoplexy, leaving the way open for the lovers to be united, and for the gigolo to reform. In the cast Vera Sergine, Henri Rollan, Joffre, Jean Toulout and Marcelle Praince.

Novel on Stage

"L'Homme a l'Hispano" ("Man With the Hispano Car"), Pierre Frondale's own dramatic version of his novel, fared nicely at the Madeleine. Story has to do with a stranger in a stolen automobile, who fascinates an Englishman's French wife, but commits suicide when he is unmasked, bringing about their reconciliation. Piece was done three years ago under the title of "Le Marche au Destin."

Wizard Apprentice

"L'Apprenti Sorcier" was staged Saturday evening (Feb. 18) at the Femina by one of the groups called the Grimace. It is the work of Charles Feval and Andre Froment and seemed to meet the approval of the audience.

Folies Bergere Renewed

With the house remodeled and seating capacity enlarged, the Folies Bergere reopened with a new specialty and spectacle show called "Le Grand Folie," signed Lemarchand. Among the novelties are a race of greyhounds on a roller platform, a ship at sea with the illusion of sailing toward the audience bow on, and an elabroate electric scene. Dodge Sisters are featured. Andre Randal is amusing.

Broadside

"En Bordee," risky three-act farce by Pierre Veber and Andre Heuze, was revealed at the Scala to an uproarious reception. It has to do with the sprightly doings of sailors ashore on leave in company with damsels of lighten-minded gaiety.

All these are in addition to the opening of a new revue-vaudeville show in the basement of the Cafe du Globe.

Bertram Forsyth's Estate

Bertram Forsyth, English actor and playwright, who died here, Sept. 16, last, left property in New York valued at $2,000, it became known, when his widow, Marie Therese Forsyth, of 620 Riverside drive, applied to the New York County Surrogates' Court for ancillary letters of administration of her husband's estate. The London property of Mr. Forsyth is estimated at $4,000.

Under the terms of the will, admitted to probate in London because he was a British subject, Mrs. Forsyth inherits the residuary estate. Basil Sydney and Mrs. Winnie Hutton, both of London, are the executors. The testator gave his "theatrical, musical and artistic collection," with the exception of such articles as his widow chooses to keep for herself, to the Savage Club, "to be placed as far as possible in one room at the club house where it may be seen at all times."

ANSWERS TO EQUITY'S FIVE QUESTIONS ON ACTORS IN ENG.

London, Feb. 21.

Answers to the five questions cabled over to be submitted in writing by Equity to the American Ambassador here, in the matter of foreign professionals appearing in Great Britain and Labor permits, are:

Question 1:

Is there any immigration quota for England, and, if so, are actors included in it?

Answer:

There is no immigration quota in England.

Question 2:

Can an American actor who has no engagement enter England to look for work?

Answer:

Question 3:

How long is an American actor, who is under contract to an English producer, permitted to remain in England?

Answer:

Artists under contract are permitted to remain for the entire time contracted for.

This also covers the point as to passport vise.

Question 4:

If the production in which an American actor in England is playing should have a long run must the vise on his passport be renewed, and, if so, what is the procedure of renewal, and for how long may it be renewed?

Answer:

Answer same as for Question 3.

Question 5:

If the production in which an American actor under contract is playing in England should close shortly after opening, say in two weeks, is the actor at liberty to stay and look for other work, or may such an actor remain as a visitor without seeking work, or is such an actor compelled to return to the United States at once?

Answer:

If show abruptly stops, artists are allowed to accept other engagements if the case and value of the actor or act merits extension of the Minister of Labor's permit.

Ministry deals with every case on its individual merit and does not refuse a labor permit unless for a mediocre artist who would merely displace native talent without adding to the value of the show.

About Alden Gay

Alden Gay, over whom this controversy started, has applied several times for a permit, but as such engagements as she received were at $30 weekly, Ministry saw no need for her services over here.

Miss Gay is an American. She was paid $30 for her week in a play at the Kew theatre some time ago, and the Ministry's view stated she was not necessary to the cast, depriving a native artist of the job.

The Home Office says it cannot issue a statement until officially advised of the impending questionnaire for information by Equity through the American Ambassador.

Emerson Advised

When John Emerson, president of Equity, was in London last year he visited the Minister of Labor. All of the points now raised were then threshed out, with Emerson reported having expressed a complete understanding of the situation.

Basil Hastings Dies

London, Feb. 21.

Basil Macdonald Hastings, 47, died here today.

521 Permits in '27

London, Feb. 21.

Permits to work here in 1927, issued by the Ministry of Labor under the alien order to Americans, total:

Legit stage artists, 102.
Vaudeville-cabaret, 293.
Circus, 16.
Concert stage, 72.
Musicians, 38.

Permits issued to legitimate stage artists of all nationalities for the same period were 107, making the American percentage of this category just over 95 per cent.

These figures are the revised official statement to Variety by the Ministry and correct the estimated figures previously given.

NEW LEGIT HOUSE IN LONDON SEATING 2,600

Costing $1,000,000—Butt and Gillespie Directors—Opening in March, 1929

London, Feb. 20.

A company has been formed with a capital of $1,400,000, divided into 250,000 ordinary shares of $5 each and 600,000 deferred shares of 25c each, and arrangements have been made to borrow a further $75,000 on mortgage debentures at 6 per cent., to build a theatre on the old Meux brewery site, at the junction of Tottenham Court road and New Oxford street, at a cost of $1,000,000, to seat 2,600.

The property is being purchased from Solly Joel for $950,000, $95,000 of which is payable immediately and balance March 1, 1929, or earlier if the theatre is completed before that time. When completed, the house will operate in conjunction with Moss Empires, Drury Lane, Victoria Palace and Glasgow Alhambra for the production of high-class theatrical shows.

Sir Alfred Butt and R. H. Gillespie have been appointed managing directors for seven years at $5,000 per annum each, plus five per cent. of the profits after the payment of 7½ per cent. to the ordinary shareholders.

Moss Empires and Drury Lane guarantee the shareholders a dividend of 7½ per cent. per annum on the ordinary shares for the first five years in the remote event of this new theatre not being a success.

The board of directors consists of Sir Alfred Butt, R. H. Gillespie, Lord Lurgan, J. A. E. Malone and J. J. Gillespie.

The auditorium will have a width of 109 feet and a depth of 110 feet, and the proscenium opening will be 48 feet. There will be the following seating accommodations: Stalls, 1,200; royal circle, 328; grand circle, 372; upper circle, 680.

Frank Harwood, English, Charged With Bigamy

Portland, Ore., Feb. 21.

Frank Harwood, leader of the Pantages theatre orchestra since the house opened a year ago, may be deported to England by immigration officials, on a charge of bigamy. Harwood, according to R. P. Bonham, immigration officer of the Northwest, is charged with having abandoned his wife and children in England, coming to United States with another man's wife.

It develops that Harwood's name is an alias, he having been known as Henry Reed, the name by which he was known on the Pacific Coast since 1912.

According to Bonham, Harwood has been living with another woman in this city, leaving his family in England a few years ago.

Pantages will probably give Harwood air to avoid unfavorable publicity on the house, when the government hearing akes place in March. Harwood came to the Portland Pantages from the Spokane house.

WILL MAHONEY

Thomas Van Dyke in last Sunday's New York "Telegraph" said: "Will Mahoney is as good a knockout as there is on the stage today. His dancing is great. He can deliver lines with a punch. He sings a nut song like nobody, and his curtain speeches are priceless."

Rothermere Paper Issue Holds Up Theatre Deals

London, Feb. 21.

It is given out on authority here that the Szarvasy theatre deals and flotation of a company, including the completion of the deal for the Gulliver halls, have been temporarily suspended while Szarvasy puts out the new Lord Rothermere issue of $15,000,000 to the public for the 14 new Rothermere afternoon papers.

The British Foreign and Colonial Investment Corporation, making this issue, is Szarvasy's finance organization. The dope is that he is holding up the theatre proposition while the bigger issue for the newspapers is being put over.

Total capital of the new Rothermere company is $22,500,000 with the public issue of $15,000,000 made this week. When this is cleared up, the theatre deal may be expected to go ahead immediately.

Hylton's Slander Damage

London, Feb. 21.

Jack Hylton's slander suit against the chairman of the Piccadilly Hotel resulted in a verdict of $250 for the band leader. Hylton introduced copies of "Variety" as evidence.

Unofficially, it was stated that no appeal will be taken on the theory that if the court assessed Hylton's name damage at $250, the hotel was willing to accept that valuation.

Two New Musicals

London, Feb. 21.

Sir Alfred Butt's next show for the Drury Lane is "Show Boat."

This musical is due to follow "The Desert Song," although Butt says no show has been definitely assigned to the famed theatre.

Buchanan is also framing this piece for New York.

Irene Franklin's Return

London, Feb. 21.

After a year's absence, Irene Franklin returned here and opened yesterday at the Alhambra (vaudeville), as headliner.

Miss Franklin scored neatly with a well arranged repertoire, mostly consisting of old favorites.

Jerry Jarnigan accompanied at the piano.

WANTS MORE CAPACITY

London, Feb. 21.

"The Yellow Mask," doing $17,000 weekly at the Carlton, wants to move to a house of larger capacity.

It is competing with "Lumber Love" to obtain the Lyceum.

"LAST GASP" WELL NAMED

London, Feb. 21.

A cheap mystery play that just won't do came into the Q theatre last night titled "The Last Gasp."

Team Well Advertised

Paris, Feb. 21.

Layton and Johnson (Americans) due at the Empire, beginning Feb. 24, are being well advertised in advance.

NO TROUBLE FOR PROS IN CANADA U. S. AND BRITISH STATUS SAME

Immigration Bureau at Washington on Crossing the Northern Border—Advises Foreigners to Carry Passports—No Change in Rulings

Washington, Feb. 21.

Recent controversy between Canada and the United States over indiscriminate crossing of our northern border has not affected status of professionals going into Canada.

Immigration authorities ruled that Canadians working on this side of the border and returning to Canada at night were in this country on a permanent basis and would have to secure immigration visa.

Though the belief gained circulation it would effect show people it is stated at the Immigration Bureau here that such is not the case.

An American citizen can go in and out of Canada at will. "It is not essential," to quote the bureau officials, "for that citizen to carry his birth certificate—but it is persuasive if necessary to establish the visitor as of American birth."

Question is seldom raised with born U. S. citizens. Certain mannerisms of speech, etc., are so known to the inspectors that they experience little difficulty. However the naturalized citizen, particularly if with an accent, no matter how slight, always raises a question and proof of that naturalization is usually demanded.

Britishers

Canada treats British subjects coming from the U. S., who have been lawfully admitted here, either on a temporary or permanent status, as Americans—they may cross at will if their stay in Canada is less than six months. Hence an English professional in the U. S. can play engagements in Canada without restraint. He may, however, be called upon to give documentary proof of his right to be in the U. S. and the Bureau suggests foreigners carry passports at all times.

For the Britisher, if he is "domiciled" (and that word is important in Canadian law) in Canada, has the same privilege to enter the U. S. at will without a special passport or documents of any kind, providing his visit is on this side confined to six months.

"JUDITH, OF ISRAEL," LONDON, APPROVED

Written by N. Y. Physician—Sybil Thorndyke in Lead—"Wipes Out Memories"

London, Feb. 21.

What was probably the most distinguished audience seen in a London theatre in months greeted "Judith, of Israel" at the Strand with Sybil Thorndike in the title role. Written by Dr. Demarnay Baruch, New York physician, and produced by Miss Thorndike and her husband, Lewis Casson, the management cannot possibly get back its investment on the scheduled six-week run, prior to the actress' African tour.

Miss Thorndike was chosen for the part by the author after he had seen her in "Saint Joan." Production here is the play's first showing on any stage. The apocryphal story was accorded round approval by the premier audience for which Baruch, recently offered the American Ambassadorship to Vienna, had high diplomats present.

Produced in a style worthy of Beerbohm Tree tradition, Casson later stepped before the enthusiastic house and said that "Judith" had washed out the memory of the many plays America had sent here of late.

GIBBONS-GULLIVER AND DEVELOPMENTS

London, Feb. 21.

Some curious developments have arisen in the Gibbons deal for the purchase of the Palladium and other Gulliver houses. A bet was made here that Sir Walter Gibbons would not be on the directorate of the new company.

Gulliver has moved his offices from the Holborn Empire building, and immediately an act he had barred for many years was booked. However, Gulliver is still supervising the bills. When finding this act penciled in, he canceled it. Demonstrating that Gulliver is still in authority.

A huge organ is being installed at the Palladium and Horace Sheldon, for years musical director at the house, has been engaged in a similar capacity for the Winter Garden.

Latest report is that the Gibbons syndicate has bought three Golde houses: Blue Hall Islington, Highbury Cinema, and Essex Road Cinema.

NEW PARIS HALL

Paris, Feb. 21.

The old name of Jardin de Paris has been chosen for the new establishment just opened in the basement of the famous Cafe du Globe on the Boulevard de Strasbourg after many postponements.

Specialties include Armand Bernard, Cariel, Marjal, Goupil, Mmes. Gina Relly, Gisele Mars, Germaine Diaz, Pepee and Laura Hayward, who also is interested in the enterprise.

TRIX SISTERS TALKING

London, Feb. 21.

Trix Sisters, Helen and Josephine, have made up. The breach occurred some time ago when Josephine married.

Whether the girls will reunite for stage purposes is not known.

PARIS LIKES "CIRCUS"

Paris, Feb. 21.

Charles Chaplin's new comedy, "The Circus," had a successful local premiere at the Marivaux, Feb. 16.

Mann Leaves Kit Cat

London, Feb. 21.

Billy Mann, leading the band at the Kit Cat restaurant and acting as m.c. there at $500 weekly, has left after six weeks.

The understanding is that Mann received $2,500 in settlement of his contract.

N. Y. AND PHILLY FACTIONS IN SCRAP FOR STANLEY CONTROL--BANKERS CONCERNED

Report in New York Says Stanley May Pass Dividend — Building Operations on Five Philly Theatres Suspended Last Week—Outlying Houses Turned Back—Conference Meeting This Week

Factions among the stockholders of the Stanley Company of America (Philadelphia) are entering a scrap for control between New York and Philadelphia, from reports. It further says the New York end is the more desirous of being in full power.

This report is coupled with a rumor that the Stanley Company may pass its next dividend, the latter arising, it is said, from the fact that last week all construction work was suspended on five new theatres the Stanley Company is erecting in Philadelphia. Among the five is the 5,000-seater at Market and 28th street.

A number of outlying Philadelphia houses, recently built locally and operated by the Stanley Company, were lately turned back to their sponsors. Included in that group were the Wynne and Egyptian theatres.

No Merging Talk

Philadelphia bankers concerned in the Stanley Company, the Smith and Earle banking houses, are on an agreeable footing with the Stanley people, but it is said there are other bankers interested who are not so inclined.

An informal meeting of the Stanley Company is dated for some time this week to talk over the general situation, especially as to building plans.

Pending the internal adjustment within the Stanley corporation, of which Irving Rossheim is now president and John J. McGuirk chairman of the board, all talk of Stanley amalgamation or merging with Fox or others has ceased. The same extends to the control of First National, in which Stanley holds a 25 per cent interest as against Fox's 34 per cent in First National shares.

George Earle, head of the banking house which, with the E. B. Smith interests, has been actively concerned in Stanley since its beginning, died Monday.

$10,000 to Advertise "Whip Woman" 5 Days

Because of the terrific pannings handed "The Whip Woman" (First National), the Greenwich Village theatre rushed in a two-year old Warner Bros. picture, "Lady Windemere's Fan" to complete the first two-week bill. "The Whip Woman" lasted five days.

The Greenwich Village theatre has spent around $10,000 in newspaper advertising. Five two-inch ads in most of the papers ran for several days and for the first week five one-inch ads scattered, appeared to be the smallest space allotment.

The house has 365 seats and is said to be paying Rafaelo Diaz, Metropolitan Opera tenor, $2,000 per week to warble twice daily.

Miss Logan Walks Out

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Jacqueline Logan doesn't believe that husbands should be cruel. She thinks it is enough for her to stand the torture from the studio "heavy" without coming home and getting the works from friend hubby.

After three years of marriage to "Bud" Gillespie, promoter, Miss Logan walked out, leaving a check on the bureau which he could cash, and left town. Then her attorney filed suit for divorce in Superior Court charging Gillespie with extreme cruelty.

N. T. Dinner March 31

At the Hotel Astor March 31 will be held the annual Naked Truth Dinner, an event in the film trade of New York.

The dinner is provided by the publicity and advertising boys of the industry in the metropolis.

Al Jolson's "Doubles"

What is considered one of the darb happenings of the current film season is the employment of a stage entertainer to double for Al Jolson where "The Jazz Singer" is without Vitaphone accompaniment.

A singer named Ben Gold was engaged last week for an out of town theatre to sing the Jolson songs during the showing of the film.

M-G-M DELEGATES LAID WREATH FOR MARCUS

Delegates to the M-G-M International Convention of sales managers took matters in their own hands last Friday morning, dodging the official program, and journeying in a bus to the Marcus Loew mausoleum on Long Island to lay a wreath.

Each delegate wore a flower in his button hole, and following a foreign custom, said to be of Swedish origin, each laid his separate flower by the wreath.

It had been suggested to the delegates when the matter was first broached that they pick a committee of three to take the wreath. This did not suit the foreign representatives, who proceeded to ignore all other plans made for them in order to pay their respects.

HARLAN'S MARITAL TANGLE

Two Divorces Between Him and Helen Patterson—Into Vaud

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Kenneth Harlan, who left acting in pictures to go on the legit stage, is rehearsing an act for vaudeville with Helen Patterson, former lead in coast production of "Sunny."

The pair announced their engagement some time ago, but it later developed that Harlan had not yet received his final decree of divorce from Marie Prevost, while Miss Patterson still has a husband east.

Sam Salvin, of Lyons & Lyons, now on the coast, is arranging for an eastern opening of the act.

Joe Rock's Own Films

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Joe Rock, producing for Sterling, has three more features to make to complete his present contract of 20 for this season.

It is understood Rock will organize a new producing and distributing organization to handle his future product.

MORE EUROPE MIGRATIONS

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

With the closing of the Christie studios for a long vacation, many of its workers are planning European trips. Among those definitely set to go across the pond are Arvid E. Gillstrom, director, who sails from New York Feb. 25.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beaudine plan to leave March 2, and Bobby Vernon and his wife will leave for a tour through Scotland.

CHADWICK EAST

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

I. E. Chadwick is en route to New York, where he will negotiate new deals for future production and distribution of his pictures.

It is also understood while here, Chadwick will shop around for additional books and works of literature to add to his Hollywood library.

FAN MAGS MAY LOSE STUDIO STANDING

Article in "Classics" and Talk of Criminal Prosecution—Assailed by Name

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Fan magazine representatives may have their Hollywood studio privileges chopped off as a result of a slurring article in "Motion Picture Classics," one of the monthly fan group. The story was written by Glady Hall, wife of a New York photographer.

Action looking toward prosecution for criminal libel against the magazine's publishers and writer, may be taken by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the WAMPAS, and the several picture players designated by name in the story, headed, "The Besetting Sins of Hollywood." The players mentioned have retained attorneys to bring actions.

Petty Grafters

It is claimed that a number of representatives of fan papers have been practising petty graft upon the producers and stars. Several of the magazine writers are upon the payrolls of studios. These will be given an alternative of one or the other.

The Academy will hold a meeting this week and probably adopt a resolution, and the WAMPAS will also meet for a similar purpose.

From the article one would deduce its writer took an extraordinarily long chance, to attract attention to herself, with little regard for the facts or names used.

FREE LANCE CONTRACT BACK FOR REVISION

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Attacks from several quarters on the standard contract for free lance actors adopted by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences resulted in the board of directors of the Academy referring back the contract to the original committee for clarification. The contract has been used by all producer members of the Academy since Jan. 1.

Criticism directed against the contract was that producers could twist the legal phraseology of certain clauses to their own advantage. The Academy board carefully reviewed the criticisms and the contract itself, but could find no justification for complaint. In order to silence any attacks, the board referred the contract back to the committee with instructions that it be clarified in wording to prevent any further misconstruction.

Committee handling the actors' contract consists of B. P. Schulberg and M. C. Levee, representing the producers; Conrad Nagel and Hallam Cooley representing the actors, and a fifth member from the directors' branch of the Academy.

New draft will be ready for submission to the board in about a month.

Avalon's New House

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

A new theatre building will be erected at Avalon by the Catalina Island Co. House will have a seating capacity of 2,000.

A large dance hall will occupy the third floor of the building. Webber and Spaulding architects.

MAE BUSCH'S PLAYLET

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Mae Busch will start in a vaudeville sketch, "Capital Punishment," written by Richard Hyland and Adele Rogers St. John.

Bebe Daniels Recovering

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Bebe Daniels is home from the hospital following her accident during work on "Hold Everything," Par.

Production will be delayed another week pending Miss Daniel's recovery.

Discredited Exhib "Leaders" Only Retard Understanding; Tip for Hays

On the comment in last week's Variety, concerning the so-called indie exhibitor leaders who push themselves forward on every issue confronting the industry, to secure publicity for themselves and in many instances creating a nuisance value, which they may capitalize, a prominent exhibitor says the practical business men among the indies are wise to these men and that they are generally ignored in the more important exhib conferences.

He stated not one of these "loud speakers" had been invited to attend the Sapiro conferences, and that the conferees were amazed at the progress made on the co-ordination plan, without the usual fan fare.

The exhib took a slam at the Hays organization for recognizing this self-appointed exhibitor leadership, which in many instances had no real picture financial interest at stake. He deplored that Hays had allowed such a rift to appear between the exhibitors and the producers on many important questions effecting the industry.

The exhib pointed out that recrimination and grievances aired in the heat of controversy before the general public were having a bad effect and joyfully received by the common enemies of the business, the reformers.

It was his opinion that if Hays called in several hard-headed exhibitors among the indies instead of conferring with exhibitor-setups, the whole matter could be ironed out within 24 hours.

WEATHER FORECAST

Washington, Feb. 21.

From questions put to the Weather Bureau, the following outlook is for the week commencing tomorrow (Wednesday) for the territory east of the Mississippi:

Increasing cloudiness with rising temperature Wednesday.

General rains Wednesday night and Thursday over southern districts; snows and rains over northern district.

Colder weather with decidedly colder temperatures over northern districts is indicated for Friday and Saturday, with snow flurries in the lower Lake region.

Weather conditions during the past week, beginning Monday, Feb. 13, sum up as follows with the data being secured from the weather bureau:

Western (Wash., Ore., Cal., Idaho, Nev. and Utah). Storm over Washington, northern Idaho and extending into Montana and part of Oregon Monday, Feb. 13. Cleared early with the week practically clear throughout. This extending over into the current week. Little variance in temperature though slight rise Monday this week.

Central (Mont., Wyo., Colo., No. and So. Dak., Neb., Kans., Minn., Iowa, Mo., Wis., Ill., Western Mich, Ind., and Western Ky.). Rains and snows in some portions throughout entire week. First clear day of entire section Sunday, Feb. 19. Each day different with each section some days of clear weather. Temperature dropped toward end of week. Missouri down 20 degrees one day. Moved northward next day.

Southern (Ariz., New Mex., Okla., Tex., Ark., La., Miss., Tenn. Ala., No. and So. Car., Ga, and Fla.). Central portion to south, including New Orleans, opened with rain. Moved northward and east, including part of Florida. Cleared for one day and then another rain, which held until Saturday. That day practically clear throughout entire section. Clear for opening of current week. Temperature dropped 20 degrees during the week on gulf coast line from Florida west. Recovered 10 degrees at end of week.

Eastern (Eastern Mich., Ohio, Eastern Ky., W. Va., N. Y., Penn., Va., Me., N. H., Vt., Mass., Conn., Del., N. J., Md. and D. C.). Opened clear but with southern storms moving up, covering entire section by Tuesday night. Snows and rains recorded, even in southern portion Cleared and then back to storms again. Sunday opened clear for the current week except in isolated instances. Marked rise in temperature at opening of last week only to have the reverse occur at the close of week. Rising again Sunday and Monday of this week.

GEORGE LEWIS MARRYING

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

M.-G.-M. renewed its contract with Robert Z. Leonard, who will direct four more pictures for that producer.

FRENCH FILM DECREE SIGNED

Imports in Censors' Hands —After Americans

Paris, Feb. 21.

President of the French Republic Saturday signed the new Cinematograph decree providing for a censor commission. It will control all importation of foreign pictures beginning March 1.

The law requires a license from the commission before a foreign picture can be exhibited. Shortreels, news reels, travel subjects and educationals are not included in the operation of the new restriction.

The measure, frankly aimed at American product, which practically monopolizes the market here as well as in other continental countries, sets up drastic rules. Pictures must be shown to the commission in exactly the form in which they were exhibited in their native country, with titles and action unaltered. This is a blow at the American trade.

American producers have commonly sent out special editions for overseas in which the home version was revised. This practice is forbidden and it may bar expensive productions from this market.

Producers will be called upon to meet the cost of the inspection, which will be in the hands of 32 officials appointed by the President. The law also has quota provisions, setting up the ratio of nine foreign productions for one domestic.

Studios Again Peeved on Members' Personal P. A.'s

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

The studios are again up in arms over players, writers and directors hiring free lance press agents.

Producers, some time ago, attempted to curtail the free lancers, but without success. Officials contend the players and others, in an endeavor to satisfy their own ego, give the free lance boys many stories to shoot to th newspapers before the studio really has the deals closed. In a number of cases, premature publication has proved embarrassing.

One of the large coast studios, after continually warning its members against hiring press agents, finally gave one of its featured players a closing check without explanation. The actor had tipped his p. a. on a pending deal in the studio.

Barrymore's Stage Return

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

John Barrymore has finished his contract with United Artists and will probably go to New York soon to appear on the stage.

Barrymore has had several film propositions but is holding all in abeyance until he completes final scenes in "The Tempest," his last for U. A.

PAR. REJECTS AVIATRIX

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

There will be no film contract for Ruth Elder as far as Paramount is concerned.

The girl flyer made a screen test a few weeks ago.

Committees May Lock Over Point in Proposed Standard Contract for Free Lances—Another Clash Before Final Approval Also Expected

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Limiting producers to three days in which to accept or reject an adaptation or scenario by a free lance writer is one of the clauses submitted by the writers' representatives, appointed to draw a standard contract for free lance scenarists.

This clause is only one of many which Waldemar Young and Al A. Cohn, writer members of the committee working through the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, have submitted to B. P. Schulberg and M. C. Levee, representing the producers in the contract negotiations. Schulberg and Levee will look over the suggested clauses and add the conditions they think necessary for the protection of producers in engaging free lancers.

The time limit clause for a producer in deciding on a submitted adaptation or script is intended to eliminate the current practice of producing executives holding up writers for an unreasonable time before giving a decision. Writers have continually complained of studio officials holding stories for weeks without even reading them, with the writer forced to wait for the decision before able to accept other assignments.

It is understood this clause will be fought by the producers' representatives, but the writers' representatives will stand pat for a time limit. There may be no standard writers' contract unless the time clause for a producers' acceptance is contained therein.

After the tentative contract is worked out by the committee of four, it will be submitted by the writer representatives to the board of directors of the Screen Writers Guild for approval. Endorsement will have to be obtained from the Guild before the writers' members of the Academy committee will officially approve the contract.

It is understood there will be more difficulty in getting a final approval on a free lance writers contract than was encountered in the drafting of the standard contract for players.

No Shearer-Thalberg New York Interview

Irving Thalberg and his wife, Norma Shearer, came pretty close to a world's record when neither would grant an interview while in New York, prior to their sailing last night (Tuesday) on the "Mauretania." They are off on a delayed honeymoon.

Before leaving Hollywood, Miss Shearer was advised by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer it had exercised its option upon her for another year.

The forthcoming M-G-M year of starhood may be Mrs. Thalberg's final public appearance before the camera. She has expressed a desire to retire and her husband is reported in accord.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Sam Wood will direct.

JOLSON'S NEXT VITA

Al Jolson is slated to do another Vitaphone feature for Warner Bros. in June.

The theme considered is "Pagliacci," modernized.

Preview Ultimatum

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

West Coast Theatres has issued an ultimatum to First National.

It's to the effect that if F. N. previews any pictures at the Forum theatre here, these same films will not be eligible for release in any West Coast house.

Neilan in England Has No Agreement With U. A.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Jos. M. Schenck, head of United Artists, states that Marshall Neilan has no arrangement with U. A. to make any pictures abroad that will be released over here through the Schenck organization, nor has U. A. any agreement to distribute for British Filmcraft in America.

When Schenck was last abroad he arranged for one picture to be made on the other side that United Artists will release for America. That picture will be made by Rex Ingram and star his wife, Alice Terry. Ingram's pictures, as a rule, cost around $400,000.

London, Feb. 21.

Upon arrival here to direct Gertrude Lawrence in her initial picture for British Filmcraft, one of the new concerns which will release in America, it is said, through United Artists, "Mickey" Neilan is understood to have informed the company that instead of spending $150,000 on the production, Joseph M. Schenck will not permit any U. A. British-made release unless the film costs $500,000.

British Filmcraft executives, a recently formed picture concern, believe they may be the first to cinch real releasing channels in America before a production has been started.

Filmcraft had been negotiating with Neilan for several weeks, the director leaving Hollywood after the English firm had deposited $10,000 to his credit in a London bank.

Another angle to British Filmcraft is that Paramount is reported to have acquired six two-reelers from this local company for its quota here. The subject of the films is "Sexton Blake," a detective series published as a weekly feature on this side by the Amalgamated Press.

This series is to be directed by George Cooper, the stories being plugged here some years ago by Al Lichtman for Cooper's direction of a series of two-reel dramas.

Through the unusual sounding statements contained in the London cable, it was sent on to Variety's office in Los Angeles, for Joe Schenck's comment. That appears at the head of this story.

"Moulin Rouge," B. I. Special At Tivoli, London, on Split

London, Feb. 21.

"Moulin Rouge," British International's picture, which follows "The Student Prince" (M-G-M) at the Tivoli next month, goes in on a percentage basis. The first $12,500 gross goes to the house, with 6 50-50 split between theatre and film on anything over that amount.

M-G-M has the distribution rights for America.

GERMAN DOG'S NAME

"Bonaparte," German police dog once featured by M-G-M, will appear in "The Danger Patrol" to be produced by Duke Worne for Rayart.

BUYING COMBINE OF $4,000,000

Noted Organizer for Three Years at $100,000 Salary Annually—Every Theatre Bound by Lien Clause—No National Organization Contemplated, but Regions May Be Similarly Organized—Greater New York Theatres Only in at Present

PROTECTIVE MOVE

Within 10 days there will be in operation an organization of independent exhibitors, known as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, in Greater New York, comprising approximately 250 theatres, under the guidance of Aaron Sapiro, noted attorney and industrial organizer.

This is the first time that an independent theatre group of this magnitude has ever been lined up under the stringent conditions and policies adopted by the association.

It is estimated by theatre operators that this combination enhances the value of independent theatre holdings in the metropolitan district at least 50 per cent. Since, as a combination, these houses assume a new valuation, it is not unlikely that chain operators will shortly attempt to buy in with Fox, the most logical possibility on account of his small representation in New York.

Aaron Sapiro, president of the new organization, stated Monday that work would actually be under way in about a week, as soon as offices have been established.

The combination represents a greater seating capacity in New York than all the chain theatres combined and a film buying power closely estimated at $4,000,000 annually, as compared with a total of

McCarthy O. K.s "Trail"

J. J. McCarthy will handle the roadshowing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Trail of '98," which comes into the Astor, New York, March 13. Major Bowes, David Mendoza and William Axt are working on the musical score.

This is the third M-G super McCarthy has directed on its legit house career, the others being "Big Parade" and "Ben-Hur."

"Trail" represents a cost of $1,100,000. Scenes on it are still being made on the coast that may add another $25,000.

1st Theatre Loan In Chi. in 18 Months

Chicago, Feb. 21.

The first local loan for theatre construction within 18 months was granted last week by H. O. Stone & Co., bond house, to the Mont Claire Building Corp., newly formed by Basil Charuka, president, and Lewis Spirrison, secretary.

Amount granted in a letter of commitment is $275,000, for construction of a 1,500-seat vaudfilm house, costing $500,000, at 1710 W. Grand avenue, to open Sept. 1. W. P. Whitney is architect.

Ambitious independents looking for financial assistance in Chicago have been met with flat refusals from the bond houses of late, with the latter thoroughly aware of the town's overseated condition.

Sheehan and Pola Negri

No closure has been reported reached between Fox and Pola Negri, although there is no denial that negotiations have been on between the star and Winnie Sheehan.

Miss Negri has been with Paramount under a weekly contract of $8,500. When she asked $10,000 weekly for a renewal term, the producer balked.

Pathe Quitting Shorts

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

It is understood Pathe has about determined to discontinue the release of short reel comedies next season. The story is that the company lost money in that particular department last year.

Owing to the state of its cash resources, the concern figures it cannot afford to spend more than $15,000 per subject and has broached the matter with producers on that basis.

The producers answered that the quality of output the distributor had in mind and the names it sought would represent a negative cost of not less than $25,000.

U'S $280,000 FOR IDLE CONTRACT PLAYERS

Must Pay Off 75 People During 8 Weeks' Studio Closing —Totals $35,000 Week

Los Angeles, Feb. 23.

Universal has more than 75 people under contract who will have to be carried over the present eight-week closing period. Some of these contract people have four and eight weeks lay off clauses in their contracts, but the majority have had that clause already exercised by the company or are in a position to have it excluded. This will result in an approximate weekly payroll of $35,000 to people who are idle for the company, or a total expenditure of $280,000 that will have to be charged off and pro rated as overhead on future Universal productions.

In the event some of these people can be farmed out at a profit, the revenue will tend to reduce the losses.

MAE MURRAY'S RECORD

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Mae Murray broke all previous records at the Chicago theatre for four shows daily and five on Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Murray could have bettered both Whiteman and Lewis's record gross by doing five during the midweek.

One Showing for War Dept. Aviation Film

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21.

First showing of the war department film tracing the development of aviation in the country will be made at the Strand next Tuesday (Feb. 28).

The picture, "Twenty-five Years in the Air," has been under compilation by the War Department for several years. It begins with pictures of the first flight in America by the Wright brothers in North Carolina in 1903 and will include official pictures of aerial combat during the war and of last year's trans-Atlantic flights.

Picture is to be returned to the War Department after its screening here.

"Notices" of Back Stage

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Ralph Ince started production on his latest FBO special, tentatively titled "Notices."

Cast includes Joe E. Brown, Gertrude Olmstead, Lee Shumaway, Ole Ness, and William Francis Dugan, Broadway playwright, brought to the coast to write originals for FBO.

Dugan was assigned to play the part of a drunken playwright in "Notices" because of his type and knowledge of back stage life.

DE MILLE'S 37 FOR '28-'29; $7,000,000

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

DeMille organization is to turn out 37 pictures costing approximately $7,000,000 for release by Pathe-DeMille during 1928-29. Of this number four have already been completed and were to have been this year's output, while six others are being made now and will be completed before April 15, at which time it is expected the studio will shut down for general readjustment until June 1.

The pictures which have already been finished, or are almost completed, and which were to have been on the current program, are "The Godless Girl," "Hold 'Em Yale," "Walking Back" and one other. It was intended to make "What Holds Men" for this year, but on account of trouble with the author, Marguerite Tuttle, it has been called off.

With the finishing up of product on the lot, all overhead is being cut to a minimum. A score of writers, directors and actors, working from picture to picture, have been released. The general studio personnel is also being cut to the core.

Joseph P. Kennedy will have supervision of expenditures and operations on the lot in addition to guiding the destinies of FBO.

$175,000 Feature Average

Program pictures turned out on this lot during the past season have averaged around $175,000, costs varying from $100,000 to $193,000, according to the cast. It is said that the new budget, tentatively accepted last month in New York, will bring the average cost of the program films to around $125,000 each, and hold down the number of specials to be made until a healthier first run distribution exists.

It is figured that with a new deal on distribution through K-A-Orpheum, an opportunity will be afforded the company to make a large number of specials. However, until a sales survey is made these productions will be held in abeyance, unless they crop up accidently during production.

Players' Options Dropped

Four prominent featured players, who will not have their options taken up are Robert Edeson, Eleanor Faire, Virginia Bradford and Clarence Burton. It is also likely that Leatrice Joy will leave the fold next month when her contract expires, and that Vera Reynolds will also be off the payroll at the end of June.

William Sistrom, general manager for DeMille, returned from New York last week and gave the impression around the studio that matters would continue as heretofore. Reports are current that when Kennedy comes to the Coast to take charge he may transfer Ed King, vice-president of FBO and now in charge of technical production on that lot, to the Pathe-DeMille plant as business manager.

Publicity department has been cut from 12 to 5, with economy given as the reason. Henry McMahon remains in charge, with Phil Gersdorf and Charles West as assistants.

Instructions for the cut came from New York.

KENNEDY'S EIGHTH

Boston, Feb. 21.

Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F.B.O., celebrated the birth of a baby on Sunday. It's the eighth in the Kennedy family.

Looks like a challenge to E. V. Richards. He also has eight.

UNEMPLOYMENT FELT AT L. A.; MARX BROS.' $30,000 LOW AT MET

Grosses Generally Show Effect—State, $20,000, and Off—"Four Sons," $14,000—"Sorrell" Only $15,000—"Prince," $19,200.

(Drawing Pop., 1,450,000)

With more people out of employment than at any time in three years, the theatres felt the reaction. Not a house came up to expectations on the week. The Metropolitan, having the Four Marx brothers and an imported film, "The Last Waltz," did $30,000, not so good at Met. W. C. P. paid the Marx boys and their troupe a $10,000 salary.

"Four Sons," on its first week at Carthay Circle and due to conditions, was about $3,000 behind the opening week of "Sunrise." Just how this one will get on is a matter of conjecture. "The Circus" went off a bit at matinees first part of week but got back to capacity toward the end. Gross dropped around $750 below the week before.

With the M-G studio and house concentrating heavily on advance of "The Student Prince," that opus got off to around $1,500 better than its predecessor on the initial week. United Artists did not manage to get anywhere with "Sorrell and Son" and on first week of picture went into "red." "Jazz Singer" went down almost $1,000 on its seventh week and will probably hold for another three before replaced with "Patent Leather Kid."

"The Enemy" on screen and Eddie Peabody on stage were not strong enough to bring Loew's State much above the red mark. With no personality on stage "West Point" was on its own to keep the head of the Egyptian above water. "The Four Flusher," a Reg Denny, was at the Boulevard, and with Gene Morgan, aided by Jimmy Lyons on stage, got a fair week.

"Wings" at the Biltmore slipped on the fast pace but stayed on the healthy side. Broadway Palace had "Grandma's Boy" for a second week and returns were more negligible than the first.

Estimates for Last Week

Grauman's Chinese (U. A.)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,958; 50-$1.50). Mat trade off early part of week but nights strong throughout; capacity last three days at all performances; around $29,000.

Carthay Circle (Miller-W. C.)—"Four Sons" (Fox) (1,500; 50-$1.50). With business conditions against auspicious start, opening week fairly good at $14,000.

Criterion (W. C.)—"Jazz Singer" (W. B.) (1,600; 50-$1.50). Slipped around $850 on seventh week; $7,400.

Biltmore (Erlanger) — "Wings" (Par) (1,655; 50-$2.20). Fifth week slowed down but not enough to take edge off profits; better than $15,500; about $2,500 drop.

Loew's State (W. C.-Loew)—"The Enemy" (M-G) (2,200; 25-99). Could not get 'em here and trade dropped $3,000 to $20,000. Eddie Peabody on stage.

Metropolitan (Pub.-W. C.)—"Last Waltz" (Par.) (3,595; 25-75). Changed night prices at mat for Marx Bros.; around $30,000; not high, considering stage attraction.

United Artists (U. A.-W. C.)—"Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) (2,100; 25-$1.10). Could not get started; first week only $15,000; less than it cost to operate the week.

Million Dollar (Pub.-W. C.)—"Student Prince" (M-G) (2,200; 25-99). Special stunts and freak exploitation put Lubitsch over to very good initial week; $19,200.

Boulevard (W. C.)—"The Four-flusher" (U) (2,164; 25-50). Felt the off trade all around; did nobly by keeping out of red at $6,750.

Egyptian (U. A.-W. C.)—"West Point" (M-G) (1,800; 25-75). Film all alone as draw; just another week with around $8,000.

Broadway Palace (Orpheum)—"Grandma's Boy" (Pathe) (1,540; 15-40). Second week not necessary, as trade very slack; not much better than $2,000, and for a Harold Lloyd, too.

Freddie Schader With Fox

Freddie will join the Fox coast staff through an arrangement with Winnie Sheehan. Mr. Sheehan, now in New York, states his status with the organization has not been set but that Schader's post will be an important one.

Before taking up the new duty Mr. and Mrs. (Ray) Schader will come east for a vacation in March, their first trip home since leaving for the coast about a year ago.

$14,500 FOR "LOVE" DESPITE HEAVY CUTS

Montreal, Feb. 21.

The Capitol has pulled the orchestra off the stage and dropped its short vaude turns, substituting presentations and prologs. House has not suffered so far and is going to put in Publix units after Lent if railway can be arranged. "Old Ironsides" hit the males but left the women somewhat cold, so only a middling gross of around $12,000.

"Love," at the Palace, was cut to ribbons by censors, who turned the wronged husband into a father-in-law and ran the story into rubbish. But even so the crowds ate it up and turned in $14,000. Loew's stood up with $13,500, and Lent is not going to hurt this house, which has a steady crowd that comes week in, week out. Vaude not quite up to last week, but good enough.

Much comment on quarter page ads in the local press urging the public to endorse the theatres' attitude against Sunday closing. No one knows who is behind them, and guesses vary between some of the big exchanges and the Film Association in Toronto. It is part of campaign to educate the public into attack on long established custom. It isn't thought that Sunday closing has any chance of becoming law, but the theatre people are taking no chances.

Estimates for Last Week

Capitol (2,700; 40-85)—"Old Ironsides" (Par). Too American and for men only to get all it deserved; $12,000.

Palace (2,700; 60-85). "Love" (M-G). Censors cut it badly, but big okay; $14,500.

Loew's (3,200; 45-75)—"Gay Defender" (Par.). Went over fine, also vaude helped some; house stood up at $13,000.

Imperial (1,900; 35-80)—"The Forbidden Woman" (Pathe). A little better than usual; $5,000.

Strand (800; 30-40)—"The Lady-bird" (Vital); "Almost Human" (Pathe); "Very Confidential" (Fox), and "Good Time Charley" (W. B.). All together, $5,000.

"POINT" $13,000, PTLD., "CHICAGO" GOT $11,000

"7th Heaven" Off to $16,000 at Pan—"Love," $7,500 at Rivoli— "J. James" Bad

Portland, Ore., Feb. 4.
(Drawing Population, 310,000)

Real money attraction was over at Parker's Rivoli. For the first time in months connected for a solid wallop with "Love." Salvatore Santella's Sunday noon concert, 40 pieces, brought much additional revenue.

Tebbett's Oriental fell off again with "Chicago." Mats at this house are weak, but evenings are better. Broadway improved its gross over previous week with "West Point." Ollie Wallace, present m. c. at this house, to be shifted to the fifth Avenue, Seattle, as organist, according to report.

Estimates for Last Week

Broadway (Fox) (2,000; 40-60). "West Point" (M-G). Real draw in this town; started it with real bang, but slowed down; $13,000 okay.

Liberty (Fox) (2,000; 25-40). "Tea for Three" (M-G). Well liked, but vaude not so good; biz just fair; house understood to be getting ready for new policy, installing Will King musical show March 2.

Rivoli (Parker-Fox) (1,210; 35-50). "Love (M-G). Packed 'em at all shows; house looked like old times; Santaelle's concerts and Cecil Teague, organist, brought extra kale; $7,500

Pantages (Pan) (2,000; 35-50). "Seventh Heaven" (Fox). Great business. Picture in for a run and looks like money-getter; about $16,000 first week.

Orpheum (Orph) (2,300; 15-25-50-75). "Night Bride" (Pathe). Vaudeville only draw; film of secondary importance; $6,000 on three days.

Music Box (Henry Duffy Players) (1,300; 50-75-$1). "Tommy." Play cashed to $7,000.

"KID" $24,000, BALTO; JOLSON, $10,000, 7th WK

Both Hold Over—"Dove's" 2d Wk. 'Way Off, $6,000—"Gateway," $9,000

(Drawing Population, 850,000)

There has been a shift of masters of ceremonies at the Century, the house that inaugurated the stage band policy here. Sammy Kahn, in for the past month, left Saturday to fill an unannounced assignment, and is succeeded by Ted Claire, former revue principal.

H. P. Kingsmore, general manager of the Loew-United Artists houses here, taking a Publix publicity idea as a basis, evolved a novelty stunt that went into effect at both the Century and Valencia last week. By an arrangement with the "American," local Hearst morning tab, the theatres receive 500 gratis copies of the paper nightly. This is the morning paper and arrives in time for the patrons leaving the houses around 10 p. m. On each paper's first page is a gummed slip, stating that the paper is with the compliments of the management and getting in a line on both current and coming shows. When the patron gets home and opens up the paper to the amusement page he finds it stuffed with a four-page house tab in the form of a press sheet.

Last week's returns revealed a great variance amongst the first run theatres. "Jazz Singer" continues the film wonder of the season in this town. It's sixth week, holdover, has again been extended for an eighth.

The Stanley is also holding "Patent Leather Kid" for a second six days. New also turned in a good week with "Gateway to the Moon." The Century was 'way off with "The Secret Hour." Negri doesn't seem able to click at the local b. o. "The Dove," in its second week at the Valencia, failed to measure up.

Estimates for Last Week

Century (Loew).—"The Secret Hour" (Par.) (2,074; 25-60). Business way off; Negri always has difficulty clicking in Baltimore; stage show good.

Stanley (Stanley - Crandall). — "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (3,600; 25-50). Biggest success this theatre has yet screened; in for a Sunday midnight showing two weeks ago acted as good advance; drew big from opening; $24,000 excellent and holds over.

Valencia (Loew-U. A.)—"The Dove" (U. A.) (1,500; 25-60). General comment was play didn't present Talmadge in a role that pleased her fans; Beery caused most talk; second week well below house average; about $6,000.

Metropolitan (W. B.)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,400; 25-50). Wonder of local movie game; run extended again with turnaway at Saturday close; will be shown indefinitely; over $10,000 on seventh week.

Parkway (Loew-U. A.)—"The Student Prince" (M-G) (1,000; 15-35). Picture a big draw downtown and dltto at this uptown stand; consistently good; about $4,500.

"Whose Hand?" $3,000

(Drawing Population, 125,000)

Following its record week of $11,000, Pantages held "Seventh Heaven" for a second week and again biz was good. Broadway used "On Your Toes" and didn't do so bad. Blue Mouse hit an average click in "By Whose Hand."

Estimates for Last Week

Broadway (W. C.) (1,650; 25-50). —"On Your Toes" (U). Denny helped rouse 'em and biz good; $5,200.

Pantages (1,450; 50).—"Seventh Heaven" (Fox). First week hit $11,000, but still some customers left for $6,000.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (650; 25-50).—"By Whose Hand" and Vita (W. B.). $3,000. Bad.

Colonial (W. C.) (850; 25).—"13th Hour" (M-G). House can't jar loose from ordinary; about $1,300.

Local Talent Cost Topeka Houses and Itself Money

Topeka, Feb. 21.
(Drawing Pop., 85,000)

Pictures sat back, stock vaudeville and the spectacle music version of the oratorio "Elijah" taking what business there was last week. Not much.

Sponsored by the local musical organizations, the William Dodd Chennery production of Mendelssohn's "Elijah" played the city auditorium four nights and cost about $4,000. A cast of more than 1,000 local talent, musicians and imported singers failed to draw much more than an equal number "out front" on each occasion.

The week also marked the fifth return to Topeka of the Waddell Players, stock, with Clyde M. Waddell in lead. It's the company's 101st week in Topeka. Opening night was an ovation for the company with a full house, but the rest of the week dropped down to almost poor business. "If I Was Rich" opened.

Estimates for Last Week

Auditorium (2,500; $1) (City)—Chennery presentation of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." $3,500.

Grand (1,400; 75) (National)—Waddell Players, stock, opened new engagement. About what was considered normal business on former runs. $3,100.

Novelty (1,200; 40) (Crawford)—Vaude with weak bill first half and start of new serial, "The Man Without a Face." Strong bill at finish with Sennet Comedy. Got little better than average. $2,600.

Jayhawk (1,500; 40) (Jayhawk)—"Annie Laurie" first half of week; fair. Title against it. Last half, "Publicity Madness," ordinary. $2,400.

Orpheum (1,100; 40) (National)—"Beau Sabreur." Good drag first few days on strength of "Beau Geste," but didn't come up to predecessor, weak cast blamed. $1,900.

Cozy (400; 25) (Lawrence)—"Is Zat So?" first half, got little better than normal, but "The Lone Eagle" failed to cash last half, management failing to tie in with the Lindbergh flight back home. On week, $800.

STAYING FOR 2D SHOW "SINGER" DID $20,200

Record for Embassy — Dix, $25,000, Warfield—'Blondes' a Bust for Granada

San Francisco, Feb. 21.
Drawing Population, 756,000)

"Jazz Singer," first of the Vitaphone features, set the town talking and rolled up a gross totally unexpected. Established a new house record for the Embassy, bettering by $5,000 the previous high. With scale stiffened to eliminate matinee prices, "Jazz Singer" passed $20,000.

Warfield again topped the town. Hard to figure out the Market street situation. The Granada just seems to be in the dumps, and no matter what show, it can't seem to click. Last week with the widely advertised "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and 8 Victor Artists house sagged worse than with the weak western of preceding seven days. Warfield had Richard Dix, good boxoffice here with results, and Rube Wolf continued to demonstrate he is a magnet.

At the California "Student Prince" clicked merrily, but Doug Fairbanks dropped at the St. Francis on his second week. Intake, however, sufficient to show plenty of profit.

Estimates for Last week

Warfield—"Sporting Goods" (Par) (2,672; 35-50-65-90). Like Dix in this town, and they all fell for Rube Wolf and Fanchon and Marco shows result, $25,000.

California—"The Student Prince" (M-G) (2,200; 35-65-90). Success of stage musical reflected in the draw; with Gino Severi's concert a strong magnet, great at close to $24,000.

Embassy—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,367; 50-65-90). Customers liked it so much hundreds remained for more than one show; a checkup revealed this; put the Embassy high on the map, and at limited capacity established a record; close to $20,200.

Granada — "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par) (2,785; 35-50-65-90). Just another flop; lucky to reach $20,000, and that's murder.

St. Francis—"The Gaucho" (U.A.) (1,375; 35-65-90). About $5,000 off from first week; but picture held strong and at $15,000; satisfactory; May be held for fourth week.

HEADS M-G READING DEPT.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Bob Harris, brother-in-law of Dave Loew, has been appointed head of the M-G reading department, succeeding Mrs. May E. Lee, who has had the job since the old Goldwyn days. Mrs. Lee is leaving to rejoin her former boss, Sam Goldwyn.

"KID'S" $24,000 A LOCAL PRICE RECORD

(Drawing Population, 700,000)

The Mainstreet last week with "Patent Leather Kid" at 25 and 50 cents saw records shattered. More as a feeler than anything else the picture was given a showing at a midnight Saturday and drew some 2,500 admissions at 50 cents. A peculiar thing during the week was the way customers arranged to get in for the start of the picture, rather than drop in any time. As a result it was not unusual to see long lines waiting the entire length of the show.

Picture would have been good for a second week but ads stated one week only and that was that.

Annual auto show hurt all the houses, opening night being the worst opposition.

"Beau Sabreur," at the Midland, a disappointment. House got a great break on Sunday shows, but the attendance was badly off balance of the week.

Estimates for Last Week

Mainstreet (Orpheum)—"Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (3,200; 25-50). Management got behind this war opera and with the undivided support of the press critics, put it over; owing to length of the picture, vaudeville omitted, but Louisville Loons (band) did 20 minutes; $24,000 local record for these prices.

Midland (Loew)—"Beau Sabreaur" (Par.) (4,000; 25-35-60). Billing as sequel to "Beau Geste" didn't help, as the first "Beau" failed to click very strong here, either as a roadshow or as a regular program feature. Stage show, "Steppin' High," Publix unit, first week with Friday opening and the change failed to make any material difference; hit around $18,500.

Newman (Loew)—"Latest from Paris" (M-G) (1,980; 25-35). Six months ago this Norma Shearer picture, in the same house with the old 60-cent top scale, would have been good for around $15,000; got close to $4,800.

Pantages—"Silk Legs" (Fox) (2,200; 30-50). Pan mob like Madge Bellamy; good entertainment on stage and screen meant $7,100.

Liberty (Ind)—"The Opening Night" (1,000; 25-50). Picture from Albert Payson Terhune's story with Claire Windsor starred set offering in house in some time; $1,700.

Uptown's feature was "On Your Toes" (U) and the Globe had "Seventh Heaven" with Movietone accompaniment. This picture but recently played four weeks at Pantages, and has been seen in a number of the neighborhood houses. Globe decided to give it a try with Movietone, but had run too many times in other houses. Business was far from expectations.

Saenger-State, $700 Apart Tudor's $2,300, Jannings

(Drawing Population, 450,000)

Pre-Mardi Gras week was far below expectations. Lots of visitors in town, but with splendid weather prevailing most remained outdoors. "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" proved a terrific flop at the Saenger, one of the worst sessions in months, according to box office evidence. Richard Dix did not mean much to the State in "Sporting Goods," but the house held an excellent vaude program that kept returns normal.

"Ramona" failed to draw them to the Strand, which has come to be an in and outer among the downtown houses. "The Circus," transferred to the Liberty, sent that theatre above $4,500.

Orpheum was also off with "The Leopard Lady." The big timer has been forced down to a grind policy with three shows daily at pop prices. Change takes place shortly. The Palace showed a little spurt with "Wolf Fangs." Tudor went above $2,000 with "The Last Command."

Estimates for Last Week

Saenger (3,568; 65)—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par). Huge disappointment; only $15,100.

Loew's State (3,258; 50)—"Sporting Goods" (Par). Dix slipping here; $15,800.

Strand (2,200; 50)—"Ramona." California tale not so forte for this burg; $3,900.

Palace (2,300; 40)—"Wolf Fangs." Got $6,000.

Liberty (1,800; 50)—"The Circus" (U. A.). Did $4,600.

Tudor (800; 40) — "Last Command"" (Par). $2,300.

ROXY JUMPED $15,000 TO $106,000; ENGLISH NAVAL FILM BIG, $10,100

First Publix Unit and "Rose-Marie" at Capitol, $66,400—Dix Film Shoved Paramount Up to $74,000 Again—Fox's "Four Sons" Got $13,250

Broadway found the middle of February fairly brisk. Some of the lads threatened to shed tears, but most of the mob had smiles—even if a little grim.

Business hasn't been what it should be along the Canyon, although last week had its bright spots, notably at the small Cameo, where a British-made doubled that house's average total. Roxy also took a jump to run ahead of its previous week by $15,000. "That's My Daddy" turned in $106,000 for the Cathedral.

"Sporting Goods" and Dix took the Paramount back into the $70,000 class, while "Rose-Marie" and the first Publix-Loew stage unit to play the Capitol gave that site $66,400. This theatre is currently housing "The Crowd" and seems to have two prints of different length cached in the booth. Over the week-end various people timed the feature at different lengths, the longer length throwing the show, as a whole, overboard and preventing the usual turnover.

"Patent Leather Kid" failed to show sufficient staying power to linger a third week at the Strand and made way for "Shepherd of the Hills."

Universal brought "Hunchback of Notre Dame" back to the Colony for around $10,000, and although that figure is not excessive, the feature is staying a second week. Jannings hardly even quivered in his fourth week at the Rialto by rolling up $39,200. "Sadie Thompson" also had a splendid follow-up week in doing $44,150 at the Rivoli.

"Four Sons" is the newest entrant in the $2 bunch; and after getting away on a Monday (holiday) matinee last week had $13,250 in the till. The week saw solid attendance with no special advance demand.

"Simba" is quietly easing off, and the animal hunt will leave the Carroll at the end of its six weeks (March 3). "Jazz Singer" duplicated its preceding gross of $17,700, and "Wings" held firm" at $15,700. "Drums of Love" is having a quiet time of it over on 42d street and has yet to reach $10,000, with "The Enemy" rating as a figure-head as the Street waits to see what "Trail of '98" is going to do. "Uncle Tom" brushed by $9,000, and "Love" again claimed over $10,000.

Estimates for Last Week

Astor — "The Enemy" (M-G) (9th week). One of Broadway's silent members; never figured at $2 and maybe $8,000; "Trail of '98" comes in March 13.

Cameo—"Battle of Falkland Islands" (Artlee) (549; 50-75) (2d week). British naval film surprised by doubling house's average receipts to $10,100; staying second week and may hold for third; house record around $11,000.

Capitol — "Rose-Marie" M-G) (4,620; 35-50-75-$1.65). Operetta title may have helped; $66,400 for two-hour-and-a-half show, which included first Publix-Loew unit to play here; house again running over two-hour period with "The Crowd" (M-G) as feature this week.

Carroll—"Simba" (997; $1-$2) (5th week). Johnsons' hunt film dropping off and another lease extension abandoned; about $14,000 last week. Picture departs end of next week.

Central — "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) (922; $1-2) (16th week). Came up to edge over $9,000 and "last week's" ads credited with increase; no date yet on "Man Who Laughs" (U) due here.

Colony — "Hunchback of Notre Dame" (U) (1,980; 25-50-75) (2d week). Former $2 film uncovered ordinary draw at $10,000 on return, but held for second week.

Criterion — "Wings" (Par.) (973; $1-$2) (28th week). Bowling along at good clip. On street eight weeks longer than nearest competitor; $15,700.

Embassy — "Love" (M-G) (596; $1-$1.65) (13th week). Feverish film retains high temperature; claimed over $10,000 again.

Gaiety—"Four Sons" and Movietone (Fox) (808; $1-$2) (2d week). Latest to bow in at road show prices and away to promising start; showing Movietone news reel and running without intermission twice daily; opened at matinee, Lincoln's Birthday, and initial total $13,250; not much advance demand, but had b. o. line on second Monday matinee.

Liberty—"Drums of Love" (U.-A.) (1,234; $1-$2) (5th week). Don't hear anything about this one; completely surrounded by legits on 42d street and not having any too happy time of it; can't better $9,000. Like other films, suffers on side streets.

Paramount — "Sporting Goods" (Par.) (3,400; 35-50-75-90). Chinned itself to $74,000, rise of $4,300 over previous week; satisfactory; house currently using first "Taka Chance Week" with "Love and Learn" (Par.) as picture; week-end got around $28,000, $1,000 under Dix's Sat. and Sun.

Rialto — "Last Command" (Par.) (1,960; 35-50-75-90) (5th week). Jannings film flirting with $40,000 again at $39,200; just $450 beneath third week; probably will go eight weeks.

Rivoli. — "Sadie Thompson" (U. A.) (2,200; 35-50-75-90) (3d week). Swanson picture liked here and with added midnight shows went to $44,150 on second week; not much change from premier week of $48,500.

Roxy—"That's My Daddy" (U) (6,205; 50-$1.65). Sent house back to six figures; turned in best gross at $106,000 of three successive U films to play here, bettering predecessors by $15,000 and $12,000; "Girl in Every Port" (Fox) now playing, and, with $12,000 Monday, house may hold second week.

Strand — "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (2,900; 35-50-65-75). Not enough b. o. power to remain third week after playing Globe at $2; did $36,400, with "Chicago" (Pathe) Saturday.

Warners'—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,360; $1-$2) (20th week). Repeated previous week's gross at $17,700; okay.

"KINGS" $20,000 IN MIL. DESPITE USUAL RAPS

Another Week at Davidson—$16,000 for Dix—"Flaming Youth" Flops, $4,000

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 21.
(Drawing Population, 650,000)

"King of Kings" slipped into the Davidson for a two-a-day schedule and is holding over after doing near capacity and getting away with a good chunk of cash. The Wisconsin "Jewish Chronicle" didn't do the picture any good with its raps, even before it was brought in. Davidson didn't advertise in the sheet, keeping the picture out of the Jewish press entirely. Dailies praised the film; the Jewish people were in as big attendance as their neighbors.

Alhambra had the prize flop of the year in "Two Flaming Youths," while the smaller houses did average business.

Estimates for Last Week

Alhambra (U)—"Two Flaming Youths" (Par) (1,800; 30-50). Good stage show and picture, exploited to skies but could not drag anybody in; $5,400.

Davidson (Brown)—"King of Kings" (Pathe) (1,600; 50-75-$1-$1.50). Great business with heavy matinees; held over after close to $20,000.

Garden (Brin)—"Girl from Chicago" (W. B.) (1,200; 25-50). Got nice Vitaphone support and well liked; average business of about $7,000.

Majestic (Orph)—"Legionaires in Paris" (FBO) (1,600; 15-25-40). Vaude with pictures; usual of about $6,900.

Merrill (Midwesco)—"Paid to Love" (Fox) (1,200; 25-50). Has title but that's all; nothing extraordinary at $5,000.

Miller (Midwesco) — "Tigress" (Par) (1,400; 25-50). Stage band with picture getting about even break; local girls in chorus helped; ran to $6,500.

Strand (Midwesco)—"Doomsday" (Par) (1,200; 25-50). House doesn't seem able to click; around $4,000.

Wisconsin (Midwesco)—"Sporting Goods" (Par) (2,800; 25-30-50-60). Stage band big draw here again; show not as hot as usual; Dix picture good from femme standpoint; mats big, with early evening bargain prices getting good play; bettered $16,000.

JUDY KING'S BRITISH DATES

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Judy King, screen actress, wife of Tim Whelan, director, sails from New York March 10 for England. She has a three-picture contract with British National.

Whelan is now directing for that company.

Stage Show Houses Ran Best in Pittsb'h Last Week

Pittsburgh, Feb. 21.
(Drawing Pop., 1,000,000)

A reversal last week gave the two vaude houses an edge on the picture palaces. Davis had Nazimova heading a strong vaude bill and a weak picture, while the Aldine, instead of playing vaude, had the tab version of Herndon's "Merry-Go-Round" revue and a good picture, "A Hero for a Night." Backed with a startling campaign put on by Manager Jack Simons and Publicity Director Wallace Allen, the Aldine's record, held by Fatty Arbuckle, was broken.

Grand held over "Patent Leather Kid," doing fairly for a second week. Penn played "Man, Woman and Sin," a Gilbert, which opened big but failed to hold the pace. "Cohens and Kellys" held up the second week, and "The Jazz Singer," at the Olympic, gave that house its first profit in months.

Estimates for Last Week

Aldine (Lew) (2,000; 25-35-50)) —"Merry-Go-Round" Revue on stage and U's "Hero for a Night." $17,500 speaks for itself.

Cameo (U) (600; 35-40)—With "Abie's Irish Rose" in town at the legit house, "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" in good company, and second week as good as first. Held another week.

Olympic (Stanley) (1,200; 35-50) —"Jazz Singer." Spending money on exploitation. Biggest week house has had in many weeks. $8,500.

Penn (Loew) (3,600; 25-35-50)— "Tokio Blues," Publix unit, coupled with John Gilbert in "Man, Woman and Sin." Average business, which for Gilbert is little off. Stage show liked very much. $33,400.

"CIRCUS," $10 A SEAT IN 60c. TORONTO HOUSE

Does $14,000—Laugh's Fatal to One Man, Sends Another to the Hospital

Toronto, Feb. 21.
(Drawing Population, 700,000)

Mrs. Chaplin's favorite son breezed into town and got all the loose coin with "The Circus" laying them out in the aisles. Picture collected $14,000.

Three records were broken by this Chaplin film, which earned $10 for every seat in the house. Opened to $3,000 (all this 1,400-seater can possibly hold at 60-cent top), ran seven times a day, caused a man to laugh himself to death and another to laugh himself into a hospital. The lineup at times reached two blocks, four abreast and the casualties came the same night, with William Shuster, Vancouver insurance man, being so overcome as to die in his seat before a doctor could reach him.

Outside of that there wasn't much except three houses coming within $50 of each other. They were Loew's with $11,000 for "Baby Mine"; Pantages with "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" and Hip with "The Four Flusher."

"Sadie Thompson" got nowhere at the Regent and fell to about $7,000. At the Uptown "The Gaucho" grabbed $8,500. The same picture, at $1.50, had just topped $10,000 a month ago downtown.

Improved profits in picture biz are attracting comment in financial circles with F. P. paying full eight per cent. dividends and rolling up surplus to meet some unpaid dividends in the lean years, now past.

With business at its peak, the Tivoli is ready to shoot a couple of British specials. "Battle of the Falkland Islands" will follow "The Circus" and "Mlle. from Armentieres" is next. "Jazz Singer" is booked in, but no Vitaphone arrangements here and nothing out of the way expected for biz.

Three main stem houses rushed in news shots of the mine disaster at Timmins, Ont., where 40 miners met death in a gas flood. Didn't mean much to box offices.

Estimates for Last Week

Tivoli (FP) (1,400; 35-60)—"The Circus" (U. A.). Chaplin picture sent them goofy; $14,000 real money up here; held over indefinitely; seven shows a day with nothing else on the bill.

Hip (FP) (2,600; 30-60)—"Four Flusher" (U). Got what is looked on as fine play for house at $11,000.

Loew's (2,300; 30-60).—"Baby Mine" (M-G). Excellent show and picked up $1,000 over last week; held about $11,000.

Pantages (FP) (3,400; 30-60).— "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U). Good biz at night but matinees light; $11,000.

Uptown (FP) (3,000; 30-60).— "The Gaucho" (U. A.). Opened to turnaway but dropped under $9,000; not bad; stage show okay; played Toronto a month ago.

Regent (U. A.).—"Sadie Thompson" (1,400; 50-$1.50). Slipped badly to about $7,000; censorship not so serious as town seemed to expect; "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) comes in for run; well exploited in advance.

Neighborhoods fair.

"CIRCUS" STARTS CHI TALKING; "PRINCE," $36,000; NEAR RECORD

Chicago Got $48,000, Drop of $14,000 Under Mae Murray's Draw—Oriental, at $43,000, Disappointing With "Quality Street" and Plug

Chicago, Feb. 22.

A distinct standout in a good line of loop grosses last week was "Student Prince," coming within $2,000 of McVicker's record in its first week with $36,000. "Big Parade," pulling in $38,000 as an opener last November, is the theatre's shining example.

"The Circus" came into United Artists Thursday with a mostly invitational midnight premiere and looks like it may set a high mark for this new house. "Gaucho" left Thursday after almost five weeks, getting about $14,000 for the odd days.

Chaplin's film is the most discussed picture in town, getting a hot array of raves in the dailies and garnering $12,000 in two days with the extra midnight performance.

Initial appearance of Rae Samuels in a picture house was at the Chicago, with Richard Dix, heavy local fav, on the screen in "Sporting Goods." The combination brought considerably better than average business, but it was quite a letdown from the $62,100 drawn by Mae Murray on stage the previous week. Miss Samuels was doing great inside the house, taking smash honors as headliner of a stage band unit. The Dix picture also was received well.

Novel Booking

After five weeks at the Monroe last year and released for the neighborhoods, "Seventh Heaven" came back into the loop houses and attracted $5,400, very good figure for the house. This novel booking is made even more novel through the picture being slated for another return date at the same house within a few weeks. Previous booking of "Shame," Gilbert revival, and heavy advertising in foreign dailies on the Mussolini Movietone record necessitated jerking "Heaven."

"Blondes" dropped seven grand to $11,000 at the Roosevelt in its second week, and out. The two week stay was okay in profit. "Les Miserables" in. "Jazz Singer," 14 weeks down and one to go at the Garrick, continued well and has accomplished a remarkable run in this city. "Oh, Kay," musical comedy, will follow.

The Oriental dropped a bit, but had no squawk with $43,000. "Quality Street" on the screen was expected to draw better.

A blizzard which blew into town Friday night cut the take-ins on all houses a bit over the weekend.

Estimates for Last Week

Chicago (Publix) — "Sporting Goods" (Par) (4,100; 50-75). Dix film and Rae Samuels on stage bettered house average with $48,000; both highly liked here.

Garrick (Shubert)—"Jazz Singer"-Vita (W. B.) (1,293; $2.20). Continued neatly in 14th week, getting $11,000; leaves this week, house reverting to legit.

McVicker's (Publix) — "Student Prince" (M-G-M) (2,400; 50-75). Big noise in town, opening to $36,000; house record is $38,000, established by "Big Parade"; business opening day (Monday) best house ever had.

Monroe (Fox) — "7th Heaven," Movietone (Fox) (975; 50-65). Return booking following neighborhood release; fairly big with $5,400, and booked for third showing within few weeks.

Oriental (Public) — "Quality Street" Cosmo-M-G) (2,900; 35-50-75). Extra ads in Hearst dailies for Marion Davies film and Paul Ash on stage; good but short of expectations with $43,000; house gets heavy juvenile trade.

Orpheum (Warner)—"Lady Raffles" (Col.) and Vita (W. B.) (776; 50). Down to $6,500; mostly transient trade here.

Playhouse (Mindlin)—"Cyrano de Bergerac" (Foreign). Mindlin says this film is French, but who made it is Greek to him; little art theatre serves pretty good coffee and also had "Easy Street," Chaplin short, to help bring $3,800.

Roosevelt (Publix) — "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par) (1,400; 50-70). Brought $18,000 first week and $11,000 for second and last; first gives nice profit on booking.

State-Lake (K-A-O)—"Coney Island" (FBO) (1,400; 50-80). Some thought film good and some not so hot; anyway, about average for weak house with $16,500.

United Artists (U. A.)—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (1,702; 25-75). Finished about five weeks with $14,000 including Tuesday; "Circus" opened with midnight performance and rated great with $12,000 for two days.

JOLSON, $43,400, STATE, ST. L.

Ambassador Stays Up, $30,400—Mo., $21,250

St. Louis, Feb. 21.
(Drawing Population, 1,000,000)

Al Jolson spent a personally profitable week at Loew's State. Even the theatre's free list was suspended. Appearing in blackface, Jolson sang from a small stand built out from the stage. But the comedian was not the sellout hit expected. Business was bad in spots until Thursday.

Both Warner Brothers and the Shuberts objected strenuously to the idea of Jolson's appearing at pop prices here, but, as usual, Jolson overruled all objections.

JOLSON'S SALARY CHECK

Palm Beach, Feb. 21.

Al Jolson returned here yesterday (Monday) with a St. Louis State theatre salary check for $21,153.16. This exceeds by $6,000 the lump sum he received for playing the Metropolitan, Los Angeles, for one week.

Lee Shubert greeted Jolson upon his return, but later moaned to a friend, "Al feels fine until it's time to go to work for me, then he gets sick."

Estimates for Last Week

American (K & E-legit) (1,400; 50-1.50)—"Wings" (Par). Played here two weeks; nights big, matinees off.

Ambassador (Skouras) (3,000; 35-65)—"Sporting Goods," Richard Dix's latest comedy, fell a little short of usual Dix film; highly entertaining, nevertheless; did $30,400.

Grand Central (Skouras) (1,700; 50-75)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.). Jolson's Vitaphone still going strong in eighth week; just under $10,000.

Missouri (Skouras) (3,800; 35-65) —"Valley of the Giants" (F. N.). Got $21,250.

Loew's State (3,300; 25-35-65)—Al Jolson, in person, and "Baby Mine" (M-G). Picture was hardly necessary, but served as filler; $43,400.

St. Louis (4,280; 35-65)—"Sharpshooters" (Fox) and vaude. Good vaude bill and clever film comedy.

Orpheum (2,200; 15-25-35-50-65) —"The Warning" (Par). Good vaude headed by Baby Peggy, now almost a young lady;

Capitol (Skouras)—"Pitfalls of Passion." Still going strong.

BUFFALO'S DEPRESSION

Shows in Grosses Down the Picture House Line

Buffalo, Feb. 21.

Local box offices knocked off activity last week for one of the most restful periods so far this year. General depression was sufficient to cut into even the most outstanding features, and it begins to look as though takings were being hit heavily beneath the belt.

Estimates for Last Week

Buffalo (Publix) (3,600; 30-40-65) —"Last Command" (Par)-"Dancing Feet." Although first two days biggest at house since new year, prevailing depression sufficient to bring takings down; $30,400.

Hip (Publix) (2,400; 50)—"Chicago After Midnight" and vaude. Continues one of steadiest business getters in town. With all other houses dropping, holds up for $18,900.

Great Lakes (Fox) (3,400; 35-50)— "Wife Savers" (Par) and vaude. Picture received plenty of advertising from house but failed to register additional business. Under $13,000.

Loew's (Loew) (3,400; 35-50)— "Latest from Paris" (M-G-M) and vaude. Little stirring all week. $11,000.

Lafayette (Inde) (3,400; 35-50)— "Fortune Hunter" (Warners) and vaude. Looked like snap picture, meaning little on business end. $12,000.

'SUNRISE' BEATS START; 'CIRCUS,' $24,000, B:G

"Sadie" Out After $18,000—Michigan, $40,700—Capitol Down, $21,800

Detroit, Feb. 21.

Ruth Elder's nose-dive at the State and Chaplin's first week at the Adams were the standout along Grand Circus park last week. Ruth failed to impress as per advance expectations, besides missing from a publicity viewpoint. Dalies were unusually cold. Lucky break the day before opening, when the Elder air trouve, en route from Chi, was forced down at the half-way mark after being lost in a fog. Page one for that, but nothing extraordinary followed.

Adams leaped into the comparative lead with the initial week of "The Circus," though this, too, fell somewhat short of expectations. Big gross, nevertheless, and house saw a complete change after three mediocre weeks of "Love." Chaplin looks sufficiently strong for four weeks, minimum.

New United Artists settled down to the perpetual grind last week, its second, and "Sadie Thompson" blew as ordered. Picture helped to spot Gloria Swanson back in the local limelight, but nothing else to the credit of "Sadie" during the run. Large influx over the last week due for "The Gaucho," which supplanted.

"Jazz Singer"-Vita was just over the line in eighth and final week at the Madison. Splendid run for the talkie, and no ill effects of running with the legit version last week. Just the reverse, for the film is believed to have taken the edge off the Jessel company. "Les Miserables," plugged aplenty, replaced at the Madison.

Michigan and Capitol were about normal, the former with the usual unit fare on stage and screening "Sporting Goods." Capitol declined slightly with "Wife Savers."

Oriental, hemmed in on all sides, was saved from utter rout only by a better than average Pan bill. Very little homage paid to "Stage Kisses."

"Sunrise," at the Washington, pulled the unusual by bettering its first week. House claims present pace, if continued, will hold the picture six weeks. Natives are asking what the film is all about, with the mass not quite comprehending. That sort of talk is provocative of attendance and might partially cover the lack of proper exploitation.

Estimates for Last Week

Adams (Kunsky)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,770; 50-75). Short show and neat turnover; plus natural Chaplin following, gave house more than double previous gross in final week of "Love"; "Circus" has chance to better $24,000 this week.

Capitol (Kunsky)—"Wife Savers" (Par.) (3,448; 50-75). Down and rather light at $21,800; Gilda Gray this week, saw enough on Saturday and Sunday to denote sizable lift.

Madison (Kunsky)—"Jazz Singer"-Vita (W. B.) (1,976; 50-65-75) (8th week). Fared well for eight weeks, giving way to "Les Miserables" (U) Sunday; "Jazz Singer" strong attraction at pops, if Madison stay is regarded as authority; $13,000 and profit last week.

Michigan (Kunsky)—"Sporting Goods" (Par.) (4,100; 50-75). Big house seldom varies in gross, though frequently off in show quality; normal offering last week and normal receipts, $40,700.

Oriental (Miles)—"Stage Kisses" (Columbia) and Pan vaude (2,950; 25-90). Too much opposish; better stage bill than usual only redeeming feature, besides continuance of house exploitation; down to $13,000.

State (Kunsky)—"Love and Learn" (Par) and Loew vaude (3,000; 25-75). At $16,000 great improvement over what house has been doing, but not what expected of Ruth Elder; house cut-rated rest of show to balance Elder.

United Artists (U. A.)—"Sadie Thompson" (U. A.) (2,000; 50-65). Only merit of film counted last week; three weeks' run, originally planned, cut short when "Sadie" stumbled to $18,000 after big opening week; "Gaucho" now in and big over the week end.

Washington (Fox)—"Sunrise"-Movietone (Fox) (1,778; 35-50-65) (2d week). Slightly better than opening week at $14,000; not far behind "Glory," Washington's record holder, in grosses so far; could do much more, but will stay if retaining present gait.

Reichenbach for "Tom"

Harry Reichenbach has been called in to do publicity for Universal on "Uncle Tom's Cabin" following the resignation of Warren Lewis. The latter returns to Warner Brothers in New York as p. a.

Paul Gulick is U's general publicity director.

CARMEL MYERS ON ORPHEUM

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Carmel Myers, picture actress, will go east as a vaude single on Orpheum time in an act by Walter Weems and Harrington Reynolds.

BLUE MOUSE, $10,000

With "Girl From Chicago"—5th Ave., $15,000

Seattle, Feb. 21.
(Drawing Population 450,000)

United Artists theatre had a drawing card in "The Student Prince." Biz so good feature will run a second week.

"Baby Mine" sounded nice enough and ran along as fair comedy, but did not goal. Fanchon & Marco had big presentation act, 50 cast.

General business is a little off all over town. Picture houses are not booming just now. However, conditions are due to pick up.

New Seattle opens March 1. This is definite. Details of management and m. c. not yet announced. House will seat 3,800.

Estimates for Last Week

Fifth Ave. (W. C.) (2,700; 25-65). —"Baby Mine" (M-G). Good laugh maker; not bad at $15,000.

United Artists (W. C.-U. A.) (2,100; 25-65).—"Student Prince" (M-G). Everybody liked this: $14,000.

Columbia (U) (1,000; 25-50).—"Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U). —Dandy business for second week; $5,800.

Pantages (1,650; 25-65).—"Gateway of the Moon" (Fox). Dolores Del Rio has following, but concentrated on Duncan Sisters following; $5,500.

Orpheum (2,700; 25-75).—"Night Flyers" (Par). Biz terrible at $9,000.

$21,000 for 'Dove,' Wash. Jammings, $18,000, 2 Wks.

Washington, Feb. 21.
(Estimated White Pop., 450,000)

After starting off with every indication of being a grand flop at the Metropolitan, "Helen of Troy" started to build. Not enough to hold over, though, and it went out to give way to a Vitaphoned "Missing Link." New one opened only fair.

Outstanding money-getter was the Palace with "The Dove" and a Publix presentation. Started big and finished likewise. It's the first Talmadge picture to get away from the Crandall houses in the town's history.

Fox slipped one over with an old one, Clara Bow in "My Lady of Whims" (Arrow), which backed with Clark and McCullough, started things with a terrific bang, getting enormous business Saturday and Sunday. Jannings' second week went down considerably with the gross for the two weeks not up to other big ones. No complaint, however, as such films help to develop other than the flapper business.

Rialto's musical comedy tabs, after gasping for life, brought the house practically nothing on the third week of the venture. Scheduled for a four weeks' try, three was enough to convince. They were presented well, too.

Estimates for Last Week

Columbia (Loew)—"The Command" (Par) (1,232; 35-50). Each time Jannings is shown here business gets a little better; second week this time brought about $7,000; close to $18,000 on the 14-day span; "Circus" current, and locked 'em out for eight shows Saturday.

Earle (Stanley-Crandall) "Gorilla" (F. N.) (2,300; 35-50). Brodied to $7,800.

Fox (Fox)—"Lady of Whims" (Arrow) and Clark and McCullough on stage (3,432; 35-50). Started with a whiz; finished not so strong; claimed $24,000.

Met (Stanley-Crandall)—"Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (1,585; 35-50). Started as outright flop, but built to possibly $8,000.

Palace (Loew)—"The Dove" (U. A.) and Publix presentation (2,363; 35-50). House riding nicely with only temporary set backs; maybe $21,000.

Rialto (U)—"Hero for a Night" (U) and "Tangerine," musical tab (1,978; 35-50). New policy died hard and went out before scheduled time; around $4,000, maybe less.

Warners Restart Mar. 15

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Warner Bros. will resume normal production March 15, starting with five units, including "Noah's Ark." Michael Curtiz will direct.

The picture will be done as a special Vitaphone feature.

MINN. STATE DID $26,000, BUT NO H. O.

Town Has Great Wk.—Everything Up—Jannings, $8,000, and Held Over

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.
(Drawing Population, 470,000)

Loop last week was engulfed by a wave of theatrical prosperity the like of which it has not known for many a moon. State did the biggest week in its history, and the Hennepin-Orpheum had one of the best weeks in a year. The Shriners' circus, under the guidance of A. G. Bainbridge, former big-top man and now a local stock impresario, turned away from 2,000 to 5,000 nightly from the Auditorium and also packed them in matinees.

"Last Command," at the Strand, and "Wild Geese," at the Garrick, both did good business. The former is being held a second week. Except for the fact that it was on a percentage arrangement, "Wild Geese" also might have been retained for another seven days. One explanation for the thriving condition last week was the overflow from the State, Auditorium and Hennepin-Orpheum. However, "Command" and "Wild Geese" had own boxoffice power.

"Jazz Singer" smashed all State records, getting around $26,000 at the regular house scale of 60 cents nights and 35 cents afternoons. Seven deluxe performances a day and holdouts were frequent. Extra midnight show was necessary Friday. Greatest exploitation campaign ever given a theatrical attraction in this section helped the Jolson picture. Campaign exceeded over a month and despite enormous trade, State refused to alter policy of not running a picture more than one week, and "Jazz Singer" did not hold over.

Estimates for Last Week

State (F. & R.) (2,500; 60)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.). Season's knockout; smashed all house records; no other local theatre equipped with Vitaphone, yet house policy cramped its holding over; may be brought back later; shows ran one hour and 35 minutes; seven a day except for Friday's eight; around $26,000.

Garrick (F. & R.) (2,000; 60)—"Wild Geese" (T-S). Picture took well with fans and did splendid business; not quite sufficient to hold it over on percentage arrangement; author of novel a Minneapolitan; $8,500 splendid.

Strand (F. & R.) (1,500; 50)—"Last Command" (Par). Voted exceptionally good picture; Jannings a magnet here; around $8,000; and held for second week.

Grand (F. & R.) (1,100; 25)—"Get Your Man" (Par). Second loop run; Clara Bow one of best b. o. bets in this berg; $1,000 above normal.

Hennepin-Orpheum (2,890; 50-75) —"On to Reno" (Pathe) and vaude. Hard to believe that James Cruze had anything to do with this picture; a terrible bloomer; Olsen and Johnson had town talking and accounted for the theatre's best week in a year; close to $15,500.

Pantages (1,650; 50)—"Daredevil's Reward" (Fox) and vaude. Tom Mix picture accounted for fair draw; about $6,500.

STUDIOS STOP AD COIN ON WESCO'S 1ST RUNS

N. Y. Execs. Call Halt—Appropriations Above Rentals—Average $2,000

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

West Coast Theatres will have to put over pictures in its Los Angeles and San Francisco first runs without aid of exploitation appropriations from producers and distributors. Instructions banning the latter from donating to the exploitation of pictures showing in West Coast Theatres' first runs have been forwarded to studio officials by heads of the various companies in the East. The latter have seen studio advertising and exploitation expenses for first runs steadily mounting until they are out of proportion to the film rentals derived from the houses.

It has been a common practice for a number of producers to put over a campaign on their pictures for local first runs, aside from the regular advertising done by West Coast. Competition resulted in West Coast Theatres finding it easy to suggest separate appropriations from the studios to help put the pictures over. Producers were going for it during showings in suburban first runs, with the studio money expended being more than the film rental obtained. Then the practice extended to San Francisco. In some instances, it is said, West Coast had the producers aiding on advertising in the northwest. New York executives contend that their studios could probably turn out another picture with the money turned over for furthering the interests of West Coast box offices.

Generally, the appropriation for advertising a picture in a West Coast first run averages around $2,000, but one producer went as high as $12,000 to put over a special at one of the run houses, with the picture only lasting two weeks.

PASADENA'S 3 HOUSES

W-C Orders Raymond Closed March 1—Formerly Had 5 Film Cities

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

West Coast Theatres will only have three houses operating in Pasadena after March 1. The chain originally had five houses, but at the time consolidation took place with the Bard interests, the Pasadena was closed.

Instructions have come from the main office to close the Raymond, oldest and best known house in Pasadena, March 1. This will leave only the Colorado, Florence and Strand operating.

It is believed Pasadena is overseated and that the three houses will be sufficient to handle trade.

SEITER'S VACATION

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Laura La Plante returns from Honolulu March 1 to join her husband, William A. Seiter, whose contract as director with Universal expires at the same time.

Both will leave for a two weeks' visit to New York.

Upon their return Seiter will take up one of the offers now pending with First National and United Artists.

$29,000 FOR NORMA IN PHILLY; FOX, $26,500

'Love's' $8,000 Rates 4th Wk.—'Prince,' $17,000, Stanton—'Sunrise' Under $9,500

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.

Downtown picture houses are evidently started on one of their periodic but short-lived experiments with big names in presentation acts. Recently, the Stanley has been comparatively mild and inactive in this regard, and the Fox, although strong on quantity, has been accentuating quality.

This week the Stanley is splurging heavy on Sophie Tucker, with her son Bert, and the six Tivoli dancing girls. This combination is getting the break over the picture in advertising. The film, "Wife-Savers," is in the position of being an also ran. Battling this array, the Fox is offering Clark and McCullough, prime favorites here. The film is "Woman Wise" and also on the bill are the Wilson Sisters and Washburn, songs, and the Meyakos, oriental novelty. Both houses should crack the $30,000 mark.

Outside of that, little novelty. Changing of the Karlton's policy into extended-run has cut down the number of weekly film openings. "Love" is held over at this house for its fourth week, a good record for the beginning of the new policy; "Wings" is still at the Aldine and "Sunrise" at the Fox-Locust.

Aviation special dropped a bit at the Aldine and there have been rumors that "Patent Leather Kid" might move over there from the Erlanger. But this is doubtful, as "Wings" ought to be able to last through March and maybe Lent. Last week was $16,000, or a little under.

"Sunrise" nose-dived at the Fox-Locust with under $9,500 claimed for the fifth week. Last two weeks are announced, with "Four Sons" to follow March 5. Arcadia made out just moderately with "Love and Learn." On the other hand, the Stanton clicked from the start with "The Student Prince" and should be able to hold it in for three, perhaps four, weeks. Gross was almost $17,000.

The Stanley, with "The Dove," which won mixed notices, claimed about $29,000. An elaborate prolog was given some attention. The Fox, with the second and final week of "The Jazz Singer," which recently finished an extended run at the Fox-Locust, reported $26,500. Will Rogers was the presentation headliner.

Estimates for Last Week

Stanley (4,000; 35-50-75). "The Dove" (U. A.). Norma Talmadge picture greeted by mixed notices, but did nice week's business; about $29,000.

Aldine (1,500; $2). "Wings" (Par) (12th week). Three months and still strong, although off to $16,000 last week; should hang on all right.

Stanton (1,700; 35-50-75). "Student Prince" (M-G) (1st week). Looks good for a run of three to four weeks; almost $17,000.

Karlton (1,000; 50-75). "Love" (M-G) (3d week). New policy of house has apparently worked well; fourth week demanded by the business; $8,000.

Fox-Locust (1,800; $1.65). "Sunrise" (Fox) (6th week). Decidedly off, less than $9,500 reported; last two weeks announced.

Fox (3,000; 99). "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (2d week). Highly successful considering picture had finished extended run at the Fox-Locust; $26,500 reported.

Arcadia (800; 50). "Love and Learn." Just average, with $3,000.

Hart Would State-Right Re-Issue of His Westerns

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

William S. Hart is at work on a plan to reissue a group of his old westerns on a state-right basis.

The star figures there are about a score of these films available for the purpose and has instructed his eastern legal advisor, William Grossman (House, Grossman & Vorhaus), to carry on negotiations with eastern territorial distributors and operators.

Pictures have been released during the past nine years. There were a number of still earlier Hart pictures in the mass of negatives revived by Triangle, and they sold readily.

MARIA CORDA'S BRITISH FILM

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Maria Corda, who played "Helen of Troy" for First National as her only American picture, is en route to New York to sail for London.

When she arrives abroad Miss Corda is to make a picture for British National to be directed by Victor Seville.

Alexander Korda, her husband, remains here, as he has two pictures to direct for F. N.

FOX'S HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS SITE, 1,000% UP, WILL BE SOLD—MOVING TO FOX HILLS

10 Stages to Handle All General Fox Film Productions—Two Movietone Stages—Three Specials With Movietone Talking Characters—Sheehan Claims 50% Increase of Fox Grosses in 1928

William Fox will sell the two city blocks in the heart of Hollywood on which his main studios are now centered.

Instruction has gone forth to the West Coast for the removal of all production to Fox's more recently acquired 180-acre tract which the producer has named Fox Hills. During the past year it has undergone consistent development. This property is on one of Hollywood's extreme boundaries near Santa Monica.

The Hollywood property is considered too valuable to be continued as a picture making site. It is in one of the most thickly populated parts of the town, on Sunset boulevard and Western avenue. It is believed to have increased 1,000 per cent. in value since bought by William Fox some years ago.

Some of Fox's biggest pictures during the past year have been shot at Fox Hills. Plans are prepared which call for 10 stages to handle all general productions. Two Movietone stages are under construction.

Sheehan's Prediction

Winfield Sheehan, now in New York lining up Fox's 28-29 production schedule, expects the company's 1928 grosses from film rentals to be 50 per cent. greater than those for 1927. He counts on a part of the extra from Movietone.

The first super to which the talkie apparatus will be applied will be "Mother Knows Best," which J. G. Blystone will get under way in Fox Hills within the next two weeks.

"Blossom Time" and "The Dollar Princess" will follow the Blystone production in the Movietone process. Frank Borzage will direct the first and will do most of the shooting in Vienna.

Foreigners on Lot

Going to the Fox studios in March is Henri Bernstein, European dramatist. Bernstein, now in Paris, has written an original for the screen which Fox has bought. Berthold Biertel, associate of Max Reinhardt, is also leaving for the Fox lot with an original which he will oversee.

Preceding these writers is Charles Francis Coe, author of "Me Gangster" and "The River Pirate," who goes to the Coast for an initial three months on a writing and supervisorial contract.

Cutting to Fit

Chicago, Feb. 21.

"Chicago After Midnight" (FBO) was booked by the Marks brothers for their Marbro and Granada theatres. Embodied in the picture are several shots of Balaban & Katz houses, Chicago night clubs, and other points of interest in Chi's night life.

When Marx brothers got the film they clipped the B. & K. stuff and put a cameraman to work making pictures of their own houses. The Mark. boys, it is said, expected F. B. O. to pay for the additions to the film. F. B. O. didn't.

Banker Orders Name Off Air Ass'n Letterheads

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Jean Francis De Villard, former film producer and now Pacific Coast representative of the United States Air Force Association, was notified by Irving H. Hellman, banker, to cease the use of his name in connection with the organization. Hellman claimed he had never accepted any position on the executive committee of the flying association, despite that his name was carried on stationery and letterheads.

De Villard arrived here about two years ago. After a lot of conversation, he started a picture on Poverty Row, and was before the State Labor Commission when he failed to pay off players or mechanics. De Villard then dropped from sight as far as pictures were concerned.

The U. S. Air Force Ass'n was formed in 1925 by Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell and others. A nationwide campaign for funds and members is now being made. De Villard established local headquarters shortly after the first of the year.

U and St. Joe

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 21.

Midland Circuit has purchased the Colonial from Universal, but so far has declined to take over the other two Universal houses in St. Joseph, Orpheum and the Royal.

Time was when the Universal houses here led in box office receipts, but the Missouri, Publix, and Electric, Grebel house owned by Kansas City, Kan., capital, now have the lion's share.

Phil Ainsworth's Latest Jam

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Phil B. Ainsworth, ex-husband of the late Barbara LaMarr and at one time her dancing partner, is under arrest on suspicion of forgery. It is charged he forged the name of his employers on a $25 check and tried to cash it.

Several years ago Ainsworth served four months in San Quentin on a forgery charge and also one year on a similar charge for violation of parole in Folsom prison.

NIGH FINED $500

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

William Nigh, director, who biffed a rival that miffed him during their joint courtship of Jean Jarvis, dancer, was fined $500 by Judge Wilson when he pleaded guilty to simple assault.

Edward Usher, Jr., who took the beating, is said to be a former football star and millionaire's son.

THAW'S PROTEGE'S FILM

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Now that Harry Thaw has gone cast, one of his two proteges, Anita Rivers, has managed to break into the studios.

Miss Rivers has a minor role in "He Learned About Women" (M-G) and has changed her name to Ann Page.

Ragland Sues Hatton for $44,864 on '26 Contract

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Raymond Hatton is defendant in a suit filed by John C. Ragland for $44,864. Ragland alleges he signed a five-year contract as Hatton's manager, was to receive 40 per cent of the player's salary over $750 weekly during the first year, and one-third over that figure thereafter. Ragland declares that three months after the contract was signed, Oct., 1926, Hatton's salary was jumped to $2,750 a week.

At the time the managerial deal was made, Hatton had appeared in two Paramount pictures teamed with Wallace Beery. He later was taken out of "Casey at the Bat" and Beery was starred alone. A few months later he was persuaded to return and made a new deal with studio officials at the increased salary. Ragland entered suit for his claim of 40 per cent of the first year's raise in salary obtained by Hatton under the new deal.

PUBLIX BUYS PLANT FOR PRODUCTIONS

The Erlanger production plant on 49th street, west of 9th avenue is to be taken over by Paramount and will be used for the production of units prepared to play Publix and Loew theatres. The sale price is said to be $500,000 in cash.

The building is one of the best equipped, especially constructed for scenic construction, painting, rehearsals and private try-out performances. There is a complete stage and fly loft.

The unit productions will be made there, also the costumes, while the rehearsal hall will be used for auditions.

VICTORIA'S PROMOTION

$10,000,000 Capitol Talked of for B. C. Studios

Washington, Feb. 21.

Cinema City, Ltd., is the general name given a real estate and stock selling promotion which contemplates building a moving picture studio on a 923-acre tract of land near Victoria, B. C. (Canada). The Department of Commerce is informed that the company seeks to dispose of $10,000,000 worth of stock in addition to home sites near the contemplated studio.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

James J. Wright, of Toronto, came here about two months' ago, and in association with William Sherrill, former head of Frohman Picture Corp., endeavored, without apparent success, to interest local capital in a scheme to create a studio and movie colony near Victoria, B. C. The site was described as seven miles from the heart of Victoria.

Wright's option on the property in question expired Jan. 26 at which time it is understood he and Sherrill dissolved business relationships. Wright then obtained an option on another tract of land described as nine miles from the center of Victoria. Clark Thomas, formerly with Thomas H. Ince, was approached by Wright and is reported as set to be production head if the proposed studio becomes a reality. Thomas stated to a Variety reporter, however, that he was not interested in the project from any angle.

Wright is still in Hollywood equipped with numerous letters from Victoria's civic bodies. He stresses the point that the British Empire quota laws on films make the Victoria movie colony feasible.

Potter After Rowland?

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Richard Rowland, general manager for First National, arrived from New York Sunday accompanied by Ralph Potter, now his assistant.

Latter was formerly with Consolidated Laboratories, and is mentioned as Rowland's successor when Rowland's contract expires in June.

Par's Rally Points

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Paramount has changed its plans on sales conventions.

The rallies will be held in Washington, D. C.; Kansas City and Seattle around May 1.

SANTELL ILL

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

John Francis Dillon replaces Al Santell as director on "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," starring Richard Barthelmess.

Santell is confined to his home with pneumonia and will not be able to work for several weeks. The picture has four more shooting days.

SAM WOODS' NEXT FOUR

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

M-G-M is negotiating with Sam Woods, director, for four pictures after the expiration of his present contract with that company, which provides for two more pictures.

Woods is now getting about $30,000 per picture, with the new deal rating an increase over that figure.

N. Y. Cutting Dull

A few have been treated in the Lloyd's Film Storage Corp. rooms, controlled by Joseph R. Miles, who also operated the projecting rooms used by the indies.

Mrs. Stagg Convicted on 2 Counts in St. Clair Case

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Mrs. Margaret Powell Stagg was convicted in Federal court on two counts of an indictment charging her with misusing the mails in trying to extort money from the parents of Helen St. Clair, picture actress, who committed suicide last June.

Mrs. Stagg set up as a defense that she had been in communication with the dead girl's spirit and was informed that she was murdered. "Certain spirits" impressed upon her and prompted her to write to Mr. and Mrs. Daniels, the girl's parents, in New York, saying she could clear up the mystery and asked for transportation to New York. Parents informed the Federal authorities and later came to Hollywood to further investigate. Police, however, were satisfied that the girl was not murdered but died by her own hand.

A highlight in the case, before it went to trial, were the statements of Joseph M. Schenck, called as a prospective juror. Schenck declared before the court that he would never convict a woman of a crime on circumstantial evidence. Three other men later voiced the same sentiments.

MARION A "BISHOP"

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

The name of George Marion, Jr., was unintentionally omitted from the roster of the "Titular Bishops," Hollywood's new high-hat order of title writers.

Marion is third on the ritzy scroll.

MISS MILLER LEAVING

Patsy Ruth Miller, Tiffany-Stahl star, leaves for Europe Friday to make several pictures abroad, returning in May. She still has four more pictures to make for T-S under her present contract.

PATHE DROPPED OFF 50 SALESMEN; 2 DIV. MGRS.

Over 50 salesmen were dropped from the Pathe staff last week from the ranks of the most recently engaged workers. Two division managers have been dropped in the east, Hacking and Mayburn, these latter taking jobs as branch managers.

The cutting of field forces means that former branch and exchange managers will have to go out as salesmen.

According to the new lineup, effective Feb. 20, there are now only three division managers, Les Weir, western division; Stanley Jaeques, mid-western division, and Dan Michalove, southern division. The eastern territory will be handled by Phil Reisman, sales manager, with the assistance of L. W. Kniskern.

Branch managers, who are also the salesmen in most instances, are: C. J. Stombaugh, Albany; R. C. Cropper, Boston; L. J. Hacking, New Haven; W. E. Raynor and Robert Wolff, New York; W. G. Humphries, Philadelphia; R. C. Robin, Washington; W. W. Anderson, Atlanta; E. L. McShane, Charlotte; E. C. Leeves, Dallas; Guy C. Brown, New Orleans; Oscar Hanson, Buffalo; J. A. Harris, Cincinnati; O. J. Ruby, Cleveland; Oscar Bloom, Indianapolis; Robert Moehrle, Pittsburgh; H. S. Lorch and Harry Grahani, Chicago; Henry Zapp, Detroit; J. H. MacIntyre, Milwaukee; A. Levy, Des Moines; E. S. Olsmith, Kansas City; L. J. Duncan, Memphis; C. W. Allen, Oklahoma City; Albert Danke, Omaha; C. D. Hill, St. Louis; A. G. Edwards, Denver; J. S. Stout, Los Angeles; H. L. Percy, Portland; A. J. O'Keefe, Salt Lake City; M. E. Cory, San Francisco; L. A. Samuelson, Seattle.

Miss Mann Held in N. Y.

Margaret Mann has been so well received in connection with her personal appearances daily with "Four Sons" at the Gaiety, New York, the Fox officials have decided to keep her here for at least another three weeks.

On Washington's Birthday she changed her costume to that of Martha Washington, in which attire she made her debut in San Diego years ago.

ASTOR-HAWKS WEDDING

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

The real name of Mary Astor is Lucille Vasconellos Langhanke.

She will become the wife of Howard Hawks, Fox director, Feb. 23.

CON-BILL'S "FAILURE ISLAND"; IT'S "PORT OF MEN WHO MISS"

By Jack Conway (Con)

Los Angeles, Feb. 19.

Dear Chick:

Bill Mizner and your second baseman have knitted a ditty for the boys called "Failure Island" and we expect it will goal the peasants. "Failure Island" is reached through the "Valley of Discontent" and is loeated at the "Port of Men Who Miss," according to Bill's map.

You will probably recognize it as that place where you and every other mug in the world wanted to be, when punch drunk and disillusioned you longed for an escape from reality and found out that booze wasn't the right prescription.

Every guy in the world, who is willing to concede that he's a failure, is eligible. This goes for Rockefeller, Henry Ford or any of the others. For the possession of dough has nothing to do with our angle. If the applicant admits to himself that he's a flop—he's oke to move in.

This is more or less kidding on the level for Bill and I have really lined up an island in the South Seas and have had applications from some of the biggest shots in the deaf and dumb colony.

Rules

The rules are, write your own ticket and bury your own dead. We don't intend to do anything, but provide a sanctuary for the birds who would much rather sit in the grandstand or bleachers than get out on the lot and play. In order to acquaint the world with our idea we will cook up the screen opus and then sit back and take applications.

You will notice that up to now I haven't cracked about broads. We have a fool proof scheme worked out to take care of the molls. But you'll have to wait for the picture to get a load of it. It's too good to tip, even to you.

We have already lined up Mencken, Nathan and Tully, and if we could spring Ernie Booth from San Quentin, he'd be a pipe to solicit. We will probably take a director and a cameraman along so the world can see the development of the most modern republic, and the chumps can gaze on free men in their natural environment.

The rules of entrance, making it obligatory for candidates to cop a plea and admit themselves palukas, would automatically bar members of the Anti-Saloon League and most of the natives of Iowa and Indiana.

Cover Charge for Tone

But to get back to the picture. I think we have a real opus, if one of these master minds out here don't insist on a 65 cent ending. I wouldn't bet very high that they

AMUSEMENT STOCKS SUPPORTED, RALLY PROMPTLY, PAR. AT 116

Behavior of Group Hints at Skillful Management of Pools—Leaders Give Way 2 to 3 Points—Fox Financing Reacts Against Market Position

Amusement stocks gave a good account of themselves during the severe setback that shook the whole list last week, and on yesterday's momentary rally were prompt to show betterment. Yesterday's upturn seemed to be largely pre-holiday short covering, giving no hint of distant market trend.

Relatively moderate volume of business in the amusements was evidence that distressed selling was not great, while all signs indicated pool operators were standing firm to support their issues under attack.

Paramount came back above 116 yesterday from an extreme low of 113¼ last week; Loew recovered from 57¾ to within a fraction of 60 by noon. The only issue that reacted severely was Fox, under the pressure for the moment of its new financing. Rights to the new stock declined from 1½ to ⅝, exhibiting no rush to buy the new stock at 75 and this put rather an uncertain aspect on the shares.

Maneuvers on Way Up

Another side to the group is that Paramount and Loew have gone through a gradual advance, accompanied at frequent intervals by corrective declines which have eliminated a weak long following as it accumulated.

This has been especially true of Paramount and Loew and the strength of their position, as compared to Fox, was clearly shown. With the steady reaction of the past ten days, Paramount went off only 4 points from its top, from 117¾ to 113½. Loew slipped from 62 to 58, while Fox was off from its peak of 88¼ to a low of 77½.

Fox, of course, has been bid up sharply, first from its last summer bottom of 55 to above 70 and then in leaps to 88, the whole movement being accomplished almost without tonic pauses to retrace some of the advance. The result was that when the list tottered, bear testing operations against Loew and Paramount, both in strong clique hands, they could make little impression, while assaults against Fox brought definite results.

It is likely that the drop in Fox is serving its sponsors' purpose in liquidating a lot of trailers, and at current levels the shares should be in good position when the advance resumes. For even conservative opinion is that the general slump is temporary and that the bull movement will be resumed later on. All disagree upon when this will happen. There are few, however, who believe that the present reaction is the end of a long bull market and that the trend has definitely turned into a bear cycle.

Both Paramount and Loew have put their new financing behind them. Paramount at 116 and paying 8 makes an attractive yield, while market behavior of Loew suggests that a more generous treatment of stockholders is not far in the future.

Pathe Slips Back

Pathe Class A behaved about as expected. The recovery from 8 to around 16 turned out to be nothing more than a hasty covering movement, and when it had spent its force, prices retreated. As usual the retreat was as extreme as the comeback. Yesterday Pathe looked as though it had made progress toward finding a trading level, apparently to be established somewhere between 12 and 14 for the present.

The concern's bonds moved in parallel lines, getting near 70 and then dropping back around 60. This $6,000,000 of bonds, of course, are an obstacle to any considerable betterment of the stock in the near future. Their interest payment as well as sinking fund requirements (now in arrears) will be a heavy load to carry while the organization is staging a comeback.

Stanley Decline Halts

Stanley dealings in Philadelphia were typical of one phase of trading. Prices have been slipping slowly for three months with nothing coming out to explain why, except vague deductions as to the strain on finances of expanding operations. Now that the company has called off building and acquiring new theatres and talk of passing dividends is frankly carried on, the decline halts.

Here is another example of insiders discounting bad news and prices firming up upon the general coming out of the news. Stanley was dealt in all week at stable prices within a fraction of 49-50, compared to the bottom below 47.

Warner Bros. is gaining in the favor of speculators. The steady behavior of the bonds, now selling at a premium, 102, compared to its low around 80, makes it apparent that at least some of the concern's troubles are behind them, while prospects are constantly brightening, as indicated by a profit on the half-year up to late summer.

Shubert was neglected in narrow range between 61 and 62, while Orpheum drifted, generally close to its low, at 23. No action on the Curb or in the Counter shares.

Summary of dealings, including Saturday, Feb. 18:

Drops Wardrobe Dept.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Fox studio has discontinued its wardrobe department and in the future will have all costumes made on the outside.

It is said that the department was not functioning properly, and Ben Jacksen, general business manager for the company, figured that it would be more practical to get the wardrobe from costumers who do this work for the studios.

'CAN'T MAKE EXPENSES LOANING INDIE FILM PRODUCERS'—WILSON

M. P. Capital Corp., Financing Concern, Leaving Picture Field—Film Industry Too Centralized—Backed "Kings" to $1,500,000

The Motion Picture Capital Corporation since its inception four years ago has financed 247 film productions. It is changing its title, slashing its board of directors and moving downtown March 7, Frank Wilson, its president, says.

Combining production, distribution and exhibition through the numerous mergers has resulted in a condition making it a hazard to make a loan even to an established independent producer, Wilson declared.

"Gradual centralization of the industry has contributed to this situation. Even independent producers with good pictures find it impossibel to get national first runs, not solely because they are practically controlled by producers, but because an exhibitor is compelled to fill his program," Wilson said.

Wilson stated his company witnessed a $2,000,000 decline in its 1927 business over that of the previous year. "This was largely due to the fact that we were afraid to take it" he said.

Little over $100,000 on a capital of $2,000,000 was realized by the company during 1927, the president revealed. "I don't imagine that we would do much more than pay expenses if we confined our activities to films during 1928," Wilson remarked.

One Other Loaner

The revision of Capital's status will leave only one other company specializing in film loans in the field, according to Wilson. This is Joseph M. Schenck's Art Cinema Corporation.

"It can well afford to continue because it owns, distributes and exhibits the pictures which it finances," Wilson claims. The other company, Cinema Finance Corporation, was absorbed two years ago by Capital from its backers, the Pacific Southwest and the First National banks of Los Angeles.

The Capital's board of directors, cut from 15 to five, will drop Jules Brulatour, described as "inactive for some time." Others are Theodore Watson of Watson and White; Frank Wilson, Leslie Cudahy, of "Literary Digest"; William R. Walker, Capital vice-president; W. H. Kellogg, Capital attorney; Bernard E. Pollack, banker; Clarkson Potter of Hayden Stone & Co.; Charles Christie of Christie Producing Company.

Capital financed up to $1,500,000 De Mille's "King of Kings" and has furnished working capital for others of De Mille's films, from understanding.

Producers Claim 1st N. Studio Charges Too High

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Harry Langdon will make his last picture under his present contract with First National at an outside studio and will not avail himself of facilities of the First National studios. Langdon will likely move over to the Metropolitan studios, as he feels studio costs will be much lower in that spot than the charges at First National plant.

Langdon's complaint of overhead and various charges at the latter lot is the same as that of other independent producers who have made pictures for First National at the Burbank plant.

Johnnie Hines, making comedies for the same releasing organization, has been operating at the Tec-Art studios at a much lower cost of studio charges for sets and material than he could turn out his product in Burbank.

RUPERT JULIAN'S SPEED

16 Day Shooting Record for DeMille Lot—And Under Budget

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

A record for time on shooting a picture was established on the Pathe-De Mille lot when Rupert Julian completed "Walking Back" on a time schedule of 16 days. Julian has a reputation of taking his time to get results.

The 16-day schedule is the shortest of any picture made at the De-Mille plant since the organization started. It is said to have been completed at a figure around $125,000 under the budget.

Shipping Scenes East Daily

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Burton King has started production on "Women Who Dare" at the Metropolitan studios for Excellent. Cast includes Helene Chadwick, Rex Lease, Jack Richardson, Mickey Bennett, Frank Beal, Ernie Adams, J. W. Dillion and Charles Delaney.

Scenes shot will be shipped daily to New York, where the picture will be assembled and edited.

Heart Disease Declaration Clears Up Morris Death

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

The mystery which at first surrounded the death of Reginald Morris, scenario writer and gag man, was dispelled after an autopsy was held and County Surgeon A. F. Wagner declared that Morris died of heart disease. Hollywood police had started an investigation after Dr. E. J. Krahulik refused to sign a death certificate because he was not present at the time Morris died, having been called in later.

Morris was discovered dead in his apartment. When police arrived they found Linda Loredo, Spanish dancer, who has been doing some work in pictures, in the room and weeping. The girl said she and Morris had been to a theatre the night before and had something to eat. Later, Morris was seized with severe pains and expressed the belief it was indigestion. Friends of Morris corroborated that. Girl was questioned by police but not held.

Duffy's 8 Two-Reelers

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Al Christie has exercised his option on Jack Duffy.

Duffy will be featured in eight two-reel comedies on the '28-'29 program of shorts for Paramount.

Pathe Buys "The Dummy"

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Pathe has purchased screen rights to "The Dummy," a stage play.

It will serve as a starring story for Junior Coghlan on next year's program.

Tom Mix Hurt In Last Film for Fox

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Tom Mix, on the final day of making his last picture under his present contract with Fox, suffered numerous injuries in a scene where he had to battle five men and jump down a flight of stairs after them.

Mix, in making the jump, landed on top of the knees of one of the men, breaking two ribs on his right side, a finger on his right hand, wrenching his left wrist and throwing that arm out of place, as a result of a trying ordeal.

Mix had saved this fight to make after the last scene of the picture, figuring it would be a rough and tumble go.

Prior to being injured he had thrown five men down the stairs after a rough and tumble battle, and had gone after them in one leap.

Mix will be confined to his home for about 10 days.

Sutherland Released

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Eddie Sutherland has been released from his contract with Paramount, for whom he had one more picture to make.

He has shifted to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to make one production, and thereafter will undertake the direction and supervision of feature comedies under Irving Thalberg.

FOX'S, WASH. CREATED BIZ DOWNTOWN; MIDLAND, KANSAS CITY, HAS NOT TO DATE

Comparative Figures of Bulked Grosses Before and After Advent of Big New Capacity Film Houses, to Ascertain Whether Additions Created Business or Merely Took from Older Theatres—Legits, Also K-A Big Timer, Badly Hurt at Capital

Washington, Feb. 21.

Advent of the new 3,400-seat Fox has created approximately $20,000 weekly in new business for the downtown houses. Some managers say it is too early to actually set a level as yet.

This additional business is shown in the bulk grosses of the four houses constituting the main stem contingent prior to the opening of the Fox last September in comparison with the bulk takings since the coming of the new big capacity house.

Taking the top weeks the new business is reduced to even less than the approximate $20,000. Prior to the Fox opening the four houses did a weekly bulk of $59,000. The highest total gross since Fox opened has amounted to about $84,000.

Latter is not a true figure as a sixth house had entered the field the Earle, with a change in policy. The business it had been doing (K-A vaude), was not taken cognizance of in the previous high of $59,000. House was doing a possible six to seven thousand weekly which would throw the old gross to about $67,000. Leaving only a $17,000 increase.

Average bulk gross from October through December, 1926, was about $45,000 weekly. About on a par with the same period this year with the same number of houses. Convincing that there has been new business created.

The main increased business, managers state, has come from the neighborhoods. Saturday openings helping this along.

Another phase is the conviction that the government worker, with his average of $1,200 a year, is now slowly being educated to make two and three trips to the pictures instead of his previous one a week.

Legit Hurt Business

This has also meant the passing of the legit. Unless it is an exceptional attraction even the musicals don't get them any more. It has also made the troubles of the Keith-Albee two-a-day house just that much harder to bear. Business at Keith's has so drifted that persistent rumors indicate switch to a grind policy is not far off.

Bulked grosses from week ending July 16 to Sept. 17 (Fox opening), were: $50,000, $44,000, $32,000, $46,000, $36,000, $38,000, $45,000, $46,000, $59,000, and Sept. 13, $54,-00. Fox opening the next week ran the combined grosses to $70,000, dropping down to $57,000 the week before Christmas. Following week forced takings up to $84,000 with the Earle counted in making a total of six houses against the previous four. Week before last found takings in toto back to $67,000.

Figures are considered remarkable at the gate scale of 50 cents top. A top that the Fox finally came down to by several reductions.

K-C Stood Still

Kansas City, Feb. 21.

Fifty thousand dollars seems to be the average gross of the local first run picture houses in the downtown district, according to a close observation of the figures reported from these same houses for the past year.

Before the advent of the beautiful and new Loew's Midland with 4,000 seats, the exclusive first run picture houses and their capacities were: Newman, 1,900; Mainstreet, 3,200; Pantages, 2,200; Liberty, 1,000, and Royal, 900.

Week after week the combined grosses of these five theatres would average around $50,000. It was so regular that when either jumped up its weekly gross, some or all of the others would drop enough so that as usual the total of the five would still be $50,000.

When the Midland opened and the Loew management took over the two Publix houses, Newman and Royal, the latter house was closed and the policy of the Newman changed to straight pictures without stage show, with a 35c. top at night, and 25 cents for the day trade.

With the closing of the Royal, 900 seats were taken out of circulation, but the addition of the Midland's 4,000 increased the seating capacity of the picture houses practically 50 per cent., apparently too much for the town as the weekly grosses still remain close to $50,000.

There is no question but what the Midland hurt, and is hurting, the other houses, but it is also recognized that the house is not doing the business it can do or is expected to do.

The figures do not include the Orpheum, 1,800, now playing pictures with its vaudeville, or the Globe, which uses pictures between the performances of the musical tab shows.

Universal recently opened its Uptown theatre, in the Broadway business district. This house is a couple of miles from the downtown district, but its 2,500 seats are proving competition to the downtowners.

Cooney-Coston Want to Talk Business to Fox?

Chicago, Feb. 21.

While B. J. Cooney and James Coston of Cooney Brothers theatres and the Coston circuit, respectively, have gone to Los Angeles with their wives, presumably for a vacation, considerable significance is attached to the trip, locally, from a business angle.

Men with offices on that part of Wabash avenue which is "film row" are endeavoring to read between the lines. Many and varied are the tales told as to just why Messrs. Coston and Cooney have hied themselves to Los Angeles.

The story is that the theatre operators are to go into conference with Jimmy Grainger and Winfield Sheehan, at Fox headquarters. If Fox were to throw his Ascher holdings into the Cooney-Coston combination there would be stiff competition for Balaban and Katz-Publix in Chicago. The Cooney-Coston combination have combined bookings amounting to about 125 houses.

4TH WRITER ON FILM

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

C. Gardner Sullivan is the fourth script writer assigned to work on Norma Talmadge's next, "A Woman Disputed."

Elmer Clifton, who wrote the play, was the first to contribute ideas on its adaptation, then Agnes Christine Johnston and Jules Furthman were called in.

BREN MADE SUPER

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Milton Bren has been promoted to production supervisor of M-G-M dog series.

Bren has been assistant to Paul Bern, scenario department head, for the past year.

"COP" SCENES IN N. Y.

PATHE STORIES OVERBOARD

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Arthur Kane, brought in by Pathe-DeMille as a story scout for picture possibilities, quit the job after two months.

The studio is fully supplied with story material for next year's program, it is claimed.

Girl Scenarists in N. Y.

Frances Marion and Alice D. G. Miller, scenario writers, arrived in New York from the Coast, Saturday, for several weeks vacation in New York.

TAKING SAXE NAME OUT OF WIS. ADS

Milwaukee, Feb. 21.

The Saxe name dropped further out of sight on Wisconsin theatres when it was jerked from the advertisements. Previously, Saxe was scratched from the company offices and Midwesco supplanted it.

Whether the arrest of Thomas Saxe on charges of a young girl had anything to do with the sudden change in the newspaper ads or not, has not been learned. The newspaper ads now state "Midwesco Theatres" where the name "Saxe" had been written across a facsimile of a chart of the state, the Saxe trade-mark.

Midwesco theatre heads said the Saxe name would remain for a time on the canopies and signs over the various theatres.

Two switches in managers were announced this week. Jack Plant, who opened the Oriental, was sent to the Garfield, while Bill Dubach, who opened the Garfield, goes to the Oriental.

Detroit's 2 House Price War; Oriental and State

Detroit, Feb. 21.

Price slashing battle recently started by Miles' Oriental and Kunsky's State still rages. Both play vaude-film and are deadly opposition in fighting for the same type of patronage.

Both are now operating under trick scales, the minimum reached so far being 25 cents from opening until 1 p. m., daily except Sundays. The mob is going blind trying to find the "except Sundays" line in the advertisements. In the ads of each the two-bit scale gets feature billing, over all attractions, and it is no uncommon sight to see the boys running toward the box office with quarter in hand to beat the 1 o'clock whistle.

Though not directly concerned in the two-house scrap, the Temple, K-A grind stand, has also been using the razor and is now down to a 40-cent top. This house played two-a-day at $1.50 until last August.

Both the State and Oriental are running in the red and are seemingly twins in the belief that the only remedy for one is to murder the other.

Production Staff Move

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Samuel Goldwyn's production staff will move from the DeMille to the United Artists studios as soon as office space, under construction in the latter plant, is completed.

Franklin on Theatre Operation; Valuable Work From Experience

Little doubt that Harold B. Franklin's book, "Motion Picture Theatre Management," is an innovation and education in that line of endeavor. It might well become the text book of every "chain," independently operated house, any school for managers or theatre courses in colleges.

Published by George H. Doran Company, the volume is in 365 pages, 34 chapters. It covers everything pertaining to the theatre from financing to equipment, policy, and the value of the conference. For the uninitiated, the work is also a graphic description of the picture industry as a whole touching as it does on production and distribution.

Franklin writes on all phases, intimately, with an insight to detail that is remarkable. That it took the author some eight or nine months to write it, generally while en route from coast to coast, is believable upon the reading.

The book's dominant note is Franklin's belief in the budget. Continuous reference is made to the subject. To quote the author:

"As a business adjunct, the budget is the most progressive advancement in controlling and measuring efficiency in the last decade." That sentence sums his viewpoint but he also takes the pains to point out how, where and when it should be used.

Split into seven parts, the book covers in rotation: Industry and the Theatre, Management and Organization, Plant and Structure, Personnel, Finance, Auxiliary and Contributive Elements, and a review and forecast—the latter particularly interesting in that it deals with the "Talkers and Television."

His contention that "the impulse that sent people to the county fair in other days will never die," is the author's answer to those who predict television will throttle the theatre when and if perfected.

Invaluable Guide

A full chapter is devoted to the Paramount theatre, the Roxy is also given its share of attention and Franklin, at the end of the preface, pays a graceful tribute to Adolph Zukor.

As a guide the book is an invaluable contribution to the industry. Based upon the experiences of a man who is a master of theatre detail, the author has put the knowledge he has gained on paper that all may see. And in the light of what Franklin, personally, has accomplished in so short a space of time, who is there within the picture theatre who can afford to ignore such a reading—no matter how spasmodic or haphazard the scanning of the volume may be?

"Motion Picture Theatre Management" is a highly creditable piece of work from all angles. It's not only educational but readable, and to those in any way concerned in theatre operation, or with stage production for picture houses, it amounts to their loss if they fail to take advantage of it.

"TRUST" SUIT STARTS AGAINST PAR IN DALLAS—$450,000 DAMAGES

Two Local Exhibs Allege Losses—Couldn't Secure 1st Class Pictures and "Put in Bad" With Other Distributors—Possible Precedent

Dallas, Feb. 21.

A suit against Paramount and various members of that organization, charging violation of the anti-trust laws, came up for trial in the 95th District Court yesterday.

Attorneys for the defense said the trial would not only decide the fate of the independent theatres owners in Dallas, but would command wide interest since it may establish a precedent for similar suits.

Suit was filed early in February, with damages claimed $450,000. Ray Stinnett and Si Charninsky, operators of the Capitol, are alligned against P-F-L.

The specific charges brought by the plaintiffs are that they were "blacklisted" and that by refusing to renew film contracts the defendants causcd a loss of $450,000.

Charninsky and Stinnett were refused the right to show first class pictures and when the defendants learned that the independents had contracted for a United Artists picture, they proceeded to get the plaintiff "in bad," it is alleged, with every first class booking office in existence, it is claimed.

"Tiring Process" Says T. O. C. C. in Letter

Terming the contract committee meetings in Chicago a "tiring-out process," the T. O. C. C., in a letter to theatre owner representatives sitting behind the closed doors, demands that they insist upon a seventh arbitrator "on any of the points which we have asked for and which are not conceded by the producers."

The letter states the New York organization was kept in the dark on all moves made during the first and second sessions on a film contract for the industry. It instructs the exhibitor delegates, above the signature of J. Arthur Hirsch, chairman of the organization's executive committee:

"Under no circumstances will this organization concede the right of giving up their privilege of trial by jury by agreeing to arbitration unless the article that this arbitration is based on has been impartially arbitrated."

Rayart After Producers

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures Corp., is on the coast negotiating with independent producers for new releasing contracts for Rayart.

CARR'S 3 WESTERNS

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Trem Carr is producing three westerns for Rayart release at the California studios. Titles are "Mystery Valley," "The Lightnin' Shot" and "The Devils' Tower." Mystery Valley," now in production, is featuring Buddy Roosevelt, Jr., and Thelma Parr, with Tom Bay, Art Rowlands and Jimmie Kane supporting.

J. P. McGowan directing.

MISS PREVOST'S STARRING 6

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Pathe-De Mille proffered Marie Prevost no less than six drafts of a renewal contract as a star in that company's pictures before one was drawn to her satisfaction. Under the contract she will star in six pictures a year.

Miss Prevost was taken over from Metropolitan when the latter merged with Pathe-De Mille.

NIBLO'S M-G FILM

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Fred Niblo, preparing to make "La Paiva," featuring Lupe Valez for United Artists, will move to the M-G studios after completing the production. He is to direct "The Ordeal," a book which M-G has had on the shelf a long time.

STUDIO ACTIVITY IS 50% OFF; FEB. RUSH TO BEAT STATE TAX

Five Studios Dark—Par. Leads Production With 8 Co.s Working, Fox 7, F. N. and M-G 5, Columbia 4, T-S 3—Two Percent Tax on All Negatives

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

A survey on studio activity shows the aggregate companies working to be about 50 percent below normal. Studios, dark and inactive are Christie, Educational, Mack Sennett, United Artists and Stern Brothers.

Paramount heads the list for production activity with eight companies working. These include "The Patriot," directed by Ernst Lubitsch; "Super of the Galety," directed by Hobart Henley; "Three Sinners," by Rowland V. Lee; "Hold Everything," by Clarence Badger; "Ladies of the Mob," by William Wellman; "Easy Come, Easy Go," by Frank Tuttle; "Quick Lunch," by Charles Reisner, and a George Bancroft feature, untitled, and being directed by Josef von Sternberg.

Fox comes next with seven features and one comedy working. They are: "Hangman's House," directed by John Ford; "Red Dancer of Moscow," by Raoul Walsh; "The Sport Girl," by Arthur Rosson; "Four Devils," by F. W. Murnau; "A Thief in the Dark," by Albert Ray; "Honor Bound," by A. E. Green; "Wild West Romance," by R. L. Hough and a short reel comedy being directed by Jasper Blystone.

First National, at Burbank, has five companies working: "The Yellow Lily," being directed by Alexander Korda; "Butter and Egg Man," by Richard Wallace; "The Hawk," by Benjiman Christiansen; "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," by Al Santell, and "Lilac Time," by George Fitzmaurice.

M-G-M also has five companies going with "Diamond Handcuffs," being directed by John P. McCarthy; "Detectives," with Chester Franklyn; "Man About Town," by Malcolm St. Claire; "Tides of Empire," by Al Rogell, and "He Learned About Women," Sam Wood directing.

U's Lone Unit

Universal has but one company of its own working at the studio. This is "Lonesome," being directed by Paul Fejos. Other companies leasing space at this studio are "The Chorus Kid," being directed by Howard Bretherton for Gotham, and "Code of the Scarlet," being directed by Joe Brown for Charles Rogers—F. N. release.

Tiffany-Stahl has three companies going, which are: "The Scarlet Dove," being directed by Arthur Gregor; "Power," by Reginald Barker, and "Ladies of the Night Club," by George Archinbaud.

Columbia has four units working under titles of "Broadway Daddies," "After the Storm," "The Desert Bride," and "Matinee Idol." California, another studio, has two companies working for Rayart releases under title of "Danger Patrol," being directed by Duke Worne, and "Mystery Valley," by J. P. McGowan.

Metropolitan Studios, leased by Pathe, is being sub-leased to other producers. Companies now working here are: "Hell's Angels," being produced and directed by Howard Hughes; "Women Who Dare," directed by Burton King for Excellent, and "Road to Ruin," by Norton Parker, for Broughtan productions.

F B O has but three troupes working. Namely, "The Little Yellow House," Leo Meehan directing; "Notices," by Ralph Ince, and a Tom Tyler western, as yet untitled.

Pathe-De Mille has three productions going at the studio and one on location in New York. Companies working at the studio are: "The Godless Girl," directed by C. B. De Mille; "Tenth Avenue," by William De Mille, and "Man Made Woman," by Paul L. Stein. Company in New York is "The Cop," Donald Crisp directing.

Warner Brothers has one company shooting in addition to making Vitaphone sketches, and Hal Roach is the only short comedy studio active, with but three companies shooting. They will be closed shortly for their annual vacation.

Tec-Art, like other leasing studios, is actively engaged in seeking new customers. The independent producers using space in the various rental plants are following the larger companies in curtailing production.

February Clean-Up

All producers are trying to clean-up product during the current month. The reason for this is that there is a state tax on all film negatives, completed or uncompleted, which are in the state on March 1. The tax is around two percent of the negative cost and is considered by the producers as one of the evils of making pictures in California.

The way schedules are now arranged, most of the companies will finish their shooting Feb. 28. In case the negative cannot be cut here, it will be sent to New York with a cutter accompanying and doing his work there. In the event that retakes are necessary, word will be flashed to the Coast and the scenes be remade and then sent East, the negative remaining near the Atlantic all the time. The state law here specifies that if a negative is taken out of the state for the purupose of evading the tax law and then brought back, the tax in full must be paid.

DEPT. OF LABOR SUMS UP GEN. UNEMPLOYM'T

Washington, Feb. 21.

Numerous recent reports of unemployment throughout different sections of the country, as seen by the Department of Labor, are there summed up for entire country as follows:

While there was a large surplus of labor apparent throughout country in January, several of the major industries increased operating schedules and forces employed toward the end of the month.

Inventories meant many lay offs but these are now being re-employed. Many factories have not yet resumed regular schedules.

Some increase in automobile factory employment with still many plants idle. Some steel and iron mills employed additional help with outlook for more employment before end of February.

Textile industry is in bad shape as to employment. Seasonal curtailment in boot and shoe industry has left factories on part time basis. Operations in lumber industry down. Past 30 days has seen large surplus of this latter class of labor.

All outdoor activities are curtailed because of usual midwinter slackening. These workers migrating has caused marked shortages of labor in large cities of some localities.

Better weather conditions will find employment for large portion of those now off the payrolls.

WILL HAYS BACK

Will Hays with his staff members, Col. Jay and Maurice Mackenzie, returned to New York from the coast this week.

Earlier arrivals were Ben Lyon and Rod LaRocque.

F. N. After Hersholt

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Jean Hersholt, under contract to Universal, but who has worked for more outside companies than he has for U, is again being sought by First National.

F. N. wants him to play Dick Barthelmess' father in "Roulette."

Langdon's War Background

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Harry Langdon's next, to go into production around March 1 for First National, has a World War background.

No title decided upon for picture.

Jones Directs Team

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

F. Richard Jones has been signed by Paramount to direct the next Beery-Hatton picture.

Bretherton's "Chorus Kid"

Howard Bretherton, signed by Gotham to direct "The Chorus Kid," Howard Rockey's original.

MYERS 'SASSES' SENATE IN BREAD INQUIRY

Washington, Feb. 21.

Abram F. Myers, federal trade commissioner, whose name has been linked for the past several months with the picture trade, due to the commission's interest in that industry, went to the mat yesterday (Monday) with the Senate judiciary sub-committee on the substituted carbon copy of a letter which is said to have materially affected the action of the committee. It was charged that this letter was intentionally switched, with committee members having called it a "lying forgery."

Though Mr. Myers telling the committee what he thought of them personally, as well as the manner in which they had conducted the whole inquiry into the bread trust merger, places Myers in a unique and very select list of Government officials who have stood up and "sassed" the Senate. He told the committee he expected to be practicing law long after his job on the Government payrolls expired.

Meanwhile his stenographer has come forward and taken full responsibility for the switched carbon, the one sent the committee being that of a letter Myers later revised and which he thought had been destroyed.

Lien on 29 F. & R. Houses In $500,000 Garrick Case

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

In support of the $500,000 back profits awards made by Federal Judge W. A. Cant to former stockholders of the local Garrick theatre, liens have been placed by the judge on 29 F. & R. theatres in the Twin Cities.

Amending his previous decision, which awarded the stockholders the back profits, Judge Cant returned a new order authorizing the liens. As a basis for the issuance, Judge Cant stated that "it has appeared to the satisfaction of the court that from Jan., 1915, to July 8, 1924, the funds from the Garrick theatre have been wrongly commingled by the defendants with their own funds and with the funds belonging to the theatres included in the enterprise."

The 29 theatres made subject to the liens comprise 14 in Minneapolis and 15 in St. Paul.

Present Unit Routing

Chicago, Feb. 21.

A new arrangement for Publix units will be started next week when the shows produced in Chicago open at the Oriental, with Paul Ash, and play the Norshore, Senate and Harding, then going to the coast.

The units produced in New York will play the Chicago, Tivoli and Uptown and open in Des Moines to go south.

This arrangement will probably hold until all the new houses are opened, when the units will travel to the coast and return via Denver and then south.

6 Cent Verdict

Joint Arbitration Board of the T. O. C. C. and the New York Film Board of Trade decided in favor of the Monroe Theatre Corp., in its case against Universal for alleged breach of contract. Six cents damages were awarded; $250 was asked.

Monroe theatre claimed Universal had made a contract whereby the Monroe theatre was to follow the Rosedale, eight blocks away, on exhibition of U films specified. This was in Sept., 1927. In January, 1928, the Ward theatre opened three blocks away from the Monroe and the plaintiff averred that U sold the same picture to the Ward, which forced the Monroe to follow both the Rosedale and the Ward in presenting the same film.

While one picture was specifically mentioned ("The Irresistible Lover") there were over 40 films involved in the case.

Pro-Sunday Vote Brings New House

Nevada, Ia., Feb. 21.

Within a week after the local anti-Sunday movie ordinance had been revoked by referendum vote, Circle Amusement Co., which had formerly operated three theatres in Ottumwa, secured a site on Main street for a new house.

Building operations are already under way.

GREATER N. Y. OPERATORS INTEND ASKING $4.50 WKLY. RAISE IN FALL

Indie Exhibs in Area Expect Complete Organization and Will Make Strong Resistance—1,130 Operators—Present Contract Expires Sept. 1

Picture operators within Greater New York are reported having decided to demand a scale increase of $4.50 for every union operator within the district after the expiration of their present agreement with the managers, Sept. 1, next. At present the operator's maximum weekly salary is $90, with over the usual number of men forced into booths for special film showings.

Independent exhibitors within the affected area are already talking of resistance. Should the present attempted organization of the indies in the metropolitan section proceed, for other reasons, with the success confidently hoped for by the promoters, the indies have concluded that a strong stand will be taken against the union's increase demand.

Over $250,000 Annually

Now there are about 1,130 operators concerned. At the weekly increase of $4.50 per man, the total amount for a year would exceed $250,000. With the indie exhibs groaning at present under business conditions and supersensitive to any extra cost on their present overhead, the contemplated scale raise for the booth men have them in a furious state of mind.

It is expected, however, the calm heads among the exhibs will give the union men some inkling of the inside conditions, if they continue, which is likely with the summer coming on.

That is expected to defer union action for more money until the exhibitor situation becomes smoother for the men who operate the theatres.

Musicians Lose Out

Due to a general business depression in the picture theatres around New York City, exhibitors have found it difficult to maintain large orchestras on account of the high wage scale agreement entered into last fall.

In an effort to meet the conditions and reduce the overhead, many theatres have been obliged to let out their orchestras, depending only upon organists for music.

As a result the union headquarters is said to be packed each morning with musicians looking for jobs.

Conditions are worse than in the summer when unemployment is seasonable and expected, and the summer resorts in the mountains and seaside offer positions.

U. A. WITHDRAWS L. A. HOUSE FROM W. COAST

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

The local United Artists theatre has been taken over by that concern after having been operated for seven weeks by West Coast. The change is by mutual consent.

It is said that U. A. has not been satisfied with the operation of the house. Weekly overhead is around $16,000, with the gross for most weeks to date hardly reaching that amount. No radical changes will be made in policy for the time being, but extensive advertising exploitation is contemplated.

Entire personnel of employees, headed by managing director Bruce Fowler, remain with the house, but severs his connection with West Coast. One exception to this is Earli Elinor, relieved as musical director.

Joseph M. Schenck, announced enemy of presentations, appears to have been won over in the instance of the local United Artists theatre which will have a prolog, for the first time, when "Sadie Thompson" opens Feb. 29.

Seven people in the prolog.

MIDLAND'S AIR PROGRAMS

Tie-up with "Journal-Post"—Entire Show Once Weekly

Kansas City, Feb. 21.

Starting Feb. 18 the Midland theatre, in conjunction with the "Journal-Post" here, started broadcasting its entire stage and musical performance. In addition, the theatre is giving a daily organ recital by Arthur Hays.

A studio has been installed in the house and the program arranged is as follows: 10.30 to 11 a. m., organ recital, daily; Saturday night, 7.30, entire show; Tuesday, 11 p. m., Sundodgers program, including extra entertainers.

"Ace," dramatic and picture editor of the "Journal-Post," will have charge of the mike for the Sundodger program.

Hyman Unit at Stanley

Sophie Tucker, slated for a fortnight at Stanley, Philadelphia, plays the second week instead at the new Stanley, Baltimore. The Ed Hyman Stanley unit show, slated for Feb. 27 at the Baltimore house, switches to Philly for that week.

At the Brooklyn, N. Y. Mark Strand, Hyman has Jerry Fears as the new m. c. and Russ Morgan, former band leader and m. c. at the piano as an alternate m. c. Fears is being given his first opportunity by Hyman as a stage master of ceremonies.

Jacksonville Bad

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 21.

Jacksonville, supposed to be one of the best towns in the state, has been doing poor business for several months.

Instead of improving with the tourist season, it has grown worse, until the managers are worried over the overhead.

DUBUQUE FOR PUBLIX

Chicago, Feb. 21.

A. H. Blank is closing negotiations with Jake Rosenthal for operation by Publix of Rosenthal's new Majestic in Dubuque, Ia.

Terms of the pending deal give Rosenthal a 50 per cent. cut in the house, Blank and Publix splitting the other 50 per cent.

Both Gores in Advisory Capacity for Fox; 8 Yrs.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Position within West Coast Theatres, of Abe and Mike Gore, founders of the circuit, will be settled in the near future. Mike Gore, chairman of the present Board of Directors, left yesterday (Monday) for New York where he will confer with William Fox and Hayden Stone Co., bankers.

It is probable that both of the Gores will sign with Fox to act in advisory capacities for a period of eight years. It is understood that a stipulation of this nature was made by Hayden Stone at the time Fox came into control of West Coast.

Insurance Man Laughs Himself Dead in Theatre

Toronto, Feb. 21.

William F. Sangster, 46, insurance broker, laughed himself to death while watching "The Circus" at the Tivoli Thursday night. The same day he had given a lecture on "Unexpected Accidents" at the annual convention of the Canadian Accident Assurance Co.

From the same audience a second man laughed himself so ill that he had to be removed to St. Michael's Hospital in an ambulance. Both accidents drew a lot of publicity.

Gelsey Joining DeMille

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Ervin Gelsey, formerly assistant to B. F. Schulberg at Paramount, will probably join the DeMille production department at Culver City this week.

LOEW'S 4 NEW N.Y. NEIGHB'HOODS; 1ST PRESENTATIONS IN SUBURBS

Publix Originally Announced Sites—Loew's Building Under Understanding With Publix—Will Play Publix Units

Loew's is going ahead, building the four theatres, announced by Publix last summer as part of the agreement to keep Publix out of New York neighborhoods in competition with Loew houses.

The theatres will be located in Jamaica, L. I., Flatbush and Brownsville, Brooklyn, and on the Grand Concourse, Bronx. Excepting for Jamaica, which will seat approximately 2,500, the others will have a capacity of 4,000 each.

Flatbush, the A. H. Schwartz stronghold, is seeing the completion of two new 3,500-seat theatres. Keith-Albee Kenmore, Church avenue and Kenmore place, and one by Schwartz at Flatbush avenue and Lincoln road. Schwartz also contemplates building a new 3,500-seat theatre in the Sheepshead Bay section of Brooklyn, adjoining Flatbush.

Loew's intends making these new theatres the first presentation houses in New York neighborhoods, using the Publix units. They are being built by Loew's, it is said, under an understanding with Publix.

Nagel's N. M. House

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

William Nagel, former exhibitor in Winslow, Ariz., is building a new picture house in Gallup, N. M., to be completed about the middle of June.

Nagel is being backed by a group of capitalists in Gallup.

Oriental's Sunday Opening

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Starting March 4, the Oriental theatre, B. & K. house, will go into a Sunday opening.

The theatre has been a Monday opening.

CRUZE'S SYSTEM CALLS FOR CASH FROM EXHIBS

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

After directing two more pictures for Pathe-DeMille James Cruze will head his own producting organization. He is backed by eastern capital and will make 20 pictures a year. Cruze will direct four personally and supervise the rest.

He plans to release his pictures to franchise holders in each territory with whom he will make a 5-year distribution contract. The exhibitors will have to pay an advance on the contract and cash on each picture as delivered. Production costs will run from $50,000 to $100,000 for a picture personally directed by Cruze.

Cruze will take the present producing unit with him to New York and has added Walter Woods to head the story department. Part of the pictures will be made in England to conform with the Quota laws.

Local Union's Salary Suit

Milwaukee, Feb. 21.

Suit to determine whether a labor union may collect wages due a member where a contract has been broken, said to be the first action of its kind ever filed here, has been started b ythe local I. A. T. S. E. against H. E. Welsch, of the Iris theatre.

The union contends that in September the theatre owner signed a contract to employ an union operator at $42.50 a week. In January it is claimed Welsch broke the contract and put in a non-union man. The union is trying to collect on the unexpired term of the contract.

PETTIJOHN'S WORDS

Charles Pettijohn has spread 5,640 words in closely set type on 12 small pages in a booklet titled:

Trade Conference Plan Okayed in Chi Parley

Chicago, Feb. 21.

After two weeks of parley exhibitors and distributors, here to frame a new form of contract, last night agreed to accept the "company practices" evolved at the Federal Trade Conference in New York last year. It is to go into effect in May.

Since the matter of including exhibitors on arbitration boards, and the whole proposal regarding a new system of arbitration, has been deferred until June, the new contract promises little to exhibitors. If the producer-distributors have made any slight concessions, and even this doubtful, the exhibitors will still be without power to enforce their claims because they lack arbitration representation.

Crowding Up Portland

Portland, Ore., Feb. 21.

Julius Sax, formerly owner of a string of second run houses here, and reputed worth millions until bankruptcy, is reported promoting a theatre and hotel project at Union avenue and Killingsworth. Site was originally due to be leased by Universal, but looks as if this were off.

Sax is understood to have conferred with R. B. Lloyd, L. A. oil magnate, who owns the property, and was assured of a 2,000-seat house, providing a long-term lease was taken and a $50,000 bond posted. Sax is said to have obtained the backing of Ben Selling, local millionaire merchant, and drawings are now being made.

It was also rumored that Walter Tebbetts, owner of the new and big Oriental, had taken an option on the Lloyd property, but no confirmation of this could be obtained. It is authentically stated, however, that Tebbetts is looking for another big house.

Publix is opening a big house here next month.

Fox-Locust's Short Life—Site for Busses

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.

Fox-Locust, opened only about a year, on Locust street just west of Broad, will complete its present season according to substantiated reports and come down, or rather torn out.

It occupies a part of the Mitten office building, owned by the transit company, and the main floor of this building will be used as a bus terminal, beginning next fall.

The passing of the Fox-Locust will be offset a year from this spring by the opening of the new Fox, at 17th and Market streets. Work on it will start very shortly, according to reports.

The new Shubert legit house, Forrest, at Walnut and Quince streets (east of Broad), is still announced to open this spring. Rumors have had it ready in six weeks, but 10 looks more likely.

Work has been halted on the new Stanley house, Mastbaum, at 20th and Market. Another house mentioned, but not started as yet, is to be at 21st and Chestnut, on the site of the old Aldine hotel. It will presumably be legit also. As for the Garrick, although its lease is supposed to have only a year to run, nothing has been done of late about the building of its successor, also at 20th and Market streets.

Morrow in Dallas for U. A.

William R. Morrow, formerly southern sales manager for Pathe, has joined United Artists, in charge of the Dallas exchange.

Malcolm Waite and Roscoe Karns in "Something Always Happens," Esther Ralston's next for Par. Direction Frank Tuttle.

Frank Clark, Roy Wilson, Maurice Murphy, Leo Nomis and Frank Tomick all stunt flyers, are engaged by Howard Hughes for his present Caddo production, "Hell's Angels."

EXHIBS HAVE KICK ON PAR-THOMSON

Fred Thomson's second Paramount picture, "A Pioneer Scout," is the cause of complaint by exhibitors, who have purchased this season's Paramount product.

Exhibitors allege Paramount represented it would build Thomson into a star of box office value, and started out to do so with his "Jesse James" splurge.

The wise ones in Paramount are said to have decided not to show any more Thomson pictures on Broadway, while the kick is that the exhibitors must go through with their contracts, as though Thomson had been exploited and advertised for a Broadway run.

VON STROHEIM REISSUES

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Universal intends to re-issue a number of their old Von Stroheim productions as specials.

These would include "Foolish Wives," "The Devil's Passkey" and "Merry-Go-Round" which was finished by Rupert Julian.

SAPIRO HEADS INDIES

7,000,000 represented in the same district.

Exhibs Bound

Under the contract proposed by the association, all exhibitors signing give the association power of attorney to buy films, and pledge their theatre holdings for three years as security that they will accept the conditions made for them by the association with producers and distributors.

About a year and a half ago a similar proposition, launched by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, with the aid of Nathan Burkan, fell through. Though only around 40 or 50 independents were then concerned, none would agree to give the leaders power of attorney.

The association has been formed for the purpose of assuring independents in New York necessary supplies of film at reasonable rentals. Through means of this tremendous buying power the independents may also be able to prevail upon producers to insert in their contracts for the sale of film a clause to the effect that no theatres will be built for three years in districts where an association independent theatre is being supplied with pictures by the producers concerned.

Sapiro's Belief

Sapiro believes that among the major results of this combination, with the growth in strength, the independents may, within three years, be able to indicate in some measure the kind of pictures they would like to play, and so influence changes in production. Sapiro indicated that this would be a healthy move, since the independent is closer to public taste and quicker to observe changes in demand than any one else in the picture business, including the chain operator.

Another effect would be to change the already veering opinion at Washington in political circles that the producer-distributors control the screen of the country. Combinations of this kind, Sapiro has reason to point out, would soon prove that the independents have practically all of the screen propaganda power, though they have not used 10 per cent of it yet, while the producers have used their influence at every opportunity.

"Delusions"

Sapiro has already warned the exhibitors not to be led astray by the many "snares and delusions" of consolidation. It is his belief that consolidations can attempt to cover too much territory, whereupon they become unwieldy and some parts of the consolidation are bound to suffer on account of inefficiency.

Mr. Sapiro intimated that while a national organization, run from New York, might not be practical, local organizations similar to the association would be formed in territories where the independents have like difficulties to overcome.

In the purchase of films members of the association will submit lists of their requirements with the prices they wish to pay. A committee of two will investigate former prices paid by the exhibitors to learn how much they are cutting and also if they are angling for a new class of product.

When price arrangements among the exhibitors are satisfactorily adjusted, the association will begin to trade with the producers. If the film requirements reach a higher figure than that expected, the exhibitors will be assessed a slightly higher percentage payment, in proportion to the amount of film requisitioned. If the pictures are bought for less than the original estimate, percentage payments by the exhibitors will be lower.

The association will be a non-profit organization, since the members benefit immediately and directly by any savings in purchase of film and other supplies.

Labor Against 16-Yr. Age On Quebec Theatregoers

Montreal, Feb. 21.

Labor came out this week against the barring of children of 16 and under from attending theatres. The labor council pointed out that children of 14 can marry in this province and can go to work in factories at the same age, then asking why they should be barred from amusing themselves. Provincial government is likely to sit up and take notice, although Premier Taschereau introduced the bill in the provincial legislature this week.

The slaughter of the innocents' plans for enjoying themselves at the movies will start in another few weeks and will mean a fine crop of liars in the next year or two if the bill remains in force that long. Quebec, which has always had a good time sneering at U. S. prohibition, is started well along the same line itself.

Edward McDermott, editing W. A. Seiter productions for U, will go with Seiter in his new directorial assignment when the latter returns from New York.

Brookhart's Home State Boys Reject His Bill

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 21.

Action of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa last week is without precedent, according to picture men attending the convention, in raising objections to the Brookhart bill, presented by Senator Brookhart, of Iowa.

Tom Brown, theatre owner of Iowa City, introduced a resolution in the convention stating that "this body goes on record against the terms of the Brookhart bill." Only one opposing vote was registered.

The following officers were elected at the close of the convention: E. P. Smith, Des Moines, president, and Will H. Eddy, Indianola, secretary-treasurer. Following directors were also named: Tom Brown, Iowa City; Ludy Beston, Muscatine; H. Hersteiner, Des Moines; John Waller, Osceola; Tom Arthur, Mason City; William Youngclaus, Osage; Charles Peterson, Hampton; W. Mansfield, Tama; Otto Panken, Marengo; H. N. Davies, Spencer, and F. R. Puffer, Webster City.

Washington, Feb. 21.

Picture theatres and services, not including production, have employed and given permanent work to 125,000 persons since 1919, said Dr. Julius Klein, head of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the Department of Commerce, in an address before the executives of the chemical industry here.

Dr. Klein made the assertion in answer to the question as to what had become of those employed prior to the vast mechanical development in industry of the past several years.

He added that the new radio industry, aside from the manufacturing end, had employed another 125,000.

WALT ROESNER
Master of Ceremonies
Capitol (Pcts), New York

San Francisco sends New York this new and urbane guest conductor, Walt Roesner. The Capitol is billing him "California's aristocrat of syncopation." Not a bad tag, that. He is extremely natty and dignified, despite being known as one who can clown expertly with the hired help. So there's some point to the "aristocrat."

Roesner's valuable and long association on the coast with Fanchon and Marco stood out when opening at the Capitol as leader of the Capitolians, Paul Specht's band.

He was "there" every minute, unworried, unhurried and cool as a cucumber. The cornet is Walt's instrument, and he toots a feverish trumpet upon occasion. His grounding in musicianship makes him a doubly useful M. C.

Being a versatile straight and, additionally, somewhat of a comedian, if they give Roesner a little rope at the Capitol he should work up a following.

He is the first of the coast stage band leaders to be imported. Certainly no better schooling for a M. C. than that obtained with Fanchon and Marco beyond the Rockies. Roesner has earned his spurs and his promotion. He has experience, background, poise. He speaks and acts with sureness.

Roesner should click importantly.

A profoundly moving picture of family life in Germany during the war, giving a sympathetic insight into the effect upon the humble people of rural Bavaria of the great struggle. As an artistic creation the production is magnificent in the amazing effectiveness of its fine realism and in its utter simplicity.

In its favor are some of the finest and most touching passages of high sentiment ever shown on the screen, and the dramatic elevation of Mrs. Mann to picture eminence, which bids to exceed in public interest the sudden stardom of Mary Carr. The abundant excellence of the creation itself and the fascinating circumstances of Mrs. Mann's triumph are enormously valuable assets, and will probably suffice to give the Fox people another "Over the Hill."

Any obstacle that might have been anticipated from the risk of selling a sympathetic treating of the German side of the war has been minimized by developing an American side to the story and by its happy ending, with the mother happily joined with her surviving son, by now a prosperous merchant in New York. The same thing works out in the tone of the story. While some of the sombre war-time episodes—the news of the death of three sons coming upon the grieving mother at home—are compensated by the lighter, sentimental sequences at the end, the picture leaving a cheerful effect.

The film is an achievement in artless realism. There isn't a moment when it does not live, and the whole production is utterly guiltless of theatrical device. Simple people, kindly and happy, are suddenly engulfed in the conflict, and tragedy comes upon the gentle villagers, among whom stalk the hated military martinets. It is the arrogant military class that plays the villain. The people are the pitiful puppets.

The story itself does not bear telling, so simple and unadorned is the commonplace history of a widow and her four sons. Joseph goes to America before the war, marries and has his own little delicatessen shop, and a baby is born. Then the war comes. The other three brothers go to the front and one by one are killed. There is no "war stuff," the war tragedy is enacted in the homely cottage of the lone mother. Joseph goes overseas in the A. E. F., leaving his wife to handle the shop. The story leaves him while the mother back in Bavaria is slowly broken as the war machine takes her three remaining boys—Franz, the handsome; Johannes, the strong, and, finally, Andreas, the beautiful.

Armistice Day finds her destitute of life and joy, while Joseph returns from France to America to find that his business had grown to a cash chain of stores.

His first move is to send for mother. From sombre tragedy the picture here takes on a tender and livelier quality. Mother has to go to school to learn her letters for American immigration purposes. Upon the Ellis Island examination she goes to pieces and is detained. But quite innocently she wanders out of the detention pen, reaches the city and meanders around under the care of kindly cops, who at length bring her safe to haven in Joseph's very modern apartment, where the frantic Joseph, returning from his search, finds her cuddling the baby before the fire.

Mrs. Mann's playing of the big role is a miracle of unaffected naturalness. Her Frau Bernle lives from the moment the film starts to its finish. She looks the part and she plays it with utter absence of effort or consciousness as a stately and white crowned old mother might go about her household tasks. And if this isn't art so much the worse for the trained-and-inspired acting profession.

Something of the same effortless simplicity has been communicated to the whole cast. The picture is rich in fascinating characters, such as the pompous but kindly old German letter carrier (Albert Gran) whose agonizing task it is to deliver the casualty notices to Frau Bernle; the Burgomeister of the village (August Tollaire), and the Innkeeper (Hughie Mack), besides a host of others.

The picture will be the making of James Hall, hitherto just a young leading man. As Joseph he creates a splendid portrait with a wide range of clean cut playing. Earle Fox makes a graphic study of the cold-blooded military officer type. One of the high lights is his suicide at the explicit invitation of his rebellious regiment upon Armistice day dressing himself in all his decorations for it.

In a pictorial sense the production is a revel in beauty and big-minded detail, the camera shots that are arresting. Such are the views of departing soldiers seen marching through the gay village streets from the vantage point of the church belfry; the panorama of the farming countryside swathed in morning mists; the church steeple with the tolling bells reflected in the still mill pond and a myriad of such color shots. Happy character bits likewise go to the building up of eloquent atmosphere and bit by bit the illusion of reality in place and people is created and never lost through nearly two hours.

Movietone is again employed with excellent discretion. It supplies an appropriate score and interpolates a few sound effects. When the young villagers are bringing in the hay, snatches of their song are brought out; again in the only battlefield sequence a faint voice is heard through the mists crying "mutterchen," and for one passage (where the stricken mother dreams her brood are again gathered about the supper board) a male chorus sings faintly as though at a great distance, or as though a choir were singing in a far off organ loft in church. The treatment follows closely upon that employed in "Sunrise," avoiding emphasis that might clash with the illusion.

There can be no question of the work's merit. There is only one bare chance for it to fall short of enormous popularity, the possibility that the screen public will shy off from a serious war picture at this time, when the subject has been pretty well exploited. That's quite remote, very remote, for a picture of this class and strength. Rush.

PICTURES IN ALL; ONLY 2 BEFORE

Opening "Street Angel" at Globe March 5—"Mother Machree" Following Into Another Un-named Theatre—"Four Sons" at the Gaiety and "Sunrise" at Times Square

OTHER BIG FILMS

William Fox shortly will be operating four of the legit group of Broadway theatres at a $2.20 top scale for Fox's special pictures. His third will be the Globe, with Fox's special picture production, "The Street Angel," supplanting the Dillingham "She's My Baby" (Beatrice Lillie) show there March 5.

The fourth Broadway house has not as yet been named, although secured by Fox. It will play the Fox special "Mother Machree" and shortly follow the Globe's film period.

Fox's other two Broadway legits now playing its $2 pictures are the Gaiety, where "Four Sons" opened Monday, and the Times Square, with "Sunrise" still running there.

It's the first time a single picture concern has operated four Broadway legit theatres simultaneously. Previously, the record was two.

While there is no definite information on the selection of the fourth Fox house, it is believed to be the Central. At present Universal's "Uncle Tom" is there. It is due to leave in about a month. The Central is a Shubert house.

Among the other special Fox pictures that will duly appear on Broadway is "Mother Knows Best," the Edna Ferber story that is the tale of a well-known femme star and her guiding relative who has always thought she has known best for her daughter's on and off welfare.

Other Fox specials lined up as big pictures are "Red Dancer of Moscow," "Four Devils" and "Dollar Princess."

"HEAVEN'S" LOOP REPEAT

Chicago, Feb. 14.

The Monroe, Fox's Loop house, is playing "Seventh Heaven" this week, the first repeat booking the house has ever had.

"Heaven" played the house late last year for five weeks, the picture since doing so well in the neighborhoods it was figured worthwhile to bring it into the Loop again.

"Sunrise" Breaks House Record at Newark, 75c

Newark, N. J., Feb. 4.

Terminal's top is 75c. with mats at 50c. and loges 99c. It was the first time "Sunrise" had played to under $1.65 top, and is now at the Times Square, New York, at the legit scale.

"Sunrise" started off to smashing business in the 1,700-seater. Its reception here was most agreeable to the Fox people, who do not intend to generally release the special for the regular picture houses until September next.

THE CROWD

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and release. King Vidor starred as its director. Eleanor Boardman and James Murray, co-featured. Story by John V. A. Weaver and Mr. Vidor. Titles by Joe Farnham. At Capitol, New York, week Feb. 18. Running time, 96 minutes.

Mary.....Eleanor Boardman
John.....James Murray
Bert.....Bert Roach
Jim.....Daniel G. Tomlinson
Dick.....Del Henderson
Mother.....Lucy Beaumont
Junior.....Freddie Burke Frederick
Daughter.....Alice Mildred Puter

A drab actionless story of ungodly length and apparently telling nothing. Yet quite possibly written for the greater mass of the usual class attending picture theatres, and if so, should be liked by them, especially in the neighborhoods.

The longness of the picture suggests it was designed for a Metro special, but on what, only its authors, John V. A. Weaver and King Vidor, must know. Superficially it reels off as an analytical camera insight into the life, worries and struggles of two young, ordinary people, who marry and become parents.

Their lives may be the same more or less of hundreds of office clerks or others of that salary earning power. The husband is a plodder and dreamer, achieving nothing, however, but two children and an $8 raise of salary in five years. For this he seems in constant reprimand from his wife and her family. Casting aside his permanent desk job through mental strain over the death by a truck of his little daughter, the young husband tries other jobs in vain, until his wife, disgusted, finally slaps him in the face and walks out.

That is the sole bit of action. But she walks back and the film proceeds to its wearying finish, a finish at the Capitol's first showing Sunday that was very vague. Another print must have been in use, as others who saw the next unreeling mentioned a different finale. If they are trying out two finishes, the one that will leave the film the shorter should be selected.

As it is, 2,000 feet could come out of this picture, and the more the better. To those who can't fall into the atmosphere of this tedious subject it is endless and useless. Whole sequences could be taken out. One particularly is the birth scene, the entire hospital views.

If the objective here was to mark the rush of the crowd, the breaking away or through the common or to swing along with the tide as the easiest or customary way, the lesson isn't there. Nothing stands out in story excepting that a girl who should not expect more than she received wouldn't stand for her husband's lot. If an excerpt from Life, that alone kills the excerpt. If, meant to express that even a drudge may have an underlying strain of commercial value, such as the husband's ad slogan, that was smothered also.

King Vidor, the director, has interjected a little of everything, including freaky photography and hokum, the latter taking in a bit of comedy, but it fades into the monotonous and deadly detail of it all.

James Murray is the young husband and catches the spirit at times, more in looks than anything else. Murray is a type who must be fitted, as here. Both he and Eleanor Boardman had the opportunity for a big scene when seeing their child trampled over by a moving truck while walking toward their home. Both parents muffed the chance by a mile. For the record, little Freddie Burke Frederick as their 5-year-old son gave more expression as he walked alongside his father, looking up into his face, than the entire cast did in the other 8,950 feet, except Miss Boardman.

Miss Boardman played well in the sweetly style, as wife and housekeeper, until bringing out some spirit in that face slapping. While Vidor had Murray contemplating suicide by jumping beneath a railroad train because he couldn't get a job that stuck, after working in one previously for several years. And then everybody deliriously happy when the young husband gets a job as an advertising sandwich man.

Joe Farnham's captions in regulation fashion for this kind of a film and breaking through for a laugh when the subject matter permitted.

This picture may create a diversity of opinion among the different sets who see it. Those of the shelves should go for the picture in the larger houses, while the downstairsers in the main may be bored. It's a picture worth watching for effect on the picture public in general, of an unmoving story with no offside stuff except one sleeping car episode on the couple's wedding night, another unnecessary sequence but which may have been suggested while the rushes were run off.

If this is an original and the program mentions no adaptation, then it follows through the undue length that the story did not work out film-like as its conceivers hoped for.

The boys will find this picture to their liking, but what the dames may think is something else again.

The plot deals with a Damon and Pythias friendship between two rough and tumble seamen. This pal stuff between two guys has never made any great hit with the ladies, and when the eulogy of male friendship includes several back-handed slaps at the feminine gender the reaction may be a matter of legitimate conjecture.

"A Girl in Every port" is packed with sex, but has not romance; it has a dozen ingenues and no heroine. Of all the beautiful bimboes encountered by the sailors in their world travels not one is on the up-and-up, and the one (Louise Brooks) who inspires McLaglen to day dream over settling down in a cottage for two is the biggest gold-digger of all.

The picture is a series of hoke adventures with dames and gendarmes. It holds a lot of laughs and still maintains a human note on the comrade angle. McLaglen is great as the heavy-hitting bozo. His buddy is played by Robert Armstrong, legit actor, newly recruited to the screen and looking like a good bet.

Confusion in the program makes it difficult to identify the girls individually. They are a zaftic bunch of hot-looking mamas.

Miss Brooks has the longest session in front of the camera. This gal is solid with the jellybean trade. She is often and favorably mentioned whenever the boys go into executive session on the opposite sex. With all the merited praise of her face and figure little has been said to date about Miss Brooks' acting. It's one of those things you don't mention.

Malcolm Stuart Boylan's titles seemed involved and obscure in thought on several occasions. Howard Hawks made a good job of directing with the exception of an overdone bit of melodramatic acting by McLaglen upon the discovery by him of what he supposes to be the perfidy of his buddy.

The picture is entertaining and ought to click. The possibility of an unfavorable feminine reaction because of the cynical attitude towards sex matters should not prevent the picture obtaining moderate box office rating. It's okay for de luxe first runs anywhere. Land.

PAUL AND VIRGINIA
(FRENCH MADE)
Paris, Feb. 13.

This screen version of the famous work of Bernardin de Saint Pierre was produced by Robert Peguy some time ago, and is now being released, after an unexplained delay, by Societe Mauricienne du Bon Film. As the action (well known) is laid in the Mauritius Island, picture is almost entirely exteriors. The fame of the story may attract, but the picture is not likely to become famous.

Virginia was a maiden of high birth in the island of Maurice when it was a French possession, who played in the woods with Paul, son of a servant. They grew up together, and their deep affection continued. When Virginia sailed for France to visit a relative, Paul waited patiently for her return, but she was shipwrecked. The youth, unable to subdue his grief, also died, and the two mothers wept over the two young lovers united in death.

Shepherd of the Hills

First National production and release. Featuring Molly O'Day. Adapted from Harold Bell Wright's novel of same name. Directed by Al Rogell, with Alec B. Francis, John Boles and Matthew Betz underlined. At Strand, New York, week Feb. 18. Running time, 76 minutes.

The Shepherd.....Alec B. Francis
"Sammy" Lane.....Molly O'Day
Young Matt.....John Boles
Wash Gibbs.....Matthew Betz
Old Matt.....Romaine Fielding
"Sky Thunder".....Otis Harlan
Ollie.....Joseph Bennett
Little Pete.....Maurice Murphy

"Shepherd" registers as a mild western which will need all the publicity it can get on the hookup with the Harold Bell Wright novel of the same title. The story, taken from any angle, is familiar to both picture fan and the prolific fiction reader. In this instance it's not cattle, but sheep, with the familiar "sky pilot" toned up and repressed a bit. The answer to his prayers for rain saves the settlers. Not "smash" box-office, but likely to figure moderately through whatever strength the title possesses and the performances of Francis, Boles and Betz. Scenic qualities also an asset.

It's the story of the hills and a drought which threatens to ruin the ranchers. The stranger among their midst, the Shepherd (Mr. Francis) becomes their oracle and secretly knows that a youngster with a pe-

LITERATI

"Life's" Vaude Number

The current issue of "Life" is titled a Vaudvil Number, although more of a general theatrical edition than variety. It is distinguished by F. G. Cooper, a contributing artist, having wholly illustrated the issue, including title page and contents. The text is from divers sources.

Agents Loss Out

Literary agents are decrying the growing practice of authors handling the sales of their works direct, yet continue to charge reading fees, mailing fees, etc., to new writers who submit. New writers have to stand for this hold-up, which includes a larger percentage to the agent from the author's first work that is accepted, than the usual one of 10 per cent. Although the new writers murmur at this they can't help themselves, but when once recognized they cut out the grafting agents and deal direct which they can easily do after establishing a rep.

Leading brokers never charge any kind of fees, but most of the others do.

Hershfield's Advance Stuff

Advance publicity given Harry Hershfield, creator of "Able the Agent," who started Monday writing a daily column for the New York "Journal," is regarded as extraordinary if not unique.

Front page strips four inches deep, promotion matter all through the paper even on Friday, the heaviest display advertising day of the week, went. The title is "Broadway Unlimited" with Hershfield as the "Conductor."

One ad was a tribute from Mayor Walker, who said, "You should be ideal to conduct a Broadway column. You never go near Broadway."

McManus as "Defender"

George McManus, famed strip-artist of "Bringing Up Father," also the foremost patron of "Dinty" Moore's, is about to move to California for life.

McManus comes of an old St. Louis show family, his father having been a manager and producer there 40 years ago.

Editorial Irony

Charles E. Moreau, editor of the Bloomington, N. J., Independent Press, recently published an edition of his paper composed entirely of publicity matter sent in. Moreau put the source of each blurb in parenthesis and headed the edition with the twin slogans:

"All the propaganda fit to print."
"Devoted to the private welfare."

Timing the Tabs

A lover of tabloids may purchase the New York "Mirror" in Detroit on the day prior to its publication date. New York stews in Detroit for the purpose of getting that way have been known to swear off when seeing a "Mirror" dated Tuesday on sale in Detroit Monday afternoon.

Settle With Ennis

Over a year ago Bert Ennis brought suit for plagiarism against the Daily News Syndicate, alleging that the syndicate had lifted four of his stories which appeared in "Motion Picture Classic." The syndicate settled out of court Monday. Harry G. Kosch was Ennis' lawyer.

Koenigsberg Leaves Hearst

M. Koenigsberg, after 28 years with Hearst, has left the King Feature Service and has been succeeded by Col. Guy T. Viskniski as general manager. Koenigsberg resigned several weeks ago but W. R. Hearst did not accept the withdrawal until last week. J. D. Gortatowsky remains as business manager, the same berth he has been filling.

Koenigsberg is regarded as one of the best syndicate men ever developed. Under him King Features, which was the selling agent for the office's various activities, became a power in the newspaper field. There were seven organizations under Koenigsberg, and one of Hearst's most profitable divisions, nearly all being developed by him. These were two news services, four syndicates and one advertising service. Koenigsberg's resignation followed differences with Hearst covering several months.

The matter came to a climax recently when Koenigsberg was decorated with the French Legion of Honor medal. An editorial bemoaning that fact followed in a Hearst daily, the publisher believing no employee should be given a foreign honor because it might temper his views in that nation's direction.

Col. Viskniski was publisher of the Washington "Times" and has been in the syndicate news field for about 25 years.

Another change in Hearst executives placed Col. Frank Knox of Manchester, N. H., as general manager of the Hearst newspapers. It is said the Colonel has been in the employ of Hearst about one year. He runs a daily in Manchester.

Scripps-Howard Bond Issue

A 15-year gold 5½ debenture bond issue of $8,500,000 by the E. W. Scripps Company (Scripps-Howard) is offered through the Chemical National Bank at 99 and interest. A prospectus says Scripps-Howard is operating 26 newspapers in the U. S., with a daily average circulation of over 2,000,000, according to figures filed with the Post Office Department.

Another statement is that the Scripps company owns at least 51 per cent. of the newspapers published, and that a recent appraisal of those Scripps Company's holdings valued them at over $32,000,000; that Scripps-Howard was founded in 1878 and for 40 years has never muffed a dividend.

A condition of the bond issue is that Scripps-Howard shall not mortgage any of its properties without equally securing the bonds. Proceeds of the latter are to reimburse the company for money expended in starting or purchasing newspapers and for working capital. It's claimed that the average daily circulation of the Scripps-Howard papers has doubled within the past five years.

Putting on the Dog

A contributor complained recently to a prominent monthly mag editor on the small and precarious rewards of writing. Said the Ed: "You're right! Do you know that one of France's leading authors runs a string of sausage shops? This enables him to make his living at literature!"

Next day the scribe was down at Coney Island looking over sites for a hot dog stand for the summer.

Good Times on "The Sun"

Frank M. O'Brien, editor of the New York "Sun," and Mrs. O'Brien have started on a five-week visit to the Pacific Coast. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Friendly have taken a week off for the other climate, in Quebec. Mr. Friendly is the business manager of the same daily.

College Publicity

The Conference of College Press Bureaus was held recently at Radcliffe College for Women in Boston. It is an anual affair, attended by representatives of the press boards from many eastern institutions of higher education. Problems confronting the directors of college publicity were discussed from the viewpoint of editor as well as correspondent.

Publicity, carried on either by a press bureau or press club, is now one of the most important activities, curricula or extra-curricula, at most colleges, and the scramble for space in the dailies is almost as great as by business. At a number of institutions the work is directed by persons who have had newspaper experience or by professors in the English and Literature departments. They often bear glorified titles like "counsel of public relations," acting as a buffer between the college and press or public. Even at such toney institutions as Harvard, Vassar and Columbia there are press agents who go after space with vengeance.

The rise in popularity of athletics has pushed many colleges into the race for publicity, their press bureaus broadcasting news and sending "cuts."

Wallace Smith's Book

Wallace Smith, Hollywood writer and artist, has written a new book called "Tiger's Mate," which Palmer Putnam, recently on the coast, arranged to publish. Smith is the author of "Are You Decent?"—a series of stories about theatrical boarding house life.

Lawrence Reamer of the New York "Sun" died Feb. 18. He had been ailing for some while.

Dailies and Department Stores

In an office advertisement the New York "Sun" printed the gross lineage used by New York department stores during 1927 in all of the New York regular dailies, calling attention to the preponderance of the business in the evening papers.

List below with (e) for evening and (m) for morning dailies:

"Sun" (e)	5,969,502
"World" (e)	5,628,290
"Journal" (e)	5,401,529
"Times" (m)	4,865,925
"Herald Tribune" (m)	3,728,935
"American" (m)	2,865,942
"World" (m)	1,906,303
"News" (tab) (m)	1,900,912
"Post" (e)	1,024,524
"Mirror" (tab) (m)	513,962
"Telegram" (e)	506,778
"Graphic" (tab) (e)	251,881

Division is six and six, morning and evening; "World" with morning a..d evening editions. Three Hearst dailies are "American" and "Mirror," both morning papers, and "Journal," evening.

"The Sun" is a six-day paper, having no Sunday edition. All of the other morning dailies excepting "Mirror" issue seven days. None of the evening dailies has a Sunday edition. "American" takes care of the "Journal" for that day and the morning "World" for its evening paper.

"The Sun's" listing and figures are based, it stated, upon 20 or more department stores. "Any analysis," says the copy, "based on a selected list of eight or nine or ten of the stores in this classification does not give a fair picture of the situation."

Novel on Carnivals

Finchley's, an old publishing house, has been reorganized and will go in for breezy literature, fiction and verse. Vera Caspary has authored "Ladies and Gents," a novel of the carnival and the show business, for Finchley publication.

Condon's World Trip

Frank Condon, film scenarist and writer for the "Saturday Evening Post," is making a trip around the world from Los Angeles which will be concluded in New York in about three months.

Condon is after some data in Naples for a story he is to write for the "Satevepost."

S. F. "Bulletin" Leased

The staid old San Francisco "Bulletin" has been leased to the San Francisco Publishing Co., a new corporation, headed by John F. Schurch of Hillsborough, former New York capitalist. William M. Hines, present editor and publisher, continues, with Charles E. Fisher retained as business manager.

cular mental twist is his grandson, the son of his boy whom he advised to desert the country girl for a career. The daughter of Old Matt (Fielding). The latter befriends the aged city minister, come to the hills for peace.

Secondary motive is the love interest between young Matt (Boles) and "Sammy" (Miss O'Day), who is engaged to a native with big-town ideas (Bennett), for comedy. Betz plays the heavy who would see the settlers desert their land so he can grab it.

High spots are the ultimate roundhouse swings young Matt and Gibbs exchange and the destruction of a supply train the former is bringing in by a landslide which Gibbs' followers instigate. As the settlers turn against the Shepherd, the clouds roll up and it starts to pour, making everybody happy.

As the fight has convinced "Sammy" that Matt's her boy, it's all satisfactory at the finish. A dramatic passage is donated to Little Pete, almost dying, during which the dead mother's father discovers the Shepherd is the youngster's other grandfather and is about to brain him when stopped by a shadow symbol of the cross.

Picture doesn't move any too fast, but the underlined players help to make it stand up, and its scenic background is worthy. Photographically, the best inclusion is a cutback to Little Pete's father and mother, camarared through a checkered screen which immediately identifies it. Looks good and doesn't hide the action.

Miss O'Day has little to do and is probably being featured on what may have resulted from "The Patent Leather Kid." No reason other than that for her being emphasized here. Report of F. N. forcing her to reduce is quite plausible after this viewing. She's something more than pudgy in this film. Sid.

LOVE AND LEARN

Parfamount comedy production and release. Starring Esther Ralston. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Leon Chandler, leading man. Production supervision, B. P. Fineman. From story by Louise Lang; adaptation by Florence Fyerson. At Paramount, New York, week Feb. 18. Running time, 57 minutes.

Fairly amusing farce with a good deal of bedroom stuff neatly framed and played in an artless manner that robs it of offense. Won't pull much business but should please regular clientele. Picture is played without any explicit billing about the house or even in the program, as part of a blind show under the rather attractive title of "Take a Chance Week" at the Paramount. Shrewd bit of showmanship, possibly being used as a device to help a picture that is without a strong "name" draw for lobby display, although the title would be an asset in a box office estimate.

Amustment value lies in the ingenious complications devised in a hotel, where heroine seeks to save political candidate from being framed by a woman tool of his party opponents, only to find herself innocently occupying the other double bed while the candidate, equally guiltless, slumbers in the same room.

Miss Ralston contributes a good deal of blonde beauty and some grace to the eternal flapper role, but cannot be said to raise a moderately diverting picture beyond just that. There isn't much an actress can do with the hoyden flapper type these days when there are so many roles of the sort, except to play it without too much simpering, and this Miss Ralston achieves.

Picture generously gagged up with comedy bits and laughable surprises. It gains in speed as it goes along and climaxes in a brisk solution of both the romance and the tangle for a good average of laughs from both titles and action sequences. The bedroom scenes are skilfully managed, so that there is a maximum of sex kick and filmy lingerie without offense, largely due to the absence of any smirking emphasis upon the subject in the Avery Hopwood manner.

Father, the whole business is managed with an altogether charming youthful candor and naivete. A girl in lacy step-ins and a young man in dressing-gown can be cheerfully innocent in the same hotel room, if the intent is to make them so. The situation becomes risque only by afterthought and design. Here it is quite without guile or double entendre, which makes all the difference between black and white—or white and pale lavender, if you like.

Settings are cheerful and bright and serve admirably for background. And picture is smoothly enough handled to keep it on a high comedy plane under circumstances where very little might have made it pretty rowdy. Rush.

Streets of Shanghai

Tiffany-Stahl production and release. Featuring Pauline Starke. Directed by Louis J. Gasnier from J. F. Natteford's story. Cast: Kenneth Harlan, Margaret Livingston, Eddie Gribbon, Jason Robards, Sojin and Anna May Wong. At Hippodrome, New York, week of, Feb. 20.

A yarn of the Marines with enough familiar names and faces floating through it; production and action to let it stand up in the intermediate houses, no matter how they split the week.

Pauline Starke is the foreign miss at the mission, upon whom the Chinees "heavy" has designs. Kenneth Harlan is the soldier boy who has his love affair gummed up by Miss Livingston as a hit and run girl who compromises him in the barracks.

The kick footage is the attack on the mission by the heavy's followers, with much gun play, convulsive deaths and Eddie Gribbon saving the situation.

T-S is following the Fox idea of tinting any and everything that hints at light and lends itself to color. It's neither good nor necessary.

Cast principals play this one okay and Gasnier keeps it moving. This carry a chuckle or two and a couple of pretty solid laughs crop out during the running. A Monday night Hip audience laughed and later applauded the rescue.

The Yanks are coming and all that sort of thing, but the boys and girls who stand for the 50c. tap at this house gave sound evidence of approval. Sid.

BUTTONS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and release. Produced, directed and written by George C. Hill. Screen adaptation by Hayden Talbot. Titles by Ralph Spence. Starring Jackie Coogan. Cast including Gertrude Olmstead, Lars Hanson, Roy D'Arcy, Paul Hurst, Jack McDonald. At Loew's American, New York, Feb. 20-22. Running time, over 60 mins.

Because of several deviating twists to the story which lower concentrated interest in the whole this picture misses as a full week's attraction in major houses.

George Hill has shown highly profitable capabilities in the slapstick line, but apparently the effort of compiling the story and assuming charge of production in addition to directing interfered with his knack of wringing laughter from cold audiences.

Although one of the characters, the slow-witted physical culture trainer on the trans-Atlantic liner, is framed to cause laughs, the rewards are meagre, unsubstantial in volume and far from frequent.

The story is weak, as it has been built around a character, the youthful star, whom it would be difficult to equip satisfactorily with material.

Jackie Coogan is not handled sympathetically. He acts with restraint, and while that sort of thing should appeal to the high hat critics, these are not the people producers seek to please. Coogan as a sobbing, tattered London waif, though previously done, might have succeeded in winning sympathy. The natural manner in which the boy is introduced and routined throughout is admirable, but it is at no time boxoffice.

Love interest is stifled early. The captain, played up as the heroic figure, finally discovers that his fiancee is not a good girl. The girl fails to please as a type because of her acceptance of the attentions of a man like Henri (D'Arcy). The latter, foppish, unattractive lounge lizard, rouses a feeling of contempt which is transferred to the girl because she is willing to play his game, though only temporarily.

"Buttons" (Coogan) serves as a page on board a British ship on which the action is laid. The sinking of the ship shows the boy returning, after all the others had left, to die with his captain. The pair are saved for the closing of the story. Mori.

THE SIREN

Columbia production and release. Featuring Tom Owen and Dorothy Revier. Byron C. Haskin directed from story by Harry Shumate. Cast includes Jed Prouty and Norman Trevor. At Loew's New York. Running time, 65 mins.

Interesting meller for the honky tonks. Harry Cohn may be given entire credit for turning out a production of this quality against the cost limitations.

Continuity is kept moving with one or two exceptions. Trevor has the cinch part of the picture, as the card sharp who almost succeeded in framing the girl for his murder, though still living, but muffs an easy bet.

Owen and Miss Revier make an interesting team. Miss Revier, especially, looks good. When seen several months ago her appearance spoiled any chance for effectiveness. Expert make-up and good camera treatment has resulted in a distinct change.

Film catches interest from the opening. A girl on a lonely road, caught in a storm, one of the tires of her car punctured, is shown climbing through the window of a log cabin. She removes her clothes (flashes of bare shoulders and knees), gets into a gown and falls asleep. The owner of the cabin, arriving with the opening of the duck shooting season, finds her there.

Meet in the city at a reception given by the girl in her mansion. Menace is introduced as a well groomed card manipulator, stuck on the gal. The latter won't stand for his cheating the boy friend and orders him out of her house.

Later the heavy returns. A fight starts during which the curtains catch fire. The girl shoots the trouble-maker. The house burns down and Cole (Trevor) is generally accepted as dead. He has, however, been saved by his partner. He forces the latter to accuse the girl of murder, figuring on his changed appearance, facial burns, to make him safe from recognition. Court scenes are not handled convincingly.

Story leads directly to the chair, a noose being placed round the girl's neck, with a last minute confession by the sharper's partner. Mori.

JAWS OF STEEL

Warner Bros. production and release. Starring Rin-Tin-Tin. Directed by Ray Enright from story by Chas. R. Ceman. Cast includes Jason Robards, Helen Ferguson, Mary Louise Miller, Jack Curtis and Sally O'Connor. At the Tivoli, New York. Running time, about 60 mins.

The dog star is still a knockout. That's all there is to this picture, but it's enough to carry it over successfully in the split weeks and daily changes.

From 15 to 20 minutes could easily have been cut. Picture moves along monotonously except when the dog is in action. Every movement of the animal is interesting. Even at play, and not doing tricks, he is a spellbinder. Some of his actions are almost human and as a trouper he ranks far above the regular run of two-legged actors appearing in films.

Story revolves around a pup who is lost by a family moving to a small town to work a gold claim. The dog grows up to be a killer but always remembers his childhood playmate and returns to amuse the little girl though knowing he may be captured. Saves the little girl's life by his presence and reveals the murderer of an old prospector who had found gold, thereby clearing himself with all folks. Mori.

Wickedness Preferred

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and release. Directed by Hobart Henley from story by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clement. Titles by Robert Hopkins. Co-starring Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle. At Loew's American Roof, New York, Feb. 16-19. Running time, over 60 mins.

Anthony Dare.....Lew Cody
Kitty Dare.....Aileen Pringle
Daby Burton.....Mary McAllister
Homer Burton.....Bert Roach
Leslie.....George K. Arthur

No amount of editing, cutting or skillful directing could have saved this from the shooting galleries. Titles, by Robert Hopkins, harbor a multitude of laughs, but not of a kind to score with other than Class A house trade, where the picture is out of place.

more like a foreign production in this respect than the output of a highly organized American studio.

Shorn of titles and inopportune by-play, the story is of the man and the girl on the island who try to live with the sky as a roof and the great outdoors as a home. This time it's done by two married folks, a fighty, half-grown, girl-wife, and a novelist with an efficiency expert for a wife.

As usual, physical discomforts soon prove that civilized conveniences with the former mates are preferable.

Miss McAllister photographs as a desirable blonde, despite having the role of an empty-headed girl with a flare for romantic novels. Lew Cody is used mainly for buffeting purposes, rarely producing any legitimate comedy.

The Best That Ability Can Make Are

Productions Being Made This Year for

FOX

BRASS KNUCKLES

Warner Bros. production and release. Directed by Lloyd Bacon from the story by Harvey Gates. Starring Monte Blue, Betty Bronson and William Russell featured. At Moss's Broadway week Feb. 13. Running time over 60 mins.

Slow-moving, badly directed picture based on a type story without any new twists.

Action opens in a prison. Convicts stage a break, but are stopped by two of their own gang (Blue and another), who figure that recapture is inevitable.

Released from prison, the two ex-convicts adopt a little girl, daughter of a fellow-jailbird.

Russell plays the heavy. Incensed against the man who stopped the jail-break, he revenges himself on being released from prison by framing a charge of immorality on the grounds that the girl is "living" with them.

The charge is disproved, but the heavy has meantime secured documents proving himself the girl's father or guardian.

Title acquired as the menace used brass knuckles.

Time-killer only. Mori.

FASHION MADNESS

Hollywood production, released by Columbia. Starring Claire Windsor. Directed by Louis Gasnier from original story by Victoria Moore. Continuity by Olga Printzlau. Cameraman, J. O. Taylor. In cast Reed Howes and Laska Winter. At Loew's New York, one day, Feb. 18, as half double bill. Running time, 60 minutes.

Lavish sets and clothes; society stuff and melodramatic hokum, but "Fashion Madness" as a program picture is considerably better than some higher priced films the bigger colleagues have turned out in the past six months.

Society and the north woods are oddly, but interestingly, combined. Everything is evening clothes, clubs and milady's domicile before the spoiled daughter of the Wall street big boy is spirited away by her husky man-about-town friend. Medium for the abduction is the friend's yacht and the site where the story unfolds is in his mountain cabin.

Claire Windsor, as the girl, does some of the strangest work of her picture career. All of it shows her off to advantage, from the ball room gowns to the trim riding habit up in the hills. Reed Howes makes an ideal leading man for her, and is also given the opportunity to use all of his neck ties.

Some of the most effective work is accomplished by Laska Winter as the little Indian rival of the society damsel.

The climax, although more farfetched than the rest of the story, should provide a punch in off-Broadway houses.

BOWERY CINDERELLA

Excellent production, released by Commonwealth. Directed by Burton King. From story by Melvin Houston. Cast includes Pat O'Malley, Gladys Hulette and Rosemary Theby. At the Arena, New York. Running time, about 50 mins.

Not likely it will ever be seen outside of the state right market. Cheaply constructed, badly played and crude direction. It spells "quickie" in every scene.

Plot No. 658, in which the wealthy villain has designs on the poor gal. He puts her and her sick mother into a comfortable apartment. Just as he is about to exact a kiss from heavily rouged lips, who should appear at the doorway but the boy friend, broad husky and ready to go.

This fight scene is more funny than dramatic. Once home, the boy discovers that he has sold a play, an advance payment being conclusive proof. A flash of the vine-clad cottage finishes. Mori.

Trial of Daniel Westhof

(GERMAN MADE)

Ufa production and release. Directed by Fritz Wendhausen. Cast including Imre Raday, Erna Morena, Karin Evans and Eliza La Porta. At 55th St. Playhouse, New York, Feb. 17. Running time about 60 minutes.

This picture is but another argument in opposition to claims of suitability made for foreign productions. While it easily fills the requirements of art theatres and is bound to meet with approbation from that class of patrons, it is impossible as a general release.

Fritz Wendhausen has done well. There is little fault to find with the direction, judging only from the foreign production methods applied. The film is chockfull of good ideas, technical and otherwise, many of which could be used to enhance the value of American pictures. But the whole has been assembled in a manner decidedly and distinctly alien to the tastes and desires of the American public.

The script has suffered either in the writing or in the adaptation because the characters depicted are not faithful to themselves. There is, for instance, Lessing, first shown as a highly educated, hard-headed, unemotional lawyer of the foremost rank. It does not seem possible that a man of that calibre, steeled to scenes of violence and crime, accusations and rebuttals, a lawyer who has doubtless conducted brutal cross-examinations and in no awe of the court room, would break down and confess a murder which some one else had already pleaded guilty to. It would take more than a mere charge, flung by a half-grown girl in a state of frenzy and over anxiety to protect her lover, to cause a character of that kind to break down suddenly and sink to the floor, clutching his throat and shrieking his guilt.

Characters cannot be painstakingly built up through five or six reels and then torn down at a moment's notice. It is simple enough to understand the emotional reaction of the stupid, half-witted hero who, believing he had murdered a man, rushed to the nearest police station and gave himself up.

Audience sympathy is ruthlessly and continuously bothered throughout the picture. The hero would get no consideration from audiences of the regular type. According to the story the boy wanted to stop the marriage of a millionaire to a creature with whom he had had amorous relations. No one could be deluded into believing that such a marriage could be stopped by the boy refusing to let the moneylender out of his room on the wedding day. A proceeding of that nature might delay the marriage.

The hero, from the opening until the closing reel, is played as a sap without any kind of appeal, to atone for his obvious lack of sense.

There are interesting directorial items spotted through the picture. Some of these have been used in "The Last Laugh" and "Variety," while others seem new. A small part played by the lawyer for the defense approaches genius in its admirable handling.

GOLDEN YUKON

Sam Pisor production. Aywon release. Neil Shipman starred and credited as author and co-director with Bert Van Tingle. Cast includes Alfred Allen, Lillian Leighton, Hugh Thompson, Ah Wing, C. K. Van Auker. At Tivoli, New York, one day, Feb. 16. Running time, 53 mins.

Not a bad states right number, although probably made some time ago or possibly a reissue. Plot brings back your old friend, white slavery. Innocent and trusting girl is taken to Alaska by an unscrupulous gent, who commits bigamy and tries to commit murder.

Acting, production and photography, fair. Land.

Universal's first of the third series of "Collegiate" pictures, with George Lewis and Dorothy Gulliver featured. Nat Ross directing.

JOLLY VINEYARD

(GERMAN MADE)

Berlin, Feb. 4.

Comedy by Karl Zuckmayer, one of the most successful of late years But the film will not meet the same kind fate; for America it is without chances.

Concerns life in the Rhine district during vintage time, and is just as coarse as life there probably really is.

Its figures are the rich vineyard owner, his daughter, his housekeeper, the sailor who loves the daughter and is loved by her in return, a swindler who gets the daughter into a compromising position and asks for her hand, and two comic German wine salesmen from Berlin.

A. & H. Capitalizing Coast Holdings at $3,000,000

San Francisco, Feb. 21.

A financial movement is underway whereby local banking interests will float the Ackerman & Harris coast theatre holdings into a capitalization of $3,000,000. Its stock will be sold to the public.

A. & H. operate about 16 theatres in this section. They book a large number of other theatres, playing straight pictures or vaudfilm.

The firm has been in business for a number of years, with the partners, Irving Ackerman and Sam Harris.

Willis, Bronx, makes another shift next week, when the bookings pass from Arthur Fisher to Jack Linder.

JOE LEO'S DINNER

127 Welcome Home Fox Man—Lorraine's Speech Hit

The welcome home dinner given in honor of Joe Leo at Cavanagh's restaurant in West 23rd street, New York, at midnight, Feb. 17, drew 126. A souvenir program with poems and wisecracks was distributed.

Jim Travers, manager of Fox's theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., was master of ceremonies and made the presentation speech.

Among the main speechmakers were Charles LeVine, Jack Leo, Edgar Allen, E. W. Rogers and I. Katosky. In next to closing spot appeared Harry Lorraine, the vaude booker, who made a speech that was a cross between chow mein and goulash. It was the laughing gem of the evening.

K-A-O BOOKERS LINE UP FOR HOUSES

Production Dept. Squabble Over Head—Pat Woods in Murdock's Office

Tentative lining up of Keith-Albee-Orpheum New York booking forces as reported places Eddie Darling as general supervisor over all. Two divisions appear to be maintained for house bookings, with Danny Simmons and Larry Golde in charge of the books for the New York houses, other than the Palace and Riverside.

Wayne Christie and Bill McCaffrey will have the main string of the middle west, including the Orpheum, Jrs., and taking in the coast houses under George Godfrey. Bill Howard and Phil Bloom also will route in this field.

Other bookers will be known as assistants and scouts, from reports. A promotion appears to have gone to Pat Woods, who is reported assigned to J. J. Murdock's office, ostensibly as Murdock's assistant.

In the K-A-O production department a row is rumored seething, through Max Gordon, formerly Orpheum's general manager and chief booker, having been relegated to that department. John Schultz, K-A man, has been actively in charge of the production end of the circuit in New York for some time. It is said Schultz does not recognize Gordon as his superior in rank or work. Gordon has never been accepted as a producer. Previous to selling himself to the Orpheum, Gordon was the salesman for Lewis & Gordon, agents, with Al Lewis, then as now, the producer.

Arthur Willie continues to be Darling's assistant.

GRANGE-HIERS IN SKETCH

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

"Red" Grange will fill his spare time by appearing in a sketch over the Orpheum circuit.

Walter Hiers, film comedian, is slated to add his weight to the sketch, which starts out soon.

DOORMAN A FENCE?

Philip Wertheim on Trial for Receiving Stolen Goods

Philip Wertheim, 58, of 1383 Lexington avenue, formerly doorman at Hurtig & Seeman's Yorkville theatre, is on trial before a jury and Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions charged with having criminally received the proceeds of more than 100 apartment house robberies committed during the past few months by Jack Otto Hobert, 22, of 819 East 173d street. Hobart was the principal witness for the prosecution, having turned State's evidence after pleading guilty to a burglary of an apartment from which he took jewelry valued at over $3,000.

On the stand Hobert declared he was induced by Wertheim to commit the robberies and in each instance was given only a small part of the proceeds, Wertheim keeping the larger part.

No Fortune From Beauty, But Lawrences Divorced

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Vivian Lawrence, professional, was granted a divorce from Albert Lester Lawrence, actor, on grounds of cruelty. Miss Lawrence stated Albert wanted to make a fortune with her beauty, encouraging the attentions of wealthy gents and then raising riot when he got jealous of the gents. Attorney Leo Weiskopf represented the girl.

June Douglas Lord, night club entertainer, secured a divorce without alimony from James V. Lord, musical arranger, on charges of repeated cruelty. Judge Lynch awarded partial custody of an 11-month-old son to each of them. Miss Lord waived alimony in a statement that she could support herself.

L. Barbash is now managing the Tiffany theatre, Brooklyn.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

DALLAS, TEXAS

—What the Critics Said:

EDDIE PARDO MIGHT AS WELL LOCATE HERE

Majestic's First Conferencier Looks Like Sensation

"After witnessing Eddie Pardo's debut Saturday afternoon, one wonders why the theatre didn't think of it 25 years ago. He makes warm and personal something that has always been cold and impersonal. Pardo's first show Saturday was nothing but an unequivocal success. Pardo is no newcomer, for he has played the Majestic four or five times at the head of his own company. He is youngish, good-looking and a showman from tip to toe. Manifestly he is capable of meeting any exigency and makes a show look good. He does not attempt to aggrandize applause and attention for himself. He tries merely to uplift and supplement the regular acts on the bill. His personality is delightfully free from egotism or the more obvious forms of hokum.

"This writer has a hunch the bill this week is just one of those things not so good and not so bad, but with Pardo it goes like a Carroll or Timberg show.

"The Conferencier is apparently a sensational success. The public might as well get to know Eddie Pardo, for he is due to remain for a considerable spell."

—John Rosenfeld, Jr., DALLAS "NEWS."

CONFERENCIER IDEA AT MAJESTIC TAKES

Pardo's Efforts Make Good Bill Better

"Eddie Pardo makes a good vaudeville bill better at the Majestic this week. Pardo, a vaudeville entertainer of ability, made his appearance Sunday as Conferencier, and the idea is all to the good. It caught on with the audience from the very start. It's a safe wager Pardo will be here for quite a spell."—D. H., DALLAS "TIMES HERALD."

EDDIE PARDO PUTS OVER MAJESTIC PROGRAM

Mr. Pardo is Conferencier at the Majestic Theatre, having made his debut Saturday. Mr. Pardo sells himself to the house, and before the bill is over the audience decides that a Conferencier is something nice. As a whole, the Majestic's "conferencier" is a marked success and will be a fixture on its stage if EDDIE PARDO serves in that capacity.

MANAGER TAKING "KICK BACK" GETS GRAND LARCENY CHARGE

Civil Suit Also to Recover From J. J. McCloskey—Corlew's 10-Piece Band on Marigold's Payroll For $708 Weekly—Received $520

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

Whether a manager is guilty of grand larceny in getting a kick back from a performer and whether he can be compelled to return such kick backs to his employer, will be determined in the courts here.

John J. McCloskey, employed at a salary of $100 a week as manager of Marigold Gardens, largest and finest dance hall in the state, is under arrest charged with grand larceny. He is also the defendant in a civil suit brought by the Midland Amusement Co., owner of Marigold Gardens, to recover $9,024.

It is alleged by the Midland Amusement Co. that McCloskey represented to its president, J. E. Saxe, Milwaukee theatrical man, and L. P. Vollmer, its bookkeeper, that he had engaged Eddie Corlew and the latter's 10-piece orchestra at $708 per week, but that Corlew and his musicians regularly refunded $188 weekly to McCloskey, who retained that sum for himself. The $9,024 sought by the company is the total of these refunds.

The Midland company claims that McCloskey's action constituted grand larceny. In the civil suit it alleges the manager actually had hired the orchestra at $520 per week and not at the $708 which he deceitfully and fraudulently represented to Saxe and Vollmer as the amount regularly paid the musicians.

The papers further set forth that "no part of this $9,024 returned to the defendant, McCloskey, by members of the orchestra, and procured by him through the false and fraudulent representations was ever returned to the plaintiff."

It also is alleged that "as a result of these deceitful, fraudulent and unlawful statements, representations and acts of McCloskey and in his relations to the plaintiff corporation, he has been unjustly enriched in the sum of $9,024, and the plaintiff corporation has sustained losses, made unwarranted and unnecessary expenditures and defrauded in that amount."

Pan's "K.K.K." Tab

The Pantages Circuit has booked Leon De Costa's tab version of "Kosher Kitty Kelly" for a complete route. The tab carries 15 in cast, is in three scenes and runs an hour.

The Pan booking of "K.K.K." is said to be a forerunner of the circuit booking other tabs for the first time this season.

Completely restored to health, she has had a script written for her by a standard author, and will ask $2,500 weekly. Nat Phillips is managing the business end.

CELSO GILA'S WIFE HAS HIM IN COURT

Former Dancing Team—Judge Places Gila on Probation for 6 Mos. to Leave Wife Alone

Strict probation for six months was the sentence imposed on Celso Gila, 25, dancer, 420 West 43rd street, by Magistrate Macrery in West Side Court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Gila was arrested by Detective Dan Fisher, Court Squad, on complaint of Gila's wife, Vivian, 19, 371 Wadsworth avenue, a dancer at Palais D'Or. Mrs. Gila said her husband had threatened to kill her and continually annoyed her.

Mrs. Gila said that on Feb. 7 he met her as she was leaving Palais D'Or, grasping her by the arm and shaking her up, and threatened to kill her unless she accompanied him. Mrs. Gila said her husband formerly had danced with her but was dismissed.

She told court clerks her husband had stepped all over her feet while they were dancing and on one occasion while he was holding her in the air while he twirled around, he suddenly dropped her to the floor. The wife stated she believed he did it purposely.

Gila denied he had threatened to kill his wife and said he met her because he wanted her to return to him. He denied he had deliberately dropped her while they were dancing. He maintained he taught her all she knows about dancing.

Magistrate Macrery told Gila he did not want to send him to jail and placed him on probation. He warned the dancer that he must stay away from his wife and not communicate with her in any manner; if he disobeyed he would be brought back and given six months in jail.

Sun's 73 Weeks

A re-alignment of the Gus Sun Circuit, including recent drop-outs and additions, now gives the circuit 23 weeks of vaudeville and 50 weeks of tabloids.

Most of the tabs are booked out of the Sun agency at Springfield, O., with some vaudeville also booked from that center, as well as from the eastern headquarters in New York.

CHICAGO AND N. Y. ONLY LEFT

Orpheum Circuit Preparing to Change to Vaudfilm Over Entire Chain, Excepting Palace, Chicago—6 Acts and Picture for 50-75c—Keith's, Washington, Likely Grind — Leaving But 3 Actual Big Timers in Operation

NEVER RETURNING

Chicago, Feb. 21.

From the present outlook the sole big time two-a-day vaudeville theatre shortly to be left on the entire Orpheum (Keith-Albee) circuit will be the Palace in this city. Arrangements are being made to convert the Orpheums now in the two-a-day class, though playing three times daily on the week-ends, to vaudfilms.

Vaudfilms on the Orpheum will be a policy of six acts and a picture at a top of 50-75c., without reserved seats. If reserved seats are sold at a small advance over the top, it will be as an experiment.

A show of this style will cost in acts around $3,500, as the K-A people seldom pay for a program film over $500, rental for a week, the gross overhead for the bill will not exceed $4,000. That is the average cost of a Publix-Loew stage unit at present, on the road, without the accompanying feature picture, shorts or pit orchestra included.

Orpheums affected by the change are in several cities where a semblance of a class vaudeville policy has been attempted since the picture house inroads commenced to tell against Orpheum vaudeville theatres' grosses.

At one time the Orpheum had as many as 20 or more big time vaudeville theatres in the west.

Washington, Feb. 21.

Pipe organ, picture booth and three projectors and a cooling plant are going into Keith-Albee's Keith's, two-a-day, with three on Sunday.

Roland Robbins, house manager, states they are just getting ready in case a change in policy is necessary.

New Orleans, Feb. 21.

The local Orpheum, playing twice daily and three on Sundays at 75c. top, will change shortly to straight three daily for the acts, with the picture retained, at 50c. top.

San Francisco, Feb. 21.

It's reported that all Orpheum circuit theatres west of Chicago will have a vaudfilm policy shortly.

That is taken as a last stand to fight the picture house situation and the Pantages Circuit opposition, with one having proven as costly as the other to the Orpheum.

With the Orpheum Circuit generally going over to the grind policy of vaudfilm, but three big time vaudevilic houses in two cities will be left in the country. Accepting that Keith's, Washington, is on its way to the factory basis of running, the two-a-dayers remaining will be the Palace and Riverside, New York, and Palace, Chicago.

The Riverside, New York, at present is next to a grind in scale, 75c. top, and only prevented from a change of policy through an agreement between William Fox and Keith-Albee, with both interested in that house. A day does not appear far distant where there will remain in the U. S. and Canada but two big time vaudeville theatres, in New York and Chicago.

BENEFIT ARTISTS EXONERATED IN TRENTON PRISON BREAK

Official Investigation Revealed That Keeper, Not Performer, Brought Pistol Into Prison—Occurred at Dawn Following Benefit—Volunteer Show

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 21.

An account of the investigation conducted by the state prison officials, following an attempted jail break at the Trenton jail about a month ago, exonerates artists in the prison the night before.

Two prisoners and a guard were killed and other injured, with the prisoner starting the break, a lifer, having a revolver that had been smuggled in to him.

The break occurred at dawn of the morning after a benefit entertainment had been provided for the inmates of the institution by about 35 volunteer vaudeville artists brought there from New York. With the outbreak, it was charged that a performer had brought the gun in. The investigation entirely exonerates the performers. It revealed that a keeper had passed the revolver to the lifer.

Among the artists appearing at the benefit were several well known names in the show world.

Through the unjust accusation and suspicion, prisons soliciting volunteer entertainers may not find them so readily accepting the invitation as heretofore.

At the time of the unsuccessful but tragic break, the dailies throughout New Jersey gave much publicity to it, including the belief that a performer had precipitated it.

K-A PAYS $5,000 TO COP RADIO ACT

"Sam 'n' Henry" Desert WGN —Station Obliged to Announce Loss

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Correll and Gosden ("Sam 'n' Henry") blackface team broadcasting a 10-minute dialog nightly except Monday from WGN, Chicago "Tribune" station, walked out Feb. 12 upon expiration of their contract and opened Feb. 16 in Louisville for six weeks of Keith-Orpheum vaudeville at a reported $5,000 salary weekly.

The walk-out left WGN holding the w. k. bag, as the team had been broadcasting some highly plotted comedy stuff and blew just before the climax of a continuous "story" that had been worked up for over a year. One of the boys was to have been married after numerous difficulties with the intended bride reported kidnapped on the nuptial night and nobody knowing what it was all about.

On the air two years or more, the "Sam 'n' Henry" feature was the most popular radio attraction in Chicago. The team played B. & K. picture houses here last year and drew $3,000 weekly on the strength of their radio rep.

WGN officials made no formal announcement that the team had left until last Thursday, when it was broadcast they were no longer in the station's employ. It was considered necessary to do this because of the calls, wires and letters asking what had happened.

RAE SAMUELS SUED

Marks Bros. Charge Breach of Contract—Ask $10,000 Damages

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Marks Bros., owners of the Granada and Marbro theatres, have filed suit for $10,000 against Rae Samuels, charging breach of contract. Miss Samuels is at present playing three weeks in the B. & K. (Publix) houses, classed as direct opposition.

Several weeks ago Marks Bros. started a heavy advertising campaign announcing the singer would appear in their theatres. The B. & K. booking came right on the heels of this exploitation.

Film Name Acts East

Picture names slated for eastern Fox bookings are Agnes Ayres, who opens March 12; Francis X. Bushman, Jr., and his sister Lenore and a company of four in a sketch: Winona Winter and Bardson Bard, latter Ben Bard, now doing light heavies as Bardson Bard and originally from vaudeville.

Lyons and Lyons booked.

Leach Cross is doing a comeback for Fox, booked by the same agency. The pugilistic dentist has been out of the limelight for several years.

COSCI-VERDI'S FILM DATES

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Cosci and Verdi having completed a route for West Coast, were immediately booked by Walter Meyers, William Morris office, to open this week at the Missouri, St. Louis, for Skouras.

The act will then take up the Publix route.

2D MURDER TRIAL FOR PHILLIP GOODWIN

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Rev. Phillip Allison Goodwin, of the American Catholic Church, is on trial for his life a second time in Santa Ana for alleged murder of Joseph J. Patterson, Los Angeles bond broker.

Last year Goodwin was sentenced to hang for the offense, but the Superior Court found errors in conviction and ordered a retrial.

Comer at Kings Park

Larry Comer was removed from Bellevue Hospital, New York, to Kings Park, L. I., last week.

Comer, former vaude actor and one time partner of the late Emma Carus, was committed to Bellevue two weeks ago after suffering a nervous breakdown, reported suffering from mental collapse.

RUTH ETTING IN "BOAT"

Miss Etting left last week for her Indiana home to settle her late father's estate, after which she plays a couple of weeks in Chicago for B. & K. before joining the Ziegfeld unit.

IRISH AND STAGE IRISH

By JOSEPH STANLEY
EDITOR

When Dublin Vaudeville fans heard of an Irish singing star and entertainer "headlining" at the Theatre Royal last week they sort of tippy-toed into the stalls and sat down critical-like. They had heard of Irish entertainers before—the Irish being mostly a matter of nomenclature—pigs and clay pipes—and nobody was going to pass the salt over their tails ever again.

So that when Gerald Griffin strolled on to the stage the atmosphere was none too kindly. But by degrees it began to percolate through the house that this was a new type of Irish entertainer. He looked, yarned, sang and acted like a gentleman, and the temperature of the auditorium warmed up rapidly. His excellent American showmanship, with its keen analysis of crowd psychology, disarmed the critical opposition from the very first number, but the sudden irruptive flashes of genuine Irish wit and whimsicality rapidly converted their defeat into a rout. They threw their defenses away and just got up and yelled for more.

By way of encore Gerald Griffin sang "My Dark Rosaleen," most heart-searching and truly Celtic of Irish romantic songs. This, too, after an act sparkling with vivacity and humor. It was the crowning achievement, and the audience clapped till the blisters reminded them of human frailty. It was greatly daring, but the real good—no "phoney" stuff. This artist was real Irish and, strange to add, creditable to the Irish.

Nobody in the world but Gerald Griffin could have got away with it.

3 LOEW OPENINGS IN KEITH'S TOWNS

Indianapolis, Feb. 21.

Loew's will open its Palace theatre about March 3, with the Loew presentation policy. The local house passed back to Loew some months ago, after operated by Keith-Albee for some time (following a Loew-K-A deal whereby the latter got the theatre under rental).

Columbus, Feb. 21.

It will oppose Keith's, which has had a virtual monopoly in this city of the vaud show.

Loew's policy will be presentations.

Syracuse, Feb. 21.

Keith's has been the big variety house here and will be strongly opposed by the new theatre. The Loew building is a town sight, towering high on South Salina street, with an office building surrounding.

Orpheum's Policy Shift In Frisco Flopping

San Francisco, Feb. 21.

Orpheum's new policy of feature picture and seven acts, started about a month ago, is petering out rapidly, despite some real "names" on the stage.

The Orpheum clientele is not the sort that goes to the theatre at 6:30 or 7 p. m., to sit through a feature picture and then regular length vaude show. The novelty soon wore off and business is once more in the rut it has been for several years.

Pan Out at Atlanta

Pantages vaudeville will be discontinued in the Universal theatre in Atlanta March 10, the house reverting to its U ownership, expected to operate with straight films and presentations.

The Pan shows have been going into Atlanta from Memphis, a five-act road outfit playing there with feature films.

Business has been off.

This is the second big southern town that Pan is giving up, the first being the Pan Alabama theatre in Birmingham.

PAN'S L. I. RADIO TIE-UP

New York Pantages office per Bob Burns, associate booker, has effected a tieup with the radio station WLBX at Long Island City, whereby Burns will get Pan acts to supply the air program at different periods weekly.

MARRIAGES

Frank Jenks, m. c. at the California, San Jose, to Margaret L. Glazier, dancer, at San Francisco, Feb. 1.

Leon d-Usseau, production supervisor F.B.O., to Ottola Nesmith, legit actress, in Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 18.

Gladys O'Hearn, in "Behold This Dreamer," Blackstone, Chicago, will wed Harlow Hellstrom of the Marblehead Lime Co.

Bobbie Brox (Brox Sisters) to William Perlberg, attached to the William Morris west coast office as assistant to Walter Meyers in Los Angeles, on Feb. 20.

SOUTH AMERICAN BOOKING PROBE WITHOUT RESULT

The Federal Grand Jury investigation of alleged white slave traffic in Panama and South American countries has resulted in no indictments eventuating, after weeks of inquisition by the federal district attorney in New York.

Department of Justice operatives had been at work on the case for weeks, on the report of a mysterious operative "Mr. R-18," unknown to the D. of J. operatives and never turned up to the federal district attorney during the investigation.

Several cabaret agents booking the South America and Panama cabarets were called downtown during the inquisition, but were given clean bills of health. Among these were Harry Walker, who books the Kelly cabarets, Panama, and Andy Wright, who books cabarets in Havana and Colon.

After two months of investigation the district attorney found nothing tangible to present to the grand jury in the way of preparation for indictments, but decided, however, to let the grand jury pass upon the evidence at hand, with nothing further eventuating.

Free Information

Reports have come to Variety time and again of mistreatment of American girls working as cabaret entertainers in South American countries, but with no blame placed by those mistreated on agents booking them. In most cases of Variety's investigations the bookings were made in good faith with the agents posting bond for each girl sent out of the country, and with more often than not the inexperience of the girls with foreign relations matter due to their delay of transportation back. In many cases the girls accepted the engagement from a speculative motive.

All girls approached for southern cabaret or show engagements outside the U. S., and uncertain as to the responsibility of the contracting party of character of place or show engagement is proposed for, should investigate. Information at all times may be secured at the offices of Equity or Variety.

MORE VERSATILITY COMES OUT AS CHI'S DIVORCES GO TO NORMAL

Chicago, Feb. 22.

After an annoying slump in divorce grosses, the breezy city mill jumped into its normal stride last week. The town seems natural again.

Attorney Ben Ehrlich spent a romantic week as Cupid, patching up three marital affairs headed for the rocks with his wisdom and guile.

Sol Weil, who appears in vaude as Charlie Wilson, had decided to give Elsie Weil, of musical comedy, plenty of air, mainly because she had already given it to him. Enter Cupe, and the suit filed by Sol recalled.

Lillian Smith (actually Birdie Rosenbaum Friedman), dancer, complained that husband, Jake, was too cruel, and filed suit through Ehrlich. She later heard the love call and became amicable to reconciliation.

The third kissing makeuppers were Frances Schultze, prima donna, and Dr. Louis Schultze. Frances had a child by a previous marriage, and she claims the Doc was cruel at times on account of not being a direct relative. It's okay now.

Deserted 2 Little Girls

Two little girls in "Step Lively" (Mutual) have legally declared through Attorney Leo Weisskopf that marriage is the banana oil. Margaret Kienzle, who married Frank Kienzle in 1922, says he left her in 1925 and there's no apparent reason why she should continue as his wife. Lillian Power wants a divorce decree from William Power for the same reason.

Attorney Phil R. Davis, the Dearborn street legal expert, secured a divorce for Catherine Duffin Kenyon, legit, from Robert Kenyon of the variety halls. The Kenyons have one child and another blessed event is expected. According to Catherine, hubby was extremely cruel, at one time shooting the lock off her apartment door when she wouldn't let him in. She will get $35 weekly alimony.

Gene Lawrence, married to Francis Lawrence, father of Vincent Lawrence, the playwright, was granted a divorce through Attorney Davis for desertion. She's in legit. Nellie Abbot, night club girl, also secured a divorce through Davis from Harry Abbott, actor.

Tired of Socks

Bill for divorce has been filed by Leo Weisskopf for Effie Langill, of "Vanities," who says Judge Langill deserted her after quite a few years of happy married life.

Edward Knapp, vaude, got a divorce from Mildred Knapp because she had a habit of socking him when he didn't fork over all the money she wanted. Eddie grew tired of Mildred's racket and had Leo make him free. The couple lived together about seven months.

Claiming the other half spent her money on the horses and other dames, Elsie Trubenvach (Truble in vaude) was freed of Louis Trubenbach. Elsie says she supported the guy for 10 years, but when her dough went for rivals she got sore. Weisskopf represented her.

Maybelle Bloch, 5 feet 6 inches tall, was granted a divorce from Billy De Witt, 4 feet 3, on charges of desertion in Judge Sabath's court. The pair have appeared in vaudeville for years as De Witt and Gunther.

St. Louis, Feb. 21.

Robert J. ("Bobby") Reed, 38, former star with the Woodward National Players, St. Louis, is being sued for divorce by Mrs. Donna Marvee Reed, who charges cruelty and non-support. Couple were married in St. Louis on Nov. 15, 1926, and lived together until Jan. 5, last.

BALTIMORE'S M. C.'S

Baltimore, Feb. 21.

Leon Navara has been given a four months' contract by Stanley-Crandall as master of ceremonies at the Stanley, here. Lyons and Lyons are agenting Navara.

There has been a shift of masters of ceremonies at the Century, the house that inaugurated the stage band policy in Baltimore. Sammy Kahn, in for the past month, left Saturday to fill an unannounced assignment. He is succeeded by Ted Claire, former revue principal.

$20 FOR GOOD PUBLICITY

Olsen and Johnson Pinched Trying to Shove Ford Car Off Bridge

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

As a result of a strongly suspected publicity stunt, Olsen and Johnson, at the Hennepin-Orpheum theatre, were fined $10 each for disorderly conduct in municipal court. They obtained stories in three local dailies, only one of the evening sheets passing up the yarn. Total cost, $20.

The "disorderly conduct" consisted of trying to throw a second-hand Ford car over a bridge into the Mississippi river at midnight. Pedestrians saw Olsen and Johnson together with Walter Renlund, Hennepin-Orpheum doorman, push the car onto the sidewalk and try to ram it through the bridge railing. They called the gunsquad at police headquarters. The coppers arrived in time to save the Ford from destruction and locked the trio up.

At the police station the comedians explained that they had bought the machine for $38 for use during their Minneapolis engagement and had hired Renlund to drive it. The car, they said, had broken down no less than five times during the 24 hours that they owned it. They said they were on their way, after the show, to visit Johnson's relatives in St. Paul when the flivver balked for the sixth time. In disgust, they decided to do away with the car entirely.

During the rest of the week the car stood in front of the Hennepin-Orpheum with signs on it saying it was the Ford which Olsen and Johnson tried to shove off the bridge.

Ballyhooing Films

Orders have gone forth in the Loew offices to circus and ballyhoo as much as possible for all the big pictures listed for the Loew houses.

Under this new rule the first play will be made on Chaplin's "Circus," March 5 at the State, New York, and the Metropolitan, Brooklyn.

LYONS & LYONS IN CHI

Lyons & Lyons will open a Chicago office shortly. The agency has a branch in Los Angeles in charge of William Rowland.

Arthur S. Lyons was in Chicago last week preparing to open the local office.

Pan's Conclave Overdue

The proposed plan of Pantages circuit to corral production act producers and outline plans for routing that would practically guarantee profits on their products seems to have flopped in the making.

Despite announcement two months ago that a conclave would be called by the New York office of the Pan circuit, nothing has been done on the matter to date.

K-A's Option Lapses

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 21.

The belief that the widely heralded announcements that the Keith-Albee-Orpheum chain was to erect a large theatre in Worcester was merely a gesture to head off other interests and possibly spike the Shoolman-Poli deal, gained additional support here when the option on the property which the Keith interests had secured expired.

When the option first expired, it was renewed, but there were few familiar with the theatrical situation who considered there was any serious intention of taking it up.

JAKE LUBIN BACK

According to Marvin Schenck of the Loew vaude booking department, there will be no successor appointed in Ernie Williams' place at present. Lyric, Hoboken, which the late Loew booker booked each week, will be handled by Sidney Piermont.

J. H. Lubin, on a vacation, spent in New Orleans and Havana, is expected back today (Wednesday).

Jack Hubb in New York

Hubb becomes field man and will conduct a campaign to swing additional houses into the Sun eastern agency.

ILL AND INJURED

John Marlon, ill at his Long Island home, sails for London May 2 to open in vaudeville and double into the Kit Cat restaurant there.

Galli Curci cancelled concert in Charleston, W. Va., last week and went to Chicago for treatment of laryngitis by her own physician.

Johnny Black is confined to the Rockford (Ill.) Hospital, where he has undergone an operation. The composer of "Dardanella" was playing at the Tampa Gardens, Rockford, when taken ill.

Virgil Johnson was operated on for appendicitis at the Osteopathic Hospital in Los Angeles, Feb. 14. He was reported to be recovering.

Mrs. Donald Brian (Virginia O'Brien), seriously ill during childbirth last week, is out of danger.

Harold Bell Wright, novelist, is improving rapidly in the Loma Linda Hospital at San Bernardino, Cal., from an attack of pneumonia, suffered recently while in New York.

Frank J. Heuting, San Francisco vaude actor, is in Mountain View hospital, suffering from injuries sustained in an auto crash, that resulted in the death of Sidney Mercier, 19, son of the president of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad. Heuting's car crashed into another auto containing Mercier and Jack Young.

Write to the ill and injured.

Padden, chief booker for the Amalgamated for years, and rated one of the most efficient in his line, has been recuperating from an illness. He is reported to be shortly embarking in the independent booking field on his own.

Sybil Brennan Retires

Jim Diamond and Sybil Brennan have dissolved as a vaude team but not maritally. The split was occasioned through Miss Brennan's (Mrs. Diamond) desires to retire from show business.

Diamond will continue their former act with another partner.

WILL FYFFE OPENING

Will Fyffe, Scotch comedian, has recovered from his recent illness. He will resume his vaude tour at the Palace, New York, next week.

ETHEL CLAYTON with IAN KEITH-MYLES McCARTHY
"Clipped" (Comedy)
19 Mins.; Three (Parlor)
Riverside (St. V.)

Ethel Clayton, Ian Keith and Myles McCarthy from pictures shared the billing, with Miss Clayton's name strongly displayed. Aida Woolcott doing a maid bit completes the cast. The playlet is by Tacie May Hanna and labeled a "one-act dramatic gem," a misnomer.

It is neither dramatic nor a gem, but farce comedy with little of the drama to it.

Miss Clayton and Keith are cast as a married pair, each on a long night out, and each guilty of possible complications from subsequent notoriety or newspaper publicity.

The household newspaper with a clipped space showing, leads each to believe the other is hep. With typical stage misunderstanding, each supposes that it is the account of the other's escapade. The obvious that it concerns something else—in this case Myles McCarthy as Uncle Horace reads a booze recipe—never occurs to players in situations of this kind.

As far as this frame-up is concerned, it won't add much to their stock when it's all said and done. This week, the Riverside; next week or week after, the Palace, and then what? Vo-do-de-o-vodvil. Abel.

DAVID RUBINOFF
Violinist
One
Capitol (Pcts) New York.

In the production end of the picture theatre David Rubinoff is known as a sure show stopper. This has been his record since starting as a guest conductor and soloist at Loew's Allen, Cleveland, two or three years ago, and he repeated in the dual capacity at the State, St. Louis.

Of late Mr. Rubinoff, with his violin, seems to be of more value as a traveling attraction and as a soloist only. There never has been any question of his violin. He knows technique and everything that goes with the strings, but because he knows his public equally as well, is why Rubinoff can stop any picture stage performance.

That he did at the Capitol, Sunday afternoon, before an early and light attendance. They liked him from the orchestra to the rear of the balcony, and this despite he played the instrument in front of a mighty good stage band.

ADELPHI TRIO
Singing, Dancing
12 Mins.; Full (Spec.)
5th Ave. (V-R)

Two men and a girl working full stage, with one of the men at the piano throughout. Act embraces song, dance and some instrumental contributions. The quality of the offerings varies from fair to middling, the act leaving that sort of impression. The girl's toe work is okay, but her vocalizing is hardly passable. One of the men also sins against the high notes.

The act is open to improvement. It should be given "that" and speeded up more. As presently arranged and geared it will not get anywhere. Land.

THE DALES (4)
Male Quartette
13 Mins.; One
81st St. (V-P)

Not a strong turn. One man at piano throughout with other three off and on. All wear tuxes. Published numbers used entirely with one effort to work up a number with business a flop so far as realizing on laughs. Piano player soloes with a vod-de-o-do number, own conception and good but not getting across here.

Appears as if someone "staged" the act. That may account for the finish when four singers are suddenly and unsuccessfully converted into dancers. Much clapping of hands for tempo and working it up fails to disguise the hoofing as faked.

Act has no body and limited usefulness. Land.

ELLIS and WEST (2)
Comedy, dancing
7 Mins.; One
American (V-P)

Aside from the falls, which rouse faint, spasmodic giggles, the only laugh is the line, "There's a black spot on your neck," and the final comeback, "Well, it's moving," which is a gag used by Buck and Bubbles.

For the climax Ellis does a burlesque dance in fem attire. Light. Mori.

GAYNOR and BYRON
Skating
9 Mins.; Full
State (V-P)

For a simple opening turn by two men, this skating specialty has a world of merit. Stage is draped in sombre-colored hangings. Centre is occupied by a circular platform two feet from floor and about 18 feet across, covered and fringed in black and gold. Only lighting comes from strong spots directly overhead which throw lights exactly the circle of the platform.

Two men dressed in Russian costume of white and black silk and boots are in the middle of a swing when curtain rises. They don't waste a second. Dizzy spins on the toes, whirling of one by the other, the flyer being in all sorts of acrobatic poses during the flights (once he was swinging around doubled into a back bend). For the finish they announce the feat of the flyer being whirled about, sustained only by one foot tucked in behind the other's neck.

Good sight turn, brisk, brief and full of excellent acrobatic display on the rollers. Rush.

PAULINE GASKIN
Dancer
One
Capitol (Pcts) New York.

Pauline Gaskin is a nice little kicking dancer, with some pretty side-up kicks. But she is tackling quite a job trying to make it alone in the big houses, unless given more attention by the house producer than she received at the Capitol Sunday.

Brought out before the band, Miss Gaskin would have done much better on the platform behind it, and she also could have been aided by lighting.

Filling in fairly for the early position, still the girl was entitled to the attention all picture house acts requiring it should receive.

DENIS CHABOT
Songs and Music
17 Mins.; One
Broadway (V-P)

Combination does not belie its overseas billing, the boy being from Belgium and the Girl from France. Latter is Nonette Tortini, a damsel, who goes in for decided French mannerisms.

Act is mainly Chabot, who fiddles expertly and plays a piano skillfully. He clowns most of the way, yanks the piano around after the fashion of Herb Williams, and also does a few of the keyboard didoes that Jimmy Carr has featured for years. When it comes to the straight music, Chabot knows his instruments.

Chabot is new, the routine isn't, but he found the going to his liking at the Broadway. Their comedy byplay will find a response in most of the house here. Tortini hasn't much of a voice, but uses it to help Chabot work up his comedy stuff.

Broadway audience Monday night voted it okay. Mark.

FESS WILLIAMS and BAND (19)
Stage Band
58 Mins.; Full (Special)
Regal, Chicago.

Fess Williams was brought to Chicago from New York to open the new Lubliner & Trinz Regal theatre, a house of colored personnel and patronage. It was a fortunate booking, for Williams as a stage band leader and master of ceremonies rates high.

He is leading a band of 18 colored musicians assembled in Chicago, a crack pop outfit heavy on the "lowdown" versions. Williams is dispensing the type of music relished by colored patrons, dressing it up considerably.

Handling all announcements and introductions himself, Williams shows a likeable personality, delivering all stuff humorously and working with the acts in some instances in an unobtrusively comic manner. The Regal customers showed an immediate liking for his style.

WILTON CRAWLEY
Musician-Contortionist,
8 Mins.; One,
Majestic, Chicago (V-P).

Crawley is a colored jazz clarinetist with contortion ability. Combination of the two makes a novel act, especially suited to picture houses with stage bands. In vaudeville the quality is lessened somewhat, appearing slated for deuce spotting for Association time.

BURNS and KISSEN
Songs
One
Capitol (Pcts) New York

Burns and Kissen, standard vaude turn for several years, in the picture houses are doing their two-talk and song act, with the talk merely incidental as introduction to the songs. In the latter is a revival and it's a pipe for picture audiences.

It's the straight (Joe Burns) singing a verse or chorus of a song, and the comedian (Murray Kissen) doing a parody. Two necessities for a turn of this character are that the parodied lyrics be bright and understandable, and that the parodies be on current pop song hits. Kissen has covered both very well. They could have remained indefinitely on the Capitol's stage Sunday afternoon.

In getting over parody points, however, there must be a performer behind them. For the benefit of the copy acts, it may be stated that when in vaudeville some years ago, this style of turn, started by Herb Ashley, was somewhat overdone. The copyists not only killed themselves, but also the others.

Burns and Kissen in this revival should be left alone and protected to that extent by the picture house bookers. It will be a fatal error if the film act bookers try to do as the Keith-Albee bookers did; book and stand for copy acts because the lifters were cheaper. That smothered vaude so completely it made it possible for picture houses to play vaud turns with big results.

Unless the picture house intention is to bring the vaude houses back, they had better protect all of their novelty turns, and in that classification now enter Burns and Kissen, whether revival or not.

Previously and after quite a spell as a two-act, singing as now but along different lines, Burns and Kissen did the Avon Comedy Four skits, with Kissen the Hebe comic and Burns the straight.

At present they open with a chink number ("Mandarin") slightly making up by turning their heads, but thereafter and in straight attire, with dialect by neither, doing the straight and parody thing. They have been in the picture house for some time and are favorably regarded there because they are giving good, clean entertainment, all new for picture stages.

JOHN BOWERS and MARGUERITE De La MOTTE (5)
"Dear Doctor" (Comedy)
20 Mins.; Full (Special)
Orpheum, Los Angeles (St. V.)

This screen couple, married in real life, venture out in vaudeville paired in domestic troubles. Phases of "hokum" are incidental in this sketch, yet perpetrated in some ways to elicit snickers.

John Bowers has done quite a bit of screen playing as a leading man. To the naked eye and ear he is something else again. Appears too flustered and not altogether sure of himself in spots where it counts.

Marguerite De La Motte is visibly charming and has a stage edge on her hubby. Her diction is audibly precise and she handles some of the more emotional passages without overdoing.

Theme, credited to Howard Emmett Rogers, won't startle for originality. It has the Doc playing monkey business around his office instead of doctoring. His better half is wise to what's going on and schemes to straighten things out. She frames with a dame through the aid of latter's hubby and, as usual.

May get by in cities where these screen names mean anything.

LONGTON, KENNY and CO. (5)
Dance Revue
15 Mins.; One and Full (Special)
Academy of Music (V-P).

Names carded are evidently the mixed dancing team, who have augmented themselves with a couple of dancing boys and another dancer doing an "old boy." The act clicks for a routine dancing flash and is lavishly mounted.

Mixed team's best effort is a waltz with adagio trimmings. The girl also does an acceptable toe dance that gets over. The male duo project acrobatic and buck, contributed when the "name" members are changing. The other member brought on in opener as "Grandpa" and made up to look the part unleases a legmania dance neatly planted.

RAE SAMUELS
Songs
10 Mins.; Full Stage
Chicago (Pcts), Chicago

Rae Samuels made her first picture house appearance at the Chicago, headlining a stage band unit and knocking 'em wide-eyed in her favorite city. She's a class name for picture houses.

Appearing last of the acts with the Jules Buffano stage band, Miss Samuels brought out her own girl pianist and did five special or new light ditties in 10 minutes. All numbers had a strong element of comedy and went over big with the racy Samuels delivery. Chicago isn't accustomed to the wise type of delivery, showing a distinct dislike for the patronizing eastern manner which usually accompanies, but they ate it up as presented by this warbler, who is a strong local fad.

Miss Samuels is playing three weeks in picutre houses—Chicago, Tivoli and Uptown. But that billing! And that salary! It's bound to educate.

MILDRED CREWE GIRLS (6)
Dance Revue
14 Mins.; Full
State (VP)

Principal dancer doing mostly legmania and Russian routines, surrounded with half dozen girls, one an acrobatic contortionist-stepper, two harmonizing singers and the rest coryphees for ensembles and filling in with specialty material.

Act runs to the art flash in costuming starting and finishing with girls all in elaborate crinoline dresses of a musical comedy class. Some neat ensemble numbers are shown, such as artists' easel with girls' heads showing through, and the dressing of the principal is rich and elaborate, although she does not stand out sensationally as a dancer. Just a pretty, young girl, with charm and grace, surrounded by a well-coached group of assistants.

For the finish four of the girls go into a Tiller unison routine, with Miss Crewe working in the centre. Faultlessly done and sure fire for getaway applause. Rush.

SAMMY WILLIAMS
Organist
10 Mins.; Pit
Regal, Chicago.

Sammy Williams is a colored organist, working in the newly opened Regal theatre, which caters exclusively to Chicago's heavy colored quota. He is a natural for the theatre.

Opening week Williams worked with song slides, comparing the old-time stuff to popular tunes. In his manipulation of the manuals and footboards he displayed a thorough knowledge of his instrument, especially in its adaptability to modern handling. His jazz is hot and cleancut, fumbled not a bit in its rhythm, and for this house that's a flying start.

Williams later encouraged community singing, but in too mild a manner to get sizable returns. It takes more than he gave to awaken response in a house.

MOONLIGHT FANTASY (7)
Revue
14 Mins.; Three
American Roof (V-P)

Recommends itself as a suitable offering in the early part of the program because of brevity and smooth, swift action.

Four of the seven people are mixed vocalists, singing in costume and doing well with classical interpretations. A pair of hoofers, with acrobatic and eccentric numbers, also pleased.

Seventh member, George Stebenesco, gets over with a wind instrument described as similar to the Pipes of Pan, set of hollow wooden tubes. On account of appearance, Stebenesco affects a tramp version of Robin Hood makeup. He drew laughs. Closed to strong returns. Spotted fourth in an eight-act bill here. Mori.

SCOTT BROS. and VERNON
Comedy and Songs
12 Mins.; One and Two (Special)
American (V-P)

Three men. Open in "one" with talk that leads them into "two," where a speakeasy provides some comedy by-play that was not only well worked up for a bunch of laughs, but also had the trio doing some barbershop chords on sweet Adeline as stews might do it. Here several "bits" are employed that are new, but are laughable, especially the clowning of the tallest of the trio.

For the finish the men go into more close harmony. This in fact stopped the show. They also used stringed instruments that helped. Mark.

"THE AMERICAN GIRL" (10)
Revue
24 Mins.; One and Full (Special)
81st St. (V-P).

No inkling as to who produced. Carries the sub-billing, "an aeronautical fantasy," but its relationship to the subject or theme of aviation is negligible, being confined to a few bad gags by the juvenile and soubrette while flying in "two." Straightaway dance revue with vocalizing and talk purely incidental. Dressed and mounted well and with high-stepping talent the act should prosper on its merits.

Joan Page and Billy Taft work together and individually. The Slate Brothers never separate. Six chorines constitute the background. Miss Page does toe work, also other kinds, and sings for neat impression. Taft is every inch the juvenile. With a little more substance and plus his acrobatic dancing, this lad would be a bet for musical comedy. The Slate Bros. are crack precision steppers and big league material.

Act has speed as is and with ragged edges fixed up will make a neat number. Land.

LEDOVA and Co. (6)
Dances and Music
19 Mins.; Full Stage (Special)
Coliseum (V-P)

Ledova is not a newcomer to vaudeville but is a clever danseuse and each year brings a new act. Her present turn appears about the most promising she has yet presented, Ledova standing out in her individualistic style of dancing.

She is graceful, skillful and artistic and everything she does she does neatly and impressionably.

There is the musical background that the artiste has always carried and a quartette of male voices heard to good advantage.

An effective phase of the new offering is the use of two grand pianos, played by men. The pianos are also used in accompanying Ledova and the idea as presented here should prove just as attractive in picture houses.

Not great but supplied sufficiently with music and dancing entertainment to stand up. Mark.

DARRELL and ROBINSON
Songs and Talk
10 Mins.; One
American (V-P)

Familiar type of man and woman comedy act. Gal with the thin shape who kids her slimness all the way and pulls usual gag about falling down and being half way home; man usually either a boob or collegiate. The woman works hard. Humor approaches the "blue." Some of the lines are pretty broad.

The opening with the woman doing the mother of the man dressed as a kid, the latter in accentuated get up. A sample of the chatter, the woman says, "Your father was a railway engineer and you're the first wreck"; and, "We don't have to pull the shades down, we're married now."

A rough, hokey turn for the most part, the woman carrying the talk all the way. There is a song or two, inconsequential.

For broad-minded clientele Darrell and Robinson fill the bill, but otherwise not so good. Mark.

LUCILLE BENSTEAD
Soprano
12 Mins.; One
American (V-P)

Lots of voice, plus diction and poise, makes Lucille Benstead stand out as a straight high range singing single. She should get any audience with the sustained quality of a rich, melodious voice.

A popular ballad is the nearest Miss Benstead comes to lightness, but on showing at the American so far as the present is concerned, there is no necessity for change or modification of material. She concludes with a negro lament, rather long but effective nevertheless. Land.

RATHBURN TRIO
Saxophonists
10 Mins.; Full (Spec)
American (V-P)

Looks like two generations of one family with the offspring, Vernon, featured and plugged as a virtuoso on the sax.

Turn opens black with skeleton effect from luminous paint. Woman at piano for boy's soloing. Other male member toots an over-size bass sax, doing the conventional "Many Brave Hearts Are Asleep in the Deep."

Men in white tuxes for finish. Nice act all the way figuring it for the spot it held, opening. Land.

LEXINGTON

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 16.

Here's the class picture house of America, Marcus Loew's pet, the Lexington, on the avenue of that name at 50th street. It has an odd record second to none among the theatres of New York. It's still making history for itself, the Loew circuit and the picture business.

Located in the fast-developing east side social center, the Lexington draws from Fifth and Park avenues and the 50's and 60's, east, until this picture house with its 50c. top can allege a higher average clientele of hi' 'ats and social lights than any other film palace of New York, and more so than any other picture theatre in any other city could gather.

A smoking balcony is one of the chief draws, but that is not the single reason. Perhaps the real cause of the Lexington catching the debs and their boy friends with paps and mams is that New York has no music hall, no place to go after 8.45 without breaking into continuity at a theatre, other than the film palaces. And the yawners from Park don't stand in line for anyone or show.

At around 8.45 in the Park avenue restaurants, where one party's check is the overhead for the week, they commence ordering coffee and wondering how to kill the evening. Or the downtown heavy sticking home for the evening, to keep it from growing unpleasant suggests the Lexington, as there's no use going to the opera without a crowd.

At one time the Plaza, at Madison avenue and 58th street, had a monopoly on the white and low fronts. That's where the fad started. It has drawn more of the ultras to pictures than any other single thing. In part, perhaps, the bankers got the first idea there, figuring that if 5th and 3d avenue could mix so easily for the one gate, it must be the same for Michigan and Halstead in Chicago, and likewise in other growing commonwealths.

Not only has the Lexington pulled away from the Plaza, but it cleaned the best from Proctor's 58th Street, until Mr. Proctor, left with the riff raff that only his wobbly policy could pull, has decided to close and rebuild, meaning he will rebuild his theatre but not so certain about rebuilding policy or patronage. There's more in this than the mere passing of Proctor's 58th Street; it takes in Proctor's 86th and several other things.

Erected as an opera house for the arty singers and their followings by Oscar Hammerstein, they called Oscar as crazy for this as they did when he built the present New York theatre, losing $950,000 of his own money in it when finding he could not pay the interest on the mortgage. And neither can Oscar know that his New York today is worth $8,000,000 or more or that his Lexington is in the middle of a section that he picked for grand opera. Of all the natural instinct of a theatre site locater the world over, nothing has been more certain than this selection by Oscar Hammerstein. It equals his foresight of Broadway and 45th, and even his foresight of 42d street, between Broadway and 8th avenue. In fact, Oscar Hammerstein, unfortunately, had little more than foresight, too much so—years and years ahead.

The Lexington stumbled along, flopping so steadily anything was a flop there before opening, until Marcus Loew took it over. At the outset the Lexington was one of the biggest flops the Loew circuit ever acquired. Then it turned, until today it's doing the classiest picture house trade of any pop house, playing to about near capacity every night, and is one of the handsomest theatres in New York, outside and in and a big money number. More cars drive up to it nightly than any other pop film house in New York.

Exceptional for a picture theatre nowadays, it has two long rows of boxes on either side, with upper boxes cut off, all originally intended for the lorgnets. Although side boxes are the undesirables in film places, these boxes are filled nightly. On the stage, the screen looks smaller than the regulation, this through its mounting and the side marble columns, giving a palace appearance. A quiet dignity prevails upstairs and down, the audience is extremely well garbed and the girl ushers speak low-like. A long, deep lobby, of taste in design, with marble staircases running to the balcony, is immediately attractive, and can hold 1,000 standouts.

Loew's has been operating the Lexington for some years. It plays a triple split straight picture policy only, and tonight had "Wickedness Preferred," an M-G-M, sandwiched in between "Divine Woman" for the first half, and "Student Prince" for 18-20. It's taking a chance, trying to slip in one of the Metro's hideways like "Wickness Preferred" into an elite house such as the Lexington. That theatre must be catching new business all of the time and a ridiculous feature like this one will never make a new customer.

Other items on the program had shorts and a news reel, with A. Hults putting over an applauded organ solo. Nice organist, Mr. Hults. A full size orchestra opened the performance. A Pathe Review gave various scenes, each detached in sequence, but joined on the reel, concluding with a continued animal picture.

News reel held five Fox's and five M-G-M's, suggesting Manager McMahon is editing his news film, and to good effect, although M-G-M's "educated pony" plugging M-G-M by spelling out the initials from a line of letter cards, looked awkward and not newsreely for these days. Also a direct plug for Hoover, through a pictured sketch of his career by an M-G-M series of views. As one of these had Hoover standing alongside of Will Hays, with Hays' name on the caption, that might bear watching, though here, for a prominent candidate to be film recorded for general information is innocent enough at this early stage.

A comedy short was an Our Gang, "Dog Heaven," one of Hal Roach's novel laugh makers, with "Amazing Lovers," an assembly short, on scientific lines and particularly harping upon the slow life of a snail. To students and morons, quite interesting, especially the fact that the snail can go longer than the camel without water and much longer than a nite club hostess without eating.

For 50c., considering everything and the social end, also atmosphere, one of New York's biggest show bargains.

PARAMOUNT

(NEW YORK)

("Taka Chance"—unit)

New York, Feb. 18.

A routine specialty-stage band show, saved by two strong comedy acts, but both familiar to the Times Square fans. Production credited to Frank Cambria is rather indefinitely so so. Presentation as well as film is offered "blind" and "Taka Chance" Week, value of which is questionable. It had its origin in Chicago long ago.

No feature or screen name billed. Marquee simply features the "Taka Chance" "teaser," easily misconstrued as a film title and which doesn't mean a thing. Idea is carried through on the program, where only billing of feature is:

"(four letter word meaning affection)"
"and"
"(five letter word meaning 'Find Out')" construed "Love and Learn," Paramount comedy, starring Esther Ralston.

Same style is followed in programing the presentation. Twelve Felicia Lowell girls are described merely as "Twelve Exclamation Points ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! !"; "A Couple of Dashes" means the Moore Sisters, who seem to be pinch hitting in this week for a master of ceremonies.

Bernardo De Pace is captioned as "The Mesmerist of Melody" and the Three Ritz Brothers merely as "Three Reasons for the Success of 'Taka Chance Week'."

There isn't a name on the program except Jesse Crawford. They don't even reveal the identity of the stage band leader, who is introduced by the Moore Girls as Mr. Talbot and his boys, although the leader from mid-way of the house looked unfamiliar.

At any event he confined himself strictly to leading the band and contributed nothing to the running of the show otherwise.

The showmanship of this blind device in a big Broadway house like the Paramount is debatable. If the names of the specialty people are worth anything, and certainly both De Pace and the Ritz Boys have played hereabouts enough to have earned some public good will, why discard that asset, unless the house wants to test its fixed and arbitrary clientele regardless of offering, or wants to set up the idea in the public mind that the institution itself is a guarantee of an enjoyable entertainment. If that's what they're aiming at, it may be a shrewd move. But it seems just a masked attempt to excite box office curiosity.

Moore Sisters introduce each turn, also doing their own specialty of harmonizing and dancing. They use the catch line "We Thank You," employed by the Ritz boys for comedy later. Charles Jolley and Kathryn Irwin are the vocal soloists with the girls and together for a rather florid illustrated song number. Their ensemble number is another of those "under sea" effects, with the lights dimmed and the dancing corps working in semi-derk behind painted scrim, a style of spectacular production that contributes nothing to the speed or cheerfulness of a presentation.

Both De Pace and the Ritzes were riots in their specialties, but the finale, a wedding ensemble done in colorful style, left them rather cold. Band number offered as an interlude in presentation was good jazz, but without playing up seemed a perfunctory performance.

Probably Jesse Crawford's session at the console fitted best of all in the "Taka Chance" program. Explaining on a slide that since it was a week for taking risks, he'd do three numbers that were entirely new. Followed in order ballad, pop number, and another straight number as a waltz clog and then disguised as an Oriental fantasy. All novelty.

Rush.

TIVOLI

(CHICAGO)

("Rainbows")

Chicago, Feb. 13.

The number of stage band units produced in the East not sufficing for the Publix-Loew circuit, additional units are being regularly produced in Chicago, and elsewhere at intervals, to fit into the Publix mid-Western and Southern route. "Rainbows," produced in Indianapolis by Boris Petroff and opening there, has played the Chicago, Uptown and Tivoli here.

These units are constructed to be presented with the permanent local orchestra in each house. The unit comes in complete, with a program already mapped out for the local master of ceremonies and including even his talk. Band numbers with scores are furnished, consequently a minimum in rehearsal is needed.

"Rainbows" is a representative stage band unit, with more snap in routine and probably a better grade of talent than is found in individually produced presentations. As presented with the Frankie Masters band at the Tivoli it runs 41 minutes. Scenery is very simple, but the final blowoff, consisting of an orchestra terrace and a painted landscape backdrop.

Upon entrance Masters immediately introduced the Petroff ballet of 10 femmes, working a regulation and unanimous kick routine in bluebird costume. Helen Kennedy, pop singer with a flair for light humor, followed with two numbers, and set the program off hot by being called back for a couple of encores. Her picture house capabilities are very favorable.

Lyndon and Farman kept up the high batting with a rough and punishing apache, reaching its high point when Miss Farman takes a long slide on her ear. This team has a set of postures that will draw laughs in any house. A combination of accordion and fiddle, played by Russell and Marconi, was liked here. An act of this sort would seem superfluous in a stage band presentation, but the boys refute that with results obtained. They wind up with a wooden soldier dance to their own accompaniment.

A band number was inserted here, one of those collegiate ditties calling for funny hats and nancy vocal chorus. It stood up well, with Masters warbling one of the choruses in a clear voice. Masters is one of the most distinct announcers in Chicago and also has appearance.

Affie Martyn, supple-bodied dancer, was a standout in a contortion routine before the ballet. Miss Martin does the customary tricks, but has additional talent in the speed of her work. It's unusual and just as impressive to see a dancer of this class work with pep rather than slowly and in apparent pain.

Paul Mall, closing, is rather novel as a blackface talking single in picture houses. He prelims for several minutes with some regular vaudeville gagging, and then tops it with a good line of mammy-like singing. The finale number a song about rainbows, was sung by Mall, the rest of the company appearing in a pretty rainbow-hued tableau with additional scenery revealed for the first time.

There should be no complaint on this unit, although the stage could be dressed more than it was at the Tivoli.

The solo organist, Eddie Hanson, had a patriotic medley using an actor made up as Lincoln at one point to deliver the Gettysburg address. Hanson encouraged community singing toward the end, but it was a futile effort because the house hadn't been worked up. Many organists have been noted making the same error of expecting a cold house to break out singing.

The patriotic idea was also applied to the overture, the pit orchestra being supported in a special arrangement of melodies by two vocal numbers on stage. The first was a solo in an Indian setting and the second a religious number presented by a chorus in Pilgrim costume.

"London After Midnight" (M-G), film feature; newsreel and "Down the Rhine," Will Rogers Pathegram, completed.

Business excellent, with a full main floor at 6.30 Monday night.

Loop.

LOEW'S STATE

(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

Breezy layout this week, mostly pronounced in flash, color and atmospheric. Fanchon and Marco, not having run out of ideas yet, spread the stage with eye-filling morsels, with production predominating over individual talent.

Eddie Peabody, who runs the affairs here when he's not too busy gathering strains from a banjo, is still traveling around the world. Paris is the stop-over this time. Settings were perfect and lighting effects brought out spots attracting attention. Tempo set for the opening was too fast, however, to maintain, and the pace necessarily had to let down later. Entire company except Peabody was on stage for the curtain, with song and dance, plenty of racket, and a lad named Wayne Bradford. This boy took falls and headspins the like of which is not an every-day occurrence in this part of the world. He didn't get a chance to step out by himself all through the show. Probably would have had the house down if he did. But he showed enough in the beginning to single him out from the horde and the audience would have liked to see more of him.

Peabody made a loud entrance and swung the band into a foxtrot with specialty arrangements, leading off with the fiddle himself. The number had too much brass and dispelled what melody there was to it, mostly caused by having the girls combine with instruments they knew nothing about.

For the first act Loretta Du Vol, flaxen-tressed maid with a blue note in her vocal organ, made an impression with "The Man I Loved." She followed with a French ditty, giving a play to Peabody, who utilized it for some mugging. The girl apparently knows her "parles vous" and can wear clothes.

Bee Starr, cyclonic aerial worker on a rope, evoked the mob to enthusiasm by pulling some fast, neat and effective stunts in the air. Her best bet was one-armed twirls which she kept up until count was lost. She came down to a ring of applause.

The show up to here was progressive and the idea looked like it would work out to a rousing finish. Peabody's banjo work would have come in great at this spot, but instead he fooled the customers by bringing out the fiddle again, and slowed things down considerably with "Thais." Though the classic was atmospheric in title, it failed to click. Peabody is a corking good banjoist and sure fire with that, while his virtuosity with the violin is not enough to merit consideration. Not convinced with the reception of his first fiddle number, Peabody came right back with the "Rosary," this time on an oversized guitar, using a male vocalist. With Peabody doing his stuff on the instrument the lyrics didn't mean a thing.

For his third consecutive specialty Peabody went to the banjo just enough to get the band started on a waltz and bringing the eight gals on in rhinestone outfits showing as much as possible. Unbilled and unannounced, an adagio team started with an Apache routine but switched to plastic work. The girl is petite, blonde and cute. Her partner handles her without effort.

"The Showdown" (Par), with George Bancroft, featured the screen portion, with M-G-M news reel as a filler.

At the organ Claude Reimer presented some straight fashion music for the flickers and took care of several solos before the stage show went on. Reimer splits his time at the organ with Harry Q. Mills, equally capable and efficient. They have been here for a stretch.

WISCONSIN

(MILWAUKEE)

Milwaukee, Feb. 17.

St. Valentine's Day gave Eddie Weisfeldt his hunch for "Valentine Vanities." While the hunch was good, the show was not up to the usual Wisconsin standard.

Catching the supper show to get the full benefit of the Wisconsin program revealed that the house runs several short subjects in addition to regular bill during the business lull. When the house is packed the shorts are cut.

Program opens with Koko cartoon comedy and slides into "Statue of Liberty," educational, which clicks. "Racing Mad," comedy, fills in during the supper and noon hours, followed by newsreel. Feature precedes newsreel and follow stage show for evening rush hour.

Stage show opens with orchestra back of lace curtain effect scrim. Billy Meyers, house vocalist, steps in "one" and sings a verse and chorus of song on Valentine. Scrim pulls during chorus and Eight English Rockets come down stairs on both sides of stage. Stage is set like huge valentine with golden gates on either side at top of stairs. Huge heart, lighted by smaller hearts in center and band just ahead of drop.

Ruth Pryor, toe dancer, follows chorus and does nice work, fading out for Dave Schooler, m of c, entrance. Schooler saunters on eating candy hearts from bag and throws a few candies mixed with wise cracks to the audience. Band next goes into "On a Night Like This," with Meyers back for chorus. Hughie Clark with songs and patter grabs sufficient, followed by chorus in "Tin Pan Parade" number. The chorus is well trained and the best bet of the show.

Keller Sisters and Lynch sing a few songs but fail to click heavily. Announced as "direct from Broadway," but Broadway is a long way from Milwaukee, and the locals don't care. Got a fair break.

"Orpheus Overture" next by band and two colored boys, billed "The Black Dots," got all of the thunder with a neat tap dancing turn. Nothing hot but good. "Dream Kisses," finale, with Meyers singing, chorus dancing and Pryor coming on for fade-out.

Show seems slow compared to others here without the usual fast numbers which Wisconsin fans expect. Not a bad show, though, all in all.

Israel.

CAPITOL

(NEW YORK)

("Gems"-unit)

New York, Feb. 19.

This week's bill is running overtime—138 minutes—at the Capitol, jamming up a bit, especially in the turn-over. "The Crowd," M-G-M feature, takes up 98 minutes; the presentation, "Gems," 35 minutes, and the remainder is pressed into the remaining 13 minutes, the latter taking in the trailer.

The orchestra opens as usual, and, as usual, the organ, with Henry B. Murtagh at it, closes. In between only is a news weekly, most of the M-G-M news views, but carrying a single Pathe, as though to impress what the many other shorts have done so far this season to the rooster. Nothing especial in the entire news reel.

"Gems" is a Mort Harris presentation production. Mr. Harris had but little to do other than routine the bill, excepting the finale. He really did something with that, making a brilliant glittering finish, with the girls elegantly costumed, framed in diamond boxes and forming a back drop, with three whirling forward and the entire company with the stage band before it. The Brooks Costume Co. did the dressing, and the program says Dolly Tree designed. Both are well worth mentioning.

"The Capitolians," the stage band of 25 under Walt Roesner's direction, is a large part of this week's bill. That band can play for the popular ear, and did, with Mr. Roesner using announcements phrased in verse. The rhyming may not receive much praise, for rhyming on the stage somehow never does, but here it fits in as different for once in a while, and Roesner has made each quite brief.

Roesner, billed as guest conductor and at the Capitol now for some weeks, is a distinct type as an m. c. His personality is most pleasant; he holds to an even tone and, though standing outside the spot when a performer is getting the light, he sways with the music and gets the tempo over in front, silently assisting the act and the show. He's a very nice combo of the class sort. That may be why the Capitol grade audiences like him so well.

Others in "Gems," the stage unit's title and a touring Publix-Loew show, are Ormonde's "Sparkling Gems," 12 dancing girls, who failed to accomplish much excepting on appearance through dressing. At the opening they were on the platform behind the band, put over there through the employment of a sectional open drop to first reveal legs, skirts, and then the full person as they exited. Later, in another number and in front of the band, the girls did not show off at all, this through not being properly lighted. In "one" they did not stand out, and whatever effect their dancing might have had was lost, for the band, in the same light, outnoticed them. In the finale, as mentioned, the girls were very useful.

David Rubinoff and Burns and Kissem had the show to themselves as far as applause was concerned. Rubinoff plays the violin, with the team doing comedy songs. Both are under New Acts, also Pauline Gaskin, a neat kicking dancer, given a hard spot to hold alone. The Three Dennis Sisters were on the pit raising platform, and did their harmonizing without an encore.

A stage show like this, of an average run in entertaining value and without a big name, probably costs $5,000. That goes for the stage bands, $2,000, with the stage bill of acts under $3,000. Not high for the Capitol.

"The Crowd" will divide opinion. It depends who sees it.

STATE

(BOSTON)

Boston, Feb. 21.

Flocked in to see the picture and came out boosting the show. It is so seldom that the Publix opposition in Boston slips over a really big stage unit that when the unexpected does happen, the audience goes goofy.

Billing also helped, as it explained that "Merry Go Round" cost $4.40 a seat in New York and Loew's State is offering it in a condensed version, together with a feature picture at a top evening scale of only 50 cents. The unit was big money for this house, carrying 21 people in the finale ensemble, but it will probably gross high enough to make it a cheap buy.

The feature picture is "Man, Woman and Sin," featuring John Gilbert and Jeanne Eagels. Most of the fans regarded it as a mystery picture. The mystery being how John Gilbert could look so differently from his normal Romeo screenings of his better known releases.

The unit ran so long that the only other film bit was single M-G-M News Reel and the only other feature was a song plug by Birge Peterson, who flopped from his usual success in setting his audience to sing. This Peterson is a heavy-handed organist who has built up a fairly respectable personal following by simplified and clearly-defined slide accompaniments played loudly enough for those who want to burst forth into sour song could do so unnoticed.

ROXY

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 19.

Strictly a routine show at the big movie parlor this week. Lincoln and Washington are both impersonated in prosaic tableaux that never get to first base, even with the hip-hip-hurray angle.

The main presentation is an "Indian Wedding Festival" that fills up the stage and little else. In every department so far as the stage was concerned it was an off week for Roxy. The screen fared somewhat better in having a breezy comedy, "A Girl in Every Port" (Fox).

"Il Guarany," familiar overture, was the opening number. A short flash of "Washington at Valley Forge" timed about 30 seconds. A negro prayer meeting in a barn with preaching and the singing of spirituals was overlong and of questionable propriety for a picture theatre. Still more negro singing and a trick scrim dissolving into a transparency to show Lincoln. Roxy obtained George A. Billings to play the emancipator. Billings officiated similarly some years ago for the Rockett Bros.'s production of the life of Lincoln.

Harold Van Duzee sang "Among My Souvenirs" in "one" and was followed by "The Old Master," a divertissement with five violins. Frederick Fradkin, a disc recording concert violinist played the master. Incidental toe work by Lillian Tonge was interpolated. This idea was prettily worked out, although incorporating nothing not done previously at Roxy's.

The Movietone section of the newsreel included a camera interview with Thomas Edison on his 81st birthday, a splashy wrestling match between an alligator and a citizen of Florida, and Major General Lejeune of the Marines. The general spoke of Nicaraugua but skirted the dangerous aspects of that ticklish political situation. His remarks were received in silence.

All in all the present layout at this temple of the cinema is not so fancy. Land.

LOEW'S MIDLAND

(KANSAS CITY)

Kansas City, Feb. 18.

"Steppin' High" was the stage presentation last week and announced as a Jack Partington production, for what reason is unknown, as the show consisted of four standard vaudeville acts, which, together with the Midland stage band and Jack Sidney's stinging, made good entertainment, and that's all. Opening overture from "The Chocolate Soldier," by orchestra, Carbonara conducting, nicely rendered and well received. The News was next, and then Arthur Hays, organist, using comedy verses and slides.

"I Told 'Em All About You" was the stage band's opener, and the gang jazzed it up nicely, but after the long overture and the organ number the response was not so strong.

Andrew and Louise Carr in for a routine of real clog dancing, and how those kids can put in the taps! Mrs. Carr, next, showed the youngsters how clog dancing was done 25 years ago, and stopped the show. A bit of double clogging by Mr. and Mrs. Carr followed, with the kids coming on for the finish. Jack Sidney sang sentimental pop and put it across. He then introduced Hinds and Leonard, a pair of California girl songsters, easy to gaze upon, and offer a neat little act.

Lew Fink followed with his "dizzy dance" routine, and could have done more, but left 'em applauding. Funny thing about this show. All acts took several bends, and consumed quite a bit of time in doing so, but did not come back.

The Kikutas Japs had the closing spot and offered a splendid exhibition of tumbling, juggling and acrobatics. Everything was snappy. For the finale the back drapes were drawn to show a stage full of revolving Japanese umbrellas, making a colorful flash. Show ran 50 minutes.

"Beau Sabreur" (Par.) feature. Hughes.

55th ST. PLAYHOUSE

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 17.

Formerly known as the 55th St. Cinema and recently acquired by Michael Mindlin, who also operates the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, the manner in which the opening program was flashed here Friday night indicates possibilities.

Though houses of this sort cannot find enough material to meet their requirements, Mindlin is in a better position to get pictures, on account of the connections he has built up, than those who operated this house previously.

In addition, the boys now operating this house have a knowledge of showmanship which should help greatly.

The most impressive change in the program is the kind of titles used in the shorts. Short, humorous, tummy-ticklers have replaced the inane, stupid efforts that characterized this house in the past.

Joseph Fleisler, formerly with Ufa, assisted by Samuel Barnett, may be credited with presenting the entertaining descriptions preceding the pictures. His version of "Para-Gold-News" gets more laughs than most two-reel comedies seen in recent times.

Fleisler, who manages the 5th Avenue Playhouse, has drawn up the whole program for this house. On the printed programs he advises the readers regarding the overture—"Don't try—you can't out-talk an organ." News in pictures, he promises, "Without baby parades, burning haystacks, battleship maneuvers and Col. Lin—no, we'll give him another chance."

While the feature flicker attraction, "The Trial of Donald Westhof," is far removed from popular production standards, it fills in nicely with the type of pictures needed in this house, and more of same should result favorably.

If this housc can ever be operated profitably these boys should be able to run it that way. They've demonstrated their ability on 5th avenue.

A split-week policy might be healthier here for the grosses. Mori.

BROADWAY

(PORTLAND, ORE.)

Portland, Ore., Feb. 18.

Great show in Fanchon and Marco's "Crinoline" idea. Settings and costumes gorgeous. As to entertainment value, Ollie Wallace and his orchestra take first honors. Wallace also obliges with an organ selection. Later he clowns with Helen Warner, comedienne, to register solidly.

Jan Rubini, violinist, 18 karat. Electrical effects prove asset to the versatile violinist and showman. Miss Warner, blues singer, put over pops in Tucker style. Forced to two encores.

Another applause getter was Jimmy Ray, hoofing. Wiggles his propellers like a windmill. Following Ray came Shirley and Page, mixed dance team, assisted by six San Francisco Beauties. House forced to five shows on Saturday owing to trade.

"West Point" (M-G) the film feature. Cohen.

STRAND

(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 18.

A light week over here, with the presentation curtailed to a brief prolog for "Shepherd of the Hills" (F. N.). Regular overture, newsreel and a couple of shorts filled out.

Prolog and a rural set for a quartet singing old familiars and joined by Margaret Schilling, who soloed the theme ditty, identified specially written with the same title as the main film. Wide stage ramp permitted about a dozen sheep to cross the stage, the entire set being behind a scrim, which allowed for the title flash as the lights dimmed.

House orchestra, now down to 26 pieces, did "Symphonette Spirituelle," according to program, but which turned out to be a popular number with a great orchestration. Good enough to swing around all the film houses and to be played without a note change. Strand bunch did well by it, if lacking the volume of the mammoth instrumentations. Nine minutes newsreel divided its time between as many clips evenly split by Pathe, Fox and International.

"On African Trail With Prince William of Sweden" and a Dave Fleischer cartoon were the shorts listed, neither of which showed before the first de luxe performance. Sid.

The Knickerbocker Grill, New York, has broadcast invitation cards bearing the individual name of the receiver and twice countersigned, with the inscription "So-and-So is cordially extended all courtesies by the management." Outside of a preference for position, it doesn't mean a thing, although reading like a courtesy pass, being intended for the press.

VAUDEVILLE REVIEWS

RIVERSIDE

(St. Vaude)

Looks like they're getting hep on Broadway and 96th. Even the cut to six bits in top hasn't worked out well. Empties are just as gaping.

Not a name to get excited about excepting Ethel Clayton-Ian Keith-Myles McCarthy, from the flickers, in a break-in sketch, and that no wow (New Acts). Splitting the honors is Will Oakland, local fav at his near-by Chateau. Shanley resistance of vaude forcing out one of its faithfuls into a foreign field, where Oakland had to win his spurs. Then, and only then, was Oakland welcomed back, and deservedly at a premium, probably tripling his figure as a cafe-radio star where he was content at one time to play along with K-A and accept more modest acknowledgment.

Oakland did a request program, his saccharine tenor clicking with the customers, who recognized him on his rep. Oakland is billed as "the king of the air."

Lottie Atherton opened as scheduled, followed by Bob and Margie Du Pont, meriting the deuce with their comedy juggling, chiefly on the comedy qualification. The Du Ponts were formerly a straight juggling opener.

The Hamilton (Pearl and Violet) and Fordyce (Jessie) did a hybrid "Playtime" turn which does not bring out the possibilities the girls suggest. One does a light tan a la Topsy and Eva.

Hal Chamberlain and Vivian Earle were switched to No. 4 from reopening intermission. Their stuff has been embellished with Edwynning nut inventions. The sure-fire parody medley took them off big.

Paul Yocan reopened with a dance revue, not particularly punchy, but all right for the family trade. Evelyn Saether, Naomi Winter and Joseph Cooney are in support, the program's elaborate sequence of their terpsichorean numbers being more ambitious in its pretentiousness than the actual worth.

Jack "Rube" Clifford, with Mary Ludwig opposite his bucolic sheriff characterization, fared well with their comedy. Miss Ludwig seems a recent acquisition, and is an adequate foil.

Will Oakland, plugging his songs, his cafes and himself, and then Claude and Lucille Fandaw, closing to an impatient audience.

Hush, this Riverside, don't you cry; you'll be a pop house bye and bye! Maybe some good acts and a feature you'll try, then maybe the customers may buy and buy. Abel.

81ST. ST.

(Vaude-Pcts)

Neighbors were out in full strength Monday night giving the 81st Street the unusual spectacle of standees. The 5th Ave. also achieved standees recently, which might lead to an easy surmise that the vaude houses are coming back. Both the 5th Ave. and the 81st St. are on Broadway. But so is the Riverside.

Yong Kee Troupe (New Acts) in a "demonstration of Japanese agility" opened the bill. Japan must have courses in its schools to teach young men how to spin plates and drink upside down.

The Dales are billed with four question marks following their name. Just what the mystery element is supposed to do, you guess. Perhaps K-A figures ? ? ? ? displayed in front of a theatre will create a maddening curiosity. At theatre plays reviewers traditionally refrain from divulging whose hand stabbed the eccentric millionaire. There seems, however, no reason why this reviewer should not tear the mask off "The Dales" and reveal them as a male quartet.

They did little for the show and were dismal at the finish when trying to build up one of those w. k. whirlwind getaways that are popularly supposed to square everything.

Jesse Block and Eve Sully, with their peculiar hodge-podge of good and bad material, bright interludes and banal moments, came through okay and left the customers set for the rest of the talent.

"The American Girl" (New Acts) is the title of "an aeronautical fantasy" that will be a nice flash when more dates are under the belt. Its running at present is marred by periodic manifestations of doubt as to what comes next. Characteristic of the performance given Monday night was Billy Taft's telling the answer to a gag before he told the gag.

Joe Frisco was as sure as the national anthem. He is using mostly familiar stuff, getting by his dance with a minimum of introductory matter and into more dancing at frequent intervals thereafter. The uptown mob got the gag about the cigarette lighter which Frisco tosses away in disgust when it lights the first time. Some of the citizens of this diversified metropolis have seen stoney silent at that piece of biz. One thing about this celeb. He lets 'em lay where they flop. Burt Shephard, "The Whip King," closed with Frisco's customary kibbitzing thercin. "The Chinese Parrot" (U) on the screen. Land.

STATE

(Vaude-Pcts)

It would be interesting to examine the process of assembling this bill for the insight it would give into the designs of bookers. For instance, did they first set Van and Schenck and then arrange the program around them? Or did the frameup just happen?

A six-act bill has four two-man acts, one mixed duo and a flash girl dance revue, which closes. Nearly all the men depend upon straight talking with the exception of Van and Schenck, and except for the revue item there are only two women and practically no dancing, and very little singing. An unusually heavy portion of talking entertainment in the State doesn't register so well as a rule.

On form it doesn't look good, but such is the contrariness of vaudeville that it works out fairly well. Certainly the Monday night performance revealed a remarkable disposition on the part of the customers to respond with applause. Practically all turns took bows, and plenty, without stretching it more than ordinarily. It must be that when the four bit customers find themselves in the surroundings of a bright and modern theatre, everything is rose colored.

Gaynor and Byron (New Acts) with nothing more elaborate than a two-man skating routine, give the bill an excellent start, principally by their sensational work and showmanly presentation. Ted and Al Waldman (used to be Ted and Shep) with their blackface bell boy routine backed up with the remarkable performance on the harmonica of Ted, did extremely well. Ted has acquired a style of vaudeville cross talk that gets comedy results. As the lazy smoke he works in casual unctuous style, making the fairly diverting gags seem funnier than they really are. The mouth-organ technique, including some of those musical pranks of changing the key when the auditer has his mouth employed to whistle, like Mike Bernard used to do at Pastor's on the piano.

Walton and Brandt, man and woman, brought on another session of conversational give and take, the man feeding and the woman handling the hot comeback suavely. She plays the feminine dumbbell without clowning it, and still gets her effects. More talk with Billy Kelly, Warren Jackson Company with the sketch, "Oh, May!" Here there was the development of comedy character and a situation to give a foundation to the talk, together with a nice special set. It held up remarkably well in spite of similarity of act with what had gone before. Also Kelly varied the routine with his smooth and easy dancing. In addition the woman of the act, Dolores Griffen by name, is a cute trick and enlivens the action. Neat sketch, played for a full score by this three-cornered combination.

Van and Schenck did 25 minutes of song cycle and left them asking for more, which seems about to cover the situation with respect to the headliner, except to add that there was a line at the box office by 6:45 Monday evening. On one of the coldest nights of the winter the house was well filled. It is probable that the film feature, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par.) had something to do with that, on its title. Mildred Crewe and Girls (New Acts) closed. Rush.

ACADEMY

(Vaude-Pcts)

Plenty of show at this downtown Fox ace, with several "names" and the line-up good enough for the Palace. Capacity before the show started Monday night.

The Fox line-ups at this house certainly has the Jefferson, K-A-O-booked, some paces east, winging.

Byron and Blake, colored male dancing duo, followed with some corking good stepping and the boys beating rhythmic tattoo on the rostrum throughout the act without let up. Three fast doubles and encoring with the "Soldier" tap dance to good getaway.

Morgan and Lake, mixed team with man doing nut comedy, also held their own with a combination of nut chatter, singing and dancing. Their hokum Shakespearian travesty was a little overplayed for the usual humorous wallop and could stand condensing. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Girard's girl ensemble of trained voices were melodic and class as usual. Act numbers 14 girls, backing Mrs. Girard as soloist. Girard operates from the pit, directing the choral numbers and also vocalizing occasionally. Over big.

Burt Gordon and Vera Kingston were a smash in next niche, with the downtowners eating up "ord's "Hebe" comedy. Miss Kingston's songs also got over with the duo clicking for one of the heavy hits.

Vincent Lopez and his Casa Lopez Orchestra, 16 in all, toplined, and cleaned up heavy with his instrumentation and specialties by several boys of the band. Spacing the instrumentals, Neil Golden clicked with a vocal "Four Walls." Lopez snapped into his piano solo and later sewed 'em up as show stopper with "Spirit of '76," with a reproduction of Paul Revere's ride in the background and rider on white steed galloping against treadmill. This red fire clean up had Lopez satisfied to stand on the finale without further encores, despite a number of recalls.

Florence Brady and Gilbert Wells panicked in next to shut. Miss Brady's hot numbers and dynamic delivery were a mop from the go. Wells accompanied on various instruments and also in spots. f the vocals. Mostly "blues" handled well by the team. Solid hit and no miss for anywhere.

Longton, Kenny and Co., five people dance flash closed (New Acts).

"Brass Knuckles" (W-B) screen feature. Edba.

BROADWAY

(Vaude-Pcts)

No name stood out. Looked as though the K-A-O bunch depended upon the picture, "Beau Sabreur" (Par) to be a boxoffice pulle.. While biz was a whole lot better than it has been on previous Monday nights, there was a hole in the lower part of the house that might have been filled had the vaude section presented its proper punch. Return of Charles McDonald as manager of the house has brought some noticeable changes for the better.

Show proved one thing, that a standard act, one of the old school, can always be depended upon. This was apparent when Ed and Tom Hickey knocked 'em over. The spot was right and the lineup ahead wasn't any too strong.

Three Nelsons opened, hoop juggling featuring. Frome four were second and got their best results on dancing. Turn still retains a ballad that cuts the act in two and makes the billing ridiculous. These boys need all the speed they can get. "Thank You, Doctor!" (New Acts) comedy act, involved too much idle talk for full strength. Fairly entertaining. Denis and Chabot (New Acts) combine music, a lot of noise, and were well received.

O'Hanlon and Zambuni did their singing and dancing with the Apache finish, helped by the band and three others. Still in good shape, and a hard-working, flashy turn.

After Ed and Tom Hickey mopped up show closed with Frances and Frank on rings. They feature teeth holds which first has the woman showing prodigeous strength with the molars and then the man holding the woman for a fast whirl trick. Short, snappy and effective.

AMERICAN ROOF

(Vaude-Pcts)

A pair of aces, aces of spades, caught and toyed with the imagination of a houseful of customers as if the whole mass were welded into one pliable, easily-pleased spectator. Astonishingly clever is this team of colored entertainers, Greenlee and Drayton, who recently returned from the continent. Besides unusual ability as vocalists, hoofers and eccentric comedians, the pair combine the rare quality of class with a knack for sciling it to mixed audiences.

Every line of business is delivered with sparkling clarity. The boys look high pressure in their well tailored Tuxedos and new gray felts. They start off with a brief Russian vocal number, switch to German, then to French and wind up with Yiddish. They score on all four not only because of correct pronunciation, but also through the fluency with which they mouth the numbers, leaving an impression that they are dialecticians, even though they may not know much more than the few ditties they use in the act.

They held the mob for 14 minutes without a break or slackening of routine, concluding with about four minutes of difficult, gruelling eccentric acrobatic hoofing. Some of which may be considered new and unusual. But, whether new or old, the results are unquestionable.

Preceding were Foster, Fagan and Cox, trio of songsters with novelty numbers. Some of which were pleasing while others failed to get over. All three are good vocalists and form a likeable combination for appearance and delivery as well.

Bert Lewis, soloing as a monologist in third, finished to heavy applause though act slowed up perceptibly several times where comedy material needs rejuvenating. Lewis is a good salesman and could advance himself immeasurably with a smarter line.

Following Lewis, Apache dancers in Braile and Pallo pulled through its trying periods, finally clinching with some smart body juggling that looks dangerous.

Dan Jarrett and Co. have an amusing 15-minute skit revolving round domestic relations of a newly married couple and the husband's friend whom the wife refuses to accept as a dinner guest.

In closing Bob and Lucy Gilette figure in strong acrobatic turn where Bob registers for legitimate returns on his comedy hoofing and the girl scores with intricate juggling manoeuvres.

Ellis & West (New Acts), two-spotted.

Feature film, "Buttons" (M-G-M), starring Jackie Coogan. Mark.

"FAILURE ISLAND"

won't, for their idea of improving the last supper, would be to add a cover charge.

They can do more things to a script than a monkey can to a banana, but Bill has his odds, for the execs are too busy to read anything but market reports. This puts it up to Willie to tell them the yarn, and I know you'll have a small wager on our Wilson any time he starts playing the con for a chump.

Willie psychologizes them perfectly, and brow beats them, just like they try to do with the ordinary hack. Willie knows that most of them are in on a rain check and that every night of their lives they get down on their knees and pray that they will never have to pass a literacy test. They sense that Willie knows this, and act accordingly. It's always better to have a piece of the racketeers play, than to kibitz on the uckersay.

I know by now that you're all hopped up and have developed a healthy yen to see this epic. You'll have to wait until we buy it, and then if you're a good boy, your favorite theatre may book it. Meanwhile my heart bleeds for you, back there in the cold and sleet, while I am basking in the sun and up to my knees in eye soothing janes. Which only goes to prove that their ain't no justice and night schools are a sinful waste of the taxpayer's puck.

Next week, "East Lynne."

Your old chef.

BURLESQUE REVIEWS

PRETTY BABIES

(Mutual—At Columbia)

Fox and Krause, Mutual wheel burlesque show, now on merged wheels and at Columbia, New York, this week (Feb. 18). Peggy Mayo starred, with Maurice Cash and Benny Platt featured. Program credit given to Gus Arnold for staging.

Other principals: Francine LaRocque, Bobbie Lavera, George Clark and Jack Baker, with 16 chorus girls. $1.65 top.

"Pretty Babies" revealed itself for the first time in New York last week at the Columbia, with the chances the house did $10,000 gross.

No extra attraction, and there's nothing in the show to warrant that gross, quite high for the Columbia this season. When the Columbia about three weeks ago stuck in an extra attraction it paid $1,800 and the show did not share. The extra act was liked and may have done a little business, but the following week the house did $400 more without an extra attraction, and last week had nothing added either, yet got ten.

So the Columbia must be building up on its old-time burlesque, as the Mutual exemplifies and the Columbia's runway. Chances are the runway is doing the most. A woman is almost a rarity now at night in the Columbia audience. Wednesday night with a capacity house and over $1,000 in, not 30 women in the theatre. That may cause no shouting, but it's better than grief.

That runway is a man-getter. It takes up about 30 seats, running over the front row and half-way up the orchestra's centre, cutting out two seats wide on the way. With the Mutual's scheme of burlesque to shake 'em up and do it bare, that's some tempting for the men around, besides the boys below and above.

This came out strongly when, in one of the runway numbers, the leader said she would allow two of the seven-eighths naked girls to do "The Varsity Drag," with the audience to select the winner. Being choristers, not much was expected and neither girl disappointed. But the second girl, Katie Sherman, was of the idea "The Varsity Drag" is danced from the waist up, so she won.

The first number on the runway was an undress affair. There's plenty of nakedness in this show, with principals and girls. The second runway number was covered up. It might be better to hold the undressing for as near the finals as possible, as everything in this show seems aimed to go as far as possible.

Principal women look very well, the show is costumed fairly for stock men from the northwest, and the Minneapolis idea is prevalent, or maybe this one is using most of the stuff that raised the fuss in Milwaukee. There's enough of it to start something anywhere.

Comedians are in-and-outers, with no material. Money changing all through, old-timers dug up, and the best bit, of course, is next to closing, the police station (but not "Irish Justice").

Maurice Cash as the Hebe appears to have some ability in the Joe Smith way, but nothing with which to show it off. His parody-on-straight singing a la Herb Ashley does big, because Cash takes an awful chance in one verse. Whoever wrote the lyrics must have been sitting on the radiator. His straight might hold down his voice. It can't sound any worse. Also the orchestra leader when pushing himself in had better glide over that top note stuff. It may say okay, but it's far from okay, even in a burlesque house, and he did three encores.

Forced encores here cut off about 20 minutes and an early closing hour, so that tells you the kind of a show it is, although it will please stag audiences. And the women it drives away from the theatres will never return.

Miss Mayo isn't sufficiently identified by prominent work, although starred. Starring may have come from her looks. That's one noticeable and commendable point about the women, they look good. And if that's the angle, it's not unwise in a performance where spice or dirt is the only seller.

At the Columbia "Pretty Babies" got the flat guarantee for that house under the merger rule of $2,000 for the week. In other places the guarantee is $1,690, with sharing terms over an amount that is seldom reached. With 23 people on the stage, staff and other expenses besides the probable profit held out by the producer for himself of $250 weekly, on $1,690 for the show's gross, you need not look for much talent, for talent with seven principals and 16 chorus girls isn't purchaseable in the show business nowadays for that money. Fox and Krause are fortunate they have been able to get lookers.

One credit for F. & K. on costuming. With all of the limits this show is under, it is nicely dressed, and the clothes look fresh, even at this time of the season, also remembering what little dressing often is on exhibit.

And the chorus girls can shake. How they must shake when allowed to go! It looks as if those things above are trained within their funny silken breastplates. On the runway, with so much flesh so near and bare, all aquivering, the men around must be happy that they are in a $1.50 house.

But you can see just as much and swung around just as loudly on the nite club floors of Times Square, where the couvert is $3 and the booze awful.

MIDNIGHT SHAMBLES

(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Feb. 15.

Quivering, shimmering, shivering flesh, female flesh! Occans of flesh!

Every Saturday Sidney Anschell's midnight show, the "Shambles," packs 'em in at the Star and Garter. Best seats are at $2.20, main floor $1.65 and the balcony at $1.10. Every seat was filled, and it was noticeable that a better class of people seem to be frequenting the midnight flesh flurries. A large number of women and girls attended with escorts, with most of the uproarious laughter coming from the women.

Show opened with an overture by an augmented orchestra—fair, considering the class. Topping the overture a tuxedoed man ascended the stage and engaged in a prolonged dissertation bearing upon the quality of "Shambles" as a new confection. It seems that "Shambles" sells at 25 cents, and that there is a prize in each and every package. The man next opened his and found a safety razor. After removing the blade for use with his own razor he gave the instrument to a sailor who sat next to him. The sailor liked the razor. The man liked the candy all the way through the show.

At Chicago burlesque the thing to do is to try and outsmoke your neighbor. To make that convenient a young woman dashes up and down the aisles selling smokes.

Coarse comedy is interpolated between sexy choruses and scotch specialties. Loud mouthed character small timers tell dirty yarns, and are rewarded with harsh laughter. After all, the audience wants to see the hip-waving. More and more of the hip is being shown.

A young chap by the name of Russell Trent did well as a juvenile. Frank Mallahan, a genial Irishman of weight and height, does a few characters okay. Sam Weston, leading comic, does his coarse bits well and exhibits ability in changes of make-up and costume. Mildred Steele, specialty dancer, does splits and novelties along the dance route that make her a charming attraction, unexpected in burlesque.

Included in the cast of the midnight show are 64 chorus girls, about 20 principals of varying importance, and two or three added players especially engaged for the performance. Gathered together in the finale they make quite an imposing aggregation.

The show, a burlesque, is hot. Plenty hot! Nice scenery, and a bewildering array of costumery make the "Midnight Shambles" a standout in its field. A battery of six back-wavers, who gradually diminish their attire, take care of the temperature.

The "bits" are changed every week, so the same patronage returns.

Big Banner Burlesquers

Jack Dickstein presents "Bennett's Big Banner Burlesquers," featuring Blossom La Velle. Staged by Ella Sears. Only full names spelled out on program are Ella Sears and Banner Girls, probably chorus. Bebe Brennan, Dona Fanstil, Lottie Burke, Blossom LaVelle and "Entire Company." At Columbia, New York, week Feb. 20. Mutual Wheel show. $1.50 top.

"Where do we go tonight?" says the Head of the House.

"To the Columbia, dear," I says.

"Listen, mutt," says she, in her nice, roughneck way, "don't think I'm a chump."

"What's the up-stage for?" says I.

"You know well enough," she barks, "every time you go out with me it's a hideaway and a bum show, while every other dame gets a break with you."

"Listen, crab," I says, and boiling, "don't call burlesque bum and stop lamming my ladifren dames."

"You my hat," says she, with her Central Park manners perfect, "I've been hep to you and now I'm squawking."

"Well, you either take what you get or air," says I. She knows that means home.

"That's it every time," she says. "You slip me a lousy table d'hote then try to start a racket to blow, but I'll go with you this time."

So we go, both with a grouch—the taxidriver was wise, too—to the Columbia and "Bennett's Big Banner Burlesquers."

The curtain hadn't been up over 10 minutes when she started.

"Is this a show?" she says.

"Sure, dear," I says, "a burlesque show."

"That 'dear' thing will never square this turkey," says she.

"Turkey!" says I, "don't say that. Wait awhile. This is a Mutual show."

"Mutual, Mutual?" she says. "What's mutual about it—who's the rottenest or is it a tie?"

"Sh," says I, "we came in on a pass."

"We did, did we?" she says. "Then I've still got something coming."

"You've got a bust in the nose if you don't stop that noise," says I, "because Mr. Herk may be listening."

"Mr. Herk!" she shouted, "where's that bird. I'd like to tell him something about his lousy show."

"Listen, dear," I says. "Mr. Herk doesn't own the show, he only stands for it."

"That doesn't make me stand for it," she says, "take me away from this place and to a joint where I can see performers."

"Please stop, darling," I says, "Mr. Herk is in Atlantic City."

"I wish him plenty," says the girl friend, and I could see she was sore, "if this is the kind of thing I've got to sit through because you can deadhead in."

"What's the matter with this show?" I says.

"What's the matter?" says she, "you blind stew, the matter is six principals and 16 chorus girls."

"But it's The Big Banner Burlesquers'," I says.

"Whatever you call it, dumbbell," she says, "it's still a turk."

"And I thought you were going to have such a nice time," says I.

"You'd better take me home, if you want to dodge a pinch," she says.

"As bad as that, dear?" I says, for the dame knows a show at that. "Can that dear," says she, "and take me away from this bust."

"Don't you want to wait until the next number?" says I, "it's on the runway."

"How far can a troupe like this run?" she says.

"From Brooklyn to Kansas City, for 38 weeks," I says, thinking that would get a laugh.

But she got up and walked out.

Following her, I says:

"Another word and the next time you go to the Palace."

"Pardon me," says she, "not another word."

HURTIG & SEAMON'S 2 NEW SUBWAY HOUSES

Building at Yonkers and Jamaica—Shuberts in—No Thought of Retiring

Disposing of a single theatre will not cause them to leave show business, say Hurtig & Semon, unless they receive equally tempting offers for the remainder of their holdings.

Among the remainder are three theatres H. & S. will build in Yonkers and Jamaica. One in each of the suburban towns will be on the subway legit circuit and the Shuberts are reported interested with the firm in them. The third house will also be in Jamaica, devoted to Mutual burlesque.

All of this came out through Variety printing last week that H. & S. might make a deal with the Minskys, for the latter to absorb the H. & S. 125th Street music hall. Even so, says Harry Semon, who admits anything is possible, the Hurtig & Semon name will never come down in Harlem.

Joe Hurtig, of the firm, referred to as "the late" last week, wants it on the record that the only time he ever did a Jimmywalker was when late Sunday for the pinochle game.

H. & S. now operate theatres (burlesque) in Dayton, Toledo and Grand Rapids, besides four shows on the Mutual wheel.

Yonkers looks like a fertile field for the subway, Harry Semon believes. Yonkerites claim it is the fifth city in size now in New York state at 130,000. They say it will be the third at the present ratio of increase by 1932, following only Buffalo after New York.

Yonkers seems to be becoming a live theatrical city after years of the Warburton and Proctor's.

Jamaica this season has been a bonanza for John Cort's new house there, which has been playing catch-as-catch-can legits.

MALE DETROITERS ARE WILD FOR STOCK BURLESQUE; 6 NOW

All on Grind With Midnight Shows—Newest Called "Girlesk" in 500-Seat House at 40c—Men Move from One to Other for Revealments

Detroit, Feb. 21.

"Girlesk" is the title tacked on the burley-q with which the Loop theatre opened last week. House is the fifth of its kind downtown and the sixth in Detroit. New and seats 500. Two stage changes and four screen changes weekly, at 40c, top.

This town has gone burlesque. The revealment places are running five and more a day with big turnover, and each trying to outdo the other. Not forgetting the midnight shows. And nobody forgetting anything.

One went in for brassierelcss posing, all announcing another and better specialty "dancer" for the coming week.

A little over 150 people employed as performers in stock burlesque in Detroit at the present moment.

No interference with the unveil and grind stuff yet.

It needs no master sleuth to detect 100 gents emerging from one house and going right on to the next.

Reformers Panned

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Two ministers in this town, the Revs. Bob Shuler and Gustav Brieglieb, were the object of a heated panning from Charles B. Hazelhurst, attorney for the defense in the "Hot Mama" burlesque show case. The attorney was appealing to Judge Carlos Hardy to reverse the conviction against Thomas Dalton and Robert Whalen, producers of the show at the Folies, who were given 150 days in jail and a $500 fine for presenting an indecent performance.

"Both these ministers are publicity seekers," Hazelhurst told the court. "They came in to see the show, bought the best tickets and sat as near the stage as possible, sticking to the finish, missing nothing and seeing everything.

"After the performance they made no complaint to the theatre officials but went to Rodney Webster, police commissioner, who had the show people placed under arrest."

Hazelhurst concluded by saying that the preachers were not honestly working for law enforcement but for publicity.

Shuler and Brieglieb were the principal witnesses in the sensational trial last December when Judge Fredericksen heard the case and a jury acquitted 27 chorus girls in the show.

Burlesquers Idle

There are more burlesque players at liberty in New York and Brooklyn than ever before, according to the old-timers of burlesque.

The condition became more acute when the Columbia merged with Mutual and closed some of its shows. Even the opening of a number of burlesque stocks didn't help much.

One agency has placed a number of the burlesquers with vaude acts. The burlesque condition is not expected to materially improve for this season, anyway.

Brooklyn Casino Sold; Office Bldg. on Site

After housing burlesque for 15 years at the Casino, Brooklyn, N. Y., operated by the Columbia circuit, has been sold to a New York syndicate by the Excelsior Amusement Company, of which George Rife, of Baltimore, is president.

They paid $600,000 for the property, and just what is to happen to the Casino now no one seems to know. Probably a large office building will spring up. The neighborhood is becoming mostly commercial, and the reason offered for selling is that the site is too valuable for a small burlesque house.

Izzy Weingarden Dead

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Izzy (Israel M.) Weingarden died Feb. 20 at his home in this city. Death was caused by double pneumonia.

Mr. Weingarden was preparing a stock burlesque show. He had been connected with burlesque for many years.

(An obituary notice will be printed on Izzy Weingarden in next week's Variety.)

JERMON'S NEW SHOW

The show, scheduled to open Feb. 27, has engaged as its principal men Charles LeVine, Al Allen and Dew and Stone.

"RANG TANG" AGAIN OUT

"Rang Tang," reorganized, started playing last week. Miller and Lyles are not with the show, and their former roles are taken by Roscoe Montella and Joe Sims.

Ford Dabney is musical director and has the Dabney band with him.

It is understood the show will play the colored houses for the present.

New S.-H. Sign Up

The Scribner & Herk Holding Company insignia has gone up on the former executive offices of the Columbia Amusement Company, in the Columbia building, New York. Columbia still holds several offices at the other side of the hall.

Sam S. Scribner is in Palm Beach, where he will remain for several weeks, while I. H. Herk has been spending several days in Atlantic City. Accounts of the remaining Columbia shows are still being taken care of by the Columbia auditors, while the Mutual accounts are being handled from the regular Mutual headquarters.

Minskys End Winter Garden

Minsky Brothers have relinquished their lease on the National Winter Garden, New York, after having operated stock burlesque at the downtown East Side stand for six years.

They have shifted the Winter Garden stock to the Grand Street.

Burlesque Changes

Eddie Lloyd and Helen Brundage, with "Lid Lifters" (Mutual).

Estelle Harer, ingenue, with Gayety stock, Philadelphia; Jack Mayes, technical director, with Issy Hurst's stock, Philadelphia; Bob Eugene, eccentric comic, with Gayety stock, Philadelphia, through Ike Weber's office.

Bob Travers, managing the Olympic, Cincinnati, during its Mutual show regime, is now handling the Walnut Street theatre there. Walnut has a straight picture policy.

Jeane Diemers has supplanted Gertrudc Foreman as soubret with "The Jazztime Revue," having joined the company this week.

Haymarket on Mutual

They also operate a show for the Mutual, putting a new one on this week at the same time the Haymarket opened as a burlesque house.

PITTSBURGH STOCK ENDED

The burlesque stock at the Gayety, Pittsburgh, operated by George Jaffee, who also has a Mutual Circuit show, closes Saturday.

Just what the house will play later has not yet been decided by the Herk & Scribner Holding Corp.

Hodges' Atlanta Stock

GRAY MATTER

By MOLLIE GRAY
(TOMMY GRAY'S SISTER)

Artistic Lingerie

Good show at the State starts with a friendly argument between the orchestra and the organ, as reliable as Lindy or the flag.

Miss Brant played dumb for Mr Walton and the reason her pale pink frock was buttoned all the way down the front became plain near the finish. She had rather artistic lingerie. Later she wore yellow velvet coat with collar and cuffs of chinchilla. Kelly and Jackson Co. have laughs, scenery, story and singing. Okay. The company was pretty in a full skirted lace trimmed frock, but lovely in one of dark blue net over light blue satin. Naturally, the net was ruffled over the skirt and a big bow on the left shoulder was not so usual. Silver slippers were worn with it.

Mildred Green's Girls are dancers who sing occasionally. Many changes of costume kept them busy and fooled the audience once into thinking it the finish. They opened in pretty taffeta frocks with lace panels in the skirt fronts and flowers scattered here and there. When two of the girls harmonized their robes de style were of satin one blue, the other coral), and each trimmed with one large and several smaller bows of the other's color. The dress parade that deceived the audience had the girls in fancy costumes of different colors, all helping to fill the stage with material. They finished as artists, dressed that is, the girls in purple and blue with Miss Greene in light beige satin decorated with painted flowers.

«Pipes at Columbia

Peggy Mayo was the prettiest of the Columbia's "Pretty Babies" until she opened her mouth. Costumes of the girls were probably the mistakes of several costumers, no one house could make so many. Theatre will have to provide fireplaces and slippers now that the men are bringing their pipes.

Isabelle Van is joshing either the Columbia audience or Anita Loos. She stages a contest between a blonde and a brunette member of her "rosebuds." Isabelle's eye-filling costume was of white net, form fitting, long sleeved, trimmed even to the train with spangles and tiny mirrors and topped by an elaborate headdress of rhinestones and white peacock feathers.

A black net gown of Miss Mayo's was prettily beaded and had a hem of black and white ostrich. Diamond buckles and heels on black slippers completed the costume. Francine Laroque's silk frock was embroidered in a darker shade of pink and the skirt flared at the sides. Yellow and black lace dresses, which the girls wore for the same number, came nearest to being worth a look.

A Lincoln Departure

Roxy's memorial to Lincoln was thoughtfully and tastefully presented. George Billins did not recite the Gettysburg address, just a few lines from the Emancipation Proclamation, a radical departure.

"A Study in Black and White" started with a bottle of ink and a quill and a short song by Lillian La Tonge. Then a white set with a scene in back that could have been an etching, and a variety of black patent leather costumes trimmed with white. Gamby wore white with only piping of black and a narrow black ribbon around her white wig. This was surely a study that nobody could flunk, but Rothafel's famous stepdaughters, the Roxyettes, came nearest the top.

Dancers in the "cabaret" wore snappy red and white satin costumes and high hats in one group, others in metallic lace skirts had bodices trimmed with small mirrors that reflected on the gold fan shaped screen back of them as well as the audience. This cabaret didn't seem to be doing as much business as others the Roxy has presented.

Capitol's Strand Idea

Capitol's stage presentation, "The Fast Mail," was, elaborately gold mounted, a magnified version of the Strand's Postcard Series.

The first foreign arrivals were the Foster Girls, musically announced from England, and wearing a Broadway adaptation of the Eton suit. Their finish with the red and green lanterns was clever and well done. The drop for a group of love letters was just two motor hearts arrow pierced. It must have been a German who put that face on King Albert on the Belgian stamp.

Myrtle Gordon wore a flowered black shawl over her black gown that was bead fringed in an unusual way. It was brought diagonally across the bodice back and front from the right shoulder to the left hip and continued down the skirt and around the hem. Bead tassels on narrow black ribbon hung from the right shoulder to below the skirt. The Foster Girls appeared again as Roman gladiators in gorgeous scarlet and gold costumes and to prove that some metal could touch their gold shields they crossed swords and struck the shields at the proper beat of the music. They finished in fluffy white frocks with big red and blue bows at the hips and smaller ones on the hats.

"Crowd's" Angles

Capitol's orchestra are wearing red ribbons across the white open spaces this week, maybe in honor of the world premier of "The Crowd." As a picture it's entitled to a lot of ceremony, but not the kind that box offices grow fat on. Movie audiences don't usually consider anything like symbolism a big treat, unless it is marked "imported." It must be some of the old country that's left in most Americans. "The Crowd" has camera angles, still, it won't be shown here next week.

James Murray and Eleanor Boardman are very fine and considering James' history, audiences should be more respectful to picture house attendants. Eleanor had many frocks in her varied career, one with the ends of the scarf collar split and making a double knot. Another of black satin with diagonally closed bodice and only the front flare of the skirt pleated. Her jersey dress was odd, too, using light and dark shades in big blocks on the bodice, but the skirt of a light color with dark edge.

Lots of Jewelry

Capitol's stage presentation, "Gems," was properly set in black and gold and ropes of pearls. Pauline Gaskin, dancer, shone in a blue frock with its full skirt trimmed with tiny lace ruffles that started narrow at the waist and broadened toward the hem where they made a band all around. The Three Dennis Sisters harmonized perfectly in frocks of lustrous satin covered with black net that made wide flounces on the skirt. Each had a large bow of the satin in front at the waist line, the colors being pale shades of blue, pink and orchid. Ormonde's Sparkling Gems were well named, especially so in costumes of deep blue, the short skirts of which were covered with bows of varicolored metalic ribbon. They wore tri-cornered blue hats bound with silver and dripping yellow plumes in back.

Finale glittered. Jeweled pendants, revolving girl-filled contrivances and a curtain of more girls. David Rubinoff's violin was the most popular gem, and the most genuine.

Rain in California

"Sporting Goods" must have come from the notion counter at Woolworth's. The story had more holes in it than the sidewalks of New York. A poker game gave the men a laugh that should last them through the income tax period.

Gertrude Olmstead's black net gown with long tight sleeves and ruffled skirt was very becoming and her sport costume, too. Of dark jersey, the sweater was diagonally striped and the plain skirt's box pleats sewed half their length. A square silk scarf was tied at one side. Her suit of printed material was smart, and of course a silver fox scarf didn't detract from it.

Myrtle Stedman had cause for legal action in one scene, but otherwise she appeared her usual well-dressed self. What an intrepid director to put a rainstorm in a California picture. He's probably had his seed privilege taken away by his Congressman by now.

Beautiful and Damp

The floodgates are down at the Gaiety. No disk records or sheet music being sold in the lobby after the performance, but an assortment of dry handkerchiefs would be an accommodation. Number of men in the audience is surprising. They come in groups as well as alone, so they aren't being dragged in by their womenfolk.

"Four Sons" is beautiful and damp. When Margaret Mann walked down the isle after the picture she received heavy applause, and deserved it. Hers is a perfect performance. And the quaint old village is a delight too.

June Collyer's charm probably helped considerably in raising the delicatessen to a self service salon with crystal chandeliers. Her business frock was of black satin with a narrow white band on the high neck and white buttons down the front of the bodice. Ermine collared black velvet coat and hat were becoming, too.

"Four Sons" deserves its shower of praise, but a practical person might wonder how "Mother Bernle" gets off Ellis Island, not being Erle or Lindy.

A Standout Youngster

The year may be young and June La Verne, too, but she has earned herself a prominent position among the baby stars in "That's My Daddy." She has a more expressive face than some of the screen sirens who have been experimenting with theirs a good deal longer. Four thousand of our best heroines could fall off twice as many yachts without causing a flicker of a program, but when Jane fell it created more excitement than the subway fare raise.

Barbara Kent was pretty in an all gray costume. Lillian Rich looks better in dark clothes. Her black satin frock had a crushed collar and elbow length cuffs of ermine and a narrow band of the same down the center of the skirt. She was married in a light satin frock over which a short lace coat was worn, her hat being small and transparent, flower trimmed on the right side. Reg Denny adopted Jane, and the Roxy adopted "That's My Baby" by a unanimous vote.

Tom Santchi Heroic

Of all the disturbing things for a director to do—make Tom Santchi a hero when he has always been a treacherous, villainous bully. How could anyone believe it wasn't a deep laid scheme when he was so sweet to Gladys Brockwell? But even children cried when he was convicted, so it must have been real.

"The Law and the Man," there they stood with Gladys the district attorney who could either bring them together or separate them. She did both but it took three trials to get the guilty man, then she sentenced the innocent one to life, with her.

A real reward for virtue because Gladys has a very smart haircut that gives an unobstructed view of a fine profile and looked stunning in a black velvet street dress trimmed with monkey fur.

The players made "The Law and the Man" more interesting than it deserved to be. Florence Turner's long experience made a small part count.

"Cohens-Kellys" Laughs

It didn't seem possible that another argument between the two most famous "ishes" could make Broadway again laugh, yet "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" did that and unmistakably.

Vera Gordon and Kate Price must engage a surveyor when contemplating a new wardrobe, and if the people who head their gowns are paid by the quantity of beads used they have probably all retired after completing the costumes for this picture. Both of them made the most of Mrs. Cohen and Mrs. Kelly. Sue Carol was pretty in a lace-trimmed crepe negligee, with a single row of roses as a collar, and again in a smart cloth coat with collar and high cuffs of krimmer.

Falling for Agnes

Agnes Franey, the chorine engaged by Archie Mayo for a picture, is putting over a fast one on the Park Row boys and girls. Her press-agent appears at the various offices and snaps into a song and dance about Agnes not being able to afford a press-agent and needing the breaks, so he's trying to get some space for the kid just because she's a good one.

The downtown children all lined up for the fall and even are ready to buy her a new scrap-book.

IN COURT FOR $1.15

Grace Sumner, Hostess, Could Not Pay Taxi Fare

Because she did not have $1.15 to pay her taxi fare, Grace Sumner, 306 West 62nd street, hostess in the Fireside Club, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Later, before Magistrate Macrery in West Side Court, she said she did not realize she was so short of money. On her promise to pay Frank Bracken, 322 West 17th street, chauffeur, she was released.

Who's Who and Why On Stage or Screen

The brains which made "A Girl in Every Port," certainly didn't call a female into consultation. Here's is a man's picture! Every girl in it is a double-crosser and a cheater. The only decent emotion is a sturdy friendship between two men, which survives the dirty maneuvers of the girl one loves, and the other has loved. It's all anti-femme stuff from start to the concluding title: "No dame ever will come between us."

The girls aren't going to stand for that without a squawk. They all know in their hearts a dame's a dame, but they aren't going to relish watching it manifested in a Cinderella picture. Especially will they howl at paying 50 cents for handling of the sex. Honesty isn't up the girls' alley. They like the "noble little woman" stuff and strong.

Gasta's Economic Theory

Gosta Ekman, the Swedish Biograph Company blonde sheik, has been turning down fancy offers from Hollywood. Gosta's reason for declining the heavy dough is fantastic. He believes that he's set for life in Sweden, where he's the matinee girls' idol, and that a picture star over here only lasts two years.

Blanche Mehaffey's Ideas

Blanche Mehaffey, the former "Follies" girl, who went West to appear in Hal Roach comedies, has ideas of her own productions. Miss Mehaffey recently married George J. Hausen, wealthy dealer in oil drilling and piping supplies. The couple are about to leave on a trip to India.

Upon their return, they will go back to the coast, where Mrs. Hausen, who was a Wampa baby star of 1924, will resume her picture work, with the idea of branching out on her own in it.

"The Crowd" Lonely

"The Crowd" may get the country girls, but what is there in it for the poor urbanites who have to marry such weak sister bookkeepers and live with the poverty-ridden crowd day after day? It may have been intended for an epic, with that impressed title, but it's just a good picture, too sordid to hit the girls, and too dreary to enchant many people except those whose financial level is above the one it celebrates.

The little house with its cheap furniture, the tacky clothes, Eleanor Boardman's straggled hair and shabby brat—all are authentically middle-class, but are they middle-class entertainment?

That's as welcome as the fellow who runs up to you on the street with a "Now, I'll tell you what's the matter with you!"

Of course, it does hold out hope. But, when the rest of the picture is morbidly on-the-level, aren't the fans going to notice the phoneyness of the finish?

"The Crowd" is a film "Saturday's Children." The rich cream might get a kick out of "The Crowd," just as the middle-class gets a kick out of Long Island estates and yacht elopements. But it's hardly possible "The Crowd" will set the fan girls dizzy.

Margaret Mann's Future

With plugs in the ads, plugs in the exploitation and publicity, and a guest trip to New York, Margaret Mann still has her feet on the ground about "Four Sons." Miss Mann, who is 60 and was an extra, has no pink illusions about what the picture will do for her. Her characterization in "Four Sons" was splendidly made, the sort of "restrained acting" the highbrows rave over, but it isn't the conventional "mother stuff." Miss Mann drew acclaim notices from everybody here and on the coast, but she isn't yet assigned to a new production. If she doesn't fall into a real fan part, "Four Sons" will not have done her any good, and she's canny Scot enough to have acquired star temperament on the strength of it.

"Shepherd" Needs Hair Cut

"The Shepherd of the Hills" is not aimed at the girls on Broadway, though it probably will have them sobbing in regions outlying. The picture is sweet, but Broadway girls are off sweets and on thyroids. It's all faith and gentleness and light, and how tensely it holds the house speaks plenty for the cutting and direction.

Men, who are constitutionally sweeter than girls, might go for the Harold Bell Wright story. But the girls have a picture here, with no strong love interest, no clothes, no slick sheik, no nothing for them.

What's a girl going to look at in reels and reels of faith drama? She might wish that John Boles had had his hair cut, but beyond that her interest won't carry far.

Chance Taking Film

"Love and Learn" is a good girl picture out of the moth-balls. Whether the fans have been weaned away from this Constance Talmadge style of compromise farce or not, they'll still laugh at it. And envy Esther Ralston.

It's the kind of stuff that every girl tied to a typewriter or a sewing machine wishes that she herself could put over. That ought to cinch it mildly, even if Paramount did have to send it in a "Take a Chance Week."

A TIMES SQ. GAL WRITES HOME TO MA

(Letter sent by Adelaide Smithson, of 46th street, to her chum, Louisa Chesterbrook, of Cumbersome, Idaho).

New York, Feb. 21.

Dear Louisa:

Do you miss me, dear?

It's so nice here now on the streets. No snow. When I think of Cumbersome, I think of you and the snow. Oh, my Lord, Louisa, that snow, that I ran away from and forgot my snow shoes.

I know you want to hear about New York, but I haven't much to tell yet. I'm so new here.

Met a nice man on the train and he gave me this 46th street address. It's a rooming house. Very nice people I guess. No one speaks to me.

This is Times Square, Louisa. You remember, Times Square we used to read about. It's a very busy place. Lots of picture houses.

But I don't know what I'll do about seeing pictures. It seems to me a girl alone must buy three seats, I have been to a couple of places and in each I got some awful pinches. First, I thought it was bugs, but each time it must have been the man next to me.

Don't tell mama, because she told me not to go any place alone. But I don't know anyone.

That man on the train gave me his card, but I've lost it. He told me he sold gold bricks for silver linings, but I forget the name of his firm. I miss him, too.

Funny Cops

And the policemen are so funny. I started to tell one about the awful pinches, but he said:

"Blow, dame, and be happy; you're hustling in peace."

A couple of different fellows started to talk to me, but I didn't know them. One told me I needed a new dress, but I had no money to buy from him.

When I get more friendly with the bunch in this house, I'll find out a few things and then I'm going to look for a job.

All the girls you see on the streets have their faces made up and they look handsome. Just like the girls in the colored sections of the Sunday papers.

Hank's a Good Boy

How are you and Hank? Hope you forgave him. He's a good boy, but don't forget he's lived in Cumbersome all his life.

If mama asks if you have heard from me, say no, because I wouldn't want her and the boys to think I didn't write home first. If you see Joshua and he asks anything, tell him I mentioned his name to you.

Maybe I'll be lucky, but I think I should have stopped off in Chicago first, but that man on the train was so nice.

Will write you just as often as I have anything to say.

Love.

Addie.

P. S.—When you write here, please address me as Mrs. Adelaide Bracer. That nice man told me it would be easier to get along if everybody thought I was married. Don't tell Ma.

RITZY

Shades of Keith's Union Square theatre in 1909, when the Dolly Sisters, billed as such, sang and danced! They had previously been Jansci and Roszicka Deutsch, born in Hungary, but taken to New York as small children. Becoming headliners, they were in "The Echo" in 1910 and in "The Follies of 1911." One divorced Harry Fox and the other divorced Jerome Schwartz, both inheriting jewels from the estate of "Diamond Jim" Brady.

Going to Europe in 1920, they have remained there ever since, and this fall co-starred in a revue at the Casino de Paris, where they are said to own a half-interest. After having lived in magnificent style in Paris, they have been maintaining a similar standard on the Riviera, their costumes and jewels creating astonishment even in the most blase section of Europe. A few weeks ago, after both sisters had been ill, they announced their retirement from the stage, after careers of 18 years.

Here are two American girls who are well known in the show business on both sides of the Atlantic are so plentifully supplied with money that their present mode of life must seem to them, when they consider their past, like a glittering dream! One has for some years past been sought by a multi-millionaire who, after a business career in America, migrated to London, there attaining not only prosperity but prestige, members of his family marrying into the aristocracy. The other has had as a constant admirer a much younger man, who, if not actually possessed of millions, is son and heir of a man of enormous wealth. The father, who has a title, is now married to a girl once a phone operator in the old Knickerbocker Hotel in New York.

Cora Urquhart's Villa

Living quietly but comfortably in her villa on the Riviera is an American woman who in a former era caused a series of sensations. As Cora Urquhart, daughter of Col. David Urquhart, of New Orleans, she was a fashionable belle. Wooed and won by James Brown Potter, a nephew of the late Bishop Henry Codman Potter, of New York, she was welcomed in the best society. She studied acting under David Belasco, just as did Mrs. Leslie Carter years later, and finally made her professional debut in England in 1887. That same year she returned to America and acted in New York with the late Kyrle Bellew. These two co-starred for many years and toured the world with their own company.

After her divorce, Mrs. Potter ceased to be associated with American society. In London she was of the coterie of beautiful women approved by the then Prince of Wales, later King Edward, another being Lily Langtry, the English actress. Mr. Potter married another society belle, May Handy, from Baltimore, who survives him, now living in New York.

Cora Urquhart Potter is the mother of Mrs. James A. Stillman, who also has caused a series of sensations. She charged her millionaire husband, banker, with being the father of Flo Leeds' son. Flo Leeds, who formerly appeared in revues, is a daughter of James S. Lawlor, who has a small plumbing shop on Sixth avenue, New York. She now calls herself Mrs. K. Lincoln.

Twin Sisters Abroad

Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt spends most of her time in Paris, where she live luxuriously, and her twin-sister, Lady Furness, is first in London and then in Paris, living in even grander style, as Lord Furness is enormously rich and devoted to his young American wife.

It seems strange to recall that only a few years ago these sisters were thrilled at suping in a movie studio in New York, and that later Thelma, who divorced James Vail Converse and married Lord Furness, cultivated the society of Gloria Swanson, haunting the Famous Players Studio at Astoria.

Converse was previously divorced by Nadine Melbourne, who then became the fourth wife of the late J. Ellis Hoffman, later divorcing him. Converse is a grandson of the late Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone Co.

Lord Furness was first married to Daisy Hogg, who was drowned in 1921. He has showered his present wife with gorgeous jewels, including a string of black pearls. At one time she was reported engaged to Richard Bennett and a $5,000 diamond ring was declared to be the actor's gift.

The older sister of Lady Furness and Mrs. Vanderbilt, Consuelo Morgan, divorced Count Jean de Maupas and married Benjamin Thaw, Jr., a relative of Harry K. Thaw.

Mrs. Langtry on Riviera

Oddly enough, Mrs. Potter's former rival, Mrs. Langtry, also lives in retirement on the Riviera at present now known as Lady de Bathe. Born on the Island of Jersey, daughter of a clergyman, the Rev. W. C. E. le Breton, she married Edward Langtry, and first acted in London in 1881. By reason of her beauty she soon attracted Queen Victoria's son and heir. In 1883 she visited New York, meeting the late Frederic Gebhard, uncle of the first wife of Reginald Vanderbilt. Mrs. Langtry had a town house in West 23rd street and a cottage on Staten Island. In later years she paid many visits to America. At one time she owned a racing stable.

Gebhard subsequently admired another actress, Drina de Wolfe, who had married a brother of Elsie de Wolfe, then an actress, but now an interior decorator, who was recently in Paris sporting a title. Gebhard finally married Marie Wilson, of the orginal "Florodora" sextet.

Billy Reardon's Rise

Prior to marrying Thelma Morgan Converse, Lord Furness was often seen with Julie Thompson, of Philadelphia. Julie is now as often seen in Paris with Robert Guelde, stepson of Cornuche, the millionaire who controls a chain of hotels and casinos all over France. Robert seems 20 years younger than Julie. She is associated with Billy Reardon in the smart new and successful night club, the Blue Room.

Reardon was formerly in the chorus of Broadway productions and at one time danced with Mary Hay. Later he danced at the Club Lido with Dorothy Clark, who got into the Social Register as the wife of Bradford Norman, Jr., of Newport.

The Blue Room in Paris was previously controlled, as the Jardin de ma Soeur, by Elsa Maxwell, who is equally well known in New York and Paris. She straddles the fence between Bohemia and Society. She has visited Mrs. Cole Porter, who was the first of the three wives of the late E. R. Thomas, owner of the "Morning Telegraph," before marrying the American song writer. In New York, Miss Maxwell, always about to have an opera produced, was constantly with Miss "Dickie" Gordon, singer, and they rented the studio-apartment of Alphonse Jongers, who married a niece of the famous Ward McAllister, creator of the term "the 400."

Popular Away From Home

Harry Pilcer, in the current revue at the Moulin Rouge, always gets a reception, and not from the claque, when he makes his entrance and when he sings "Hallelujah." Certain Americans, especially those who are show wise, never cease marveling how this boy from Yorkville gets away with it. But Paris, at any rate, accepted him as the partner of the late Gaby Deslys and heir to part of her fortune. A generation ago Harry, who still looks half his age, was in small time vaudeville in the States as a light-ning-change artist, and was also in burlesque. His sister, Elsie Pilcer, followed him into the show business. Harry now lives in fine style in Paris.

The Klaws Devoted

There is no more devoted couple to be encountered at Monte Carlo than Mr. and Mrs. Marc Klaw, of New York, favorable comment being made on that account. The veteran theatrical manager is looking very well, away from the wear and tear of Broadway. Sir Walter and Lady de Frece are also at Monte Carlo, she being remembered for a quarter of a century of success in vaudeville in England and America as Vesta Tilley, male impersonator.

Connie's Second Doing All Right

Capt. Alastair MacIntosh, the second husband to be divorced by Constance Talmadge, is much in evidence in Paris in the best society, recently encountered with Vincent Astor, Prince and Princess Serge Obolensky (Muriel Astor), Prince and Princess Andrew of Greece, Prince and Princess Jean de Faucigny-Lucinge, Princess Edmonde de Polignac and Princess Lucien Murat.

The belief prevails that whereas Constance and the Englishman got along very well together, she rather resented not being taken up by his fashionable friends, some of whom, it is said, openly snubbed the cinema star.

Ruth Draper's Reception

Ruth Draper, who gained fame and fortune in her native land as a monologist, following triumphant engagements on Broadway with tours of the country, is now reaping added laurels in Europe.

A year ago she met with great favor in London, appeared before royalty and was taken up by the best society. This year she packed them in again. Recently in Berlin she appeared at the Komoedie, one of the Max Reinhal theatres. While in Berlin Miss Draper stopped with the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, who gave a big reception for her, attended by the American, Italian and Spanish ambassadors and other noted persons of diplomatic and social circles.

A few years ago Miss Draper, a granddaughter of the late Charles A. Dana, famous New York editor, enacted a minor role on Broadway in support of Marie Tempest in "A Lady's Name." Another "character" part, in the same production, afforded an apportunity to Lynn Fontanne.

Carlyle Blackwell's Cruise

Carlyle Blackwell, after a visit at Cannes, is now cruising on his fine yacht, Adventuress, through the Mediterranean. After early struggles in the show business, Blackwell became a favorite in the movies and had quite a following.

Divorced by one wife, he married another also a divorcee. She was an heiress to great wealth, as a daughter of Barney Barnato, who was born and bred in the slums of London, but made a fortune in South Africa, finally committing suicide by jumping overboard from an ocean liner.

Marie Tempest's Husbands

Marie Tempest recently starred in London in "The Marquise," by Noel Coward. Now Miss Tempest, who first appeared on Broadway in musical comedies in the 80s, is starring in London in "The Masque of Venice."

The Duke of Richmond recently passed away. Had that happened a few years ago Miss Tempest would have had to don mourning. Her first husband was named Izard, her second Cosmo Gordon-Lennox, and her current husband Graham Browne, an actor, is now, as for a decade past, her leading man. Gordon-Lennox was a grandson of the Duke of Richmond, and was known as an actor and playwright, moving in a temperamental set, and once collaborating with the American dramatist, the late Clyde Fitch, a congenial spirit.

Leonora Hughes' Pledge

Leonora Hughes, former dancing partner of the late Maurice, and now the wife of Carlos Basualdo, rich and handsome South American residing in Europe, is about to present another "pledge of her affection," having already offered one evidence.

When It Works

Mrs. Ted Lewis was tendered a testimonial luncheon by some society she is interested in, at the Hotel Astor the other day. It was strictly hen and understood there would be speeches.

Mrs. Rufus LeMaire got a hunch she would be called upon. To make her talk sound impromtu, Mrs. LeMaire worked over it for days.

Contrary to all the laws of human nature and toast masters, Mrs. LeMaire was called upon. She delivered her address as memorized, making it sound ad lib and it got over pretty.

Quite a party, from reports.

Grace LeMar, Shoplifter

Grace LeMar, 22, alleged show girl of the Forrest Hotel, West 49th street, pleaded guilty to shoplifting in Special Sessions and was continued on bail for investigation and sentence Feb. 24. Miss LeMar was arrested Feb. 2 by detectives of the Stores Mutual Protective Association, after she had taken three dresses from a rack in Macy's.

The young woman told probation officers she had appeared as a show girl and ingenue in burlesque shows The last attractions she appeared in she claimed were the burlesques, "Happy Hours" and "The Best Show in Town."

Among the Women

By the Skirt

The Best Dressed Woman of the Week
INA CLAIRE
"Our Betters"—Miller Theatre

Seems like the ladies are gathering the laughs at the Palace this week. Josephine Harman starts it with her old partner, Georgia Sands. Miss Harmon was dressed becomingly in black that sported a white yoke. Her partner chose a chartreuse net made with a wee bit of buff ante and a plain bodice.

Another who fared well was Irene Ricardo in old songs and new. Her "Well" number failed to be funny as to costume, it was vastly becoming. A blue robe was enveloped in a cloak of blue of a darker shade. Miss Ricardo brought her act to a close in a crystal evening gown made with a long waisted effect and bordered with feathers that shaded from pink to red.

Funny Ward was in a red velvet kiddie coat and a large hat. Miss Ward is dis and robing before the audience behind a gauze drop. Very foolish as the view of Miss Ward in her combies accentuated that her figure is not so slim. A green evening frock was feathered trimmed as also was the evening wrap. The blonde wig was covered by a mop cap of gold lace. A French flapper was done in a cloth dress and red tammie.

Worth Sisters and Coly early in the bill followed a great juggler, Serge Flash. The girls were in white, one in satin and the other in chiffon.

The girls with Teck Murdock, Iris Kennedy, Marion Meredith and Adele Webster, wore dresses of blue, pink and mauve. The three were made with ruffles in different design. The act could be improved were the girls to appear in bride's costume at the finish. But it takes money to dress brides, stage or otherwise.

Lucila Mendez as Possibility

In the picture, "Coney Island," Lucila Mendez leaves Lois Wilson in the lurch. With stories and right direction Miss Mendez should take a place with the best of the active picture players. She has the face and figure Lucila has been carefully dressed in this picture. First in a bathing suit, then in a combination of black lace, and finally on a cabaret floor in a white buffant. A black buffant seemed to shade into some color.

Several street dresses of cloth.

Clothes in "Our Betters"

It was foregone that the revival of "Our Betters" would come in dressed to the top notch. Messmore Kendall, in association with Gilbert Miller, has a revival play that should run a long time at the Henry Miller theatre.

Ina Claire is so fitted for Lady George Grayson, the part might have been written for her. Her clothes are the last word. In the first act a black dress was of a material that looked like a shiny leather. The skirt was shirred on to a rather long bodice. This same skirt was cut with an uneven hem being longer in back than front. Pink edged revers formed a long V in the bodice, while the same pink faced the hem of the skirt. A small black hat and a double feathered ornament.

Her evening gown in the second act looked for all the world like a coat of mail. Heavy sequin material formed the bodice and extended to a long point down the back of the skirt, which was of many pleated rows of white net. A white satin and chiffon negligee was just the outfit for the heavy emoting in the last act.

Constance Collier perfect as the silly Duchess. The huge first night audience hung on her every word. At the conclusion of one scene in the last act when this artiste left the stage, the applause lingered so long it was to be expected that she would return and take a bow as they do in vaudeville.

An afternoon gown was of tan chiffon edged with brown. It was very fluffy and worn with a brown hat of fine straw. Her evening gown was of a pinky crystal material. From one shoulder hung a long chiffon scarf of a rose color. This color was carried out in a large feather fan. The last act dress was of sand colored crepe studded with beads to match. A short coat effect was also studded. The hat was brown with a facing of orange velvet. A fox trimmed coat of orange completed this costume.

Lillian Kemble Cooper stunningly gowned during the three acts. Her evening dress was black lace and chiffon. A raspberry cloth dress was oddly made in semi jumper fashion with diamond shaped pieces forming a border. In the first act Miss Cooper was all in gray.

Madge Evans had three gowns of the school girl variety. A rose pink cloth dress was made with a fisehu extending from throat to hem. The skirt had a clever circular flounce.

At "The Strange Interlude"

Probably the most interesting play is at the Golden theatre, "The Strange Interlude, produced by the Theatre Guild. It is with the feeling of adventure that one takes one's seats. Entering a theatre at 5:30 is odd enough. All around are remarks, "Where are you dining?" and "Will you go out with us?"

On comes the show and the unravelling of the story, as done by Lynne Fontaine, Glenn Anders and Tom Powers, the time passes so swiftly that at 10 minutes to eight, when it is time to dine, one isn't worried over dinner.

And back in your seats at 9. When it is all over you are sorry.

Miss Fontaine does the 10 acts in as many dresses. As the young girl, she goes in mostly for knitted jumper suits. One flowered chiffon is in rose shades. Her lovely bobbed hair is covered later by a wig with the ears showing. As a middle-aged woman with graying locks, a white coat and skirt are worn. In the final act, with really white hair, a long black dress trails the floor.

Eugene O'Neill has done a great piece of work in this play.

Clive Maskelyne, magician, is on a return visit. It is strongly rumored that the government intend to draft legislation to appoint a film censor board. Hitherto, this work has been carried out by the provincial administrations. It is stated that this move has been caused by representations to the government of undesirable films shown to children.

NATAL
Durban

A company styled Durban Hotels, Ltd., has an authorized capital of $1,500,000. It has acquired two Durban hotels and the new company has made provision to carry on proprietors of theatres, halls, cinemas and exhibitions.

Judge Swindell, American greyhound expert, has commenced work on the site for a dog-racing track. He had previously negotiated for ground belonging to the town council, but owing to the restrictions laid down by the town council, that no betting should be allowed on ground rented by them, Swindell cut out the deal and went for private ground. One hundred dogs are on the way from Australia. Judge Swindell is receiving good support. He says dog racing is popular in Australia and America.

ON THE SQUARE

"The Ladder" for Long Life

The Sunday comment of Percy Hammond in the "Tribune" re "The Ladder" may incite Edgar P. Davis to continue his free performance of the million dollar flivver for another six months. Davis is that way. Every time someone advises him to take it off, he renews the rental period.

It is figured that "The Ladder" has been the butt of almost as many jokes as Henry Ford and his tin Lizzies. That goes for Broadway anyhow. Davis seems to enjoy that kind of stuff.

There is a story that Davis recently dreamed of a certain spot in Texas and that he went there and brought home gushers that will mean another flock of millions. He'll laugh at that too because he has been right in New York seeing that all the tickets for the show are given away free.

Among other things Hammond ventured the belief that Davis "has turned 'The Ladder' into a sort of poorhouse, making paupers of those who attend it without cost. All those who are connected with it, excepting Mr. Davis, must feel that he has cheapened their favorite art wthout doing a bit of good to the cause of reincarnation."

"Nothin on the Level"

A couple of the Square's wise boys arguing over a suspicion entertained by one:

"Ask anybody," said the first, "everybody knows; it's okay."

"Ask who?" replied the other. "Anybody will lie for you."

"Well, ask your mother then?" answered the first, "and you'll find out."

"Yeah. My mother! She likes you too."

"Then nothing is on the level?" asked the questioned one.

"That's it, kid," joyfully rejoined the questioner. "That's a great idea and let's call it all off."

Talking on New York Only

Mayor Walker, on a tour of the South, made a speech in Baltimore last Saturday night and didn't mention Al Smith's name once.

What he did was to plead that New Yorkers were as good as any other people. Outside New York you have difficulty persuading some people that that is so.

Jimmy's abstinence from political talk occasioned much comment in Baltimore. Maybe he was smart, for at his side was the man they are also figuring on as a possible presidential candidate in case the Smith thing can't be swung, Governor Ritchie. On Walker's other side was a Republican mayor, Broening.

Mrs. Mann as Permanent Audience Fixture

Mrs. Margaret Mann, 60, and the exploited member, playing the mother of Fox's "Four Sons" at the Gaiety, New York, seems destined for there during the run as an audience fixture. At the ending of each of the two performance daily, Mrs. Mann is picked out by the spot and the audience's attention diverted to her.

Her personal appearance is impressive and the house likes the flash of the mother in the flesh. But if Mrs. Mann is to return to the Fox lot at Hollywood, she will have to find a double.

Stripped Emily to Feathers

Emily Sherman, Gertrude Hoffmann girl with "A Night in Spain," is suing the "Ten Story" magazine for $50,000. The magazine, she alleges, placed her photograph on its cover recently, without her consent. What Miss Sherman really objects to is that "Ten Story" deleted a pair of trunks and a chiffon belt from the picture and substituted a very few feathers. "And, besides," says Emily, "they didn't even mention my name." She said that the photograph was made in a New York studio for her own private use and that she never authorized its use for publication.

Peggy's Bejeweled Arms

Quite a number of suburban matrons have discovered the establishment at which Peggy Joyce has her nails manicured. In league with the manicurists, they get there before the time Peggy usually arrives and stand at the windows to watch her drive up in a foreign car, that has so many nickle appliances on it it looks like a dentist's chair.

Before Peggy enters the place, the curious ladies scuttle back to their seats from which they interestedly watch Peggy getting a rose colored nail shine. After the spectacle is over, they go home and tell their husbands Peggy Joyce has so many bracelets on her arms she can hardly lift her arms on the table.

Alice Ridnor's Costless Publicity

Alice Ridnor, who looks like a No. 2 Mary Pickford, of the Benny Davis 54th street club staff of entertainers, got a costless publicity break last week, with Alice knowing naught of it until secing the story and her picture in print. A woman publicist calling at the club and attracted by Alice asked if she had a press agent. Alice said no. She's a musical comedy girl.

Without saying any more, the woman, probably out of good will, stuck over a story of how Miss Ridnor had refused two $1,000 bills from a wild westerner who came into the club and wanted to substantially show Alice his appreciation of her work.

Alice thought it was funny and so did everyone else who knows how scarce even hundreds in coin are around the nite clubs these evenings.

Auto Smash Blame

The latest statistics on vehicle accidents lists taxicabs as being responsible for 38 per cent of the bumps, private pleasure cars as guilty of 34 per cent, trucks 28 per cent and street cars chargeable with five per cent of the knock outs.

A bunch of Friars tendered Dave Mallon a surprise dinner Sunday evening at Keen's chop house on 44th street. It is in the same building that once housed the Vaudeville Comedy Club and in the same floor (fourth) that once was used for similar happy events. Mallon is to sail for Australia, the occasion for the stunt.

Mallon, until he joined "Queen High" early this season, was known for his imitations of George M. Cohan. He got so used to that that everything he did was ala Cohan. And George M. attended the dinner to Dave. He asked Mallon to "mention my name once in awhile when you get to Australia." The walls were dotted with photos of Cohan, so Dave was not entirely alone.

So far as he was concerned the dinner was to the hosts. Everybody ate but Mallon, until they got down to the coffee. Then food was given to the guest of honor. There were speeches too. But the speakers spoke about everybody and everything but Mallon.

Dave got even by saying he was off Cohan because the latter is now playing "old men's parts." "I'm going to do Bert Wheeler in the Australian 'Rio Rita'."

Times square is developing a marquee complex. The Chinese joints started it with canopies extended to the curbstones, patterned after the nite clubs. Now the mercantile institutions are going in for marquees a la the theatres. The new A. S. Beck shop on Seventh avenue has one and the Brass Rail sandwich bar adjacent to the Earl Carroll is erecting a huge marquee.

Ice Skaters De Luxe at Mats

DISORDERLY JOINT FOR 'BOYS' AND 'GIRLS'

Red Cellarette Raided by Bolan's Men—Noisy Bunch Elated Over Joy Ride

Twenty detectives of Deputy Chief Inspector James S. Bolan's staff, under the direction of Sergeant Patrick Kennelly, raided the Red Cellerette, 269 West 51st street, and "bagged" 18 girls and 20 youths. The raided premises are in the basement and directly across from the Knights of Columbus club house.

The patrol wagon had to make four trips to take the "girls and boys" to the West 47th street police station. They considered their arrest as a great joke and shouted when the sleuths entered: "We are going to get a nice joy ride."

The girls were taken to Women's Court for arraignment and later to the Florence Crittendon Home for several days, pending an investigation. The youths spent the night in West 30th street police station and arraigned the following some hours later before Magistrate Andrew Macrery in West Side Court.

Thomas Mulvihill, 24, who said he was of the New York Stock Exchange, "tube clerk," 341 Waverly avenue, Brooklyn, was charged with interfering with a bluecoat while the raid was going on. He apologized and received a suspended sentence.

Louis Napietano, said to be manager, 111-11 130th street, Richmond Hill, Queens, was arrested on the charge of violating the Volstead law. He will be arraigned in the federal court. A quantity of liquor was found in the place, the sleuths said.

Sitting on Laps

"Your Honor," said the testifying officer to Magistrate Andrew Macrery, "the shrieks of the girls and youths could plainly be heard on the street level. We entered as a couple emerged. We found the youths seated on each other's laps. The girls were seated on the girls' laps.

"They were holding empty bottles aloft. Music was being played and the revelers were having a merry time. Some tried to escape when we entered."

The youths were charged with disorderly conduct, and the girls with being wayward minors, less than 21. They gave fictitious names and addresses as did the male prisoners.

The Red Cellarette has been in the 51st street address less than four months. Since that time it has been the talk of midtown. When Inspector Bolan learned of the alleged orgies he quickly put the quietus on the place.

P. A. Sues for Work on "Inquisition" Paintings

Irving Strouse, press agent, has taken action against Joseph A. Maloney, operating the "Spanish Inquisition Paintings Exhibition" on Broadway, for 10 weeks' salary. Abner J. Rubien is attorney for the plaintiff.

According to the complaint Strouse was hired for approximately 13 weeks, the first eight weeks at $350 and later contracted at a reduced salary for part time attention. After four weeks on his part time job Strouse was notified that his services would not be paid for, Maloney refusing to carry out the term of the agreement, it is alleged.

Myrtle Cox Slapped Masher; Sheik Fined $25

Charles Bernstein, 45, 126 East 29th street, of the Amalgamated Clothing Cutters' Union, was fined $25 before Magistrate Macrery in West Side Court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Myrtle Cox, 323 West 88th street in the "5 o'Clock Girl," said Bernstein tried to flirt with her and slapped her face. Miss Cox said she was walking in 42d street at Broadway, when Bernstein walked alongside her and said, "Hello, Baby."

She told the magistrate she turned quickly and bawled out Bernstein, saying she did not know him. "You will know me," she declared he said, whereupon she slapped his face. The actress said that Bernstein then struck her.

A free-for-all fight followed between some men who went to her assistance and men believed to be friends of Bernstein. As a result, several of the combatants were arrested. In Night Court they were all discharged.

The following morning Bernstein was arraigned. He denied speaking to Miss Cox. He said he recognized a friend passing and shouted, "hello," when suddenly the actress rushed at him and struck him a blow in the face.

Magistrate Macrery said he believed the girl and imposed the $25 fine. Bernstein paid.

JOYS AND GLOOMS OF BROADWAY

By N. T. G.

The first birthday party of the DeSilva, Brown and Henderson firm at Janssen's was a wow. We broadcast whatever parts of it could be put on the air, and introduced more stars in less time than ever before in the history of our radio.

It was a get together joy party for stars and near stars. Ninety-nine per cent of the people there were in show business. Outsiders were strictly taboo. And for that reason everyone had a good time. The performers felt that they could do anything they pleased and laymen, envious perhaps of the fact that no one in the world can have as good a time as performers, would misunderstand their happiness.

The evident jollity of the party, the fact that everyone there knew everyone else, recalled again what we have frequently said, that the men and women of the show business need a club, a place where laymen are barred, where they can go aftr the theatre or before it, for luncheon, an hour's relaxation, for dinner or supper after the show.

At present there is no place except a public restaurant where an actor can take his wife or sweetheart. A club would fill a tremendous void in the lives of many a professional.

Our voice gave out and we asked Jackie Osterman to announce for us. His opening gag was:

"This party costs 100,000 copies of "Among My Souvenirs."

Paul Whiteman has lost 60 pounds. He looks and feels marvelous.

The radio hit wasn't even heard by the gang at the party. Little Frances Sheeley, of the 54th street club, crept up to the microphone and crooned a song which was a wow in Rutherford but couldn't be heard five feet away at the party.

Jimmy Getting Better

Mayor Walker was a sensation. His address was a masterpiece of clear thinking and delightful choice of words. Having been broadcasting Jimmy for some four years we'll tell the world he's getting better all the time. He paid a marvelous tribute not only to the three boys but to show business in general.

Alice Lee Lands

Some three years ago a little chorus kid out of a "Follies" road show wandered in to us. We got her a job in the Silver Slipper. She was in the chorus and occasionally stepped out to do an acrobatic dance. She got $65 a week. She went to Europe with a band for $400 a week.

And last week we read in Variety that she's a hit in Cannes and Nice, and has been held over for six more weeks on the Riviera. Her name is Alice Lee. Her pictures are in front of the Slipper now as one of the chorus girls.

A little booklet, a copy of which was mailed to the home address of every taxi chauffeur in town, came to our attention. It contains information regarding New York, hotels, theatres, stations, etc. On the front is the name of a so-called night club, which is merely a camouflaged speakeasy. On the back are the words: "Don't forget, We Give 33 1/3 per cent. Get Yours."

Taxi drivers who deliver prospective live ones to the joint usually wait around until the boob has paid his check, when they cut in for the third of the gross.

Picked the Wrong Taxi

The owner of a legitimate night place told us of the experience of a friend of his from out of town. He called a taxi and said: "Take me to the so and so club."

The driver said, "That place is raided and closed."

The man then asked to be taken to the Little Club. That too was closed, according to the chauffeur, who said the revenuers had closed up eight places on Broadway.

The chauffeur then suggested a place he knew, and drove him to a speakeasy in the 50's. The man entered, saw about 16 hostesses sitting around, ordered a bottle of ginger ale, paid his check, and went out. Picking up another cab he drove to the cafe he first wanted to visit, and found it running full blast.

A chorus kid was visiting another musical comedy on an off matinee day. It was boresome.

A Popular Gag

Percy Hammond takes a slam at gag men in the "Tribune." In speaking of "Rain or Shine," he says:

Aside from Mr. Cook's witticisms the play makes but one joke that seems worthy of publication. "You were born with a silver spoon in your mouth," says the ringmaster to the snake charmer, "but it had the name of a hotel on it." The same bon mot adorned the libretto of "Sunny Days" on Wednesday evening, a coincidence which goes to show how alert the authors are in their endeavors to give you a good time.

Percy evidently doesn't know that the gag is used in two other Broadway shows.

Blaming it on Romance

Met Donald Brian at a benefit. Told us he had just become the father of a girl. Supremely happy. Married one year. Wed his prima donna, Virginia O'Brien. Baby is his first. Which reminded us that it was over a quarter of a century ago that he first appeared in "The Merry Widow" and starred in "The Chocolate Soldier." Which proves that romance never dies or other things.

An Industrious Kid

We know a kid, part of a great dance team, doubling in a theatre and cafe, who spends two hours a day studying at Columbia University. She's a French kid, and in addition, teaches French to a class composed of stars and chorus girls in her show.

And some people think performers lead a wild existence.

PALM BEACH

Palm Beach, Feb. 18.

The plan to bring Flo Ziegfeld's newest musical "The Three Musketeers" here for three days, following its opening in Washington and prior to its New York premiere, was called off. Company of 180 and necessarily extensive alterations to the Paramount theatre stage were reasons for the abandonment. It called for Tony Biddle, John C. King and J. Leonard Replogle guaranteeing the producer $50,000 to bring the show here for benefit performances for the Good Samaritan Hospital.

M. S. Benthain came to Palm Beach this week on his annual business-pleasure trip. He signed Morton Downey, youthful tenor, to appear at the Cafe de Paris, London, opening April 3 for four weeks with an option on his services to double into a Charles B. Cochran revue.

Bathing Suit Conferences

Jed Harris returned to Palm Beach accompanied by George Kaufman. This is the young producer's second trip to Palm Beach this season, he first coming here following the opening of "Coquette."

With his weekly income well up in five figures from his current attractions, Harris is beginning to like Palm Beach. Last year he blew out after stopping here three days, but that was when he only had one success, "Broadway." Harris has a repertory theatre bug for next season and held several bathing suit conferences on the Breakers beach.

Only two after-dinner places getting a play here—Bradley's and the Venetian Gardens. Many starting the evening at the former exclusive to wind up at the whoopee Gardens. No big losers reported as yet at the Beach Club, but with the volume it looks like that rumored million-a-season take for the Colonel is a pipe.

Vaudeville (Keith-Albee) at the Kettler, West Palm Beach, and the Fairfax, Miami, was discontinued last week. Both houses are Publix-controlled. No squawks from anybody yet—not even the Albee crowd down here.

Arthur Hammerstein intends to sail for Berlin early in March to produce "Rose-Marie" there. Arthur, who headed the managers and producers committee for the annual Kiwanis Club benefit, held Feb. 21, left matters with Joseph Leblang. Sam Harris and Ned Wayburn were the stage managers. The managers committee had Al Jolson, who acted as master of ceremonies. Among the acts programmed were Willie Collier, Bugs Baer, Louise Groody, Irving Caesar, Ben Bernie-orchestra-combined Meyer Davis-orchestra, Harry Rosenthal orchestra, Juliet Day, Morton Downey, George Gershwin, Murray Smith, Grace Kay White, Grant and Adair, Ogden Goelet, Honolulu Serenaders, Louise Meyer, Dorothy Dalton and Joe Weber.

Noted on the Breakers Beach this week: Myrtle Schaaf, B. S. Moss, Josephine Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mansbach.

John Charles Thomas substituted for Emilio de Gorgorza at the Society of Arts concert, appearing with the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra.

FREE GAS FOR LIGHTERS

Detroit, Feb. 21.

A local drug store has established a filling station for cigaret lighters, service free.

Apparent gag is to get fuel-cuffers interested in punchboards for more lighters.

FAST WORKING LARRY GOT GIRLS AND COIN

And Then Bail of $2,500 for Larceny—A Good Talking Non-Sheik Dancer

Larry Donnelly, 35, of 1 Irving place, who posed as a son of a millionaire, was arraigned in West Side court before Magistrate William C. Dodge on the charge of petty larceny and held for the action of the grand jury in bail of $2,500. Donnelly, Assistant District Attorney Eugene McAuliffe, in West Side Court said, was the fastest wooer he had met in his long years as a prosecutor.

Donnelly, short and squatty, is not of the sheikish type. But he is glib of tongue. While arraigned for giving a barber of the Times Square hotel a rubber check, his bride of one day sat in court seemingly unconcerned.

McAuliffe told the reporter the bride said she is going to seek an annulment. The ephemeral bride, formerly Fayette Andrus, dancer with Stone and Pillard, is living with her folks. She has titian hair and is good looking.

Charles was charged with giving Charles Spadaccino of the barber shop a bunching check for $55. Bill Hazelton of the Times Square said that Larry owed the hostelry an unpaid lodging bill.

Cashed for 100 Berries

With the bride sat Loretta Phelan, 23, manicurist, of 23 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, and her brother, Edward J. Phelan. Donnelly met Miss Phelan where she was employed, at the Time Square. He courted her and proposed marriage, said McAuliffe.

Larry related to Miss Phelan of his tremendous wealth and she invited him to "meet the folks." Larry did. He whispered into Eddie's ear that he was a little short in cash. Eddie cashed Larry's check for 100 berries. The check came back, but Larry never did.

Then came the wedding of the dancer and Larry. A clerk in the Municipal building tied the knot. Larry invited 20 persons to attend his wedding feast at the Lenox Gardens, 135th street and Lenox avenue. When the feast was over, McAuliffe said that Larry gave the manager of the Lenox Gardens a check. And this also bounced, said Detectives Joe Fitzgerald and Pat Harty.

GREENWICH VILLAGE AS IZ

By LEW NEY

(Self-Designated Mayor of G. V.)

A restaurant more or less doesn't matter much, but I did not like to see the Troubadour Tavern on West 8th street pass out by the fire route. It never was a commercial success. Five years ago Charlie Reed, who owned the Purple Pup before the war, remodelled the old livery stable at 46 and called it the Little Bear, but his balalaika orchestra did not draw, and Charlie went back to his Miami Inn. For a time the name of the new venture changed every month until Troubadour Tavern stuck these last three years. For nearly two years poets have gathered there on Tuesday nights to read their unpublished verses to girls from Brooklyn and others who enjoy dancing. For a few months Yosians, hikers in the summertime, have whiled away Monday evenings there club fashion.

Bared Their Verse

At the weekly Thursday night Poet's Soiree at 17 East 14th street last week Maxwell Bodenheim, Myron Porter Chaffee, Augustus Tiberius, "Clarence," Anton Romatka, Henry Harrison, David George Plotkin, Alice Packard Palmer, Shamus O'Sheel, Charles A. Wagner and Leo Israels paraded their hearts and bared their souls in free verse and otherwise. The spacious studio was filled to standing as usual.

Poets Dancing

The Grub Street Club, after months of suspension, has come to life again at the Green Witch Inn, 68 East 11th street. Here, too, poetry is the palaver of the evening and comers are also lured with refreshments. The grub grabbers gather on Mondays. Eli Siegel opens his new poetry meeting this week on Wednesday at the Village Mill where most of the evening will be spent dancing.

On Tuesday evenings in a chapel-like room at the Labor Temple, Anton Romatka holds his poetry forum at which poets who have arrived read endlessly. Some there are who run religiously from one meeting to another, night after night, and never tire nor slip from the slopes of Parnassus.

Hans Stengel's Ashes

The ashes of Hans Stengel are all about us. They were not shipped to relatives in Germany, as reported in the press, but scattered to the four winds from the top of the Woolworth building, a gentle gesture premeditated by the artist and carried out by his friends.

Story of Aimee Cortez

And Aimee Amore Cortez is at rest in Lebanon Cemetery. It's a long story, the tale of little Amy. Here's the short of it, shorn of fiction.

Four years ago Amelia Klein left her East Side tenement home. She preferred to live beyond her stepmother's control. Tiny and pretty, a lusty woman of wealth on Park avenue made a mess of her.

Two years ago she came to the Village. A showman thought she belonged in the movies. A tabloid tried to put her there by "electing" her mayoress" a year and a half ago. But little Amy could not capitalize the publicity.

For another year she drifted in and out of the Village. Last June her psychopathic irresponsibility was made more self-evident than ever when she balled up a beauty contest by appearing in the nude. Immediately after she disappeared for five months upon learning the vice squad was after her.

In November she reappeared as Aimee Amore Cortez. And continued to live on her wits. But the poor kid was exhausted physically, mentally, morally, spiritually. She was mentally ill. She needed institutional care. She had needed it for years. She admitted as much to me but did not have the nerve to negotiate a voluntary commitment. She continued to burn her perfumed candle at both ends, and it sputtered out.

Suicide was on her mind long before the day I met her two years ago. I gave her a job then. But she had neither training nor inclination to run in a rut even for a day. She lived in the clouds, sometimes light and fluffy ones, mostly dark and deathlike ones.

In a moment of aloneness and depressed solitude in her little gruesome hall bedroom she couldn't stand the struggle with her colorful past, miserable present and hopeless future. No one was near to cheer her.

NITE CLUB BIZ SO BAD STEERERS USED

Police Arrest 3 at Hotel Manger—Guests Complained—Hard Times for Speaks

Speakeasies and alleged night clubs are apparently experiencing hard times. This became known following the arraignment in West Side Court of several men arrested at different times in front of prominent hotels in the Rialto.

It developed not long ago at a hearing in West Side Court of a complainant who testified of being robbed in a night club after he had been solicited on the street by a total stranger who told him where "a dandy night club" was nearby.

The "steerer" made his stamping ground not far from the entrance of a successful night club. As the patrons began to emerge, Mr. Steerer would approach them and tell them of a corking night club he could take them to.

In most cases they fell for the "steerer's" story. Only to regret it later. The colossal bill submitted by the management staggered the patrons with the result that a fight ensued and in all cases the patrons would be arrested.

In West Side Court the following morning the patrons were discharged. However, they had spent the night in jail.

Now the steerer makes his hangout in front of hotels seeking out-of-towners. Having no tickets of introduction the steerer approaches guests of hotels and whispers about the wonderful night club that he can take them to.

Complaints

Patrons have complained to the hotel managements. The latter notified Captain Edward Lennon of the West 47th street station, who assigned Detectives Joe Glennon and Pete Donohue to "clean up" the steerers.

Glennon and Donohue anchored in front of the Manger Hotel. They were there only a short time when they arrested three men for accosting pedestrians to lead them to night clubs. The defendants gave their names as John Collins, Marie Antoinette Hotel, salesman; Irving Lasker, 23, salesman, 834 De Kun avenue, Bronx, and Phil Singer, 27, who said he was stopping at the Manger.

Magistrate Andrew Macrery scored the defendants and cautioned them to remain away from the hotel. They denied the charge and were dismissed.

BAD CHECK PASSER GIVEN A STRETCH

William Olcott, 24, of Madison, Ind., who for several months passed has been posing as William Mallory, the famous Yale football star, and at other times as Herbert Lubin, picture producer, was sentenced to an indeterminate term of from six months to three years in the penitentiary by Judge Cornelius F. Collins in General Sessions, following his plea of guilty to defrauding hotels.

Detectives, probation officers and managers of hotels told Judge Collins that Olcott had "lived the life of Riley" in New York since he came here in the spring of 1926. Although born in Indiana, he had lived most of the time in Florida.

On his way from Miami to this city, posing as Herbert Lubin, he married an actress, Evelyn Benson, in Norfolk, Va., and brought her to New York, putting up at the Hotel Pennsylvania. He deposited $6,000 in a bank, and with his wife started in on a life of ease, visited race tracks, bridge parties, golf links and the night clubs. When his funds ran out, his wife also took the air.

Since that time Olcott has flitted from one big hotel to the other, paying his board with rubber checks. At the Hotel Astor, where he registered as Villiam Mallory in January, 1927, he passed several bad checks and then went to the Plaza, where he posed as Lubin. While there he victimized B. Altman & Co. of $200 in merchandise. Arrested by Detective William Lynch, he escaped, ran into the New York Athletic Club, 59th street, leaped from a third story window. He broke his right leg and was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

According to probation officers, Olcott made a practice of drawing all the bouncing checks on out-of-town banks and in this way defrauded practically every hotel of standing in this and other cities he visited.

10 for "Beaverbrook"

Robert Whitman, alias Lord Beaverbrook, was sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing by Judge William Allen in General Sessions Monday. He had been convicted three weeks ago of grand larceny on the complaint of Mrs. Rose Burkin, divorcee, of Freeport, L. I., who claimed that the suave Lord had induced her to part with about $90,000 worth of jewelry after a two weeks' courtship.

Greatest Mardi Gras

New Orleans, Feb. 21.

This is the town's greatest Mardi Gras, and with perfect weather.

King is Leon Irwin, and queen, Betty Watson.

City's guest of honor is Mayor Jimmy Walker, hugely popular. He is having a great time, and so are the natives.

DE VERNEIL DISAPPEARS

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Chicago police and newspapers have been asked to search for Robert Carricart de Vernell, 23-year-old French picture actor, who disappeared recently from Hollywood. He was formerly connected with the Fairbanks studio.

De Vernell is described as being 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds and has light hair and complexion. Any information concerning his whereabouts should be sent to Mrs. Doris Freeman, 943½ Valencia street, Los Angeles.

Sword Cane Charge Dismissed

A charge of carrying a concealed sword in a cane was dismissed by the Justices in Special Sessions against a man who the police say is Raymond Brady but who recently became known along Broadway as Colonel Raymond C. Trowbridge of New Mexico.

The defendant was arrested in his room at the Hotel San Rafael, 65 West 45th street, by Detective Thomas Ford.

The defendant denied ownership of the cane.

LOOPING THE LOOP

(IN CHICAGO)

Loop Mourns Eddie Foy

They hadn't forgotten Eddie Foy here.

Every newspaper in Chicago carried a front page streamer and columns of stories and photographs the day the trouper passed away. Follow-up stories mourned his death and recalled a wealth of incidents in the career of Chicago's favorite old-timer.

Friday morning the body of Foy, resting in a lavendar casket, was borne into Chicago on the Santa Fe "Chief" to be met by a battery of cameramen and reporters exceeded in numbers only by those attendant to arrival of a president. Every national news service had two cameramen present to get pictures of the casket and the young Foys, who were accompanying the body to New Rochelle.

Eddie Foy will long be remembered in Chicago, especially the most dramatic incident in his career, the Iroquois theatre fire, when Foy whispered encouragement to the pit musicians and to the chorus behind him as the building burned.. Laughing and clowning in his grotesque make-up, he kept the show moving until the heat became unbearable and he was the last to leave the stage.

Flock of Hostesses

Chumps are thick as flies on West Madison street. One taxi dance cafeteria, Colonial Dancing Academy, claims 100 hostesses and is calling for extra piece-work dames to help handle the Sunday afternoon crowds.

One method of getting hostesses for the taxi emporiums in Chicago is by handing out "call" cards in the Loop.

The raids on the leading night clubs a fortnight ago were so misleading that the public is baffled. "Open as usual" are the newspaper ads, but trade is awful. One of the leading night clubs checked fourteen guests at table at an unusually busy hour the other night.

At one of the previously well patronized night clubs the entertainers rush to the box office when any real money check is paid, and the split is made in the anteroom.

It required more than a week for some of the treasurers to recover from the most successful treasurers' ball.

Bombing of Judge Scarboro's home on N. Wells street has deadened activities in the 42d ward, where the height of Chicago's night life is found.

Chicago newspapers have tightened up on all press agents. There hasn't been a chorus girl story sprung for the last seven months, and there have been a bunch of merry-merries in town. Cameramen are borrowing society girls for their picturial plants.

Pop songs are getting a nifty plug in Chicago, with "The Chicago Tribune" illustrating a currently favorite ditty daily and offering prizes totaling $5,000 for those guessing titles of the illustrations.

The daily's radio station, WGN, is broadcasting each number the night previous to publication of the picture.

NEWS FROM THE DAILIES

This department contains rewritten theatrical news items as published during the week in the daily papers of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and London. Variety takes no credit for these news items; each has been rewritten from a daily paper.

NEW YORK

F. B. O. and Macfadden have arranged a tie-up whereby the film concern will make two subjects based on "True Story" (magazine) yarns. In return Macfadden's publishing outfit will run page ads on the pictures for six months in the affiliated magazines besides Macfadden's two tabs, "Graphic" (New York) and "Daily News" (Philadelphia).

The second story selected will be the winner of a contest.

Edna Davenport's gesture toward reconciliation with her husband, Frank Tinney, was brusquely chopped when Tinney's father, with whom he is living in Philadelphia, said coldly there was nothing doing in that direction.

Juanita Hanson, involved in suit to recover for jewelry purchased, replied that trinkets were purchased and paid for in full from the suing jeweler's former partner, a woman friend of the actress, and the action is designed only to embarrass the original partner due to a business disagreement.

Dr. Jules S. Nayfack's suit against his wife, Emily Nord, dancer, gave another airing to stage domestic rows, when the dentist charged misconduct by his wife with her dancing partner, Dan Sebastian. Nathan Burkan asked the court to broaden the inquiry into other alleged instances of misconduct and the motion was taken under advisement.

With Blanche Mahaffey, former WAMPAS baby star, now wife of millionaire, getting a publicity play, Ziegfeld hopped aboard to cop space by offering her a part in a new play.

Pauline Garon, born in Canada and a British subject, obtained her American citizenship papers in the New York federal court Monday.

Marilyn Miller goes right on denying marriage engagements. This time it was William John Warburton, young New York society man, whose mama co-operated in the denials.

Stage marriages continue to get five agate lines, while the divorces and breach of promise suits get the 24-point display heads. The $200,000 breach of promise suit against Robert Ames, brought by Helen Lambert, club hostess, is being aired just now. Court refused to order examination of defendant before trial.

Several of the dailies made a little feature story of Maria Gambarelli's retirement from the Roxy personnel to run a training school for dancers.

Gertrude Ederle doesn't stay out of type long at a time. Her publicity is nicely handled on a permanent basis. After a lapse of several weeks she crashed on the theft of her car outside a Newark theatre and its subsequent recovery.

It was inevitable. Josephine Haldeman Julius, Kansas City girl who went into a companionate marriage and raised a country-wide storm, has gone on the stage. She appeared at a Lawrence (Kan.) theatre doing a "hot dance," and the New York tabloids seemed to be plentifully supplied with revealing photos of her in costume.

Otto Kahn placed on the market the site assembled on West 57th street for the new Metropolitan Opera House. The spot has been abandoned and the opera is again house hunting. Kahn bought the 57th street plot and held it for disposal of the opera directors at his own expense. It was decided the location would be too expensive.

Domestic disagreement of the Philip Plants (wife is Constance Bennett) hinted when Mrs. Plant left the home at 3 East 86th street and was reported in a sanitarium. Young husband grouchily refused to comment.

Several of the New York dailies fell for the late story from Philadelphia of the finding of Betty Compson's mother in a Pennsylvania almshouse. "The World" ditched the item after the first edition and then printed a flat correction, retraction and apology in its customary frank manner. Several of the tabloids played the yarn up and then let it go at that, making no correction. Betty Compson's mother lives next door to Betty in Hollywood, where she has a mansion and five servants, the two dwellings occupying a whole block.

The story started in Philadelphia, where a reporter traced down a tip by phone to the almshouse superintendent. Only trouble was that reporter mistook name of "Betty Thompson" for Compson.

LOS ANGELES

Johnny Walker, picture actor, objects to anyone else using his name. He petitioned Judge Sproul to vacate a court order permitting one Norbert Eugene Walker to legally adopt the name of Johnny Walker.

Mae Busch, film actress, has been living apart from her husband, John E. Cassell, according to friends. Miss Busch refuses to comment on the separation, declaring she is leaving on a vaudeville tour shortly. The pair were married in July, 1926, after an elopement to Riverside.

After filing a divorce suit against Jack Wagner, scenario writer, Mrs. Winifred Wagner withdrew the action. In the complaint she charged that Wagner had spanked her in presence of friends because there was no liquor in the house.

A man who can't remember when, where or by whom he was married should study up a bit before asking for a divorce, Judge Keetch told C. K. Moehring, film stunt man. Latter came to court for trial on his suit against Velma Edwards, but suffered a lapse of memory about important details. Court told him to return, when his mind was refreshed.

Norman G. Ross, U. S. immigration inspector and writer, was killed by Mexicans near the border line while he was taking them to Westmoreland after an arrest. His wife and child live here in Los Angeles.

Adolph Ochs, editor and publisher of the New York "Times," is on the coast for a month's rest before going back east. He made the trip by water. Arriving on the same boat was Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta "Constitution."

Julian G. Dennert, reported to have made statements that he divorced Renee Adoree, came to Los Angeles from Reno, Nev., to deny everything. Dennert cleared himself with the police.

A bandit who figured on cashing in on some $1,500, week-end receipts of the Brown Derby cafe, was given the cold shoulder by Irene Smith, cashier of the place. The girl slammed the door in the would-be stick-up guy's face when he ordered her to throw her hands up at the point of a gun.

Ronald Coleman will star in a submarine story to be produced by Samuel Goldwyn for United Artists. Dana Burnet is writing an original story for the picture.

Adela Rogers St. Johns, writer, announced her engagement to Richard Hyland, Stanford university football star. Wedding is to take place this summer. She was divorced last year from Ivan St. Johns, former western editor of "Photoplay."

When Colette Helene Merton, picture actress, offered to leave her engagement ring as security for a fine for speeding, Judge Reed continued her case until she can raise the money.

Mme. Norma Lutge, America's first woman impresario, who brought to San Francisco its first symphony orchestra, is back in Los Angeles after 30 years.

Johnny Walker, screen actor, and Maude Wayne, formerly of the silver sheet, will be married soon.

Walter Gordon, 19, film extra, was arrested at Santa Monica, accused by police for impersonating Fred Thomson, and also passing fictitious checks. With Gordon at the time was a woman who gave her name as Minnie McKelvey of Calabasas.

Joan Crawford would not admit her secret marriage to Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., though she wears a ring on the correct finger. "We'll never be married," she said, "I want to keep on loving him."

Mary Ellen Randall, dancer and picture actress, wants to be free. Her complaint in Superior court states that Robert E. Randall, whom she married less than a year ago, has brought her nothing but grief.

Helene Costello has filed suit for divorce in superior court from John W. (Jack) Regan, whom she married about six months ago. Regan is a scion of a wealthy eastern family and the pair had known each other since childhood. They separated a few weeks ago.

Betty Compson was indignant when a report spread here that her "mother," a Mrs. Anna Fisher, was found living in a poorhouse at Pottsville, Pa. Miss Compson married to James Cruze, denied even knowing of the woman and proved that her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Compson, lives in Glendale, Cal., and is far from being in want.

Lottie Pickford, sister of Mary Pickford, got a divorce in Paris seven months ago from Allan Forrest Fisher, known on the screen as Allan Forrest. This was disclosed by Forrest.

Couple were married in Hollywood six years ago, after Miss Pickford was divorced from Albert George Rupp, New York broker. There is a daughter, 10, by that marriage. Forrest was also divorced from Ann Little, picture actress, in 1918.

Cyril Chadwick left for London to visit his wife and family. He expects to be away several months.

Tony Leonard, manager of the Mission theatre, on Division street, received a fractured skull from a fall from the stage into the pit. His condition is serious.

Judge Yankwich dismissed the $150,000 heart balm suit of R. S. Bosco against Earl Fraser, Ocean Park amusement man. Busch accused Fraser of causing his wife, Sadie Busch, to leave him. Fraser denied it.

Hollywood police investigated the stories told them by Charles Morton, film actor, badly burned from the contents of a kettle of scalding water which landed him in the Receiving hospital. Morton first told the police that his wife had dashed the water in his face after a quarrel then later changed the story around and ascribed his injuries as accidental. Neighbors of Morton told a different tale and informed the police that Mrs. Morton was in the east. As a result of this police picked up a girl known only as "Lola," whom Morton later introduced as his wife. Although police records were conflicting in the matter no charges were made.

CHICAGO

Harry Duffy, alleged manager of the Triangle cafe here, was released in $10,000 on charges preferred by Mrs. Josephine Ryan, 29, a red-haired beauty contest winner of a few years back. Mrs. Ryan charged that Duffy shot at her.

Ferdinand Steindel, pianist and orchestra leader, pianist at the Chicago theatre for some time, committed suicide Feb. 18 by hurling himself from the window of his seventh floor apartment at the Algonquin hotel, Chicago. Steindel was called on the phone from the lobby of the hotel by three men who exhibited badges to the hotel clerk and a check in Steindel's name. The check, they asserted, was not honored by the bank. A petition in bankruptcy was filed by Steindel two weeks ago.

According to the hotel clerk, the men had been invited to go up to the musician's rooms. While they were waiting for the elevator the body hit the street just outside the lobby window. His wife was in the rooms in a hysterical condition.

Stanley G. Potter, Tully Warner and Mickey Meyers, racketeers, are being held by the Chicago police, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. The men were the "organizers" of an ethereal "press club" and had sold over $1,500 worth of spurious tickets for a "press club banquet."

Town Hall police are investigating a fusillade of revolver shots, fired at the Lido club cafe which caused a panic among 150 patrons. One of the shots struck Nicholas Brown, waiter, who is not expected to recover. Patrons, when questioned, were unwilling to reveal who fired the revolver.

SAN FRANCISCO

Workmen excavating for the new Fox theatre uncovered three layers of coal at depths ranging from 30 to 60 feet down. The site was formerly the bed of Hayes Creek.

Francis Long, confessed dressing room thief, will go to trial in superior court on charge preferred by Vinton Ferrera, former musical director of the Imperial. Long admitted stealing a suit and a wallet from the bandman.

Louis Correa, 22, married, and living in Berkeley, and Mary Espinosa, 17 both said to be converts and evangelists in the faith of Aimee Semple McPherson, were taken into custody when found living in a companionate "marriage." Correa was charged with a statutory offense and the girl sent to the local detention home. When apprehended

Brown, Horseman, Indicted Under Mann Act Charge

Washington, Feb. 21.

The Daniel Brown, also known as H. D. Brown, indicted here under the Mann Act by a Federal Grand Jury, this month, is stated to be wealthy and one of the best known turfmen in the country.

Indictment charges that on April 12, 1925, Brown transported Constance Clayton, 16, from Florida to the Capital for immoral purposes. Charge is covered in three counts.

Jury indicted Brown after hearing evidence presented by Constance A. McCuen, said to be the married name of the alleged victim; Margaret James Clayton, Marvin A. Tyler, Mary L. Thatcher, Nephi W. Clayton, Nan J. Clayton and Robert P. Burness.

Brown, at this writing, had not yet been apprehended, though it was stated his whereabouts were known and that his arrest would be but a matter of a week to 10 days.

Speed Holman, Champ

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

As a result of establishing a new world record for looping by making 1,093 consecutive revolutions in his mail plane over a local flying field, Charles W. "Speed" Holman, national air derby winner and Minneapolis mail pilot, is in receipt of vaudeville offers.

The record previously was held by Gene Shank, St. Paul student, who had looped over St. Paul 515 times, beating the previous world's record of 315 loops.

Over 4,000 people watched Holman start looping at 11 a. m. and keep it up continuously until 3:45 p. m., without once straightening out his machine to gain new altitude. He swung out of one loop directly into the next, gaining altitude when necessary by enlarging the loop.

Indoor Arena in Park

An indoor sports arena to seat 25,000 is to be built within the confines of Starlight Amusement Park, Bronx, this spring. The structure will measure 250x450.

A number of Chicago sportsmen are reported behind the venture and much of the building's material will come from that city.

NEWSPAPERMEN SERIES

World War for that paper. He has also been editor of the Washington "Post" and the Philadelphia "Public Ledger."

For five months Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the N. Y. "Times," refused to entertain the proposal. When he was finally sold on the idea of the good will medium offered by the newsreel, he became enthusiastic and personally directed the shooting of the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Associated Press recently. No meeting of the Associated Press directorate has ever been reproduced, even for a still photograph.

U. P.'s Yearn

On learning of the Fox deal with the Associated Press, Carl Bickerel, president of the United Press, wrote to Will Hays protesting that U. P. had been ignored and asking if Fox wanted to incur the "displeasure" of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. Hays sent the letter to Fox with the result that a reply was forwarded to the effect that U. P. had not been overlooked and that Fox intended to photograph the leading lights connected with that organization.

Among the newspapermen to be cameraed are Col. McCormick, president of the International Harvester Co., and publisher of "Liberty," N. Y. "Daily News" and Chicago "Tribune"; Ralph Pulitzer, publisher of the N. Y. "World"; E. Lansing Ray, publisher of the St. Louis "Republic"; Col. McLean, publisher of the Philadelphia "Bulletin"; Wm. T. Dewart, publisher of the N. Y. "Sun"; Ralph Block, Newark, Pittsburgh and Cleveland newspapers; Norman E. Mack, editor and publisher of the Buffalo "Times"; Ralph E. Noyes, president of the A. P. and publisher of the Washington "Star"; Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the "Saturday Evening Post," "Ladies Home Journal," "Country Gentleman" and Philadelphia "Ledger."

Negotiations are under way to shoot William Randolph Hearst, Arthur Brisbane and publishers of the various Hearst newspapers.

HUDKINS BEATS BAKER IN GREAT SOCK BATTLE

Wildcat Evens Up Defeat and Earns Right to Meet Dundee —Rosenbloom Again

By JACK PULASKI

Great fighters appear to be born. Ace Hudkins may not be exactly great, but he has a world of color. The answer is that Madison Square Garden was packed when the Nebraska Wildcat met Sergeant Sammy Baker Friday night and beat him without question. Sometimes the boys sense a socking battle and sometimes they stay away when it doesn't look kosher or exciting.

Even when two of the eight rounders went sour and were stopped by the referee because one boxer in each bout was outclassed, the customers got their $11 worth when Hudkins and Baker started arguing. It might have been an early evening, for in the second round Sammy went to his knees from a poke in the stomach. At four he changed position and rested on one knee, getting up at nine and stalling off the red-head from the west.

Then in the seventh Baker was again dropped with a body blow. He was half through the ropes and complained of being fouled. Louis Magnolia rejected the claim and the count continued. Magnolia probably didn't see the blow, and it is fair to say that Baker was not stalling. He has the fighter's heart.

It wasn't a one-sided contest by any means. Only that the Ace boy can take it and shake off blows like water accounts for his staying perpendicular. Baker can hit and several times he measured Hudkins and landed on the chin. Ace was stung without question. For once he didn't do his usual stuff, and he held in the clinches. Baker copped the third round and in the eighth he might have leveled the Wildcat. Either he didn't smack hard enough or Hudkins can absorb anything. And that Baker can hit. Ask Ace himself. Last summer at the Polo Grounds Sammy damaged Ace's eye so badly that they stopped the match. That was a technical knockout.

Ace's Hitting

By winning decisively, Hudkins is now the leading contender for the welter title, and a match with Joe Dundee is in line. Ace, while a socker, has hardly been known as a K. O. boy around the east, but he is leaning on 'em now. Sammy reeled backward several times in addition to the knock-downs. Ace's style is to crouch, plant his head on an opponent's shoulder and whale away with both hands. He is all action. He rushes from the corner at the bell, sometimes before the bell. He is always anxious to mix it. He never stops and that is why the fans like him. Every one of the 10 rounds was action. Baker seemed to have hurt his right late in the fight, a break for Ace.

Maxie Rosenbloom put on another excellent exhibition when, in the semi-final, he won over Jack McVey, middleweight, regarded as one of the most dangerous men in the division. Maxie outhit and outfought the cocky colored boy. He also did most of the leading. His recent showing against K. O. Phil Kaplan was something of an eye-opener, because Rosie displayed class that had been lacking in his performances the past year. Maxie won himself some more boosters and it may be recalled his defeat by Leo Lomski last summer was nothing to be ashamed of. Leo has worried plenty others since them, while Maxie has been coming along nicely, as predicted when he burst into the pugilistic limelight. Probably not a champ, but still a real fighter.

Chorus Beaut as "Mgr." Of Pro Basketball Team

Chorus girls have been used for a variety of stunts, but new one is "managing" a professional basketball team.

Dollie Ferguson, former beaut in "Scandals," is boss of the New York Eagles, crack aggregation of basket tossers. She dons a uniform and appears on the floor for the practice session to show her "form," but does not participate in the game.

15 YEARS AGO

(From Variety and "Clipper")

Film "trust" (Patents Co.) was nearing its finish. Kinetograph, split-off from General Film Co., threatened to handle distribution of manufacturers outside the "trust" circle, which would throw the whole trade open to independents, since Kinetograph allies controlled patents enough to operate against the Edison interests.

Meanwhile there was dissension among the "trust" manufacturing group. Richard Rowland, as a preferred stockholder of General Film, brought suit to restrain the "trust" manufacturers from distributing any more General Film Co. surplus, amounting to $1,000,000, among themselves.

One style of talking pictures was a flop, while another was being exploited. The Proctor houses tried out an Edison device employing synchronized phonograph for one week and then signed for the Kinemacolor (natural color) pictures as a substitute feature, the rights having been left open by the failure of another deal for New York territory.

The U. B. O. (Keith's) had been trying out the policy of 12-act bills. That style of show was demonstrated as a failure, and "big-time" was hot on the trail of important "name" features. For the moment it looked like a victory for the actors, who were demanding higher salaries and the elimination of the "try-out."

Another thing that was worrying vaudeville was the growing importance of tabloids in the Middle West. That type of show was assuming a status that looked to be a menace to pop vaudeville.

Dustin Farnum, playing South in "The Littlest Rebel," announced this was his last year on the stage. He contemplated pictures for the future. William Farnum had just closed in the same play in the West, but was not yet pointed for the screen.

50 YEARS AGO

(From "Clipper")

The "petrified man" found in Pueblo and exhibited as a fossil was shown to have been a fake. One George Hull molded the figure out of plaster of Paris, ground bones, ox blood and eggs and had it baked in a kiln in Pennsylvania. It was said P. T. Barnum financed the hoax. The figure was shipped to the southwest as "fine machinery" and then buried and discovered according to plan.

Prohibition isn't the only reform that looked absurd 50 years ago but has become reality. A Brooklyn woman began a crusade to compel barber shops to close on Sunday and was looked upon as a mild sort of crank.

The country was full of co-operative professional baseball clubs. New York had ten ready for the approaching season. Philadelphia alone had between 12 and 15.

"The Clipper" had a leading editorial bemoaning the decline of tragedy as popular stage offering, and the growing predominance of variety, minstrelsy and burlesque, typical forms of comedy attractions.

Ben Cotton, the comedian, produced a new play, "Faithful Bob the Bootblack," at Woods' theatre, Brooklyn, the event taking interest from the fact that it marked the debut of the star's young daughter, Idalene Cotton, known to vaudeville fans of this generation.

Another premiere was that of "The Mother's Secret," starring Mrs. Rachel Macauley, at Macauley's theatre, Louisville, Ky. William Gillette played a minor role in the piece.

Film "Names" and Vaudeville

A precautionary word to the picture players who may listen to the seductive wording of the vaudeville agent without knowing the thereafter. It's not altogether Don't, but it is to listen, stop and investigate.

With the picture stages nowadays lined up against those of vaudeville and with but a bare two-a-day theatre or so to uphold the prestige of the once fordimable Big Time, picture players perhaps seeing vaudeville as a recreationary period between pictures, may well deliberate whether the vaude incursion is to be of benefit to them, in sufficient importance in the eyes of the picture or lay public.

It isn't that vaudeville attracts largely enough to mark a difference in any picture fan draw the Hollywood names may have. It's the billing over the country. Picture goers read the amusement advertisements. They see the names of the picture players in the local vaudville house. And they may as no doubt they do, say, "Oh, Soandso is through in pictures."

That for the public. But how about the trade itself?

In the film trade where a name goes out in the picture houses for personal appearances, whether with their own picture or as an individual film stage attraction, the surmise is that they are picking up some easy money. Everyone in the trade and out says nothing. The names may attract to the picture houses as they fit in there and every one is satisfied, with no prestige or standing dented.

But not so in vaudeville theatres. Very seldom can a picture name draw to the same extent in vaudeville that it would in pictures. And the impression is entirely different. So much so that a vaudeville engagement for a film name can not possibly do that name any good other than in the actual money the salary in vaudeville means.

No one in pictures wishes to leave the impression that he or she is not in demand; that they are passing out of the picture's picture; that there is no call for them on the home lot. Yet that is what the vaudeville run may do to those of the film field alone. To those of the stage who were on the stage previously to a picture appearance, the stage showing is accepted as a matter of due course and a desire by the player to return to the footlights, a natural wish.

But those picture people who have established a name of any account on the screen alone should hold that name to the screen, until they are about ready to retire. It will be worth more to them exclusively on the film than on the stage unless it is a picture house stage.

And until the time arrives where it matters little where the appearance may be, the picture player of any repute or favor should dodge the wily lures of the vaudeville solicitor, for vaudeville holds nothing today anywhere in these United States for anyone of rank, outside of vaudeville. That also takes in the legit, except the money.

Vaudeville is completely submerged by pictures, and more so daily. Pictures have picked up vaudeville and will carry it onward, where vaudeville itself fails to do either.

Just a suggestion here from the outside for those who may not see outside.

INSIDE STUFF

ON PICTURES

Stage units at the Capitol, New York (Loew's), will be resumed as individual house productions, upon the merged Publix-Loew theatre operation becoming straightened out. Until then traveling units may come into the Capitol in alternation with Paramount, the surplus units taking up their time at points on the combined chain and smoothly touring thereafter.

It would not be expedient for the joined houses to play a new unit weekly at the Paramount and Capitol, New York, without the necessary time thereafter on the road. At present the temporary arrangement is in existence until the Loew houses added to the Publix become set on the unit score.

When the Capitol is again producing on its own, it is likely that much of the weekly stage unit material there will be sent to Indianapolis, for a week's showing in Loew's Palace in that city, shortly to open, and then go to Loew's State, St. Louis. At present the Publix-Loew stage units on the route will not play either of those southwestern houses, and the two theatres will be furnished with their stage shows from New York. Publix is interested in other presentation houses in both St. Louis and Indianapolis.

They tell a story on the eastern end of a wire coming from the Coast for a picture firm to try and get out of a $1,000 weekly contract with a musical director. The man given the "out" assignment called in the musician and was pleasantly surprised when the baton waver opened the conversation by saying he had just received another offer and would like to withdraw.

The manipulator who got the "break" then telegraphed the Coast informing how everything had been fixed, only to receive another message asking: "Why didn't you make him buy back the contract?"

To save cost of a special trade showing, United Artists permitted the Loop, new burlesque house in Detroit, to screen "The Gaucho" at the theatre's invitational opening. The fact that it was the opening of a theatre failed to dim the burlesque angle, and a number of exhibs are reported to have remained away on that account.

The industrial film racket is badly crimped, by report, due to the efforts of some shoestringers who offer to turn out film of this character for 20 cents a foot. What they neglect to explain is that the rate does not include cutting, editing, titles, continuity or any other essential without which a picture is worthless.

The procedure of the shoestringers after getting their down payment is to hire a camera and suitcase lights and shoot as much film in as short a time as possible. Odds and ends are then turned over to the company which generally find it of no value.

This sours business men on the whole proposition of pictures as a means of exploitation, sales visualization or personnel training.

Hollywood pins this on a prominent film producer who would rather play cards than eat.

He was sitting in a poker game with three strangers on a recent trip west when the train conductor called him aside to inform the players were crooked card sharks. "I know that," replied the producer, "but who else is there to play with?"

After finishing his first picture under a stock contract at the Pathe-DeMille studios, Joseph Striker, actor, was assigned to dressing room 13 on the lot. That was six months ago.

The player has not worked since, although on salary under his contract.

Hearst's Washington papers, "Times" and "Herald" gave Monta Bell, former newspaperman in the Capital but now picture director, an opportunity to answer the home town critics of his recent "Man, Woman and Sin," as reported last week. Both papers gave Bell a column with the director wondering why all the excitement. The scenes, he said, objected to could have been credited to any city and been equally as true—and there would have been no complaint. He also said that numerous of the best known critics had praised his picture.

Couple of paragraphs were eliminated from the Bell letter, these containing a comeback at his critics from a personal angle—another asked what other city had its chief employer (meaning the Government), having white and colored working together, particularly in the South.

Carl Laemmle may be finding it difficult to iron out the political situation at University City, with Henry Henderson still the general manager. It is said there are now three factions in the studio, with Henderson steering clear of all politics and keeping on the job.

It is said that the position of director-general was offered to Roy H. Welch, former trade paper editor, brought to the coast by Laemmle some months ago. Welch asked time to think over the offer and next day was informed the offer had been withdrawn.

Universal's head then made George Melford, the director, an offer to go in as director-general of the studio. Melford is under contract to the company to direct a series of pictures, with one more to be made. Melford is said to have asked for complete authority in his position, with this power refused him, and he declined the job.

RANDOM REMARKS

By NELLIE REVELL

During my recent stay in Chicago, while coming out of the United Artists theatre, I saw Eddie Foy standing in front of another theatre on Randolph street. It was zero weather, but he was holding his hat in his hand.

"Put your hat on Eddie," someone called to him, "You'll freeze, and besides, you don't have to take your hat off to anyone." "O yes I do," he answered, and seemed to be in deep meditation.

Later that day he reminded me that it was the site of the old Iroquois theatre in front of which he had been standing. Just 24 years since the disastrous fire in that theatre, and Eddie was the star of the ill-fated attraction, "Blue Beard." There is a fine new theatre on that site now, but Eddie Foy never passed it without baring his head.

He never wanted to be called Edward or Edwin. He didn't even like to be called "Mr." but preferred Eddie.

Many stories will be revived and accredited to him, for which he may or may not be responsible. But there can be little doubt about the incident of Lee Shubert asking Eddie to name the last Foy baby after him. Without commenting on how the two names would look in combination the proud father reached for his pencil and wrote on a desk-pad, "Lee Foy."

That very popular dance, "The Ebony Rear" (slang for Blackbottom) seems to the Rev. A. E. Guest to be nothing less than the inhibitions of primitive animalism. Mr. Guest has just returned to his native heath in England. Twenty years he has spent in West Central Africa teaching the savages to eliminate a dance in which, according to the minister, each kick and each wriggle has a meaning too horrible to mention. Mr. Guest now feels that his life work has been wasted, for, returning he finds his country men and women indulging in the very gyrations that he spent years abolishing among the heathen.

Maurice Campbell, prohibition officer of this district, is a member in good standing of the "I was a newspaperman myself once" club. He has also been a theatrical manager and a press agent. His recent raid on Helen Morgan's night club proves he had lost none of his dramatic sense or his instinct for a smash hit.

It seems, however, that Helen didn't like the idea of having her nice little night club chopped down like the historic cherry tree. She didn't even want it chopped up, and filed a complaint at Washington. And, according to an editorial in the "Evening World," or perhaps it was the "Sun" (I read so many), Mr. Campbell was called to Washington and admonished against playing too rough.

And now we may expect to find all revenue officers business card reading: "Raids by appointment only."

Edward Douglas, an English actor for many years identified with the American stage, is desperately ill, and his recovery despaired of. The Actors' Fund recently made it possible for him to move from Bellevue where his case was pronounced extremely serious, to Seton hospital.

A trip to Saranac was out of the question because of his weakened condition. His wife made a heroic effort to take care of him at home, at the same time supporting herself and her child by nursing outside cases.

Joseph Frieberg, proprietor of Hotel Somerset, has returned from a six weeks vacation spent in Germany, Austria, Paris, and a dip into Ireland.

F. P. A.'s Conning Tower is my authority for the rather surprising information that the management of Carnegie Hall is remiss in fire precaution. I quote Mr. Adams:

"All during concerts, including intermissions, the gate leading from the east stairway from the dress circle is locked. The crowd that would pile up on that stairway in the event of a panic, trying to get upstairs again and down the west stairway, is a horrible thing to think about."

If William A. Brady tries to tell you that he doesn't like the part he plays of a bibulous attorney in "A Free Soul," don't believe him. Nobody could play it the way he does without being heart and soul in it.

While I'm in the mood for confession, here's a joke on myself and the folks behind me at a performance last week. So true to life was Mr. Brady's rum-soaked legal luminary that it was suggested he had actually gotten into the "spirit" of the role.

But at the close of the performance he stepped out of his character, for a curtain speech, and we realized that he had slipped one over on us, for he was never more sober in his life.

I hope when Riza Marks, of Hollywood, reads this, she will do just what I'm betting she will—and that is to communicate with her mother immediately. Miss Marks is the daughter of Nellie Sterling, erstwhile performer, and Hugo Marks, musical director. Mrs. Marks visited me Sunday and is very anxious to hear from her daughter, whom she has not seen or heard from in three years.

Mrs. Charles Grapewin, professionally Anna Chance, has opened a modiste shop in Hollywood. If her stock and styles are up to the announcements of her fashion revue, the bankrolls of the married men of Hollywood are in for a tough time.

Stephen Clow's article in a current magazine says that there are more brains then money among the inmates of the Atlantic Federal prison. His list of the professions of the prisoners includes but one actor and one theatrical producer, and one author, while there are 29 bankers, 22 physicians and 16 lawyers.

No newspapermen or press agents are reported as so-journeying there. Mr. Clow says that one of the famous wits of the prison frequently remarks to departing prisoners:

"My boy you ought to go out of here a happy man. Think of all of the celebrities you have met here who would kick you out of their office outside."

11 PAYING STOCKS IN CHI HELD UP BY LOOP'S HIGH PRICES

Mostly Replacing Vaudeville in Neighborhoods—Stock Now a Major Entertainment Out There—75 Cents Top in Picture House Town

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Stock has taken its place as one of the major departments of show business in Chicago, with 11 of the pop-priced legits now in operation.

Success of the permanent players is attributed in no small way to the high legit scales set in Loop houses. This is essentially a picture house town, and it can't see big admission money.

Several of the houses playing stock were previously vaudeville. Vaudeville is a dead issue here.

The list includes the Kedzie, Chateau, Warrington, National, Calumet (So. Chicago), Grand, Minturn-Central, Goodman, Evanston, and the Palace and Logan Sq. houses.

Average top 75c. week nights, and $1 otherwise.

"Optimists" Cold

The Shubert roof house, advertised as the Casino de Paris, appeared to handicap the revue, patterned after London's co-operative show, "The Co-Optimists." Melville Gideon staged the American version.

The 10 players in "The Optimists" played on a commonwealth basis. The Shuberts proposed to insert a dance band, with dancing to occupy the time from 10 o'clock or. and the show proper to be given at midnight. The players, however, did not take to the late hour idea kindly and it was decided to shut down.

No production loss of any amount. One of those 30c. hook-ups.

NEAR-SUICIDE REFORMS

Alexander Lockwood Tried Omaha Gas—Bad Booze and Lonesomeness

Too much alcohol and not enough companionship nearly cost Alexander Lockwood, of the Brandies Stock Players his life. After a performance last week he went to his hotel room and began brooding, he said, deciding the best thing would be to end it all. He turned on the phonograph and the gas.

He thought it best to call one of his friends in the company, Claire Sinclair, to say good-bye. He also told the room clerk to send someone to his room in about an hour. After that he fainted. But the call had aroused Miss Sinclair's curiosity, and the young player was revived after hotel people broke into his room.

He returned to the stage and has decided that it's better to live.

CAST CHANGES

Irene Dunn will leave "She's My Baby," replaced by Pauline Mason.

Louise Hunter was forced to leave "The Golden Dawn" at Hammerstein's Saturday. She was removed to the Harbor hospital and operated on for appendicitis. She was replaced by Lucy Lord. Miss Hunter was out of the show recently for several days when she was wed to Henry Haven Windsor, reputed to be a wealthy publisher and resident of Illinois.

Robert Chisholm, out of "Dawn" with a throat ailment, has returned to the cast.

Killing Censored Out

The electrocution scene has been deleted from "An American Tragedy," being given a stock showing this week at the Rialto, Hoboken, N. J., by order of Bernard McFeeley, commissioner of public safety.

The electrocution scene is a silhouette shadow effect at the end of the show. McFeeley had seen the production in New York and when billing went up for the stock presentation, he ruled it out.

Burns Mantle Alibis In Matters of Ages

New, York, Feb. 18.

Editor Variety:

Thanks for calling my attention to the errors of the birthday table in "The Best Plays, 1919-27."

I have been conscious of them for a long time and try each year to get them straightened out.

But you know how the players are about their ages. You know how silly we all are about our ages. How old are you? Really? Aw . . .

The early tables were compiled from such records as were then available—Who's Who, World almanacs, newspapers morgues and such.

Then corrections were made. Sometimes the injured person would write in. Sometimes they called in person or by phone. One lady's husband swore on bibles and phone books that his wife was years and years younger than the table recorded—which, I found on further investigation, made her the leading woman of a New Jersey stock company at the old-fashioned tender age of 13 or thereabouts.

Then there are the helpful friends. You know—"That woman (man) 32? Listen, Burns, I played with her (him) 22 years ago in Milwaukee and I know she (he) was going on 26 then."

Also you know what printers can do to type. And even proofreaders? Hey.

And then I suspect a lot of actors live faster than others. Anyway, thanks for the tip-off.

I shall go on trying to straighten the record out until it is—shall we say approximately true? Save in the case of obvious errors, I think it is that now.

Hope you—and the boys—will be interested enuf to help.

Burns Mantle.

Helene Lambert's Damage Suit Against Ames

Helene G. Lambert, actress, who it is said was a hostess at the Helen Morgan Club, recently raided by the Federal authorities has brought suit in the New York County Supreme Court to recover $200,000 damages from Robert E. Ames, actor, for alleged breach of promise of marriage.

In her complaint Miss Lambert declares she became engaged to the actor in January, 1927, and they were to be married the following month at her home town, Waukegan, Ill. She further claims she was induced by the defendant to accompany him to Chicago where he was to open "The Ragged Edge" on Feb. 10, the day of the marriage, and if she did not do so he would not become her husband. Miss Lambert alleges she was left alone in a room in a hotel in Chicago on the day her wedding was set, and on the same day Ames married Muriel Oakes of the Packard family of the "400" in Chi.

Bannister's Ptsbg. Stock

Pittsburgh capital is backing Harry Bannister, husband of Ann Harding, of "The Trial of Mary Dugan," in a summer stock policy at the Nixon, Pittsburgh.

Bannister has taken a lease on the house for the summer. Miss Harding will appear with the stock intermittently if she closes with the meller at the National, New York, before the summer.

BESSIE LOVE'S "BURLESQUE"

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Bessie Love will get away from the screen long enough to make her stage debut in the Coast production of "Burlesque," opening in Santa Barbara, March 2.

Miss Love has quite a local reputation as a dancer.

5 SHOWS OUT

Among outgoing attractions of which there are at least five on the weekly list, only one is a success.

"Salvation," presented by Arthur Hopkins, will be taken off at the Empire, staying but four weeks. It would have closed sooner but for the agency buy. Little box office trade otherwise. Business started around $8,000 and slipped away down.

"SALVATION"

Opened Jan. 31. Anderson ("Journal") commented, "intelligent and interesting study," while Hammond ("Herald Tribune") found it "hollow." Woollcott ("World") among the approvers, saying "sentitive and sure-footed play."

Variety (Abel) predicted: "early demise."

"Atlas and Eva," presented by Harry Delf, at the Mansfield will close Saturday, after three weeks of weak business. The gross last week estimated not over $3,000.

"ATLAS AND EVA"

Opened Feb. 6. Winchell ("Graphic") said: "pretty feeble piece." General regrets author had come astray from what might have been a good comedy.

Variety: "drab theme scarcely promises run."

"Hit the Deck," presented by Vincent Youmans (Lew Fields was also originally interested), will tour from the Belasco after an excellent run of 44 weeks. It was the first musical for that house and capacity ruled throughout summer and fall, with takings averaging over $25,000 (capacity), until the last two months.

"HIT THE DECK"

Opened April 25, 1927. Hammond ("Herald Tribune") said: "smart, pretty musical." Atkinson ("Times") liked its "snap and ginger."

Variety (Ibee) wrote: "may not rate the rank of smash but is good entertainment and should get across. Its high scale is the possible barrier."

"The Optimists," co-operative revue backed by the Shuberts, closed at the Century Roof (Casino de Paris) Saturday after three weeks. Gross estimated around $9,000 the first week, then dropped.

"THE OPTIMISTS"

Opened Jan. 30. Ignored by the major reviewers.

Variety (Abel) said: "will last as long as Joe Leblang can plug it, and that won't be long."

In addition, "Happy," a musical comedy at the Earl Carroll, stopped and was put on again, co-operative, at Daly's, intends trying the road starting next week. It played 10 weeks in all.

MURPHY'S COMEDIANS' PAY

Girl Musicians Complain of New Managers of Coast Rep Company

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Virginia Darnell, Ada Duffin and Aliene Reeves, girl musicians with Murphy's Comedians at the Belmont, filed wage claims with the Labor Bureau charging they were laid off with salary due them. The complaints name Ralph Parr and Otto L. Olmsteadt as responsible head of the show. These two are understood to have taken over the show from Murphy when the latter stepped out.

Palm Beachers Back

The managerial colony at Palm Beach appears to be winging its way back to Broadway earlier than usual. Lee Shubert is due back shortly because of the dearth of attractions in his houses, particularly those of a musical nature. He rarely stays south for long, however.

Arthur Hammerstein came back Sunday but may return. Sam H. Harris is due back Feb. 27, a new production needing his attention. Jed Harris, who has been south twice this winter, got back on Sunday. George S. Kaufman returned with him, giving as the reason for the short vacation that they couldn't get anything good to eat down there.

Keeps House Open

Show is due to go into rehearsal March 6 with Allan Kearns, Irene Delroy and Ben Bernie's band among the principals.

Sammy Lee will stage the dances and Roger Wolfe Kahn composed the score. Kearns is being pulled out of the firm's "Funny Face" for the new show.

The title, "Here's How," was previously used by the Mask and Wig Club of the University of Pennsylvania.

Saunder's New Year

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

John Monk Saunders has been signed for another year by Paramount.

He is now writing an original for Richard Dix after being laid up on account of injuries received in Pasadena.

APPENDICITIS, BUT COMPLAINT STANDS

Edna Leedom Operated Upon —Could Not Appear in "Lovely Lady"

Although Edna Leedom, of "Lovely Lady" was operated upon for appendicitis at the Park West hospital last Wednesday, substantiating her claim for sudden withdrawal from the show, the complaint filed with Equity by the Shuberts still stands and may be brought before the Council upon Miss Leedom's recovery.

The managers claimed when Miss Leedom walked out prior to the matinee at the Harris theatre, another reason was existant. They also believe the appendicitis attack came after that. It appears that Miss Leedom had entered her dressing room and was about to prepare for the matinee when a dispute aroose in which Milton Shubert was concerned. The latter stated Miss Leedom donned her coat and entered her car parked on 41st street. Dave Stamper, talking for her, declared that unless a cast change was made and unless a wardrobe mistress let out, was not reinstated, she would not appear.

Young Shubert and Stamper, who wrote the numbers for "Lady," hurried to Equity. An official there got Miss Leedom on the phone saying it was her duty to report to the theatre. She answered that she did not feel able to go on for the reason that she had gone through two sleepless nights.

Dr. Philip Grausman, her physician, consented to an examination by an Equity doctor, Dr. McCall Anderson, and a physician sent by the Shuberts. Dr. Anderson concurred with Dr. Grausman that an operation was imperative at once. It was stated Miss Leedom was on the operating table for two hours.

Stamper's status when calling at Equity was not clear. He explained his contribution to the show and though not mentioning the royalty angle said: "I am divorced from Miss Leedom."

P. J. Martin Killed

P. J. Martin, constructor of electric signs with theatre work his specialty, was fatally injured by a truck on 11th avenue last Wednesday. He succumbed at the French Hospital Saturday morning (Feb. 18).

Martin, well known along Broadway and among the profession, was a brother of Owen Martin, who opened with "Spring 3100" at the Little, New York, on the evening of the accident. He had called at the theatre to get six tickets, intending attending the premiere with his family. Returning to his shop for a moment, he hurried home to dress.

The truck knocked him down, the wheels crushing the abdomen.

Barry Townley Fined $150 on Booze Charge

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Barry Townley, author and playwright, arrested some time ago when police found three bottles of liquor in his car, was fined $150 by Judge Stutsman in Municipal court. Townley got into the jam when the officers came to his home looking for personal belongings of Dorothy Mackaye, who is in prison in connection with the death of her husband, Ray Raymond. Townley is the husband of Helen Wilkinson, a chum of Miss Mackaye, and the latter asked the police to recover some property she believed was at her girl friend's home. At the trial Townley denied knowledge of the liquor, declaring he saw it for the first time when the officers showed it to him.

SASCHA BEAUMONT RESTING

Miss Beaumont has been at the hospital for a month and may be there a week or so longer. She received a severe shock through the death of a close relative and was ordered into the institution for a disciplined rest.

GABRIEL'S TEACHING SYSTEM; LET STUDENTS FIGHT IT OUT

"Sun's" Dramatic Reviewer Sits as Coadjutor for N. Y. U.'s Class in "Dramatic Criticism"—One Co-ed "Went Nuts" Over "Goat Song"

Gilbert Gabriel, dramatic reviewer of the New York "Sun," has been conducting a class in "Dramatic Criticism and Editing" in the Commerce Schools of New York University in Washington square for several years now. Lively curiosity to see how such a subject might be handled in a mixed class of young collegians prompted Variety to smuggle a reporter into last Thursday evening's session.

The once-a-week class runs from 6.15 to 7.45, with between 70 and 80 young men and women assembled. Gabriel presiding over an entirely informal discussion. On this occasion he picked as text some comment upon "The Strange Interlude," from Heywood Broun's column in the "World" of that morning, having to do with the use of Freudian symbolism in the theatre. Broun made the point that the stage was backward in using new ideas, but Gabriel opposed the view, citing Ibsen's use of common symbols long before the Freudian theories were of general knowledge.

"Deep" Plays

The ice being thus broken a young woman wanted to know how one could penetrate the meaning of what she called "deep plays." With the reservation that one musn't confuse "deep" plays with obscure plays, Gabriel wanted to know what play she had in mind, and the girl confessed she was thinking of "The Goat Song." So the class slipped into discussion of that play and what it meant.

Gabriel admitted that on first viewing "The Goat Song" to him it was pretty hazy and indefinite, except for a dim feeling it had somewhere in it great beauty and meaning. He saw it again and again and ended by going to Germany during vacation to see more of Franz Werfel's work, upon which he talked briefly.

Girl Knew Backstage

He asked the young woman if she liked "Goat Song," and she confessed she was "nuts about it." Subsequently, Gabriel was at a loss to explain some point about technical lighting (it was the specific location of the "tormentor"), and it developed that the same young woman knew all about backstage. Whereupon she was brought forward to make diagrams on the blackboard and explain about lighting and grids and "teasers" and spots and bunch lights.

All this led into a debate about stage lighting. Gabriel didn't care particularly about Reinhardt's effects, because they were artificial, "arbitrary" and by drawing attention to a technical detail distracted the mind from the essence of the play.

Views on the subject were invited and a large number of arguments developed, some rather shrewd, but mostly trivial and juvenile. Several boobish young men held to the idea that inasmuch as people lived among commonplaces, when they went to the theatre "they wanted something different." Gabriel let the discussion ramble on, the understanding and the dumbbell together, shifting to something else when it got tiresome.

2-Way "Ghastly"

To get away from lighting technique, he asked if anybody had read a good play criticism during the week. Nobody had, as it happened, and he opined that none had been written because for a couple of weeks there has been only "ghastly" productions, which naturally brought out critical writing equally "ghastly." It had been so in his own case, he admitted.

Somebody mentioned one of his own reviews which the student thought was rather "indefinite." Gabriel readily agreed he thought so himself, but urged in his own defense that he had written so many slatings in 10 days he was constrained to give this particular premiere something of an indulgent break. He deplored such a loose standard but that was the way the situation acted on him.

Somebody produced a review of one of the Laboratory Players' productions by Robert Littell of the "Post." He was an awkward young man but he thought the review very able, having seen the production himself and agreeing with Littell's estimate. Class went into debate on the subject, the girl who was nuts about "The Goat Song" objecting that the review wasn't good at all, but "silly blurb."

Gabriel thereupon enlarged upon the necessity of a reviewer holding what he called a "rather hard edge," guarding against over-enthusiasm, so that he might have something in reserve for those rare occasions when he had the "devastating" experience of a truly great play—such as "The Strange Interlude" for example.

So the session went on for its appointed hour and a half.

From the details here set down, one may obtain a hint of how Gabriel teaches that difficult subject of "Dramatic Reviewing and Editing," using, as it seemed to, Variety's reporter, a cunning system of letting his charges riot as they please over the demonstrable things of the theatre, such as lights, settings and effects, and seizing such opportunities as flit along of helping them to absorb some dim understanding of those fourth-dimensional elements that make up the intangible essence of the acted play.

For this purpose Gabriel's attitude toward his pupils is admirable. He deals with them on confidential terms as one adult to another. Instead of the familiar professional defenses and reserves, he encourages controversy, handling the situation with a good deal of humor and tact, as for instance defending or explaining artlessly the criticisms he has written himself, or commenting with equal candor upon the comments of his confreres on the daily newspapers.

Jurymen's Petition for Dorothy Mackaye's Parole

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Several members of the county grand jury have filed a petition with Governor Young for commutation of Dorothy Mackaye's sentence. The state supreme court refused to reverse it and the Appellate Court upheld its opinion.

Miss Mackaye is on a one to three-year sentence in San Quentin prison for concealing facts in connection with the death of her husband, Ray Raymond.

SURPASSING "KIKI"

Buffalo Hears "Mimi" Is Even More Sprightly

Buffalo, Feb. 21.

Lenore Ulric, in "Lulu B lle" at the Erlanger last week, drove into town Sunday with a new Packard, bought in Detroit.

Miss Ulric also carried the script of "Mimi" the new production in which she is to be starred by Belasco next season. The role is reported to surpass even "Kiki" and "Lulu Belle" in sprightliness.

Fla. Stock Pays

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 20.

A stock company has at last clicked in this city. Plaza Players, operating in the one legit house, Plaza, and with an overhead, it is claimed, $2,700 per week, are getting by. All about the theatre picture shows are fighting to make expenses.

The Plaza is using royalty bills for the most part. Scale 25c-95c.

O'NEILL WRITING "DYNAMO"

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

After Eugene O'Neill produces "Lazarus Laughed" for the Pasadena Community Playhouse, he plans to remain on the coast for the rest of the winter.

He has picked out a spot at Del Monte where he will finish a new piece called "Dynamo."

Eddie Foy's Last Word

Kansas City, Feb. 21.

"Broadway—To Some people it's only a street, but it's a religion to me."

Perhaps only a bit of acting; maybe only a line, but to those who saw Eddie Foy's last appearance in "The Fallen Star" at the Orpheum it will always seem as though he put a little more fervor, a bit stronger emphasis into it.

The applause was genuine. He appeared and bowed. The applause continued and he came back. This time the well-known Foy smile was in evidence. He thanked them and was glad they remembered him and his step was lighter as he strutted off—forever.

Eddie Foy while waiting for his act to be called had informed an old friend that he did not believe he could finish the season; that it was his farewell tour.

A few minutes later when a newspaper interviewer called he declared he would fall into the orchestra pit before he would quit the stage, and in discussing the sketch said: "I like it better than anything I have ever done. I could keep on doing it for the rest of my life."

He passed on the next morning, conscious almost until the last breath, his last words being to his wife:

"Be good. I'm going this time," he said.

WASH. HOPES FOR MET.

Washington, Feb. 21.

The Capital is hopeful it can induce the Metropolitan Opera to stop off here on its way to or back from Atlanta. Congressman Sol Bloom of New York, in conjunction with the local Scripps-Howard paper, is working for it.

There is no assurance as yet, with definiteness seemingly dependent whether the Fox theatre will forgo its picture policy for the two or three days the Met might stop over here.

Atlanta is to get its 18th season of Metropolitan songbirds April 23-28. A full list of the singers is promised, including the Met's latest soprano, Grace Moore, of Jellico, Tenn.

"Diplomacy" Clean-Up

"Diplomacy," revived by George Tyler with a star cast, is a road clean-up. Although it was presented in Brooklyn last week, that is as near to Broadway as it will get.

At Werba's last week the show grossed $27,000. In stands like Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, grosses were reported from $41,000 to $44,000 weekly.

The players are appearing on a percentage, the same arrangement as applied to "Trelawny of the Wells" last season and the forthcoming revival of "She Stoops to Conquer," which will similarly play dates out of town.

Leslie Carter returns to the stage in "She Stoops to Conquer." Other name players in the cast are Fay Bainter, Glenn Hunter, Lyn Harding, O. P. Heggie, Patrica Collinge and Lawrence D'Orsay.

"BAGGAGE" IN L. A.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Robert Woolsey, for the first time in ten years, is stepping out of musical comedy ranks to play in "Excess Baggage," which Arthur F. Smith is producing at the Figueroa Playhouse.

"Salome" in Color

"Salome," the Oscar Wild piece, has been selected as the attraction the Negro Art theatre will produce at the Alhambra, New York, at midnight, March 9.

Marion Coakley Wed This Week

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Walter M. Murphy, millionaire automobile dealer, will marry Marion Coakley this week at Scotia, Calif.

The bride, who came here Saturday from New York may retire from the stage.

ELSA PETERSON LOSES

Justification for Her Summary Dismissal from "White Eagle"

A claim for two weeks' salary by Elsa Peterson, who was let out of "White Eagle" during the Detroit engagement, was decided in favor of Russell Janney, the show's producer, by arbitration. It was charged by Janney that the actress was incapable of properly performing at a matinee and evidence of the Equity deputy upheld that.

Miss Peterson was replaced. Upon returning to New York she consulted an attorney, who, when acquainted with the facts, insisted on arbitration. Although having a claim against Miss Peterson Janney was not disposed to push the case and asked all concerned to forget it.

Miss Peterson told Equity she wanted vindication for the grounds of her dismissal. After listening to Mark Smith, the deputy with the show, the case was decided against her.

"Revels" Out $150,000

Harry Delmar's "Revels" will end its Broadway engagement at the Shubert, New York, this week and is due to tour. The attraction is about $150,000 in the box.

Almost from the start the revue was in financial difficulty, but it was decided to establish the "Delmar" as a revue name for future editions, presumably seasonally.

Interested with Delmar are Samuel Baerwitz, vaudeville agent, Frank Fay and Bert Lahr, both the latter being in the show. Jeanette Hackett, Mrs. Delmar, and his vaudeville partner, is leaving to play vaudeville dates. She will present an act in which the Trado Twins and 8 Chester Hale girls, now in "Revels," will be in support. It is understood Miss Hackett accepted no salary for some time in order to aid the cause.

FRIEDA HEMPEL MYSTERY

Diva in Fla. and Reported Married —Plenty of Talk Over $1,000,000

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 21.

Is Frieda Hempel, soprano of the Met (but a winter visitor here), married to Jack Taylor one of the big local realtors? And did Miss Hempel give Taylor a cool million as a dower?

These questions have the "Sunshine City" on its ear.

Miss Hempel, when asked, gave an "I-do-not-choose" answer in that she said she was here for a rest and did not wish any publicity.

Taylor has just secured a divorce from his wife. He is telling the townspeople he has a million dollars now to carry on his development work.

Miss Hempel has been stopping at Taylor's big hotel, Royal, for the past two weeks. Everywhere she goes, he goes too.

Taylor came to St. Petersburg a number of years ago, took a flyer in real estate and won.

This year his big development was declared broke. Taylor left for the North to raise money. Months went by with no success. All of a sudden he returned with Miss Hempel and the good news of a million dollars.

Taylor is as evasive as Miss Hempel as to whether the wedding bells have pealed. But he is not at all evasive about plugging the million idea.

AHEAD AND BACK

J. C. Duff in advance of the Beggar's Opera in Chicago.

Lee Riley ahead of "King of Kings" (picture) Chicago.

Leon Blumenfeld on the publicity for "Parisiana" at the Totten and "The Third Floor Back" at Wallack's.

Randolph Hartley will be ahead of George Arliss and "The Merchant of Venice" when that show takes to the road this spring.

DIRECTOR BACH TELLS ABOUT LEE SHUBERT

Interference on "Silent House" Caused Withdrawal — Play Vulgarized and Cheapened

New York, Feb. 21.

Editor Variety:

Following the launching last night at the Miller of "Our Betters," which I directed, I desire by this means to explain my withdrawal from association with the Shuberts and my resignation from the cast of "The Taming of the Shrew." This action preceded my undertaking the "Our Betters" staging.

I felt compelled to retire from "The Taming of the Shrew" because of the unwarranted interference with my work as director of "The Silent House" by Mr. Lee Shubert, even after it had established itself in Philadelphia as an artistic and financial success (I refer you to your own reviewer's comments in that city).

I felt that I could not afford to lend my name to a version of the play which in my opinion had been cheapened and vulgarized as well as miscast, all against my advice. I had directed this same play in London last May and it is still playing to capacity there.

In fairness to the authors of "The Silent House," I think I should make it plain that the whole character of the play has been changed, scenes have been deleted or revised and much effective material has been damaged by the introduction of gags and low comedy business. In short, what the authors set out to achieve has been seriously damaged and the result was so far from the original intent that I felt I should lose no time in disassociating myself from connection with the final outcome, and in making my position clear.

The statement that the Shuberts have purchased a play of mine called "Patricia's Diary" is not true. I have never written such a play.

Reginald Bach.

Jeanne Eagels' Film Deal With Sam Harris

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Jeanne Eagels is reported to have signed an agreement with Sam Harris, stipulating that if Harris disposes of the picture rights to "Carita," announced for production next season with Miss Eagels, it will be only on condition that she head the film cast.

Two of her previous starring plays, "Rain" and "Cardboard Lover," were taken over by picture companies without any request for the actress.

Maude Fulton Staging

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Edward Everett Horton has taken a six months lease on the Vine Street in Hollywood and plans to produce legit attractions which Maude Fulton will direct. A tentative opening date has been set for March 15.

This is Horton's second attempt to break into the legit since forsaking acting in pictures six months ago. He took over the Hollywood Playhouse but was forced out when the proposition turned out a flop. In acquiring the Vine Street, Horton made a deal with Adolph Ramish, who has the house under a long-term lease. The Vine Street has been a consistent money loser to Ramish.

Short's All-Star Musical

Show will have a heavy salary list, Short adhering to the formula that it's no use without "names."

Harry Fender Okay

Harry Fender, one of Broadway's fav juvs, obliged to repair to the Drs. Mayo at Rochester, Minn., for treatment, has been dismissed from the observation of the eminent surgeons, marked okay.

"VENGEANCE" REVIVED

It is reported that "The God of Vengeance" will be dug out of the store house and sent on the road, with Chicago the objective.

It is said the original sponsor for "Vengeance" was inspired by the presentation of "The Captive" in Baltimore stock.

SHOWS IN N. Y. AND COMMENT

Figures estimated and comment point to some attractions being successful, while the same gross accredited to others might suggest mediocrity or loss. The variance is explained in the difference in house capacities with the varying overhead. Also the size of cast, with consequent difference in necessary gross of profit. Variance in business necessary for musical attraction as against dramatic play is also considered.

Classification of attraction, house capacity and top price of the admission scale given below. Key to classification: C (comedy); D (drama); R (revue); M (musical comedy); F (farce); O (operetta).

"A Connecticut Yankee," Vanderbilt (17th week) (M-882-$5.50). Holiday matinee (Lincoln's Birthday) were fair, while business that night away off and last week not up to form; "Yankee" in nine performances got over $25,000.

"A Free Soul," Klaw (7th week) (C-830-$3.30). Getting $7,000 to $8,000; while trade moderate show not expensive and profitable pace indicated.

"And So to Bed," Bijou (17th week) (C-605-$3.30). Three matinees last week sent takings to $9,000; very good showing for play of type.

"Artists and Models," Winter Garden (15th week) (R-1,492-$5.50). Shortly leaving and new "Greenwich Village Follies" in; current revue rated around $25,000 with cut rates aiding.

"Atlas and Eva," Mansfield (3d week) (CD-1,056-$3.30). Final week; shown very little; last week estimated at $3,000; house probably dark.

"Behold the Bridegroom," Cort (9th week) (CD-1,043-$3.85). Will move to another house; started fairly well but dropped; better last week at $9,000; "The Wrecker" next week.

"Burlesque," Plymouth (26th week) (CD-1,041-$3.85). Sixth month completed by big money maker and season's first hit; nearly $19,000 in nine shows last week.

"Cock Robin," 48th St. (7th week) (C-960-$3.30). Making money both ways; last week quoted at $9,000; not exceptional but may last through spring.

"Coquette," Maxine Elliott's (16th week) (D-942-$3.85). One of season's outstanding dramas and excellent money getter; capacity again last week; with extra matinee, gross $21,000.

"Diversion," 49th St. (7th week) (C-704-$3.30). Management confident of landing but appears in and outer with most of call on lower floor; rated under $5,000.

"Dracula," Fulton (21st week) (D-914-$3.30). Eased off bit but did quite well at $11,500; no extra matinee; thrills are expected to stick well into spring.

"Escape," Booth (18th week) (D-704-$3.30). Using some cut rates; last week about $9,500, profitable for show and house, under same management.

"Excess Baggage," Ritz (9th week) (C-945-$3.30). Good agency call indicates chance to go through balance of season; novelty and liked.

"Five o'Clock Girl," 44th St. (20th week) (M-1,490-$5.50). Nine performances last week sent gross around $40,000; one of leading musicals and good into summer period.

"Funny Face," Alvin (14th week) (M-1,400-$5.50). Last week with added performance, around $39,000; a smart draw.

"Good News," Chanin's 46th St. (25th week) (M-1,413-$5.50). A musical smash; indications are for year's run, perhaps longer; nine performances here last week; $43,000.

"Happy," Daly's 63d St. (10th week). Final week; lightweight musical comedy listed for tour; company on co-operative basis; "Still Shufflin'," new colored show, next week.

"Hit the Deck," Belasco (44th week) (M-1,000-$5.50). Final week; going to road after excellent run to big grosses; lately $21,000; "The Bachelor's Father" next week.

"Interference," Lyceum (19th week) (D-957-$4.40). Still commands smart draw; trade principally on lower floor, but business profitable; pace since moving from Empire, $12,000.

"Jimmie's Women," Frolic (22d week) (C-602-$3.30). Frankly cut rated, with grosses moderate but satisfactory; around $5,500.

"Lovely Lady," Sam H. Harris (9th week) (M-1,051-$5.50). With Edna Leedom out of cast through appendicitis, agency sales dropped, but house claimed business as good; estimated at $20,000.

"Manhattan Mary," Apollo (22d week) (M-1,168-$5.50). Held to usual eight performances, playing matinee Monday instead of midweek; estimated around $38,000.

"Marco Millions," Guild (4th week) (C-914-$3.85). "The Doctor's Dilemma" played last week (11th week) with takings eased off like most others; $12,000.

"Maya," Comedy (1st week) C-682-$3.30). Presented by Actor-Managers group; opened Tuesday.

"My Maryland," Jolson's (24th week) (O-1,777-$5.50). Two-for-one kept operetta from closing; cut rating improved business almost double; rated over $20,000.

"Our Betters," Henry Miller's (1st week) (C-946-$3.30). Revival presented by Messmore Kendall and Gilbert Miller; Ina Claire starred and Constance Collier featured; opened Monday.

"Paris Bound," Music Box (9th week) (C-1,000-$3.85). Sells out with regularity and rated among smartest comedies of season; with one extra matinee, $24,000 last week.

"Porgy," Republic (20th week) (C-896-$3.30). Nine performances last week, but gross not up to normal at $12,000; however, colored cast drama novelty for Broadway; due for road next month; Boston first.

"Quicksand," Masque (2d week) (CD-700-$3.30). Chances not good according to initial week's indications; around $4,000 and must improve to stick.

"Rain or Shine," George M. Cohan (3d week) (M-1,111-$5.50). New musical hit; first full week's takings indicate smash, gross bettering $37,000, record trade for house.

"Revels," Shubert (13th week) (R-1,395-$4.40). Another three weeks and time; somewhat off but still profitable; $28,000; "Three Musketeers" booked to follow.

"Rome," Biltmore (1st week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Presented by James W. Elliott; written by T. S. Stribling and David Wallace, based on former's book, "Teeftallow"; opens tonight (Wednesday).

"Rosalie," New Amsterdam (7th week) (M-1,702-$6.60). No extra matinee but business as strong as previous week, not far from $48,000.

"Salvation," Empire (4th week) (D-957-$3.85). Final week; would have expired before but for agency buy; box office sales small; house dark next week, then "Napoleon."

"Shi The Octopus," Royale (1st week) (C-1,1M-$3.30). Presented by Jack Welch; mystery play traversed; opened Tuesday.

"She's My Baby," Globe (8th week) (M-1,416-$5.50). Another week; going to Chicago; business claimed around $25,000, but not up to expectations for musical of kind.

"Show Boat," Ziegfeld (9th week) (M-1,750-$6.60). With holiday matinee and mezzanine regularly priced at $5.50 nightly, musical leader got $57,748 last week; probably unprecedented in legit grosses.

"Spring 3100," Little (2d week) (D-530-$3.30). Some favorable notices on mid-week premiere, but balance of comment against what is really travesty on crook plays; business light so far.

"Strange Interlude," John Golden (4th week) (D-900-$4.40). Starting at 5:30 daily and playing six performances weekly because matinees cannot be played, one of Broadway's strangest offerings; capacity at over $11,000; grosses will be higher when subscription period is past.

"Sunny Days." Imperial (3d week) (M-1,446-$5.50). Last week first full week; new musical drawing only comparatively fair business at $20,000 or bit over; capacity at scale over $37,000.

"Take the Air," Waldorf (14th week) (M-1,111-$4.40). One of best liked of popular musicals; not exactly big, but business consistently over $20,000 and profitable.

"The Clutching Claw," Fotrest (2d week) (D-1,015-$3.30). Started mildly; first week about $5,000; management hopeful, but must pick up considerably to make grade.

"The Command to Love," Longacre (23d week) (C-1,019-$4.40). Should go well into spring; lower floor call from start, but still making some money; last week estimated around $12,000.

"The Golden Dawn," Hammerstein's (14th week) (O-1,265-$6.60). Definite standing; ambitious musical production of operetta type; business estimated around $29,000 last week.

"The Ladder," Belmont (72d week) (D-517). Record of this million-dollar flivver will probably never even be approached; oil magnate disciple of reincarnation still giving tickets away free.

"The Madcap," Casino (4th week) (M-1,477-$4.40). Was moved here from Royale Monday to keep Casino lighted; show will be two-for oned; only slight business for musical with average around $11,000.

"The Merry Malones," Erlanger's (22d week) (M-1,500-$5.50). Not as big as previously, but apparently bettering even break, with average recent takings $25,000.

"The Mystery Man," Bayes (5th week) (D-860-$3.30). With two-for-ones and other sorts of cut-rate distribution, getting by; costs little to operate; maybe $5,000.

"The Optimists," Century Roof (R-422-$5.50). Taken off Saturday after playing but three weeks; revue patterned after London's "Co-Optimists" could get little trade in roof house, called Casino de Paris.

"The Queen's Husband," Playhouse (5th week) (C-879-$3.85). Satire expected to attract more attention than it has; business between $9,000 and $10,000; indicates moderate rating.

"The Racket," Ambassador (14th week) (C-1,067-$3.30). Another week according to present plans; show due to open on tour March 5; moderate money show; claimed over $10,000 average; less recently.

"The Royal Family," Selwyn (9th week) (C-1,067-$3.85). Leader of non-musical group; biggest gross to date gotten last week, when takings went to $27,000; nine performances.

"The Shannons of Broadway," Martin Beck (22d week) (C-1,198-$3.30). May go on tour with arrival of spring, but has made money both ways at average of $10,000 and over.

"The Silent House," Morosco (3d week) (D-993-$3.30). New mystery thriller appears to be in big money; last week's pace estimated at nearly $21,000.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan," National (23d week) (D-1,164-$3.85). Still favorite as melodrama; plenty of class patrons; with extra matinee last week bettered $23,000.

"These Modern Women," Eltinge (2d week) (C-892-$3.30). Status yet in doubt, but smart play should build to profitable proportions; last week, first full week, around $7,000.

"Whispering Friends," Hudson (1st week) (C-1,094-$3.30). Presented by George M. Cohan, who also wrote it; highly regarded in close by try-out dates; opened Monday.

Outside Times Sq.—Little—Special

Sir Harry Lauder, Knickerbocker (4th week). Attendance consistently good and date indefinite.

"The Merchant of Venice," Broadhurst (6th week). Another attraction being readied, "Ben's How," and will be spotted here.

"The Shanghai Gesture," Century (2d week) (repeat date). Four weeks booked.

"The Taming of the Shrew," Garrick (18th week). Extra matinee this week, but a new show being prepared.

"The Passing of the Third Floor Back," revived at Davenport, moved to Wallack's Monday; rental arrangement.

Civic Repertory, 14th Street. Repertory.

American Repertory Theatre Repertory. "Dr. Knock" opens Thursday (Feb. 23).

"Hoboken Blues," New Playwrights. Drew solid panning from critics.

"Hot Pan," Provincetown. Opened last week, too, with about same critical reaction.

"Meek Mose," Princess. Colored cast show.

"Parisiana," Edyth Totten. Intimate revue appears to have little chance.

"The Ivory Door, Charles Hopkins. Cut-rated, but getting enough to show a profit.

"10 Nights in a Barroom," Triangle.

"Sherlock Holmes," stock; Cosmopolitan.

"B'way," 2d Wk., Wash.; "Musketeers" Is Opening

Washington, Feb. 21.

"Broadway," at the Belasco, on a second week equaled the gross of its first, close to $11,000. National closed, and Poli's held local opera.

National went dark through cancellation of Ziegfeld's "Follies." Opening of "Three Musketeers" was moved back until tonight (Tuesday).

$9,000 REPEAT ADVANCE

Montréal, Feb. 21.

Princess is the only local legit house playing, His Majesty's being dark for two successive weeks other than for a three-day college performance.

"My Maryland" is estimated at around $26,000 at the Princess last week and advance bookings for "The Desert Song," returning for the second time in five weeks, total $9,000. This sponsors hope for a big week for the Schwab-Mandel operetta, if Lent doesn't dent everything.

THINK CAFE PADLOCKS HELP CHI LEGITS; "VANITIES" $30,000

"Good News" Opens Big—Non-musicals Having Tough Time Reaching $10,000—But Not "Constant Wife" and "Cardboard Lover," $20,500 and $17,000

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Legit managers see hope in publicity about padlocking town's night clubs. At least they picked the padlocking as the reason for slight increases in window sales near curtain time.

The night clubs are open for business but ghastly were the number of customers checked and the legit managers claim the folks have to go somewhere for entertainment. No other reason for the improvement unless it was a last minute rush before Lent.

Musical topnotchers are drawing real coin despite the competition. "Peggy-Ann" fell by the wayside but otherwise the cluster of musicals are stepping along.

With "Criss-Cross" extending its limited engagement through a real demand and with "Vanities" exceeding previous business, observers claim the competitive musicals have helped rather than proved the town is over flooded. "A Night in Spain" is mopping up at the Four Cohans. "The Desert Song" will probably go for another month to grab the endurance record this season in Chicago.

"Hit the Deck" will have to be called a Chicago disappointment because it never got set right and probably would have gone out before except for the grosses drawn through the holiday season.

The grief the owners of "Just Fancy" shouldered in New York is being forgotten with the profitable experiences at the Olympic.

"Good News" will cut into the musical field trade for at least four or five weeks. It's a stiff scale at the Selwyn ($4.40 top every night) and this means that the real coin will have to come from the demand at the stands. There hasn't been a $4.40 window sale call in Chicago for years. The stands always "other make" or "break" a $4.40 attraction and if "Good News" is contemplating a late spring engagement the dawback will be the scale, probably necessary in the less than 600 lower floor capacity of the Selwyn and the small balcony with $3.85 for the first four rows. The other hand was the reason the Sherman hotel lobby was emptied early, with the "gang of personal rooters" paying dearly for front row seats for one of the most enthusiastic Monday openings the town has checked since "LeMaire's Affairs." Insiders say "Good News" is a "favorite son" engagement. "The Constant Wife" can at this time be called the strongest dramatic attraction of the season in this man's town. The present Harris engagement will easily give Ethel Barrymore her triumph of all times in Chicago.

All other dramatic shows are having and have had all season a difficult time passing the $10,000 gross mark. The erratic experience of "Broadway" is probably scaring producers of dramatic shows because word now comes that "Burlesque" will be held off until the new season, which means "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is the only hit on the horizon and this will come to the Adelphi.

With the Woods and the Erlanger housing movies, the latter with the exit of "Criss-Cross" Feb. 25, the legit schedule dwindles and there are other house managers wondering what will be the late spring fare considering the punctured line up of Broadway possibilities. It's been a bad season in Chicago. Plenty of coin has been made in spots, but the houses that made it at odd times can't hold on to it because of scarcity of attractions to fill the full season's slate.

Last Week's Estimates

"Good News" (Selwyn, 1st week). —Stiff $4.40 scale with no increase week-end performances causes full support to be drawn from specs and will probably jump into lead for several weeks at the stands. Opening gross was smash for Monday night. "Peggy-Ann" had four disastrous weeks, yet liked by minority.

Irish Players (Blackstone, 1st week).—Nothing indicative of more than moderate trade and no advance sale. Limited to four weeks.

"Behold the Dreamer" drew the full strength of the average $10,000 gross. Could not be called either a failure or success, with house getting out O. K.

"The Constant Wife" (Harris, 9th week).—Outdistancing everything, encountering first competitive sales at stands from "Cardboard Lover," but nothing to worry about. Despite little slips early part of week hit $20,500 through the extra matinee. No signs of a letup.

"Cardboard Lover" (Adelphi, 4th week).—Highly satisfactory engagement. Average $17,000 mark will send this attraction westward with prospects of a road cleanup.

"Silver Cord" (Studebaker, 2d week).—House still in vogue with highbrow clientele, which is limited, netting this time not more than $9,000, even with extra matinee.

"Two Girls Wanted" (Princess, 7th week in town).—Little variation from trade drawn at Cort from which house it was transferred but manages to keep above the stop clause, which is profit. Average of $9,000 will hold it in.

"Kongo" (Central, 7th week).—Regardless of how small the audiences may check at times, weekly grosses of around $4,000 always pop up and they make money at this house on those figures. A lot of original inside campaigning always at this house.

"Hit the Deck" (Woods, 16th and final week).—One of those engagements that puzzle the New York managers. Never was substantially set in but probably drew enough holiday profits to offset the backward trade of recent weeks. Will have to fight for exit gross of $17,000.

"Wooden Kimono" (Cort, 2d week).—Maintaining this house's moderate gross, approaching $10,000, which evidently is O. K. both ends. Landed valuable newspaper laudations, which are being extensively used for plugging.

"Vanities" (Illinois, 5th week).—By far the most successful local enengement this organization ever had. Outside of Mondays and Tuesdays figures a smash lower floor sellout and is in good demand at hotels. Easily hits $30,000 mark.

"Night in Spain" (Four Cohans, 13th week).—Far exceeds most conservative opening night predictions, and turning out profits for both attractions and house. Sensational grosses now figuring in $30,000 class.

"Desert Song" (Great Northern, 25th week).—Considering length of engagement $25,000 grosses remarkable and but little variation, even in face of constantly changing musical play competition.

"Just Fancy" (Olympic, 7th week).—The personal plugging is doing this one much good and with special parties is drawing between $20,000 and $22,000.

"Criss-Cross" (Erlanger, 9th week).—Quite a contrast to the Philadelphia trade. Plenty of capacity permits $38,000 gross, maybe little smaller.

L. A. GROSSES

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

After a quick flop "The Connecticut Yankee" exited at the Mayan with a gross of $6,000 on 3d week.

"The Desert Song," at the Mason, around $24,000, major figure for the town. Fourth week.

"Chauve-Souris" slowed up in its fifth week, but still big at $18,000 in the Belasco.

Among the smaller scaled dramatics, grosses were average. Duffy's El Capitan reported $6,000 for the third week of "Two Girls Wanted." "Kongo," eighth week at the Orange Grove, about $4,000 "Funny Little Thing" survived but two weeks at the Morosco. Second week, $4,500.

Downtown Playhouse with "The Triumphant Bachelor" got $5,000, while the Hollywood Playhouse with "Undertow," after eight weeks in town and a change of theatre, around $3,700. "Married Virgin," third week at the tiny Egan, took in $2,700.

Minneapolis Grosses

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

Legitimate houses held their own in the face of phenomenal business done by the film theatres and the attendance of over 100,000 at the Shriners' circus at the Auditorium.

What was announced as the first stock presentation anywhere of "Mister Antonio," with Robert Hyman giving a splendid performance in the Otis Skinner role, drew $5,500 into the Shubert (Bainbridge dramatic stock). Good.

A tabloid musical comedy version of "The Show-Off" grossed $5,300 for the McCall-Bridge Players at the Palace.

"Girls of the U. S. A." (United wheel), $4,500 at the Gayety. The Metropolitan dark and has nothing immediately in sight. March date for Tyler's all-star "Diplomacy" canceled.

'RAIN OR SHINE' BREAKS COHAN'S HOUSE RECORD, 1ST WK., $37,000

Broadway Biz Not Fancy Last Week—Current Week Peak of Season—Wide Range in Grosses Last Week—2 Shows Did Around $2,000 Each

A general squawk along Broadway regarding business last week in the legitimate houses. More was expected from Lincoln's Birthday than eventuated. Judging from the grosses it was not so bad, although there is little doubt that the mediocre attractions got none of the gravy, while the flops just flopped along.

This week holds another holiday, Washington's Birthday (Wednesday), and the week started out quite ahead of last week's going. Feb. 22 is usually regarded as the peak of the season. With the weather remaining crisp there is not special reason for a let-down, however, even with Lent starting today (Ash Wednesday). The anticipation of showmen that business would stand out well into spring has not generally stood up, February being under normal. Lent has not been a distinct handicap to theatres in New York, it is claimed. Trade from now on will tell the story.

The variance in grosses last week indicates the difference between a hit and a flivver. "Show Boat" got $57,748, an extra matinee counting in reaching that record. The lower floor scale is $6.60 for 15 rows and the mezzanine is $5.50 (boost of $1). The lowest figures were around $2,000, with one show less than that.

"Rosalie" did not play an extra performance, but maintained its big money gait with more than $47,500; "Good News" in nine shows got $43,500; "Five O'Clock Girl," $40,-000; "Funny Face," $39,000, both the latter inserting extra matinees: "Manhattan Mary," $38,000; "Golden Dawn," about $29,000; "Rio Rita," $28,000; "Merry Malones" and "Artists and Models," about the same; "Connecticut Yankee," $24,-500 (exceptional for Vanderbilt); "She's My Baby," leaving soon, about $24,000; "Take the Air," over $20,000; "My Maryland" and "Lovely Lady," $20,000; "Revels," $17,000; "The Madcap," $11,000.

New Smash

A new musical smash arrived with "Rain or Shine," which bettered $37,000 at the Cohan, a figure never approached in that house before. "Sunny Days," another musical which opened about the same time, did not reach the heights, grossing about $20,000 for the first full week at the Imperial; "These Modern Women" got around $7,000 at the Eltinge and may build; "The Clutching Claw" about $5,000 at the Forrest and also figures to have a chance; "Quicksand" was rated at $4,000 at the Masque; "Spring 3100" at the Little is in doubt; "Hot Pan" and "Hoboken Blues" are the newest Village impossibilities.

There was no change in the rating of the leading non-musicals, "The Royal Family" playing nine performances for a mark of $27,000, the best yet for this show; "Paris Bound," also with an added matinee, got $24,000; "Trial of Mary Dugan," $23,500; "The Silent House," newest among the money dramas, was credited with nearly $21,000; "Burlesque," with an extra matinee, nearly $19,000; "Coquette," in nine times, still capacity, $21,000.

Most of the others appeared to have slipped, although "Excess Baggage" did well at $13,000; "Command to Love," $12,000; "Interference," same; "Strange Interlude," over $11,000 (capacity); "Dracula," $11,500; "The Doctor's Dilemma" and "Porgy," $12,000; "Shannons of Broadway," around $10,000; "The Queen's Husband" and "And So to Bed," $9,000 or over; "A Free Soul" and "The Racket," $8,000; "Diversion" and "Jimmie's Women," $5,000, or a bit more than the balance entirely in the ruck.

Open and Shut

"The Optimists" was taken off at the Century Roof last Saturday; "Salvation" stops at the Empire this week; "Atlas and Eva" goes off at the Mansfield also, both houses being dark next week; "Hit the Deck" will be followed at the Belasco by "The Bachelor's Father"; "Happy" leaves Daly's and "Still Shufflin'" follows in; "Behold the Bridegroom" will move to another house from the Cort, which gets "The Wrecker"; "Improvisations in June" will be added to the Civic Repertory program, and one or two other attractions may be suddenly added to the coming week's premiere card.

26 Agency Buys

No change in the number of attractions handled in the agencies, 26 shows being in that group. One buy expired and another show was added Monday ("Our Betters"). The list: "Funny Face" (Alvin); "Manhattan Mary" (Apollo); "Hit the Deck" (Belasco); "The Madcap" (Casino); "Good News" (Chanin's 46th St.); "Salvation" (Empire); "The Merry Malones" (Erlanger); "The Five o'Clock Girl" (44th St.); "Rain or Shine" (George M. Cohan); "She's My Baby" (Globe); "Golden Dawn" (Hammerstein's); "Our Betters" (Henry Miller); "Sunny Days" (Imperial); "Rio Rita" (Lyric); "Coquette" (Maxine Elliott); "The Silent House" (Morosco); "Paris Bound" (Music Box); "Rosalie" (New Amsterdam); "The Queen's Husband" (Playhouse); "Burlesque" (Plymouth); "Excess Baggage" (Ritz); "Lovely Lady" (Sam H. Harris); "The Royal Family" (Selwyn); "A Connecticut Yankee" (Vanderbilt); "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden); "Show Boat" (Ziegfeld).

32 in Cuts

The cut rate list offers nine musical attractions, more than in some time. Some of the newer attractions are present, too, as usual. The bargain list: "My Maryland" (Jolson); "Harry Delmar's Revels" (Shubert); "Take the Air" (Waldorf); "Lovely Lady" (Harris); "The Madcap" (Casino); "Happy" (Daly's); "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden); "Sunny Days" (Imperial); "Parisiana" (Edyth Totten); "Jimmie's Women" (Frolic); "The Shannons of Broadway" (Martin Beck); "The Ivory Door" (Hopkins); "Taming of the Shrew" (Garrick) "And So to Bed" (Bijou); "Atlas and Eva" (Mansfield); "Spring 3100" (Little); "The Queen's Husband" (Playhouse); "The Racket" (Ambassador); "Interference" (Lyceum); "Cock Robin" (48th St.); "A Free Soul" (Klaw); "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" (Wallack's); "Diversion" (49th St.); "The Mystery Man" (Bayes); "Behold the Bridegroom" (Cort); "The Shanghai Gesture" (Century); "Salvation" (Empire); "Sherlock Holmes" (Cosmopolitan); "The Clutching Claw" (Forrest); "Escape" (Booth); "Quicksand" (Masque); "These Modern Women" (Eltinge); "Sh! The Octopus" (Royale).

"Sunny" Not So Strong In Frisco at $13,000

San Francisco, Feb. 21.

Legits clocked along nicely. No phenom business, but revenue satisfactory. "Broadway" wound up five weeks at the Curran, with three to go, and, at $2.50, around $15,000. Pauline Frederick doing very nicely at the Geary in her new "Scarlet Woman," with unusually heavy matinees. Two more weeks for this one, and then to Los Angeles. "Burlesque" comes into the Geary.

"Sunny" did so-so on its second week at the Columbia. Doesn't look like much profit for the house when salary of 34 stage hands is figured, along with advertising and other house expenses. Now in final week.

Duffy's stock attractions continue to draw, though there was a slight dropping off at the President. At the Alcazar, "New Brooms" as strong as ever, with engagement now figured for anywhere from 14 to 16 weeks.

Estimates for Last Week

Curran—"Broadway" clicked handily to $15,000, nice margin of profit.

Geary—"The Scarlet Woman." Plenty of word-of-mouth advertising. Around $13,500, highly satisfactory.

Columbia — "Sunny." Business spotty and failed to click as hoped for. Second week, $13,000.

Alcazar—"New Brooms." Way holding up looks as though Henry Duffy may be compelled to pull it while still in the heavy profit class. At $6,000, good indefinitely.

President — "The Nightstick." Started slipping and dropped to $4,500 last week. One to go, and then "The Shannons of Broadway."

Green Street—"The Bridal Bed." Numerous changes of cast has not helped. Figured at little better than $1,000.

Lift Tent Stock Royalty to Stop Piracy

Broadway releases will be rented to tent stocks and other smaller touring outfits at a uniform fee of $25 mid-weekly royalty.

The above royalty figure is set for troupes that have been unable to play the regular releases through the high royalty terms exacted by the brokers. In consequence they have had to resort to any sort of bill they could buy cheap. The mid-week royalty angle is figured on the basis that most of the outfits change bills semi-weekly.

The new terms for the tent troupes will not conflict with regular stock stands, but will be regulated to zones played by the tent outfits not touching within a certain area of stationary stock companies.

The reduction on tent show royalties is figured to abrogate piracy by the small companies.

'G.V.F.' QUITTING PHILLY; 'PARIS' SMASH THERE

Shuberts' New Musical Could Not Stand Up at $4.40—Bordoni's Show, $19,000

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.

With Lent just around the corner, business was corking in the legit houses last week.

With $3.30 top in the comparatively small capacity Adelphi it grossed about $19,000, all the house could hold.

"Chicago," while not a whale of a hit, did better in its two weeks at the Walnut here than it has in many spots on its tour. With the rain hurting Saturday, got around $11,000; O. K. to everybody.

"Greenwich Village Follies," new edition, although having the advantage of no competition, in the lighter field, couldn't stand the gaff at the Shubert, and grossed just over $20,000, extremely bad at $4.40 top, so bad, in fact, it leaves this Saturday with no musical competitors in sight. "The Great Necker," straight comedy, announced for next week (single week only).

Right now the openings in the near future here include the following: next week, "The Great Necker" (Shubert); "My Maryland" (Lyric), and "Abie's Irish Rose" (Garrick). March 5 George Tyler's all-star revival of "She Stoops to Conquer" at the Erlanger; "The Racket" at the Walnut, Delmar's "Revels" at Shubert, and "Four Walls" at the Broad. March 12 Erlanger and Garrick will have new shows, as yet unannounced. March 19 George Arliss comes to the Walnut in "The Merchant of Venice"; "The Desert Song" is due at the Shubert; "The Baby Cyclone" at the Broad, and "The Road to Rome" to the Adelphi.

March bookings are very plentiful, but after that it looks like finis for many of the legit houses because of a lack of shows.

Estimates for Last Week

"Tommy"—(Broad, 1st week). In for two weeks only. Irish Players picked up remarkably over first week; $13,000.

"Greenwich Village Follies"—(Shubert, 3d week). New revue, highly touted, flop here. Hardly over $20,000 last week despite $4.40 top. Going out this week.

"Patent Leather Kid"—(Erlanger, 2d week). Feature film off to $14,-000, figured satisfactory. Has two weeks, including this, to go.

"The 19th Hole"—(Garrick, 3d week). Frank Craven comedy doing satisfactorily and should leave Saturday with nice profit for moderately geared piece.

"Kidnapper"—(Walnut, 1st week). New melodrama got off to nice start. In for two weeks only. "Chicago" claimed between $11,000 and $13,000 last week.

"The Love Call"—(Chestnut, 7th week). Operetta one of season's surprises. Off a bit last week to $17,000 or little under, but still looks good for another three weeks at least.

"The Spider"—(Lyric, 5th week). Final week for this melodrama, which has had real success here. Last week little under $13,000. "My Maryland" back Monday.

"Paris"—(Adelphi, 2nd week). Smash hit of town and looks able to continue indefinitely. Last week over $19,000, solid capacity for comparatively small house at $3 top.

TENT REP AT SARANAC

Stock under canvas will again hold forth at Saranac Lake, New York, this summer, with the opening set for June 7.

Robert Duboise will again operate his casting company out of New York.

INSIDE STUFF

ON LEGIT

The story is told that when the players were rehearsing "The Trial of Mary Dugan" they were unanimously of the opinion that the show would prove the biggest kind of a flop. This happened about the time that Al Woods returned from Europe. He and Martin Herman after quite a talk about the show attended a rehearsal.

Woods made some quick decisions; one to cut the four acts to three and eliminate some of the cast who were doing a lot of chattering that interfered with the points. The rehearsals went on and the show went on. It is still running at the National.

While certain musical and legit shows that have previously had successful engagements in San Francisco have met with good response in the provinces (San Joaquin valley) other ventures, especially those without the San Francisco run backing, have not been so forte. Recently a coast "buyer" negotiated with the management of a musical produced in Los Angeles and played there before coming to San Francisco. The "buyer" bought the show outright for a Friday-Saturday date in one of the principal inland cities for five grand. The total gross on the two days (two nights and Saturday mat) was $5,900; leaving $900 with which to pay newspaper and postin bills of $1,100; stage hands salaries of $987, and rent and other expenses amounting to around $425. Total deficit of around two grand, on a two-day stand.

Vandals have bobbed up in some of the New York neighborhood vaude and picture houses. In one upper New York theatre, playing straight pictures, around 120 seats, mainly in the front of the auditorium, are slashed apparently by pocket knives and must be recovered with leather each week. This damage is attributed to small boys who take advantage of the darkened auditorium to try out their frog stickers.

Over in Brooklyn a number of vaude houses have lost about everything not chained.

At the Academy of Music, New York, a number of the boys have shown inclinations to spoil some of the decorative furnishing but a constant vigilance by the ushers has prevented any untoward damage.

One of the town's ministers, who condescends to ask press agents for seats "so that he may recommend their production to his congregation," has the swellest follow-up request of them all.

"I can't attend without my family," he tells the boys.

"Oh, there are five of us!"

Plenty of turndowns!

When the Max Reinhardt troupe returns next year, as arranged, they will be under their own management and a rumor has it that they will play in the Cosmopolitan, New York, again. That theatre is only under lease to the Shuberts and their lease expires this year, although it is likely that it will be renewed especially for the Reinhardt engagment.

As the recent engagement was played, Gilbert Miller, the American sponsor, paid all the front of the house expenses, Reinhardt shared on stage hands, and received a guarantee of $10,000 to cover all his expenses, salary, etc. Top salary of the troupe was said to have been about $250 in our money.

The last weeks of the engagement, when shows more intimate than those at the Century were presented, is said to have shown nice profit and to have nearly counterbalanced the losses at the other house. The gross at the Cosmopolitan, particularly in the last three weeks, was bigger than most of the weekly grosses at the Century.

Mentioned all the good points from the producers' angle except the one about so many featured players and stars of the legit being out of work that their salaries were considerably lower than they used to be.

A report is around that the Shuberts have offered George White the Century theatre at a ridiculous rental for the summer. The idea is for White to take "Manhattan Mary" opposite Central Park at a $3.85 top to keep the house open. If White does this, the story says, the Shuberts will welcome his new "Scandals" at the Winter Garden.

"Red Robe" for Philly

Walter Wolf has been recalled from "The Countess Maritza" on the road, to play the male lead in "Under the Red Robe," new Shubert operetta, in rehearsal.

Evelyn Herbert, of "My Maryland," will be the prima donna.

In the cast is Arnold Korff, formerly with the Max Reinhardt company. "The Red Robe" is scheduled to open in Hartford, Conn., March 5, then go to Philadelphia for a run.

"SHANGHAI" CLOSING

"The Shanghai Gesture" will close its season at the Century Saturday. Florence Reed, starred in the play, is due to sail for a vacation.

Business at the Century last week, which is virtually a Broadway repeat date, grossed $14,000. Of that total $9,700 was derived from Joe Leblang's cut rates. "The Spider" follows in at the Century Monday.

'The Breaks' With Chance

Cleveland, Feb. 21.

J. C. Nugent opened with the Nugents' new meller, "The Breaks" at the Little theatre Sunday night.

Favorable reports are heard and that the play has a good chance on Broadway is the consensus.

STOCK IN CEDAR RAPIDS

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 21.

Majestic, closed a month ago when the Frank Amusement company went bankrupt, has been leased to Boyd B. Trousdale and was reopened this week with stock.

Trousdale operated stock here 15 years ago and now has companies in Cheyenne, Wyo. and Billings, Mont.

Ballyhooers Strike and Lose Their Job

At the Broadway Theatre, New York, Monday, several men dressed up like French Legionnaires for a sidewalk and lobby ballyhoo for "Beau Sabreur," struck when they found out that they could not have from 2 to 4 for lunch.

At 5 they returned to the theatre for their money and found that there had been enough substitutes to compose a small army.

The management told 'em they had automatically eased themselves out of the job.

"MARRIAGE" CLOSED

"Marriage On Approval," authored and produced by Michael Kallesser, closed in Paterson, N. J.

It may be revised and sent out for another try.

H. B. Toomer's Comeback

Henry B. Toomer will shortly stage a comeback in his former back-stage skit "The Headliners."

Three in support.

2 Stocks Closing

Danbury, Conn., Feb. 21.

Jacques theatre stock company at Waterbury, and the Poli Players at the Lyric, Bridgeport, will close their season this week.

A. P. Waxman's $100,000 plagiarism suit over "The Fool" was argued on appeal before the Circuit Court of Appeals, Waxman's triple counsel introducing new evidence. The complaint was originally dismissed on Pollock's evidence that he had discussed the idea of his theme as far back as 1904 with contemporary playwrights, although copyrighted and produced several years after 1911, when Waxman alleges he authored and copyrighted his "The Second Coming."

Showing Off Something Different

That the public is always willing to accord praise to anyone who brings to them something new or some old thing done in a freshly entertaining manner, is wonderfully demonstrated by Norman Frescott.

* * *

He has been doing his mind-reading act and mental stunts before the public for several years—in fact long enough to have become stale in this age of hustle and hurriedness. And still when he presented his turn with a novel and never previously attempted setting in the new Earl Carrol "Vanities," which is now at the Shubert Theater, his became one of the brightest and most talked-about spots in the show.

* * *

Combining with Julius Tannen, Frescott turned a really scientific feat into a fun feast, a laugh festival. Mind readers gave the audience an occasional laugh, always, but here was a mind test with one laugh after another. It brought the act to a new public.

* * *

Such acts have always been confined to the vaudeville theaters, to popular-priced offerings and special events. It remained for Earl Carroll to devise the novelty of placing one of these really mystifying turns in the fluffy, irresponsible atmosphere of a modern revue. It is possible that the suggestion to Carroll came from the presentation of a famous fakir in a theater. But at any rate the public has shown its appreciation of the novelty.

PLAYS ON BROADWAY

WHISPERING FRIENDS

Farce comedy in two acts by George M. Cohan; presented by the author at Hudson Feb. 20; staged by Sam Forrest. Daly .....Walter Edwin Natalie .....Edith Gresham
Al Wheeler .....Chester Morris
Doris Crawford .....Elsie Lawson
Emily Sanford .....Anne Shoemaker
Joe Sanford .....William Harrigan

The Hudson has been seeking a hit for quite some time. In "Whispering Friends" it has its best prospect in at least a couple of seasons.

What is billed as George M. Cohan's newest story opened in the Bronx (Windsor) and word seeped to Broadway about the exceptional business drawn by the newcomer. Then a week in Brooklyn followed by one in Newark. Attendance out of the ordinary greeted it with the successive weeks and "Whispering Friends" arrived Monday $7,000 to the good.

It is the fourth production by George M. Cohan this season. Few managers present that many shows in a single season, single handed. While Cohan has been acting in "The Merry Malones" at Erlanger's, the same actor-author-manager found time to present "The Baby Cyclone," "Los Angeles" and the present premiere. That is rather an astonishing managerial feat, and for the reason that he wrote three out of the four plays ("Los Angeles," which was taken off, not of his authorship).

The first nighters enjoyed themselves beyond doubt. Admiration for the skill of the writing, the fun of the dialog and the humor of the situations. Cohan's little story started as a joke and of course it ended that way. It all occurs in the home of the Sanfords, newly married and just back from a European honeymoon. Emily was a wealthy widow and Joe just had a fair job in insurance.

She has a pal girl friend in Doris Crawford and he a pal in Al Wheeler. Both the Sanfords had spoken a great deal about Doris and Al. When the latter two meet they are attracted, in fact after a drive through the park that night they become engaged. But a lot comes in between and quite some afterwards.

Doris discusses the status of Joe in the house, owned, of course, by Emily. Joe has had it all out with Em. He is to pay his share of expenses. No one must think he married her for her money. She can use her cars for herself and friends but when they are together, it's the subway or perhaps a taxi. Doris is a bit skeptical about it. She is 28 and has looked about quite a bit. She believes marriage may occur for any one of three reasons: one way to possession, compulsory or mercenary. That was her idea before she met her man—Al.

It is agreed between the girls that Doris flirt with the bridegroom. The titles of the play considered during its writing may be a lead to what happens. They were "Mischief Makers" and "His Friend and Her Friend." Al detects the frame and agrees to do a bit of flirting with Emily at the request of Joe.

"Whispering Friends" is in two acts. The curtain drops to note the elapse of time between off stage episodes and the scene marking is significant of the occurences: Scene 1, Before Dinner; Scene 2, After Dinner; Scene 3, After the Theatre. And in the second act. Scene 1, The Following Morning; After Breakfast; Scene 2, Eleven O'Clock the Same Evening.

The joke is taken seriously first by the bride and groom, then by the engaged couple. At times the two girls fight and then the boys go to it. That pairs off the couples, taking each other's side of the argument.

The laughter created is irresistible. Doris has slipped Joe her phone number and he's burning until Al tells him it is all in the frame. Then she gives him a locket for remembrance, once borrowed from Emily for the purpose. Emily does not at first realize that Al is giving her the works too. How she burns when a card purporting to have Al's phone number turns out to be that of police headquarters.

The second act starts out with a flurry of laughs, becomes sentimental and serious, only to end in another laugh. Cohan's transposition of his four principal characters seems as excellent a bit of playwrighting as any he has ever done, perhaps the very best. They are king checkers, moved to some purpose at every turn.

The cast has four very well selected and clever players. Elsie Lawson as Doris, Anne Shoemaker as Emily, Chester Morris as Al, and William Harrigan as Joe. They all seem to get the Cohan idea as directed by Sam Forrest, as busy as Cohan in readying the latter's shows. Then there was Walter Edwin as the butler, hated by Joe because he stalked through the living room on his way to answer the door, "like the ghost of Hamlet."

"Whispering Friends" is sophisticated but clean, which is the Cohan way. It is bright and funny. It has a short cast and one set and it ought to make the distance easily. Ibee.

CLUTCHING CLAW

Mystery play in three acts, by Ralph Kettering. Presented by Barbour and Crimmins, Feb. 14, at the Forrest. Ralph Morgan featured. Staged by Rollo Lloyd. Scenery by Eastman Studios.
John Thornton .....Alex McLeod
Patrolman Cairnes .....Charles Slattery
Mrs. Midgely .....Minnie Dupree
Patricia Thornton .....Georgia Lee Hall
Carlos .....Bruce Leon
Captain Connelly .....Robert Middlemas
Agnes Hayden .....Dulcy Cooper
Jerry Hayden .....Percy Hilton
Gordon .....Ralph Morgan
Johannis Berlau .....Duncan Penwarden

Another assault upon the nerves of Manhattan in the form of an ingenious rewrite on familiar spook stuff, "The Clutching Claw" will probably be in the running with the rest of the mystery field. It is good bait for the murder tale addicts.

The author is Ralph Kettering, Chicago press agent. Kettering has been calloused the right forefinger for years. He has written numerous plays, including one about Abraham Lincoln, that Milo Bennett hires out every February to the stock impresarios around the Middle West. Other Kettering manuscripts also circulate among the dramatic outposts. "The Clutching Claw" is a fairly creditable bit of play-shaping, with neatness in continuity and sustained quality in suspense.

The second act holds a ghost effect, seemingly tricked with the aid of a crane and radiumized cloth, that is a pip for this kind of show. The conventional mystery play formula that the guilty person shall be the least likely is reversed. The original suspect is indeed the dirty-and-so when the bright young police reporter untangles the mess.

A minimum of explanation helps rather than otherwise. One-set, ten-Georgia Lee Hall adds an element of confusion. Minnie Dupree goes home after the second act, when she is dispatched in the dark during a seance. Alex McLeod never says a word, being killed off two minutes after the curtain goes up on the prolog.

SPRING 3100

Comedy-drama in two acts, by Arygll Campbell and Willard Mack. Adaptation and direction credited to Joseph H. Graham. Presented at the Little, Feb. 16, by George L. Miller in association with Maurice Wakeman.
Mike Callahan .....Owen Martin
James Nolan .....Edward Jephson
"Spanish" .....Tammany Young
"High Brow" Kregan .....Vic McLaughlin
Timmy Brownson .....Mortie Fogel
Larry O'Day .....Joseph Kilgour
Penelope Leland .....Lynn Eswood
Harold Storey .....Corbet Morris
R. J. Storey .....Joseph Kilgour
Josephine Douglas .....Mariposa Hayes
Jack Cohen .....J. Moy Bennett
Kelly .....John M. Washburn
Madge .....Maude Brooks
Nina .....Eda Moulton

Authors, of whom there appear to be three, apparently saw an idea in the cartoonist's idea of what people think about at certain times. In the case of "Spring 3100" it's a solution of what fighters dream about when they are knocked down and take the count.

Play is billed as a "cometric-drama," a term coined to describe the piece as a tricky comedy with a melodramatic slant. It is tricky, and the dramatic angle turns out to be a travesty on crook stuff. The first nighters didn't know what to think about it. The lines of Willard Mack seemed to please some. Argyll Campbell, who wrote the script, later denied any of his stuff was retained. Some left the Little with the impression it was fairly good entertainment. That's all the people directly concerned claim for it.

George Lefty Miller, agent and so forth, who has had pieces of shows for the past two years, none of them winners, is presenting "Spring 3100" in association with Maurice Wakeman, probably his financial backer. Lefty sent out word recently that the Broadway premiere was set back because it was difficult to secure a stage with the proper depth. When it was announced for the Little the boys laughed. However, that stage is more than 30 feet deep. There is a prize ring scene calling for more than the usual stage space. It is an 18-foot affair, but the platform is something like 24 feet.

The first scene is faulty because it is played in "one," before a flimsy drop, supposed to picture the employees' entrance to Madison Square Garden. Yet, the dialogue becomes important later in view of what transpires. Larry, a promising young heavyweight, has committed what Mike Callahan, his manager, believes an unpardonable thing. He has married, and to a girl used to fine things. The lad is for leaving the fight racket. Hard-boiled Mike is sarcastic and gives him a tip that if he quits the fight he'll wind up a thief in order to buy things for the wife. And so the ultimate would be an acquaintance with Spring 3100, police headquarters.

The action goes into a boxing bout in which Larry is dropped by his opponent, a real pug. While the referee is counting the lights go out. A scene change places the story in the modest flat of Josephine Douglas, Larry's sweetie, and her chum, Penelope Leland, of the chorus. Detectives slip in and out of windows and doors. Larry slinks in and hides. The wealthy Storey, in whose office Jo works, arrives with his son. Both have amorous ambitious in Jo's direction. Larry is set down as a thief.

All this occurs in the first act, there being but two. The latter session becomes highly dramatic. Callahan, now a detective, is tracking Larry, aided by Spark, one of Larry's handlers. In the home of Storey there is a murder, a rather confusing rattle of guns in the dark, and for a conclusion, Larry, a two-gun man, kills 'em all. People giggled at the absurdities, but the house was jerked to attention when again the lights went out and the scene shifted to the ring again, Larry getting up and fighting his way to a draw. Too bad that some hint of the idea should not have crept in sooner.

Owen Martin, who was straight man for Al Jolson, stands out as the fight manager, and he is a first-rate player. Jack McKee has his Broadway debut as a lead in playing O'Day, the fighter. McKee is from a professional family. He is just a kid, but he belongs without doubt.

That famous gate crasher, Tammany Young, was himself again as Spark, a fighter's second. He knows and talks the language and proved the funniest guy in the show. Mariposa Hayes did Josephine fairly well. Lynn Eswood, as her wise-cracking girl friend, was amusing.

Joseph Kilgour was the elder Storey, polished, but with an unbelievable role. Edward Jephson certainly looked an English ex-pug.

"Spring 3100" is just an idea. Its sponsors may get out of the red via the sale of the picture rights. As for a successful Broadway run, that is doubtful. The joke is sprung too late. Ibee.

HOT PAN

Second Provincetown Playhouse production of season at the Macdougal street theatre, opening Feb. 15. Three-act play authored by Michael Swift. Directed by James Light. Settings by Cleon Throckmorton.

"Hot Pan" is a three-act exposition in hysteria that precipitates a headache and drives one to drink. Conversely, a sure-fire way to lose a stew is to get a load of this meaningless hodge-podge of irrelevant epigrammatical fol-de-rol. If it doesn't sober you, nothing will.

The high rate of mortality in "Hot Pan" exceeds a Cicero gang war. If anyone voices anything that meets with momentary displeasure he is casually but convincingly rewarded with a dose of lead, this in turn inspiring the '49ers for another shot of whiskey. Each assassination is an excuse for a round of drinks.

Why the scene is "the central room of the Rancho Herrera," in California, during the 1849 gold rush days—the action takes place on a Sunday morning and afternoon"—and not in the Hotsy-Totsy Club is not quite comprehensible.

The costuming reminds of a cartoon conception of the Katzenjammer Kids' father in wild west for a Thanksgiving whopee. It is as fantastic as it is home-made.

Michael Swift, the author, of the Provincetown Playhouse producing staff must have been taken with the idea that anything which so totally ignores all things would command attention. Neither Swift nor the Provincetown Players seem capable of accomplishing this.

If this is a sample of the vo-do-de-o drahma, the Greenwich Villagers better get hotter than "Hot Pan." Mabel.

HOBOKEN BLUES

Greenwich Village group, which calls itself the New Playwrights Theatre, offer nondescrip freak performance by Michael Gold. Directed by Edward Massey and acted by a company of amateurs. At the New Playwrights theatre (formerly Cherry Lane) Feb. 17.

Extreme cubist in its shoddy settings and even more delirious in its subject-matter, the most interesting detail about this venture is the supreme crust of its promoters in inviting serious attention and setting up a scale of $3.30 top, at least for the premiere.

The thing is amateur, and raw amateur at that, in every department. The three-act piece is a futuristic rave with incoherent "art" settings, consisting of a 15-foot dias in the middle of the stage proper, the background being suggested by a square frame in which are unrolled painted drops labeled "A barroom in 1903"; "Butler's Cabaret, 1928"; Sally's Home," "A Harlem Revival Meeting."

Before this changing signboard unfolds a nutty series of episodes representing ideas probably the evil effect upon the author of seeing "Porgy," a number of Eugene O'Neill's symbolic plays, the sex appeal of "Artists and Models," remote recollection of "Rip Van Winkle," and all of it colored by a sort of anarchistic attitude toward life, letters and society on the part of the author himself.

Some 45 amateur players, all in black face and revealing in their total not a single s x of talent, act out the goofy medley, probably conceived as a fantastic and sympathetic treatment of the Harlem negroes' spiritual problems, but developed on the stage as a jumble of needlessly childish satire, humor, drama, burlesque and a touch of unintended travesty.

All tedious village nutism at its dinky worst. If it wern't that Otto Kahn sunports the group one would suspect they were pulling a Cherry Sisters. Rush.

Sam Salvin Takes Mayan

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Sam Salvin has leased the Mayan theatre. He will open it March 15 with a musical comedy policy.

Salvin is the New York theatrical man, financial backer and active in the operations of Lyons & Lyons, theatrical agency.

Salvin secured the lease from Gerhold Davis.

HODGMAN WITH "SOURIS"

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Tom Hodgman succeeds William Oviatt as manager of "Chauve-Souris," at the Belasco. Oviatt was called back to New York on account of his wife's illness.

Thoda Cocroft Wickmore, agent of the show, is also returning. He is replaced by Harry Davis.

After leaving here the show will play Canadian territory, the company sailing for Europe in June.

Shows in Rehearsal

"The Buzzard" (George Leffler).
"The Scarlet Fox" (Willard Mack).
"Romance, Inc." (Mrs. H. B. Harris).
"Excess Baggage" No. 2 (Shuberts).
"Romance Road" (J. A. Osborne).
"Dr. Knock" (American Laboratory Theatre).
"Another Bottle, Doc" (Thos. McElphany).
"Wolves" (James W. Elliott).
"Kidnapper" (Marcin & Shuberts).
"Furies" (John Tuerk).

Three Ticket Committees

Three committees continue to meet separately with the aim of devising some system of theatre ticket control. They are a citizens' group appointed by Federal Attorney Tuttle, a managerial committee and one of ticket brokers. As yet they have formulated no workage scheme.

Tuttle in a statement early this week believed that one office should be sufficient for any ticket agency. The idea in back of that was to eliminate the mushroom gyp places which spring up close by a new success. However, that idea may be fought by the brokers, who point out that a number of reputable agencies have branches in the leading hotels.

William A. Brady, of the manager's committee, spoke on the air through WHN Sunday night, berating the alleged ticket abuse and asking for letters from any theatre patron who was excessively overcharged. He promised to publicly berate any such broker.

Dixey in "Malones"

Henry E. Dixey went into "The Merry Malone" at Erlanger's Monday night, replacing George M. Cohan. He will remain with the show, due into the Illinois, Chicago.

Cohan jumped into the "Malones" cast on the eve of the premiere in Boston last summer when Arthur Deagon expired during rehearsals. Broadway was surprised that Cohan should remain in the cast continuously because of his production activities. While in "Malones" he presented three other attractions, the latest being "Whispering Friends." It is the author-actor-manager's most active season, and a fifth production is in the offing.

Chas. Ray in "Law"

Ray's appearance in the revival will mark the screen star's first legit appearance in New York.

KIDNAPPED

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.

"Kidnapped," the new melodrama by Sam Shipman and Max Marcin, which was presented at the Walnut Street Theatre by Mr. Marcin last night, proved neither as gaudily pulse-stirring, nor as ingeniously novel in effects as Shipman's thriller of last season, "Crime," which opened at the same house.

The first act of the new piece is unusually full of promise, and holds the interest from the start when the millionaire calls his butler into his study, takes two pistols from a desk drawer, and asks the old man if he knows how to use firearms. That's the opening line and it's a corker. It develops millionaire has received a letter threatening to kidnap his flapper daughter unless $100,000 is given. The police are called in, but despite all precautions and guards around the house, the girl is taken as prophesied and that's the end of an act that promises all kinds of excitement and thrills and chills. Unfortunately, this promise is only partially fulfilled.

The authors of "Kidnapped" recently said their play had nothing to do with the Hickman case in California. They were right. Shipman and Marcin merely decided to build a play around a kidnapping case for a change, instead of a murder, robbery or jewel smuggling affair. Trouble with the play is that once having the beautiful blonde heiress kidnapped, they resort to ol.. and conventional angles to develop their action, some of which follow closely in the grooves of "Crime."

The kidnappers not only seize the girl, but they also capture a goofy kind of youth who is crazy about her. The next scene is in the lonely den of the vilyuns, where they are lying in wait until the time is ripe to raise their ante and demand $200,000 for the return of the girl alive. Otherwise, their threat is to send her home, hacked to pieces.

There is too much of the "when-crooks-fall-out" business; too much inside stuff in the lair of the kidnappers and the promised mechanical thrill at the end of act two, which was supposed to show a police boat pursuing a hydroplane was a complete bust last night. The scene ended very flatly. It looked as if something went wrong back stage; but, at any rate, as tricky as this might be, a real punch in the action itself would be a lot preferable.

The third act is back in the kidnapper's den with the crooks now decided on killing the girl because they believe the father has tried to double-cross them. Some of the gang refuse to commit murder, which results in the familiar card drawing. Well enough done, but a little drawn out. There will be many, too, who will object strenuously to the repeated references to hacking the body to pieces with knives after the girl has been "bumped off." At any rate, thanks to a ruse of the boy, the deed is postponed long enough for the police to come, and here again we find a rather stale and conventional ending for a scene that has had its thrills. Both the last two acts must not only be sharpened and quickened, but also given a few surprise twists and more moments of suspense.

The acting throughout is first-rate. Players hold up better than the play after the first act. Douglass Montgomery, who played the terrified youngster in "Crime," has a similar role here and makes it register sharply. The kid is a real emotional actor, has a sense of humor and always keeps the sympathy of the audience. Frances Dale, blonde, and attractive and possessor of a rather pleasant voice, is satisfactory as the heroine. Felix Krembs is admirable as the leader of the kidnappers and Calvin Thomas and Ralph Locke are excellent as two of his aides. Mary Robinson, as his little Italian wife, gives a particularly striking and colorful portrayal. A. H. VanBuren, as the harrassed father, and David Landau, as the police inspector, also deserve mention.

The melodrama, save for the disappointing absence of the mechanical punch that was promised, is effectively staged. There are chances for making it a satisfactory melo., but in season overflowing with thrillers, it will hardly stand the gaff, and it certainly doesn't look comparable to "The Silent House" or "Crime."

PLAYS ABROAD

GRAND GUIGNOL

Paris, Feb. 13.

Cholsy and his associates, having patched up an inside squabble which occurred over the management of the Grand Guignol, presented a new bill which is well up to the high-water mark of the now famous chamber of horrors.

"L'Homme qui a tué la Mort," two-act drama by René Berton, is calculated to give patrons the creeps, but they're inclined to chuckle at the wrong moment. A prisoner has been condemned to death on circumstantial evidence. The first phase is the preparation in the cell, trimming the hair round the neck and the last messages to the dear ones. In the second act the execution has just taken place. The severed head is taken by an inventive professor, who places it on a new reanimating machine, where it regains life and is able to speak. The head reveals certain facts suppressed during the trial, proving the innocence of the man executed.

"La Chambre Ardente" is likewise intended as a hair-raiser—for those who have any left. It is in two acts, by Henri Fauche and A. de Lorde. Some crooks are caught in their own trap when they attempt to intimidate a rich widow by supposedly summoning the ghost of her husband into sharing the fortune with them. Mme. Maxa, tragedy star of the house, plays the frantic widow.

As a change there is a clever sketch by Henri Duvernois, entitled "Le Haricot Vert" ("The Green Bean"), which is the gem of the program. A student induces a college chum to take his place in his bed when he wants to spend the night out, it being the habit of his affectionate mother to tuck him in when she retires. She seldom turns on the light, but on this occasion she starts a curtain lecture, scolding her son for a bad report from school. She blames bad frequentations, particularly Jean, an alleged scamp, who happens to be the youth in the bed. Jean protests at being branded as the "haricot vert," or dunce, of the college, revealing his identity. But his confession is so sincere, his admiration for his friend's pretty mother (the object of his first poem), is so ardent that the lady is exquisitely flattered. She kisses the lad maternally on the forehead before leaving, blushing at the thought of having been taken by her son's friend as his first ideal. It is a sweet little act, full of pathos.

The fourth item of the present bill is "Le Pharmacien," a one-act comedy of Max Maurey, former manager of the little theatre and now directing the fashionable Varietes. It relates the worries of a provincial druggist having given a poison in error, becoming meek while the danger of a ruined reputation is apparent and resuming his arrogance when the wrong prescription is returned.

Future Plays

"With the Help of Emily," a new play by Robert R. Riskin and Edith Fitzgerald (Mrs. Riskin) will premiere March 4 at the Cass theatre, Detroit. Sam Harris and Hassard Short are producers. Mary Boland starred, with Sylvia Sidney, Raymond Hackett and others supporting.

"Dr. Knock" has gone into rehearsal as next for the American Laboratory theatre, New York. Cast includes Robert Gordon, Herbert Gellendre, Florence House, Harold Hecht and others.

Eva Le Gallienne has taken over the rights of "Harlem," by Samuel Raphaelson, from Robert Milton, and will produce the piece later in the season.

"Somehow," comedy by R. R. Presnell, will reach production next month via Bella Blau, newcomer to producing ranks.

"My Public" is next on list for Jed Harris. Harris returned from Palm Beach last week and began casting the new production.

"The Whip Hand," second production for Shumlin & Streger, is being cast, due for rehearsal in two weeks.

"Oil," dramatization of Upton Sinclair's novel by Willard Mack, is next on William A. Brady's production schedule. Goes into rehearsal next week.

"She Stoops to Conquer" is next on the all-star revival list for George C. Tyler. The piece went into rehearsal last week, with William Seymour staging. Cast includes Fay Bainter, Glenn Hunter, Lynn Harding, O. P. Heggie and others.

"Robin Hood," the Smith-DeKoven operetta, will be revived this season with an all-star cast. A previous revival of the operetta was made seven years ago at the Knickerbocker, New York.

"Improvisations in June," fourth production this season by Eva Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Company, New York, will be added to the current rep program at the downtown theatre Feb 27.

"The Booster" is to be revived with Henry White, author, reported financing the revival. It previously tried out for a week with the cast on commonwealth.

"Chatham Square" is set as Mae West's next legit vehicle. It is an elaborated version of "The Frame-Up," by Mark Linder. It will be produced by Jack Linder, James Timoney and Robert Sterling, new combination of producers.

"Jungle Fever," by Robert Siddons, will be initial production of Paige-Challis Productions. Casting and due for rehearsal in two weeks.

Miller and Lyles' new show is in rehearsal at the Harlem Casino, 116th and Lenox avenue, using only "hi yaller" girls in chorus.

A third company of "Good News" is in rehearsal and opens in Boston for a run, following which it will play the New England territory. In the cast are William Wayne, Marie Gallagher, Thelma White, Mildred Costello, Marian Chambers, Dolores Farris, Donald Rohan, Donn Lanning, Maurice Darcy and a George Olsen orchestra.

"Kidnapper," by Samuel Shipman and Max Marcin, will be produced next month by A. H. Woods. A. H. Van Buren will direct it.

Bide Dudley and Fulton Oursler are collaborating on a new comedy "The Man on the End," which Albert Lewis will produce in the spring.

"Furies," by Zoe Akins, in which Laurette Taylor will be starred by John Tuerk, will get under way out-of-town Feb. 28 and come into New York two weeks later. Support includes A. E. Anson, John Cumberland, Ian MacLaren, Fred Warlock, Alfred Keppeler, Ernest Stollard, Clarence Handyside, Greta Kemble Cooper, Madeline Delmar, Armina Marshall, Allan Campbell and Lester Hayward. George Cukor is directing.

"The Tenth Man," by Somerset Maugham, has gone into rehearsal and will supplant the current revival of "Passing of the Third Floor Back," at the Davenport, New York, in two weeks.

"Roulette," musidrama by Leon De Costa, will reach production the latter part of the month with De Costa as producer.

"Emily Lends a Hand," which Hassard Short and Sam Harris are co-jointly producing, now in rehearsal in New York, opens on the road in about three weeks, due to open in Chicago March 28. In the cast are May Boland, Ray Hackett, Charles Eaton and Sylvia Sidney.

"Marriage on Approval" is Mike Kallesser's new play, which made its first New York appearance last week at the Westchester, Yonkers. Among the principals are Phyllis Povah, Lou Ripley and Pat Barrett.

"The Radio Murder," mystery melordama by Dana Rush and John Milton Hagen, has been sidetracked until next season for production by Charles E. Blaney.

Lew Fields will produce a new musical on his own, "Present Arms," which is listed as an early spring production. "Present Arms," originally classified as a musical version of "The Boys of Company B," is not, according to the report, but an original by Herbert Fields, Lorenzo Hart and Richard Rodgers.

"The Green Door" is new and by Clyde North, on the last door the condemned criminal passes through on the way to the execution.

Jed Harris has abandoned production of "My Public," scheduled as his next until spring.

STOPPAGE OF REMOTE CONTROL GOES INTO EFFECT IN CHICAGO

150 Musicians Receive Permanent Studio Jobs—Anticipated Opposition Fails to Take Form—$50,000 Yearly Cost to Studio for 10 Men

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Broadcasting of orchestra music by remote control ceased Sunday in all but five of Chicago's 27 stations.

The five exceptions are WGN, WENR, WCFL, WBBM and WMAQ.

These stations are eligible for remote control tie-ups through having complied with orders issued by James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, whereby the privilege of remote control broadcasting of orchestra music is denied stations not maintaining their own regularly employed studio orchestra.

Anticipated trouble through some of the stations being owned by newspapers did not materialize. The two Hearst stations, KYW and WBBH, have thus far failed to meet union demands but the others have studio orchestras.

National complications are regarded as certain to follow Petrillo's success with his maneouver against remote control. Under Chicago scale 10 musicians will cost a station $50,000 a year. This is on a basis of $90 per man weekly for two hours nightly. About 150 musicians have obtained permanent jobs thus far and that number will be doubled shortly it is anticipated.

No immediate effect on chain broadcasting will result from the Chicago ruling.

RADIO COMM'N JAM

Washington, Feb. 21.

Congress is having a hard time of it deciding what to do with the Federal Radio Commission. The law is a year old now and in that time has only functioned with its lawful five members for a few months with Senate confirmation lacking.

At the present time only one member, E. O. Skyes, has been officially okayed by the Senate. That body is still holding up action on O. H. Caldwell and Commissioners Pickard and Lafount. Row is centered around Mr. Caldwell.

Report that came from the commission to the effect that 300 stations would go off the air shortly after the body first met is looked upon here by radio and political experts as the real inside on the present difficulties of the air controlling body. Congress does not want to have any 300 stations, large or small, taken off the air particularly in a Presidential year.

Nobody seems to know what is going to happen.

Another Big Dodge Hour

Dodge Brothers are planning another gigantic radio hour around Feb. 28. The same all-star program idea is being assembled for a grand ballyhoo to command concentrated tune-in attention.

The last Dodge Victory Hour to sponsor the'r new Victory Six was a success so far as sensational publicity and space-grabbing is concerned.

Hearst Stone Cold On Radio Network

Outside of the New York "Evening Journal" tieup with the Loew station WHN, Hearst is definitely cold on a radio network because of the stations' refusal to underwrite the wire charges.

Hearst wanted to know if the proposed 60-station network with its staggering tolls for land wire service would pro rate the cost among them. When told that the Hearst-Loew home office would be expected to guarantee that, the publisher soured.

MUSICAL HOURS

The success of the Rudolf Friml hour as the guest star of the General Motors hour will result in a series of similar programs offering all Friml, Romberg, Berlin, Gershwin, et al. compositions.

Negotiations for new composers are pending through Leo Morrison.

$120 Monthly Service By Trio N. E. Stations

A small three-ply New England network embracing WLOE, Boston; WDRC, New Haven, and WDWF, Providence, is planned. Instead of A. T. & T. land wires, the Postal Telegraph's lines will be used at a cost of $120 a month for these facilities as against the American Telephone & Telegraph's $900 monthly.

The difference is because of a matter of service, it forcing the radio stations to install their own wire operators to insure it.

Hotel's Easy Air Plug While Band Tries Out

With no band attraction for the winter season, the Half Moon Hotel, Coney Island, the new United Hotel link at the summer resort, is employing WEAF for a radio plug via Van's orchestra, which was the opening attraction until concluding in the fall.

The Van idea of voluntary ether performance, since the Half Moon income is negligible, is the usual stunt of getting on the air, then doing a free stretch to test one's self, and after that going commercial.

Provinces Get First Radio-Theatre Combo

St. John, N. B., Feb. 21.

First broadcasting station established in conjunction with a theatre in the maritime provinces has been opened at the Imperial here, playing a mixed policy of road shows and pictures.

The name of the station is IOBO.

KFWB's New Voltage

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Warner Brothers' station, KFWB, has received Federal Radio Commission sanction to increase to 1,000 watts. This new voltage will be used when the station is transferred from the film studio to the new Warner theatre building, Hollywood boulevard, about April 1.

The wave length of KFWB is to remain the same. Broadcasting towers remain at the film studio, to be operated by remote control.

Paskman's $5 Book

Dailey Paskman, director of the Gimbel Brothers' Station WGBS, has authored a book on minstrelsy titled "Gentlemen Be Seated," which Doubleday, Doran & Co is bringing out in April at $5. Sigmund Spaeth collaborated in the editing and revision.

Paskman is known for his WGBS Radio Minstrels, the ether act playing the vaude and picture house circuits on the strength of the radio rep. Paskman has already issued a book "Dailey Paskman's Radio Minstrels," which Robbins Music Corp is publishing.

TOBIAS BACK ON AIR

After a year's absence from the radio, Harry H. Tobias returns to WMCA, New York, as a regular Wednesday evening feature under his radio billing of the Happy Tunester.

The youthful songwriter has also placed "I'm Wingin' Home" with Feist and "My Parisienne" with Harms, Benee Russell and Georgie Price collaborating.

Judson Program Co

Arthur Judson, the concert manager, has organized a special radio-showmanship managerial unit, known as the Judson Radio Program Corp., for the purpose of producing unified radio entertainment.

Walter Bradbury, who was badly hurt by four stage hands in Chicago, is going into the Steever and Lovejoy turn.

Statler's Free Radio

The Statler Hotels put over a nifty on the radio when broadcasting a sponsored radio program in which the Statler hostelries were plugged, including mention of the fact that every room in a Statler hotel receives radio entertainment. Meaning that a speaker is supplied gratis to the guest per room, by plugging in on the wall.

Other hotels furnish radio service for patrons upon request, but mostly charging.

The Statler message went into several of these hotels, particularly the Park Central, New York.

JANSSEN, STAFF HEAD FOR N. B. C. NOVELTIES

In a quest for unusual orchestral broadcastings the National Broadcasting Co. (WJZ and WEAF networks) has signed Werner Janssen, the musical comedy composer, as staff conductor. Janssen will compose special musical novelties for the radio, this means of musical dissemination being looked forward to as the greatest wholesale influence for a new and improved American music.

Janssen resigned as staff conductor of the Roxy, New York, to associate himself with radio. The same idea of musical novelties as the special Janssen-composed overtures at the Roxy will be followed with the broadcast programs.

Radio feels that even though it is a one-time program, more people are reached in that single performance than an entire week's performances in as gigantic a theatre as the Roxy. Although the theatre might be capacity for five shows daily times 6,000 attendance per show, or 30,000 people per day, totaling 210,000 or more on the week, it does not approach the audience per hour of a broadcasting station.

Radio Staff Changes

George H. Jasperet, director of the two pioneer broadcasting stations, KDKA, Pittsburgh, and KYW, Boston, is no longer associated with WBZ, Boston. Jasperet was in charge of WBZ and WBZA (Springfield), both in the NBC chain.

The National Broadcasting Co. has also annexed Walter (Hap) Meyers, New England announcer of WEEI, Boston, and placed him in their commercial department in New York.

SINGERS AGAIN GET HEARING AND POPULARITY ON RADIO

Too Much Instrumental Music Brought Back Crooners After Organ Vogue—Greatly Helping Disc Sales—Ballads Preferred

Among other quirks of radio, upsetting the accepted standard, is the renewed popularity of vocal songs. When Henry Burr and similar type ballad singers for the phonographs were almost totally killed off by the avalanche of dance records, radio of late has been neutarilizing this condition with vocal renditions, proving popular and stimulating in turn of their disk sales.

Overplus of straight instrumental music on the wax and by the ether was what created the vogue of the organ recordings. They primarily induced the terrific sales of the Gene Austin, "Whispering" Jack Smith, Nick Lucas, Happiness Boys and kindred artists' vocal record popularity.

After spurning many of the radio-famed people, the records have been compelled now to pay extra tariff for their "name" value as recording artists, this chiefly because of their ether fame.

Sammy Fain and Artie Dunn, still of Tin Pan Alley, song writers, are also vocal personalities because of their radio activities. They were last week at the Capitol, New York, with the stage show.

Little Jack Little, from a Cincinnati station, is equally a card, although an ex-plugger. Ditto, Lee Sims, publisher company pianist, whose broadcasting via piano elevated him to an exclusive Brunswick artist.

Popular Printer

Maurice J. Gunsky still is a prosperous San Francisco printer, but if it weren't for the radio and its acceptance of his subduced tenoring of sentimental ballads he wouldn't be worth a $1,000 a week in the western and northwestern picture houses, which is his salary. Gunsky is also an exclusive Victor recording artist and a song writer, his disks going big.

Radio has made Nat Shilkret one of the biggest powers in the microphonic transmission of sound, that taking in the radio and the electric form of phonograph recording.

Ford's Competitors Kick About "Lizzie" on Air

Since his apology to the Jews, one each or all—anywhere—Henry Ford seems to have developed a sense of humor. Two recent pop songs are known to have tickled the industrial mogul, "Since Henry Ford Apologized to Me" was the more ticklish as Jewish; the other being current, "Since Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie."

A Detroit editor finally gathered courage to call the song to Edsel Ford's attention before interesting Ford, Sr., and both took it most good-naturedly.

Ford's automotive competitors, Dodge Brothers and General Motors, both regular commercial broadcasters on the NBC chain, do not take it as lightly and the "Lady Out of Lizzie" song is officially barred on the Dodge and GM radio hours, apparently as a move not to further exploit the Ford product which both Dodge and General Motors through its popular priced products, the Pontiac and Chevrolet cars, are battling for mass turnover in the pop-priced car field.

Ford may yet take to the radio as an ether means of combatting the competitive exploitation, but that seems unlikely now. Ford was somewhat interested with the introduction of the new standard-shift model but finding the newspaper columns wide open to him, with much ado about the probable design and character of the new Ford before the details were made public, Ford figures he does not need much beyond the usual good will publicity advertisements as in the past.

KFUS SUSPENDS

San Francisco, Feb. 21.

Radio KFUS, pioneer broadcast station at Oakland, has suspended indefinitely. It has been operated by Dr. L. L. Sherman on 246 meters wavelength, mostly devoted to religious topics.

Action by the Federal Commission is believed to have prompted the shutting down.

RADIO RAMBLINGS

Jolly German Hour

The German hour from WPCH made one think what would have happened had a program of this type been broadcast shortly after the Great War. The air was generally jolly and while not universally appealing a comedian like Carl Frisher could not be denied, nor a contralto like Rita Mordet, among others.

Slumber Music Soothing

In the line of characteristic music, the South Sea Islanders with their strumming guitars and sonorous tenors are a pleasant entry weekly. That goes double for WJZ's Slumber Music hour from 11 until midnight. This period is a popularly anticipated hour as a relief from the jazzique that generally comes onto the air at this time.

When Functions Fail to Satisfy

Vice-President Dawes' address to the American Legion was broadcast by WOR. Aside from a succession of humorists such as is only encountered at a Friars, Lambs or Jewish Theatrical Guild dinner, such functions when picked up for etherizing fail to satisfy the anticipation.

Modern Youth Discussed

A rather pretentious "Evening Journal" hour on WPAP (the WHN ally) was the modern youth discussion by jurists, the profession and humorists, treating the subject from several angles. Justice Samuel D. Levy, Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager, Mary Young, "the flapper mother"; Sir Guy Standing, actor, and Harry Hershfield, were the features of the hour.

Frank Gordon Kirby, former director and presently treasurer of the Cameramen's Union, is delivering a series of talks on the movies for Station WHCH.

Oscar Adler's Waldorf-Astoria dinner music purveyors are over a soothing eventide interlude with their choice programs, including the time-honored "memory song" group.

DRIVING THE LISTENERS AWAY

(RADIO REVIEW)

New York, Feb. 18.

Spasmodic dialing over a series of nights between the hours of 9 p. m. to 2 a. m. on an average receiving set leaves an impression that the boys are having a tough struggle for continuity during the special hours. The air stabs at sequence to connect succeeding numbers may turn out to be a break for the film studio continuity men, but radio isn't interested in off-stage technical skill.

Radio has repeatedly said it will develop its own showmen, simply buying the talent. That may be all right, too, but it didn't do the Wrigley hour over WJZ any good.

The chewing gum entertainment lacked much in pacing itself on a King Spearmint and his court idea. It was completely overshadowed by the Palmolive 60 minutes put on by WEAF, and immediately following the Wrigley scance. The story for the soap firm was a love theme between Palm and Olive, who supposedly traveled as far away as the South Seas to permit a couple of Hawaiian tunes. Neither hour used "name" specialists, all talent evidently belonging to the stock companies of both stations. Both programs uncorked good and heavy orchestral foundations with the Wrigley schedule spotted by current production music (vocal), while also including a saxophone solo that probably chased the average listener to another station until it was over or later. Two harmony boys, though, sounded good. Both continuity ideas sufficed for the purpose, but were shaded by the Smith Brothers some nights previously, who brought Trade and Mark to life off the cough drop box.

WEAF was emphasizing the return of the Palmolive Quartet, also had one of those stage wait sax soloists, but recouped by putting a guitar and trumpet together, which ran up the temperature on a pop tune. Using a piano as a foundation, this instrumental combine ranks as a standout and good enough to halt dial spinning at any time while drifting to dance band after dance band.

Prominent by its absence during this hour was the plug for Palmolive. A casual mention of the name every so often spotted the continuity, the announcer not bearing down on the advertiser until the finish—and then not too heavily.

WOR and "True Story"

How WOR, one of the most consistent stations in the east for program value, stands for its "True Story" hour is a paralyzer. It must be out after tab reading listeners. Anyway, it's even money the Newark studio is chasing 50 per cent or more of its regulars away with this avalanche of inane, stupid and ridiculous dialog from 9 to 10 p. m. "Brutal" covers everything.

And from this let down, the station goes right into a half hour of the "30 Minute Men," a sweet band that likely is standard and broadcasts under 18 different titles. Columbia is sending out this orchestra's work over its network and rightly. This group rates more than a once a week hearing and impresses as a sure circulation builder, but the quicker that "True Story" thing can be dropped the better for this Limburger ether medium.

WLS, Chi., Wobbly

WLS, Chicago, and its "Showboat" outfit ranks as one of those hit-and-run stations where you're liable to hook on to something good and just as liable not to. It's a matter of flirting with it, picking your shots and being lucky. WGN's Drake Hotel band was sounding off in great form with a medley that

SMALL RADIO STATIONS TO FIGHT GROWTH OF BIG TIEUPS

May Rely on Direct Sales Talks to Make Their Commercial Accounts Stand Up Against Dignified Announcements by NBC and Columbia Chains

The lesser radio stations may go in for out-and-out advertising and sales plugging as a means to exist against the giant networks. With the NBC and the Columbia chain limiting its good will advertisers to dignified announcements, the small stations feel they have a chance if actual direct sales talks are put on the air.

As it is, unless there is a personal contact between listener and station via the neighborhood retail merchants, the public tunes in for whatever suits immediate fancy.

The small stations feel that if a local station broadcasting to a local following, i.e., a neighborhood audience, can effect a personal contact in heralding special sales, etc., at the local retail stores, they stand a show against their powerful competitors.

CHASING LISTENERS

left no desire to tune them out, while WSB, Atlanta, offered nothing better than fair entertainment over a period of three nights.

N. T. G.-Hellinger Sad

And then there's always WHN. Try and get away from it in New York. Early in the evening a feminine voice monotones, seemingly for hours, about Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture stars, and later N. T. G. starts his recitations. The latter ought to team with Mark Hellinger. Between the two they could draw many a picture on the bar room floor and jointly weep over the little girls they both feel so sorry for.

WHN generally means band, but so do all the rest.

WEAF features Ben Bernie on its final hour Friday nights with Ben talking the lyrics of his selections, interrupting worthy orchestrations thereby. Ben can't sing, and as long as they've toned him down on gags he might as well restrict himself to announcing and let it go at that. For those who want to listen in on band music the Bernie bunch will stand by themselves. Ben's talking of lyrics is never going to hold 'em.

2 A. M. in Syracuse

WNAC, Boston, is another in and outer for amusement, and Syracuse was boosting the opening of the new Loew building there at 2 a. m., but who stays up that late in Syracuse?

WGFL, Chicago, sponsors some neat organ manipulation in the small hours for those in the mood, and WMCA seems always to be making a racket in some cabaret. Every so often this station bumps into a hot blues singer. Lately it has been Lillian Morton, and okay, warbling very much on the style of Ruth Etting, who, incidentally, effectively soloed herself from WHN one evening.

WNYC is generally talking. Lectures, dinners, etc. A mandolin soloist broke into the American Association of Engineers dinner and that was that.

WJZ's slumber music is invariably easy on the ears, and a happy thought as a good-night feature. WMCA apparently concentrates on hot music dominated by screeching clarinets, which reduce power consumption, but are hardly worth it over any stretch of time. Speaking of bands, there's a "mike" in Chicago which tacks on to the Royal Canadians every so often, and this aggregation is worthy of attention.

But bands, bands, bands—they're playing 'em hot and cold again—there's no relief from the war. Sid.

BAER, PERMANENT M. C.

Emanuel (Manny) Baer, who broke onto the Paramount, New York, stage Monday to handle the band, will remain at that house as its permanent m. c.

Baer was formerly assistant to Dr. Reisenfeld at the Rialto and for some time had charge of the orchestrat at the Olympia, Miami, for Publix. Lately his duties have been as concert master on the New York end.

Tarzan, act, has returned to America after two years abroad.

"DRAGS" AGAIN

"Drags" are exerting themselves again.

For a time the orgies reigned, but were curbed by newspaper agitation.

Tonight (Wednesday) holiday night, there's one slated in Harlem, with the wise mob tipped off to attend.

HERE AND THERE

Lee Sims has composed a piano folio for Ted Browne Music Co. (Chicago) publication, including some of the rhapsodies broadcast by the Brunswick piano soloist. Sims is exclusive signed to Browne.

After a poor start, Ted Florito is back at the Hotel Kenmore, Albany, with a new dance band. His original outfit was makeshift pick-up combo which failed to click.

Maurice L. Adler, sales manager for Forster Music Publishers, of Chicago, was in New York on a sales trip on behalf of Forster's "Horse Feathers."

Stevens—With orchestra placements: Jules Herbubeaux's orchestra to St. Paul Auto show. Dan Russo held over at the Schroeder hotel, Milwaukee. Bulowski's Californians to Sam Pick's Cafe, Milwaukee. Cato's Imps on week's road tour. Cato's Vagabonds to the Swiss Gardens, Cincinnati.

Weede Meyer and his orchestra have opened an engagement at the Hotel Adolphus, Dallas, Tex. This orchestra has several former vaudevillians, including Jennings and Russell, Tommy Thompson and Jack Yates.

Saxi Hollsworth's orchestra replaces Paul Specht's Criterions at Fordham Gardens.

James Aftel has established an orchestra booking service at Toledo, O. He is also booking several Toledo cafes.

Elsie Peterson, prima donna, opened at the Club Richman.

Al Herman's Seville Serenaders are at the Alamac hotel grill, New York.

Eugene West has placed "Adoree" with Harms.

Ernie Golden and orchestra accompany a Ned Wayburn fashion show to Cincinnati Feb. 20-25, returning to the Knickerbocker Grill, New York, Feb. 26.

B'KLYN HOTEL'S FLOOR SHOW

Leverich Towers, new hotel in Brooklyn managed by S. E. Bleyer, has installed a floor show in the dining room.

Harry Pearl booked in the following acts: Raymonde and Diana, Roy Sisters, Madelyn White, Margaret Howard and Hal Craig's Orchestra.

DISTANCE RADIO REVIEW

By F. E. KENNY
(Variety's Correspondent at Mount Vernon, N. Y.)

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Feb. 17.

The Welsh Male Choir heard at WLS, Chicago, was an outstanding distance feature. Organization, well trained, came through with clarity. Also from this station the Hippodrome feature, comedy material on the old fashioned movies and Morrie Sherman and orchestra in nifty program.

WIOD Comes Okeh

WIOD, Miami Beach, Fla., came up with a bang. William Stang and orchestra, symphonic program, well arranged with the jazz later from the Flamingo hotel.

More Clear Programs

WTFF, Washington, D. C., in with Charlotte Brown, vocal. WRVA, Richmond, had organ program which was up to scratch. KRLD, Dallas, Tex., clicked with the Night Owls, with novetv features and actually responds to requests.

Here and There Pickups

WBAL, Batlimore, sticks around with lots of juice to spare. John Lederer and his Marylanders has a crack orchestral outfit. Goodrich hour picked up at WSM, Nashville; also the radio popularity concert at that station. WSAI, Cincinnati, General Motors' bill and also the local feature presented for Brunswick recordings. Number of record given before and after playing. From WJR, Detroit, came Duane Sawyer and his saxophone band, good novelty. Also the Riverside trail blazers' program from WEAF, WRC, Washington, also in with the WEAF chain material.

Rochester A. L. Band Scores

The Rochester American Legion Band, winner of New York state honors, is a close second to the Weymouth band heard from the WEAF chain. The upstaters came down with a roar from WHAM, Rochester, in a diversified program. WDRC, New Haven, presented the Hotel Taft orchestra in a nice arrangement.

No Static on WBBM

WBBM, Chicago, comes through nightly below WHN without any difficulty. Lombardo's orchestra, at the Granada cafe, efficient. WCAU, Philadelphia, is having a tough time in its present location and just about beats it through. Columbia program.

DX Novelties Missing

Roseray's Resurrection

The Casa Lopez advertised the return of Roseray and Cappella to the nite club with the slogan that Roseray, "after her recent indisposition," would appear nightly, etc. That's a new name for a phoney suicide.

Business has been looking up for a spell, ascribable or not to the publicity.

BILL KILLS 2c RECORDING FEE

Owner Could Make Own Terms on Mechanicals

Washington, Feb. 21.

Evidently convinced that a general revision of the copyright law, as provided in the "all approved" Vestal bill, is still to be a long drawn out process, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has had Congressman Albert H. Vestal introduce a bill to kill the present two cents clause covering mechanical reproduction.

Cited as having been introduced "by request" the new Vestal bill, numbered H. R. 10655, practically rewrites Section 1 (e) of the act placing absolute control in this regard in the hands of the copyright proprietor.

This also applies to public performances for profit. The bill proposes so to amend the law that such performances will not necessarily have to be given to a paid gate; places the control in the proprietor's name, "if it be a musical composition, to make any arrangement or setting of it or of the melody of it in any system of notation or any form of record in which the thought of an author may be recorded and from which it may be read or reproduced."

Such control, however, is denied foreign composers and authors unless their respective nations have a copyright agreement with the U. S.

Under this proposed amendment the granting of reproduction rights requires a written notice giving details as to price, and other arrangements, to the copyright office. Any other reproducing company may then "can" the number provided it, too, files written notice at the copyright office of its intention and pays the copyright proprietor the same price and complies with the same arrangements as the original contract as filed.

This, it is proposed, will replace the present section of the law which permits a second company to reproduce without notice and by paying two cents royalty on each disk or roll. The price of two cents being arbitrarily set in the law.

Hearings on this bill and the other Vestal bill aiming to establish more definitely the divisibility of copyright are set to open Friday, March 2, at 10 a. m., in the Caucus Room of the House office building. Originally this hearing was set for Friday, Feb. 24.

Senator G. H. Moses (R), New Hampshire, introduced to the Senate the American Society bill to repeal the compulsory license clause, the same bill Vestal introduced to the House.

Whiteman's Payroll Over $400,000 Yearly

In preparing his income statements for tax purposes Paul Whiteman discloses a weekly pay roll of $314,064 for his 30 men for 47 weeks played out of 52 during 192 This salary list is for stage work alone, exclusive of recordings and dance date., which bring per man's income an average of $3,000 per annum additional. This extra money for 30 men is another $90,000 item, totaling the Paul Whiteman orchestra with a pay roll in excess of $400,000 a year. It's weekly average per man of $272.

Whiteman was brought in by Victor last week on a special recording trip. The Whitemanites are grinding out disks this week, also preparatory to a fortnight's dance tour through Ohio and West Virginia.

STERLING TRIO'S COMEBACK

The Sterling Trio, veteran phonograph recording combination, are doing a comeback via radio. They are doing considerable disc work for the lesser companies, meanwhile plugging their trade name through the ether.

Henry Burr is no longer with the Sterling Trio, being exclusively Victor, the threesome now comprising John Myers, Henry Moeller and Albert Campbell.

BUFFANO IN SEATTLE

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Jules Buffano, stage band leader at the Chicago theatre (Publix), has been replaced by Lou Kosloff and will open the new Publix house in Seattle, Feb. 27.

Al Short returned to the Capitol (Cooney Bros.) a few weeks ago, has been replaced by Caesar Linden and will join Buffano in the Publix Seattle house as musical director.

2D CIVIC ORGAN CANNED

Portland, Me., Feb. 21.

Through the Portland Music Commission arrangements have been made with the Victor Phonograph Company for the recording of the Portland Municipal organ, which, with one exception, is the only organ thus to be recorded. The exception is the organ in the Tabernacle of Salt Lake City. Charles Raymond Cronham, municipal organist here, will do the recording.

The Portland organ was the gift of Cyrus H. K. Curtis. It is the largest municipal organ in America.

WANTS $6,000 ROYALTIES

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Russell Robinson, pianist for Marion Harris, has filed suit against Waterson, Berlin & Snyder for $6,000, claiming royalties due on "Mary Lou" and other numbers.

He is represented by Phil R. Davis.

Katz in Des Moines

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 21.

Al Katz and band come here from Rainbo Gardens, Chicago, to play the automobile show Feb. 20-25.

THAT PARTY!

Bobbie Crawford, Lou Brown, Ray Henderson and Buddy De Sylva celebrated their first anniversary as a music publishing house with some party at the mid-town Hof-Brau Feb. 15.

Naturally, the high light was Mayor Walker, who spoke over the radio for 10 minutes about 1 a. m., extolling the boys. WHN had installed the mike in the banquet hall with NTG officiating. A show followed the firm and its staff's own dinner.

After that it was the party itself. Everyone was a guest of the firm and the everyones composed an overflow. What had been presumed as a small party with the staff augumented by a few friends, developed into a gathering of the show business.

As a spontaneous expression of good will, the party's drawing power must have been the most pleasing note to the quartet-firm of its first year and the celebration.

Starting at 7 with a private dinner, the banquet got underway at around 10, continuing until they were told the sun had come up.

Men and women were present, with the ladies showing off some tony gowning. Some of the men never noticed it.

Song Injunction

Chicago, Feb. 21.

A temporary injunction restraining the Forster Music Publishers from further distribution and exploitation of "Horsefeathers," a song based on Barney Google and Spark Plug, was granted Billy DeBeck, creator of that comic strip.

Written by Abe Ohlman, the song was published by the Forster firm. Billy DeBeck was represented in court by his attorney, W. H. Murphy.

G. L. SMITH OFF OPERA

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

George Leslie Smith, manager of the Los Angeles Opera Association for 10 years, has resigned in favor of Merle Armitage, and will in future devote all his time to the affairs of the L. A. Philharmonic Orchestra.

STRAIGHT'S RENEWAL

Chicago, Feb. 21.

Charlie Straight and his orchestra have re-signed with Brunswick for exclusive recordings.

Straight also has placed two compositions with publishers, "Tender Words" and "Swinging Along With a Song."

Jimmy Gregware, best known dance orchestra leader in Troy, N. Y., is billing his musicians as Gregware's Rainbow Thrill Orchestra. Gregware was one of first maestros to stage "battles of music" with rival jazzists.

Hard Flopping Albany Ball; Nothing as Advertised

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21.

The much heralded military ball scheduled at the state armory here last Thursday night (Feb. 15) with Paul Whiteman's and Jan Garber's bands advertised as the star attractions, flopped so hard that the financial crash was felt by many including several business men of the city.

Neither Paul Whiteman nor any of his band is made an appearance and the advertised "stage and screen stars," including Betty Compson and Wallace Beery, scheduled to give a performance preceding the concert by Whiteman's orchestra and the dance, never were intended to appear.

Jean Le Mar, the promoter of the affair, made a hurried unannounced departure from the Tenth Infantry drill shed, while hundreds clamored about his office for the return of their money, and his whereabouts are unknown. The gate and previous ticket sale receipts in some manner or another were missing.

Jan Garber appeared with his band but before the dance started the promoter gave him only $81 When Garber threatened to leave Captain John J. Donahue, commanding Company B, Tenth Infantry, under whose direction the ball was being staged, according to advertisements, gave the maestro $100 Garber came to Albany on a $750 contract. He played from 8 until midnight for $181.

"College Daze" in Tab

Francis Drake Ballard, collegiate song writer and author of two U. of P. Mae and Wig shows, has condensed a musical comedy, "College Daze," into a vaude tab, with lyrics by Morrie Ryskind.

Ballard is music publishing independently.

CUMMINS WITH BRUNSWICK

Cummins is a Johnny Hamp band unit.

BITNERS' S. A. CRUISE

The E. F. Bitners are on a South American cruise.

Feist's general overseer left New York a few days ago and will be away for a couple of months.

Spitalny in Pittsburgh

The Spitalny orchestra closes this week at the Lafayette, Buffalo, after eight weeks.

With eight men added, it opens at the Stanley, Pittsburgh, Feb. 27, indefinitely.

Gordon With Brunswick

Herbert Gordon and his Whispering Orchestra have been signed by Brunswick to record exclusively for two years.

The Gordon orchestra is at the Hotel Adelphia Roof, Philadelphia.

GENE AUSTIN IS DISC'S BEST SELLER NOW

The biggest selling popular vocal artist on all records now is Gene Austin, exclusive Vict rartist whose "Forgive Me" recordin, went over 500,000 disks and "My Blue Heaven" will exceed that. Austin's records sell 100,000 blind to the dealers without previously heard.

The confidential tenor, who is Orpheum touring, has started a music publishing subsidiary in Chicago with Marty Bloom associated. Austin was last week reported killed in a Milwaukee automobile smash-up, the Boston "Transcript" carrying a report to that effect. It is merely one of the recurring popular pastimes of killing off recording artists. Lee Morse, the Columbia disk maker, was also among that reported list.

Claims Collaboration

Alleging that she collaborated with Irving Kahal-on a song, "You Are My Sunshine On A Rainy Day," Harriett Coons, songwriteress, has retained Goldsmith, Goldblatt & Hanower in a royalty claim against Henry Waterson, Inc. The latter firm publishes "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella On A Rainy Day," credited to Kahal, Francis Wheeler and Sammy Fain for co-authorship.

Miss Coons and Kahal abandoned their collaboration. It is her allegation that Kahal adapted the idea for the new song, although there is no other similarity.

Miss Coons has sold an interest in her song in anticipation of its publication and royalty earnings.

NEW "MAMMY" BARRAGE

Leo Feist, Inc., will shortly release "That's My Mammy," by Abel Baer, Harry Pease and Eddie Nelson, indicating a revival of the mammy vogue.

The publishers have had the song in reserve for some time awaiting an opportune moment for the mammy song exploitation.

KENNY FOR WURLITZER

Los Angeles Feb. 21.

Ralph E. Kenny has been appointed general manager of the band and orchestra instrument department for 70 stores, operated by the Wurlitzer Company in California.

Kenny was for 12 years first trombonist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra before joining Wurlitzer seven years ago.

Feldkamp-Alter, Recorders

Walter Feldkamp and Lou Alter have formed a twin-piano recording team. Feldkamp was formerly teamed with Alan Moran, now with "Just Fancy," in Chicago," doing piano roll and phonograph recordings.

Alter is a composer-pianist, formerly accompanying Irene Bordoni.

Sunshine Boys Disband

The Sunshine Boys, Vitaphone and recording artists, have disbanded.

Dave Ringle and Eddie Roth, of the group, remain in New York to write songs.

Sam Pick Ducked "Ride"; Barely Saved His Life

Milwaukee, Feb. 21.

An attempt to take Sam Pick, Milwaukee roadhouse "king" for "a ride" flivvered when Pick made a nosedive into the bottom of a car and was only slightly injured when two bullets from a sawed-off shot gun crashed through the door-glass of the car.

While the after-theatre crowd was milling about the downtown district, an unidentified gunman walked up to Pick and shoving a gun into his back, ordered him into a car. Instead of obeying, Pick leaped into another car, driven by a friend to whom he was talking, and the gunman let go. He escaped in the excitement.

Pick was unable to explain the attack. He said he did not know his assailant nor did he know of any grudge against him.

Pick, who once owned numerous roadhouses here and carries the distinction of not only being the biggest roadhouse magnate, but never having been caught in the prohibition net, recently sold his Blue Chip to a man named as J. J. Sullivan of Chicago. Pick, at the time of sale, is said to have promised not to open another roadhouse in Milwaukee county until Dec. 1, 1928. Rumors have it that he contemplated going just across the Waukesha county line, about four miles from the Blue Chip and opening a new place.

Bernice Coulter's Divorce

Detroit, Feb. 21.

Bernice Coulter, dancer, was granted a divorce from Frank Coulter by Judge Jayne in Circuit Court. She charged gambling and consequent non-support.

Mrs. Coulter is fairly well known in night club circles.

HARMAN'S 20 WEEKS

Pittsburgh, Feb. 21.

Dave Harman and band have been signed to play 20 weeks at the Frolic Club, Miami, playing the Ernie Young Revue as well as the dance sessions.

Harman finished an eight weeks' picture house engagement at Loew's Penn here.

Toronto, Feb. 21.

Another attempt to make Toronto go cabaret ended in Bankruptcy Court, when all visible assets of the Music Box were sold to meet creditors' accounts. At the same time a receiver took over management of Casa Loma, most pretentious of private hotels and restaurants.

The Music Box got away in a blaze of publicity, bright lights and Toledo jazz. The band has gone back to Ohio, lights are out, and so are two young men, Gilbert Watson and Waldo Holden, both orchestra leaders. Ten cabarets have tried it here in five years. Failure has been 100 per cent.

Jean Goldkette's band couldn't take "maybe" for an answer when they asked Casa Loma how about the dough. The band got paid. The receiver is still running the hotel.

Padlock Closed Club

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

Despite the fact that it closed voluntarily on account of poor business, the Peacock Inn, one of the leading Twin City night clubs, has been padlocked for six months by federal court for serving "setups."

The Nankin cafe, largest of the local cabarets, is fighting injunction proceedings started by the feds to restrain it from serving ginger ale and other "setups."

CONLEY'S CONTEMPT ACTION

St. Louis, Feb. 21.

Application for a contempt citation against Larry Conlay, orchestra leader, has been filed in Federal Court by James F. Green, Federal Receiver, for the Arabian Club, Inc., which operates the Tent, night club here.

In his petition, Green charges Conley removed a notice from the door of the club stating that Green was in charge of the property and forbidding anyone, including receivers in the Circuit Court, from interfering with Green's management. Green also alleged Conley operated the club over the past week-end and still is in charge, in defiance of a Federal Court order. He asked an order be issued citing Conley to appear and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court.

MIAMI BOOZE PRICES

Miami, Feb. 21.

"Life," the local paper, has printed a list of prevailing bootleg liquor prices at this point. It mentions through conditions an advance of late, and adds that the retail purchaser of real beer at $1 a bottle should remember that beer is costing the dealer $65 for a case of 72 bottles.

Rye whiskey is quoted from Segram's at $55 a case to Mt. Vernon at $125. Eleven rye brands are listed.

Scotch is mostly at $50 a case with 16 brands named. Among them Black Label Johnny Walker tops at $70, Old Smuggler is at $50, and Haig and Haig, pinch bottle, quoted at $65.

Cordials run to $75, and light wines to $50.

Hennessy's 3-star brandy is set down at $75.

Bicardi rum is quoted at $60-$80, the latter for the 1873 vintage, with an inserted warning in the $60 price for Carte de Or reading (look out).

Burgundy is $80 and the cordial brandies, $60.

In New York

No marked changes of late in New York quotations for liquor. Rye is reported more plentiful, running to the Canadian brands, with Canadian Club held at $35 by dealers.

Scotch is said to be coming in heavy deliveries from several points. Prices vary according to the seller and consumer, but maintaining an average from $65 to $85, dependent upon the grade and the knowledge or honesty of the legger.

Demand for wines fell off with the passing of the holidays. It appears to be ordered now on consignment. Nite clubs usage of champagne has greatly dropped this season, with the sucker list very slim.

JARDIN ROYAL

(NEW YORK)

As outlined in a news story in Variety, at the pace the Chinese-American restaurants are going the jocosely dubbed "yellow peril" is no longer a gag but a serious factor to contend with. Paul Specht's opening at the Jardin Royal again proves what bargain rate amusement together with a many-course dinner for a $1.60 charge can accomplish.

The Jardin Royal offers a name band and five acts, with a radio announcer as master of ceremonies (for the opening only), which, combined with the kitchen facilities, makes it little wonder that this type of restaurant thrives as it does.

The Chinese eateries are designed chiefly for the mass trade, the type of patron that patronizes the chain restaurants in the daytime and upon whom a tablecloth and a little extra fol-de-rol make an impression. The umpchay and his gal find they can raise plenty whoopee for under four bucks of an evening in a restaurant like the Jardin Royal, Palais D'Or and other gilded chowmeineries, and they come back again and again, induced by this economical approach to a cabaret or nite club.

How the Chinese restaurants do it mystifies the American cafe man, explainable only by the turnaway trade, the large capacities of from 700 to 900 and the low cost of the edibles, being chiefly vegetables and herbs and non-perishable.

Specht at the Jardin takes his place along with other important dance bands in contemporary Chinese-American restaurants such as B. A. Rolfe at the Palais D'Or and others. Specht should prove an attraction for the Jadin, a WOR radio hook-up being another factor.

The supporting show includes Jean and Viola, Spanish dancers; Wilda Ganeau, prima; Martin and Lake, eccentric male dance team; Romona Betzer, Oriental dancer, and Chick Kennedy, eccentric comedienne. Edward B. Husing, the WOR-Columbia Broadcasting System announcer, officiated as master of ceremonies in a manner that suggests the picture houses might turn to radio for suitable stage m.c.'s.

Husing worked unusually well, a confidence and stage presence developed in front of a "mike" reacting even better in the flesh.

Abel.

Mat Perry is now at Boston in a cabaret.

Mrs. Eddie Cox's Club

Loretta McDermott, the former Mrs. Eddie Cox, opens a night club March 8, with herself the star performer and hostess.

The Manhatters, singing orchestra, will officiate, with George Walsh, formerly of the Yacht Club Boys, and the Carter Bros. The club is named after Miss McDermott and is located in a small converted garage in the fifties.

Rudolph Donat, now conducting a theatrical agency at Dallas, Tex., and formerly a correspondent for Variety in that city, is no longer associated with this paper.

$250 for 4-Piece Band, And Agent Got $50 of It

Probably a record low figure for a 4-piece band is the $250 fee for the quartet at Don Dickerman's Heigh-Ho on East 53d street, the former Lido-Venice.

Jack Horn, who booked the quartet, made a $50 profit out of this.

When Dickerman learned that, he paid off the four men at the rate Horn paid them, eliminating Horn from the remaining $50. The agent is starting suit to recover on his booking contract through Goldsmith, Goldblatt & Hanower.

OBITUARY

EDDIE FOY

Eddie Foy, 71, died of heart disease in his room in the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Feb. 16. At the time of his death Mr. Foy was playing the Orpheum in his sketch, "The Fallen Star." At his bedside were Mrs. Foy, Herbert Tuthill, hotel physician, and the Rev. John Hennessey, Catholic priest.

No better stage comic and musical comedy star was known than Eddie Foy, although much of his later life was spent in vaudeville. Besides the widow he is survived by seven children.

Eddie Foy had spent 57 years on the stage and was active up to the day of his death. When eight he started out as a street entertainer. His real name was Fitzgerald, his father, Richard Fitzgerald, having served during the Civil War. His father was a New York tailor. Eddie being born at 23 8th avenue, in Greenwich Village. When his father died the family moved to Chicago.

When 15 Mr. Foy appeared at a benefit performance for the Chicago

Newsboys' Home, and did a clog and an acrobatic dance. Later he toured the bars with Jack Finnigan. Eddie was then using the family name, but decided for stage purposes that Foy would be better. He and Finnigan worked as supers in dramatic shows, and Foy recalled with pride of playing as a "supe" with Edwin Booth.

Eddie Foy was thrice a widower. His first wife was Rose Howland, of the Howland Sisters. His second wife was Lola Sefton and his third Madeline Morondo, celebrated then as a danseuse, who was the mother of his seven children and who appeared with him for years. She died in 1918.

Five years later the comedian wedded Marie Combs, of Sedalia, Mo., non-professional. This marriage incurred the displeasure of the children, who at first refused to receive their new mother in the Foy home at New Rochelle, N. Y. Later a reconciliation was effected.

Eddie Foy acquired fame by his exceptional mimicry, drollery, pantomimic clowning and eccentric dancing, and for over 30 years was recognized as one of America's foremost comedians. He was at the Iroquois theatre, Chicago, when fire destroyed the house and 602 lives were lost. Foy proved a hero by trying to halt the panic.

In recent years Eddie and the Foy children were vaude headliners, but the children forming their own act when the split came over the last marriage.

The Foy children were playing in Madison, Wis., at the time their father died. Bryan Foy, one of the older children, has been on the west coast directing pictures.

Mr. Foy wrote the story of his stage life, calling it "Clowning Through Life," recently published in a magazine.

The remains were shipped to New Rochelle, N. Y., for interment.

Mrs. Foy was a Macomb, Ill., girl, being a daughter of Pat Riley, railing to Fox was with the Paramount Studios working on Raymond Griffith films. He had been for years a comedy director and story writer. Bobby Vernon, the film comedian, was his brother-in-law. He was divorced several years ago from May Morris (non-professional) and leaves a 12 year old son.

EVA MOUNTFORD
(Mrs. Elmer Grandin)

Eva Mountford (Mrs. Elmer Grandin) legitimate actress, died Feb. 14 at her home in Patchogue, Long Island, after a long illness.

In association with her husband, Mr. Elmer Grandin, who survives, she appeared in repertoire at that time; she was a big road favorite. Miss Mountford retired from stage work about 15 years ago.

Miss Mountford was a member of the Society of American Dramatists and Composers, Professional Woman's League, and Actors' Equity Association. A brother also survives.

Interment in the family plot at Patchogue.

LEONA CARDONA SOULE

Mrs. Leona Cardona Soule, 64, character actress and contralto, died Feb. 15 in Bellevue Hospital, Mrs. Soule made her last appearance upon the stage as a principal with "Beware of Your Friends" in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Soule appeared in "Kerry" in 1926, and in 1915 she was in stock in Stapleton, Long Island. Her husband was Frank Waldo Soule, actor and basso, who died in 1904.

Mrs. Soule was one of the survivors of the wrecked steamship "Monroe" when traveling with William Wood's "Macaria" Co. Several members of the troupe were drowned.

Funeral was held Feb. 17, auspices of the Actors' Fund of Amer-

LINCOLN PLUMMER

Lincoln Plummer, 52, picture actor, died suddenly of heart disease Feb. 14 at his home in Hollywood, Cal. The day of his death he had just completed a part in a Charley Chase comedy. He collapsed after eating dinner. Efforts to revive him were futile.

Mr. Plummer had been playing character parts in pictures for the past 10 years and previously was on the stage. Funeral services were held Feb. 17 under auspices of the Masonic Order to which he belonged.

TOM WILLIAMS
(Thomas F. McCarthy)

Thomas F. McCarthy, 57, known professionally as Tom Williams, comedian, died Feb. 11 of heart disease. When his family went to awaken him he was found dead, the comedian having died while asleep.

McCarthy is survived by his widow, Mrs. May McCarthy (non-professional) and a son, Foster J., also on the stage and known as Foster Williams, stock leading man.

Veteran comedian was born in Ireland and came from County Cork when a baby.

Services were held at Fresh Pond Road cemetery, where the remains were cremated Feb. 14.

ALPHONZO JOHNS

Alphonzo Johns, colored, American song writer, died at the American Hospital, Paris, France, Feb. 16. He was born in Washington, D. C., in 1881.

MOLLY THOMPSON

Molly Thompson, 49, casting director, Hal Roach studios for 7 years, died at her home in Culver City, Calif., Feb. 14 from a brain hemorrhage. At one time Miss Thompson was an actress on the Roach lot and appeared in nearly all of Harold Lloyd's early comedies. A daughter, Mrs. William Bodman, survives.

ALTIA LOVETT

Altia Lovett, in vaudeville with The Lovetts, died in the American hospital, Chicago, Feb. 12.

Miss Lovett was seized with an acute attack of indigestion and was rushed to the hospital, where she became worse and died.

Miss Lovett was born in New Castle, Ind. She is survived by her husband, Al. Lovett.

P. J. Martin, pioneer builder of Broadway electric signs, died at the French Hospital, New York, as result of being struck by an automobile. At time of his death he was connected with Strauss & Co. Was a brother of George Martin of "Spring 3100" cast at the Little theatre. He was on his way to the opening performance when he suffered injuries that ended in his death.

The father, 79, of Fay Bainter, died at his home in Los Angeles, Feb. 19. Besides Fay, two daughters, Mrs. Grace Burgess, actress, and Alda Fitzmeyer, and a granddaughter, Grace Burgess, actress, survive.

Mrs. C. L. Nagely (Selma Herman), wife of Carlton Lewis Nagely, died at her home in the Hotel Alexandria, New York, Feb. 18. Her brother, Alvah W. Herman, is manager Great Northern Theatre, Chicago.

Mrs. Nettie Brandes, 58, mother of Bob Brandes and Sammy Howard, died Feb. 15 of pneumonia in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Caroline Smith, 77, grandmother of Ralph Bellamy (Ralph Bellamy Players), died last week in Des Moines.

Thomas Wall, 63, father of Alma Wall (Wall and Deeds) died in Cincinnati Feb. 18. He formerly supplied high school and draft horses to circuses.

The mother (73) of William Zinnell of C. B. Maddock's "Sidekicks" Co. died Jan. 27, with interment in New Haven, Conn. Three sons and two daughters survive.

Dora Alf, 55, wife of Jack Alf, electrician, Keith's Cincinnati, died in that city last week.

The mother of Bernice Askin, studio musician at First National, died Feb. 12 in Hollywood, Cal., after a long illness.

Johan Nordhal Rolfsen, 79, Norwegian playwright.

Hendrik Antoon Lorentz, Dutch author, died at Haarlem, Holland.

Marie de l'Isle, 68, former Opera Comique star, died in Paris.

RADIO'S MAILING LISTS

write in concerning radio programs.

In all cases, these lists are unavailable to outsiders. The department stores, however, painstakingly list and index them and acknowledge all correspondence, utilizing the lists for a circular mail-order stunt of their own.

Tremendous Reaction

Leaflet matter distributed to radio fans has had a stupendous commercial reaction, it is stated. The merchandising departments of the stores have proof of this daily.

In addition, where WGBS and WOR, also commercial broadcasting stations, receive mail from fans concerning one of their other advertising accounts, all of it is carefully indexed and turned over to the commercial firm it concerns.

These radio advertisers through their own mail order and mail advertising systems follow-up all such responses, and it has recorded an increased demand for their products.

In cases like this, the radio merchandizer does not attempt to compete with the local retailer by soliciting direct mail order business. Instead all literature urges business dealings with the local merchants unless it becomes imperative, as an alternative, to order direct from the home office.

It is only in this wise that radio advertisers check up on their other activities. They instruct their merchandizing outlets, after a sale is consummated, to inquire casually how and why the patron became interested in their product with the query whether it was a result of national printer's ink publicity or radio. Answers are tabulated checked and submitted to the home office for its own conclusions.

Correa is said to have claimed that their six months' "trial marriage" had "taken." Correa said that the Los Angeles "evangelist" had purified the trial marriage.

Steps have been taken by federal authorities to extradite from Winnipeg "Dr." Orlando Edgar Miller, self-styled "apostle of health," who is wanted in connection with fraud charges growing out of his promotion of Rullimo Film Co. Many San Franciscans lost money.

"Just Plannin'," original radio drama by Helen Norris, little crippled girl living in the mountains of southern Oregon, was presented for the first time over KPO.

As a last resort to escape serving a one to three-year term in prison, Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress, will appeal to Governor C. C. Young. Miss Mackaye, convicted for concealing facts in the death of her husband, Ray Raymond, musical comedy actor, was denied her appeal from the State supreme court for reversal of the conviction. Paul Kelly, her admitted sweetheart, is doing a one to ten-year stretch in San Quentin for the murder of Raymond.

Federal Court of Appeals handed down an important decision as effecting rights of a possessor of liquor, when it overruled Fedcral Judge Kerrigan and ordered return of 235 gallons of whiskey seized from Thomas Fabri of San Francisco. Fabri was acquitted of unlawful possession charges, but the court refused to order the confiscated booze returned.

Chief of Police Dan O'Brien has started a "clean-up" of thugs, gunmen and gangsters generally. Four hundred have been "deported" within the last week.

LONDON

London, Feb. 11.

Robert Loraine will not give a protracted showing of Strindberg's "The Dance of Death," his role being heavy and exacting, and will follow it shortly by a new, unnamed play by Edgar Wallace.

Lloyd Edward Turner, trombone player with Freddie Rich's band, and Gladys Weiss Logel (Americans), whose marriage was postponed due to Freddie Rich's trip to Europe, duly took place in London.

Barrie Oliver, young American dancer, has decided to switch countries, and has taken out English naturalization papers.

Following Lily Elsie's return to the stage after 20 years' retirement, comes news that Lady Churston, formerly Denise Orme, popular Daly's star, will reappear in a new revue, "Will o'Whispers," due in London shortly under the auspices of J. A. E. Malone and Clifford Whitley. Others in the show will be Elsa Facfarlane, Billy Bennett and Whispering Jack Smith. Denise Orme's last stage appearance was in 1909 in "Our Miss Gibbs."

After appearing in the chief comedy role in "The Vagabond King" for over a year, Mark Lester has left the cast on its transference to the Gaiety theatre. Replaced by Syd Walker, popular provincial comedian.

In "Gossip," written by Thomas Warner (late stage manager for Sybil Thorndike), will be Olga Lindo, Basil Gill and Hay Petrie. It will be tried out in Newcastle Feb. 20.

Elephant theatre is continuing its "bath of blood" (as one critic described its recent production of "Maria Martin") regime, following this murder in the Red Barn thriller with "Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street," "The Miller and His Men," "George Barnwell," "Robert Macaire," "Sapho" and other "strong meat" old-time melos.

At the annual meeting of the Victoria Palace, Ltd., Jan. 27, the chairman announced the gross profit of the year was $148,675, leaving a net profit of $125,130. Usual dividend of 20 per cent.

"Blind" Ticket Scheme Breaks Shriners' Record

Minneapolis, Feb. 21.

The "blind" ticket scheme of A. G. Bainbridge put over the Shriners' annual circus at the Auditorium here to the biggest returns in history. Total attendance was slightly under 125,000. Two performances daily, except Monday, were scheduled, but two extra shows were necessary, one at midnight Friday and another Saturday morning.

Thousands of Masons and their friends were equipped with the "blind" ticket books. Purchasers pulled a ticket from the book and paid the amount specified on the back and not visible to them in advance. The amounts ranged from one to 50 cents. Acts for the show were recruited from circuses.

Big Show at Garden Apr. 5—2½ Wks. Only

The Ringling-Barnum-Bailey Circus will open the season at Madison Square Garden, April 5, taking possession two days prior.

The opening date is somewhat later than last year and the Garden engagement will be the shortest since the shows combined. The outfit will remain, but two and one-half weeks, taking to canvas at Washington, April 23, Brooklyn, as the first stand out of the Garden, has been passed up.

Sudden switching in the route is the presumed cause for the shorter opening date here, although trade at the Garden last season slumped considerably towards the close. Another indication of route changes is that, although the show plays Washington early, Philadelphia will not be visited until later in the season.

Too Much Business Stopped Wax Works

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 21.

Such a rush to attend a wax work exhibition streets were blocked and business interfered with to such an extent that the merchants appealed to the license commission to revoke the permit for its showing.

The museum hired a store on Main street, filled the show windows with wax figures of Judd Gray, Ruth Snyder and other "celebrities" and displayed large placards telling of the wonders within.

When the protest of the merchants was filed the museum closed.

N. Y. Fair Clean-Up Bill

Buffalo, Feb. 21.

Stricter regulations for Western New York county fairs will be the subject of legislation to be introduced into the State Legislature at Albany by Senator Kirkland of Cattaraugus.

In a new bill, Kirkland will seek to enforce through the State police more stringent regulations against gambling and side shows. The bill will further prohibit all games of chance, floating carnivals, nude displays and similar exhibits with the state police charged with the enforcement of the provisions.

Devany's New Ride

Orest J. Devany, park man, will have a new ride in Coney Island this summer, located on Surf avenue opposite Feltman's. The ride is a mechanical horserace, with the amusement seekers riding and propelling the wooden gee gees. Speed depends upon strength and skill of the riders, so that the idea is to make it a contest.

Devany is associated with Cohen Bros., ticket agency men.

Circus Barring Move

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 21.

The Eastern Iowa Fair Managers' Association this year will seek ordinances in their cities modeled after the Cedar Rapids ordinance, which gives the council power to refuse to permit a circus to show a few days before the fair opening. Twenty-five representatives of the district organization attended the meeting. H. J. Curtin, Chicago, secretary of the Harness Horse Association, was principal speaker.

BARNES OPENS MARCH 30

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.

Al G. Barnes Circus will hold its annual event here from March 30 to April 8. Location, at the same grounds, Washington and Hill street.

City council granted the permit to Barnes.

Marcus Loew

way engineer. Her first husband was an actor named Combs. She married Foy five years ago.

Nellie Burke, a cousin of Mrs. Foy, was visiting the Foys in Kansas City when the comedian died. Bryant Foy arrived in New York from coast Monday.

REGINALD MORRIS

Reginald Morris, 41, scenario writer and gag man, was found dead at his apartment in Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 16. Friends believed he died of acute indigestion, but the circumstances caused police to investigate and the coroner to hold an autopsy.

Morris was under contract to Fox and was working on "The Sport Girl," a Madge Bellamy picture. He had been in the picture business for about 16 years and before com-

The Palace bill is more in line with the $2.20 top this week. Headlined in class by the Pavley-Ourainsky Ballet, and with a substantial supply of comedy, the show is one of the most entertaining of this season.

Andreas Pavley and Serge Ourainsky, advertised as seven years with the Chicago Grand Opera Co., have assembled four men and 16 girls in a routine of classical and interpretive dancing that held attention without letup for 30 minutes. Edris Milar, featured dancer, is consistently proficient in widely varied numbers. There is considerable figure display and none of it is annoying.

Having left "Hit the Deck" at the Woods, Trixie Friganza returned to vaude with "My Bag o' Trix," special songs and patter written by Neville Fleeson. She was on fourth and stopped the show. Trixie has acquired an added punch encore for the act, taking the hit song from "Deck" and doing it just as she did with the show.

Joe Morris and Flo Campbell were also show-stoppers with "Any Apartment," sketch they've been using for some time. Eddie Allen and Doris Canfield, the girl carrying comedy, went over easily in third spotting. Miss Canfield is heavy on eccentric stuff, but not hard to follow.

Looking a little out of place in the deuce, Rosita and Ramon nevertheless got much applause on their dancing. The numbers are Spanish, worked slowly with an eye for grace rather than the customary vaudeville tricks. Possibly this wouldn't get over in other than class houses. Four piece orchestr is carried.

Larry Rich took last and next-to-closing spots, first with "Cherie" as his partner for comedy in one and then with his orchestra in full. "Cherie" is a classical gal with a wicked eye, doing her stuff on kich for the comedy. Rich is primarily an orchestra leader, but can carry humor because of appearance and a good knowledge of what draws laughs. He has a nine-piece rchestra, okay, and used the Dean Twins, dancers, and Bernie Rich for specialties. Other acts on the bill came on for additional entertainment.

Fulton and Tack, hand balancers opened with a short and impressive line of stunts. Their forte is in accomplishing a hand lift with one of the men bent over the back of a chair.

About three rows empty Sunday afternoon. Familiar names brought in the better than average business.

They keep 'em guessing at the Majestic. For several months the policy has been a fair bill one week and a bad one the next. In order to keep 'em from kicking when the bill is terrible they put in a good picture. This week the vaude is topnoted. For the generally mediocre house over on Monroe street, Lon Chaney's "London After Midnight" (M-G-M), Aesop's Fables and Pathe News.

Paul Gordon, used as an opener, failed to get the reception that he might if he had more sure-fire laugh lines. He enters in a miniature gondola, jumps around the stage on a pogo hobby-horse that is rather neat and rides a bike that is so high. He has a natural comedy appearance, but Potter and Gamble, a neat enough little pair, offer a mild package of laughs, with the brunette boy at the ivories and the blonde, short-skirted baby-talking damsel tapping a bit, singing a bit and being very babyish. They did fairly well.

Joe May and Co. (3) work before a drop representing a hotel lobby. A tall, straight chap, reasonably good looking and with a fair voice, works with a little comic of average ability. Then, for flash, there's a fiery little flapper with sex appeal. They open with the two men planning to rob the hotel safe; comes the girl, and the straight decides to go straight. Comedy and songs of a sort. Very fair stuff for in-between time.

Smith and Cantor offered some comic stuff that registered. Smith, a heavy straight, playing piano, works well with Cantor the comic. Their Turkish bit is serseless nonsense, but funny. Keene and Williams, a dumpy little country lass with sex appeal nil, but craving sex anyhow, meets up with a city chap who is in the sticks on a fishing trip. Risque material not dependent upon imagination brings laughs.

Ensign Al Moore and Jolly Tars (9) have an excellent orchestra. Sceplaity solos and comedy interSpecialty solos in naval uniforms in front of a very clever battleship drop they are clicking the date. Joe Mendi, an old trouper, becomes more proficient day by day. Business—not there.

Officials of the Illinois Vigilance Society, headed by the Rev. Philip P. Yarrow, are formulating plans for an extensive investigation into the practices of a number of small offices in Chicago's theatrical section doing business as "theatrical agencies."

Charges on several varied counts are placed against the racketeer bookers who masquerade as legitimate agents for fictitious circuits. Not a few of these offices advertise for girls desiring a stage career.

Arrived at the office of the big-hearted "producers," the girls, meeting with the racketeer's approval, are given glowing accounts of their possibilities. Some of the jobs offered are quite harmless, depending upon the booker. In a number of cases they are slated for amateur contests, bathing beauty parades and posing.

Girls as young as 16 and 17, and sometimes younger, are victimized, their more experienced sisters not being so easily misled by the promises held out. As the girl progresses in her career she is asked for dates by the angels, and sometimes capitulates, in the belief that she must "pay for glory," says Rev. Yarrow.

Other hack agents, occupying dingy offices in out-of-the-way crevices, conduct a "wild party" racket that is said to be quite lucrative. Stag parties, smokers and convention men call on these agencies for "a bunch of girls and a 'cootch dancer' with plenty of pep," and the nondescript outfits usually fill the bill with a motley array of degraded femininity.

Fair stuff weakly arranged at the Englewood the last half of last week. Good comedy was missing, as usual, but business held up with the aid of "The Main Event" (Pathe), appealing title for the neighborhood.

Johnson Sisters, singing and dancing, in "one" as openers. Spot all wet and tough for the kids, considering their mildness. Eddie Carr and Co., three-people comedy sketch about a city slicker selling banana oil stock to the hamleteers, was played flatly. Not much fun to it, with the comic repeating each gag three or more times to drain laughs.

Lather Brothers, young hoofing team, have appearance and regulation tap work that will satisfy the families. Two girl friends in the house, loudly boasting acquaintance with the boys, made the noisiest clique for its size ever heard. Lathers returned the compliment with personal smiles.

In next to closing Eva Mandel and pianist achieved legitimate local success with special numbers and humorous reference to the heftig qualities of Miss Mandel. Act showed best on the bill.

Williams' Midgets are reliable family entertainment. One of the lilliputians is a stellar standout, with acrobatic, vocal and dancing talent well developed. Two more are efficient acrobats, and the other two men and girl are light in activities. Williams and his wife work in the act for contrast and direction.

Business held up fairly well at the Riviera, last half. Johnson and Baker opened with one of those boomerang acts utilizing scads of straw hats. Managed for fair laugh. Wilton Crawley has added a bit of blackface pantomime, and he might just as well dispense with it. His contortions with a lighted oil lamp and his back-bend stepping make him desirable for vaude or picture houses.

High-spotting the program were the Palette dancers, with dancing satisfactory; but the big attraction is a colored fantasy of film on the screen in front of which they work. It is remindful of the color accompaniment of a clavilux organ solo. Aesthetic dancing as done by these terpsichoreans is greatly enhanced by the backing thus afforded. Varied effects are obtained by utilizing different films with the different dances. The act got a substantial reception and should get along very nicely. Some silhouette work, from behind the screen, in colors, is blurred but unique.

Wallace and May, a chap with plenty of personality, and a rather angular blonde, have an offering comprised entirely of glib talk that puts them over.

Willie West and McGinty close with their carpenter shop and got plenty of laughs. Picture, "Baby Mine" (M-G-M).

Fred Mann, Sr., owner of the Rainbo Gardens cafe and the Rainbo Hai-Lai, was critically injured when a taxicab in which he was a passenger collided with another car. In the crash he was thrown against the front tonneau and seriously cut about the head and face. Rainbo Gardens is facing a Federal padlock for violation of the prohibition law.

Jean Antrim has filed a claim for salary alleged due from Roy Mack. Mack's retort, via Attorney Phil Davis, is that the girl started to work with the publicly expressed intention of blowing immediately and collecting without working.

The old provision warehouse in Hearst square, the site of the new Chicago Civic Opera, which will occupy an entire city block, is being demolished.

"Tex" Austin, master of ceremonies for Chicago's annual rodeo, was married last week to Mary Lou Maguire, Albuquerque, N. M., by Judge Harry Hamlin. Mayor Thompson was best man.

Ethel Robinson (Robinson fair attractions) is making a booking tour of the southern States.

Cleora Miller and Co. have returned from the south, where they entertained at meetings of the Tennessee and Jackson (Miss.) fair conventions.

Bob Wagner (Stevens-With orchestra) has returned from South Bend, where he operated the Tasmo Gardens ballroom for his organization.

A. J. Marshall, owner Castle Farms cafe, Cincinnati is opening a new night club at Dayton, O., to be called the Greenwich Village club.

Great States theatres are closing the recently acquired La Salle theatre at La Salle, Ill., to install a new Barton organ. The house will play straight pictures.

Presentation programs originating at the Norshore (B. & K.) theatre, Chicago, will play the Great States Genessee theatre, Waukegan, on Sundays following the openings at the Norshore, and then return to the Senate and Harding theatres (L. & T.).

Carrell and Gosden (Sam n' Henry), formerly of the permanent staff at WGN, Chicago "Tribune" radio station, have accepted several weeks from the Keith office, opening next week at Louisville.

Members of the Chicago Drama League, in observance of National Drama Week, have a number of special programs at Little Theatres and over local radio stations.

Bill Lyons, sales manager and secretary of Tom Brown Music Co., is severing connections with that firm to start his own music business. He is replaced by George N. Bundy, formerly with Sellers Instrument Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Great States Theatres have booked the Paden Players (Curley Burns' "Cute Little Devils") in the Coronado, Rockford, for a four-day engagement. Vitaphone is to be installed at this house.

A new feature of the community centre program being adopted at Great Lakes (Publix) theatres in Illinois is the serving of coffee at ladies' matinees.

Frank Berger, of Harry Spingold's office, is booking the Admiral as a tryout house on Wednesdays and Fridays.

Johnny Jones, Loew office, is using the Terminal and Midwest theatres as tryout houses on Tuesdays.

F. Renfro has been appointed assistant manager and publicity agent for the Great States Genessee theatre, Waukegan.

Billy Weinberg has booked the Weinberg Revusicals in the Tiffin theatre to play Thursdays and Fridays for the next six weeks. Joe Miller, local amateur, has been booked for the Capitol by Weinberg for a solid month.

MORRISON HOTEL
CHICAGO

The Most Central Location in Town
Atop the Tallest Hotel in the World

CLOSE to the top of the gigantic Morrison Tower, and surrounded by the purest air ever breathed, the 40th and 41st floors are set apart entirely for theatrical guests. Out of earshot of street noises, you can sleep undisturbed until a late hour of the morning. You can also entertain your friends in perfect seclusion, secure against interruption.

1,944 Outside Rooms—Each With Bath
Rates, $2.50 Up

Every room is outside, with bath, running ice water, bed-head reading lamp and Servidor. The last named is particularly appreciated by professional guests. It completely prevents contact between patrons and hotel employees when laundry, shoes, etc., are sent out or returned.

Nearest Hotel to Downtown Theatres

The Morrison stands closer than any other hotel to theatres, stores, and railroad stations. Yet, at this central location, rooms are rented for $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel. Store sub-rentals here are so valuable that they pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

The Terrace Garden and Boston Oyster House

At these two famous restaurants, the intimate, carefree atmosphere has won international celebrity. In the Terrace Garden the light, vivacious dance music and sparkling entertainments have made it a favorite rendezvous for lunch, dinner and after-theatre parties. The programs are broadcast from WBBM.

TORONTO

By G. A. S.

Royal Alexandra—"The Vagabond King"; next, "Desert Song."
Princess—Dark; "Hit the Deck" or "Diplomacy" next.
Empire—"The Second Mrs. Tanquary" (Keppie Stock).
Victoria—"Up in Mabel's Room" (Glaser Stock).
Uptown—"The Student Prince," stage show.
Loew's—"Latest from Paris"-vaude.
Pantages—"Old Ironsides"-Creatore's Band.
Regent—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" (indefinite).
Tivoli—"The Circus" (2d week).
Hip—"The Last Laugh"-vaude.
Runnymede—"Seventh Heaven"-vaude.
Massey Hall—Rachmaninoff.
Gayety—"Step Lively Girls" (Columbia).
Palace—"Love"-vaude.

Everything imaginable being rushed into picture houses to try and grab some of the money now flooding the Tivoli, where Tom Daley has "The Circus." Besides "Old Ironsides" Fred Schafer has Creatore's Band at Pan. Jack Arthur has a big show around "Student Prince." Mike Shea has an additional act running with "The Last Laugh," and besides a two-hour picture Leon Victor hands them a prologue with "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Plans are out for a new 1,400-seater in Fairbank, Toronto suburb, to be built by Premier Theatres, Ltd. At present no house in Fairbank.

United Amusement Co. plans to build a 1,500-seater in Sherbrooke, Quebec. Options were taken out on three properties but have since been allowed to expire on three of these.

Leon Victor replaces F. G. Sullivan as manager Regent. Sullivan is sticking with United Artists, Victor represents both Universal and Fox.

The manager of the Rex, Ottawa neighborhood picture house, brought to court under a long forgotten curfew law for letting children into the house after nine. The defense was that a later act overruled the old curfew law. This was a poser for the judge and the case was let quietly drop via the remand route.

The Capitol, Hull, Quebec, has gone over to the control of Donat Paquin, who owns the Laurier and Eden there. These three picture houses all give Sunday programs and get a big play from Ottawa across the Ottawa river in Ontario, where Sunday pictures are barred by law. Capitol is a 1,200-seater.

The National Chorus, Canadian musical organization in existence 25 years, is to be dissolved and its conductor, Dr. Albert Ham, retired, according to president Sir Henry Pellatt.

The Mayfair, independent neighborhood house, opened Wednesday. Seats 1,200 and cost $45,000. West Toronto district.

Sir John Martin-Harvey has recovered from his recent collapse and operation for intestinal disorders, and will rejoin his company in the west. They have been playing "Scaramouche" and "The Cigaret Maker" to fair biz, with Gordon McLeod, a young London actor, taking the parts of Martin-Harvey.

Two applications for permission to conduct dog races in Ontario have been refused. At the same time the government notified race track interests that no reduction in the present taxes would be made. Horsemen claimed they were being taxed out of business. Rates are $5,000 each racing day, plus a graduated scale from 5 per cent. up on the betting turnover.

Construction of a big amusement pier into Lake Ontario similar to those at Atlantic City is hung up. Elaborate plans had been drawn up and tentatively passed by harbor commissioners.

Transportation bosses here have asked $200,000 to make over Hanlan's Point, outside amusement park permanently in the flop class for the past three years. On an island, there is no means of getting at the park except on ferries. Owned by the city.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

By CHESTER B. BAHN

Wieting—"King of Kings" (road show). Next week "Countess Maritza" (1st half); "The Constant Wife" (2d half).
Loew's State—"Mylady's Fans," presentation, "West Point."
B. F. Keith's—Vaude, film.
Temple—Pop vaude, film.
Crescent—Ind. vaude, films.
Savoy—Palace Burleskers (stock).
Strand—"The Circus," Vita.
Empire—"Broadway Nights," Don Alvin presentation.
Eckel—"The Patent Leather Kid."
Regent — "Cheating Cheaters," "Singed."
Harvard—"Underworld."
Rivoli—"The Last Waltz, College."
Syracuse—"Sorrell and Son," "Very Confidential."
Palace—"New York."

Loew's new State opened Saturday with a de luxe policy, the first bill embracing "West Point" and John Murray Anderson's Publix presentation, "Mylady's Fans." The house has an orchestra of 18 men, with Bruce Brummett as guest conductor, and Victor Henri Miller, musical director. The orchestra doubles on the stage as the State Serenaders, with Ralph Pollock, Columbia record artist, as guest director. Paul H. Forster is the featured organist, jumpin' from the Eckel.

The house seats 3,000.

The State is attempting something new for this city—three changes in scale. From 11 a. m. to 1 the price is 25c.; 1 to 5 p. m., 35c.; 5 to closing, 50c., with loges at 75c. This is highest top for combination entertainment in the city. Keith's having a 50-cent top.

All houses downtown seemed to benefit from the Loew overflow Saturday. On Sunday, however, the Empire, which recently installed a semi-presentation policy, and the Temple, playing pop vaudeville and pictures, were undeniably hit. Keith's did an average business; the Strand and Eckel were apparently unaffected.

The Temple installs stock March 5.

R. Morton Floodas, Chicago, has replaced Paul H. Forster as featured organist at the Eckel.

The Society of Allied Arts, Binghamton, will book productions for Monday nights at the Binghamton theatre. James E. Ryan is the society's general manager. The list of attractions ranges from the George Wintz road show of Ziegfeld's "Follies" to Will Rogers, John McCormack and Rosa Ponselle.

A war in the Syracuse concert field looms as a result of the entry of Edmund R. Vadeboncoeur, Sunday editor, Hearst's local "American." Heretofore S. B. Everts has had things pretty much his own way, operating both the Syracuse Music Bureau and the Recital Commission of the First Baptist Church. Vadeboncoeur invaded the concert sphere this week by sponsoring Cantor Josef Rosenblatt in recital Tuesday night. He will follow this by presenting Grace Moore in her first concert appearance March 8.

The Norwich Common Council is scheduled to act April 10 on a petition requesting the abolition of Sunday movies. The city has had Sunday shows for the last four years.

Rev. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor, First Baptist Church, took a step unusual for a clergyman when he included a notice of "The King of Kings" (Wieting) in the regular weekly church calendar, following that by setting Monday night as "First Baptist Church Night" for the picture.

Harry G. Clark, of the Happy Hour, Ithaca, heads a group of local investors who will erect a new 1,000-seat picture house at 114-116 E. Seneca street, Ithaca.

"The Vagabond King" playing a return engagement here last week, played to only so-so business, feeling the opposition of "Hit the Deck," which followed for the last three days. "Hit the Deck" had a heavy advance sale. Local critics banded it as a near-turkey. The show was heralded as having "a notable cast and large chorus." For the most part, there were nine girls in the ensemble, while the cast, aside from Marion Sakl, failed to reveal a name. The top was $3.

Upstate is going strong for home talent entertainment. Syracuse had two last week, the K. of C. Music Box and the Community Players' production of "Step on It, Stan," the former at the Temple, the latter at the Little theatre. In Utica last week the Players produced "The First Year"; in Rome, "Mr. Pim Passes By" was given. The Rome Players will do "Seventh Heaven" April 9.

The battle over the estate left by Emma Olga Harrington, actress, slain by an unknown robber in New York last December, will be resumed in Binghamton's Surrogate's Court Feb. 27. Guy Harrington, stock leading man, from whom Mrs. Harrington held an interlocutory decree of divorce at the time of her death, is opposed to his wife's mother and sisters in the legal struggle which at this time centers over the dead woman's residence, Harrington claims it was Rhode Island; the family, Binghamton.

DeWitt Newing's Temple Players open March 5 in "The Barker." The leads the first week will be Warren Wade, Newing's partner and director, and his wife, Winifred Anglin. The company is in opposition to the Wilcoxians, who open April 9 at the Wieting. Newing is former partowner and manager of the Wilcoxians; Miss Anglin was the company's first leading lady and Wade its last director.

The two 16m subjects being made for the Consolidated Gas Company and home projection will only be distributed by the Stanley Advertising Co., not made by it, as previously reported. Visugraphic is making the film.

The Orpheum circuit had an anniversary last week. It has had many, if the years were counted up, but not until it passed the 40th milestone did the Orpheum begin celebrating. Out here nobody seemed to think anything about it, though, and the answer is that Monday night, always a jinx, remained the same way. If the anniversary gag was figured on to stimulate business the idea was a distinctive flop. Three-quarters for the house would be giving it a wide margin.

The bill, just average, with only few elevated spots here and there among the seven acts. Bookers cheating on the usual additional one, probably figured it was okay as long as the anniversary thing was in order. One theory advanced was that there was not enough dressing rooms to go around with two bigs acts on the bill so they had to cut one turn.

Eddie Leonard headlined. Here for two weeks. The old-time blackface minstrel brought back a few reminiscences of anniversaries. Eddie was spotted fifth and closed the first part. He followed a couple of good acts, but there was no interference.

Willie Mause gave the show a fast start with his unique bicycle novelty on the "death wheel." With one less experienced it might prove fatal. Mauss, however, is master of the wheel and provided some real thrills. In the "deuce" Keo-Taki and Yoki, flashed a little of everything in song, dance and instrumental, but mostly the gal. This kid has "it." The two men do the brunt of the work, featuring risley stuff with a barrel.

Next, John Bowers and Marguerite De La Motte, film players, presented a comedy playlet by Howard Emmett Rogers, "Dear Doctor." (New Acts). Betty and Jerry walked away with honors here. Betty Browne is a sweet looking blonde and her boy friend is the sap Jelly bean with all the trimmings. It's all about a couple of kids trying to elope.

Ringing up the second section were Lester Crawford and Helen Broderick, holdovers. Same stuff as the previous week to same results. Ned Wayburn's "Promenaders" closed the show, doing some 35 minutes and bringing the exit hour to usual. Wayburn has sent better units than this over the Orpheum. This one has flash and scenery, but lacks in outstanding talent. Nobody featured. Work of Shirley Richards stood out. This gal is a looker, hoofs in all departments and gives a good account of herself. In all there are eight numbers giving play to Peggy Hanlon, prima; Blanche and Elliott, dance team; John Byam, romantic juve, and 11 femmes. Of these the gypsy dance was best. G. Albert Penney, musical director, was in the pit.

Anniversary or anything else, it's the same old story.

Figure it anyway, Tom Mix is box office proof. Lately Pantages has been finding it tough getting the crowds. He has been laying out dough with a free hand and bars no "name" as an attraction, but he's still gambling. With Mix on the screen the output is less and the chances for cashing in more. Pantages knows that and that's why he spreads Mix's billing all over the house and everywhere else. Mix's current flicker is "The Arizona Wildcat." Story of a cowboy, society gal and an eastern gang of crooks. Makes no difference, though what it is. It's Mix. The folks hereabouts know it and gather for a peek. Monday afternoon, first show, they climbed high. Something that's been a vexatious problem to solve in the past. Below it was capacity. No cheating on the vaude portion, either. Double headliners were Gilbert and Avery, dance revue, and Joe Freed and Co. of three in a comedy layout. The rest was fair to middlin', but in toto blended without friction. Joe Freed has been playing for Pantages for a long time. Every once in a while he comes back with something new and gets some laughs. Graduated from the old Columbia wheel, Freed knows how and what to do with his stuff. His current idea is built around the big street—New York. It's all planted for laughs and gets results. Assisting him are Clara Hendrix, "hot mama" type with a sweet note for blues; Mark Thompson and Frank Pickett, straights.

Gilbert and Avery's turn was standard. Neat flash with a trio of gals and a hoofing juve. The team's adagio is still outstanding. Miss Gilbert, thoroughly proficient in her art, gyrates on her toes with technique and accuracy. Bob Avery's spins, kicks and splits are always surefire. The girls offer capable specialties. The boy, too, is okay.

Clifford and Wayne, trio, were openers. Two men and a girl with versatile routines that start off slow, but gathers speed and pep for a finish. Sioux Indian atmosphere and no denying that all three are the real thing. Youngest member of the group showed some fast stepping and a violin solo.

Carlisle and Le Mal, mixed comedy hoke team, dispensed chatter and gags and allowed a couple of fast ones to get by.

Bison City Four, comedy quartet and standard, need some new material, doing the same act for years, which has been seen too much. The tramp comic is responsible for most of the "lowly" laughter.

Aesop's Fables filled in on the short subject end.

Plans are complete for the new Towers Academy of Dramatic Art, first unit of the $500,000 Oliver Craft and Art Center, to encourage and develop talent. One of the features will be a Shakespearean theatre, seating 900, and a swimming pool built in the center. Courses of instruction will take in music, voice, religious and educational drama, stage and screen drama, make-up, stagecraft, playwrighting, painting and sculpture.

The Belmont, operated by Ruth Helen Davis, reverts to one show a night with the production of "The Timber Wolf," with William Desmond. House formerly was two-a-day with stock.

Dave Thomas, brother of Harry Thomas, president of First Division Pictures, arrived on the coast and will produce a series of four Jack London features for a national release.

E. George Wood, who put on the last couple of floor shows at Miller's Lafayette cafe, will not continue with that place when his current production goes out, in about three weeks. Wood had an idea he sold to Miller to open another cafe in San Francisco and rotate shows between the two establishments. Miller decided not to go through with it. He is now negotiating with William Rowland of Lyons and Lyons to install the next show at the Lafayette.

Mrs. Thomas H. Ince, widow of picture director, is building a new Hollywood apartment house at Franklin avenue and Tamarind street, costing about $500,000.

Play shop of Pasadena Community Playhouse produced "Veska" Feb. 14-15, with Lule Warrenson in the lead.

Whittier Community Players opened their seventh season, direction Mrs. Claude F. Baldwin, with "Kindling." The season closes May 14 with "Potash and Perlmutter."

Robert L. Smith, former newspaperman, director of public relations for the Federal Trust and Savings Bank of Hollywood, will handle publicity and advertising for the C. E. Toberman interests. Toberman is president of the bank, in which Joseph M. Schenck is also interested.

Lucille Elmore, former ingenue with Fred Stone in "Stepping Stones" and "Tip Top," now on the coast preparing to enter vaudeville.

Italian Dramatic Association, management of Salvatore Santille, is rehearsing "La Citta del Sogni" ("The Dream City"), by Alfredo Verrico, to be produced soon at the Gamut Club. Demetrios Alexis, Greek, will play the lead.

Harry Rapf has "Detectives," Dane and Arthur, with Chester Franklyn directing; "Man About Town," Lew Cody, Mal St. Clair directing. Rapf also has in preparation "Four Walls," "Excess Baggage" and a dog story, to feature "Flash."

Hunt Stromberg has three in production: "Tides of Empire," directed by Al Rogell; "Under Southern Skies," with James Flaherty and W. S. Van Dyke directing somewhere in the South Sea Isles, and "Diamond Handcuffs," directed by John McCarthy. In addition, Stromberg is preparing "The Bellamy Trial."

Bernard Hyman has the William Haines picture, "He Learned About Women," in production and is preparing the next Greta Garbo film, as yet untitled. Ed Mannix is producing the Buster Keaton picture, "Snapshots," Ed Sedgwick directing; and Larry Weingarten is supervising the Tim McCoy western unit.

E. J. Lickley, city prosecutor, ruled that the Windsor Square theatre, belonging to the Ebell Club, was not violating a city zoning ordinance. Protests were filed by residents and property owners in the exclusive Windsor Square district, complaining about annoyance caused by noise attending the theatre. City Planning Commission had intended to hold a hearing on the matter, but Lickley's decision will probably eliminate any.

The Santa Barbara City Council voted five to one for an ordinance to lift the ban on Sunday dancing and to allow dancing to continue until 1 a. m. instead of midnight.

Inglewood Union High School students produced "Chimes of Normandy," direction Luella M. Hughes, head of the music department. The school recently installed a new $5,000 stage lighting system.

Another night rendezvous opens shortly in the Christie hotel. It will be called the Hollywood Italian Village, with Joe Tadini, manager, Italian Village downtown, in charge.

Fred Stanhope, author of "The Wooden Kimono," is here and will make arrangements for the production of his attraction locally. Stanhope contemplates remaining on the coast for about a month.

Negotiations pending, whereby Henry Duffy was to take over the lease of the Morosco from Gerhold Davis, have been called off. It is understood that Duffy is now negotiating for another downtown house in Los Angeles.

Edward Clark went to work for the Orpheum Circuit this week at Long Beach with a condensed version of his "Relations."

James Durkin now associated with Sidney Goldtree, producer of "The Married Virgin" (Egan), will direct "The Bridal Bed" for Goldtree, which is slated for an early opening in San Francisco.

Work has started on the new $125,000 theatre in El Centro, Cal., by West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Alumni Glee Club and senior orchestra of the Lincoln High School presented a new romantic opera, "Pierrette Among the Shepherds."

William Desmond on the stage of the Belmont doing "Slippy McGee" this week. Will follow with "The Rear Car."

Francis X. Bushman, Jr., opened here this week for Pantages with a four-people sketch, including his sister, Leonore. The act will be routed east.

Hal Roach started production on the ninth Stan Laurel-Babe Hardy comedy for M-G-M release. James Parrott directing, with Barnes Circus Midgets, Anita Garvin and Kay Deslyns in cast.

Al Martin, title writer under contract to Christie studios, loaned to Fox to write titles for their short subjects.

Carl von Heartman, veteran soldier of the Finnish army, and later flyer for the German air forces during the world war, is in an important part in "Hell's Angel," a Caddo production.

Harry Davenport closed with the "Cradle Song" in Kansas City and returned to pictures.

The American theatre at Long Beach has changed its name to the "Pike."

Pioneer theatre, San Ysidro, Cal., has been taken over by Gil Rankin for W. H. Baxman.

The Star theatre on San Pedro street, closed some time, reopened by H. T. Hoyt.

"Service for Two," comedy by Marvin Flavin, opened at the Morosco this week, succeeding "Funny Little Thing," which closed after two weeks. In new show are Kay Hammond, Gayne Whitman, Jane Morgan, Marvel Quivey, Harry Garrity, Mitchell Harris, James Bush and Frederick Pymm.

Robert M. Jones, for the past year manager of the Hollywood Play House, has resigned. Jack Winslow, his assistant, has been promoted. Jones will continue as president of the board of directors.

"Sally," this week at the Shrine Auditorium, is the ninth attraction presented by Al Malaikah Temple in its series of 10 musical shows. Doroth Day has the title role with Ralph Errolle, Charlot Woodruff, Louis Templeman, Bernice Merchon, Richard Powell, John Cherry, George Kunkel and Aleander Gill.

KANSAS CITY

Latest of the Kansas City Theatre, the Little Theatre organization "Enter Madame," is on a two weeks' run Monday. On account of the Italian dialect demanded of several of its characters the play is one that would have caused many directors of local companies to ponder, but the cast selection for this presentation is a most capable one. As the performances for the second week have been bought by different organizations, the run will be successful financially. Renee Long is outstanding as Madame Lisa Delia Robia, and her accent is perfect.

The cast is one of the best balanced seen in this organization play house. No little credit for the cast selection and direction is due Herbert L. Drake, under whose personal supervision the comedy was given. Cast:

Gerald Fitzgerald.....Dale Shafer
Mrs. Flora Preston.....Frances Janell
Tamamoto.....S. O. Fujii
John Fitzgerald.....Loren Wetzel
Aline Chalmers.....Sue Shirley
Bice.....Lucille Wakefield
The Doctor.....Robert W. Smith
Miss Smith.....Edith Driver
Archimede.....J. J. Fucci
Mme. Lisa Delia Robbia.....Renee Long

SEATTLE

By DAVE TREPP

President—"The Night Stick" (stock).
Metropolitan—"Hit the Deck."
Pantages—Duncan Sisters (in person).
Orpheum—Vaude.
Fifth Avenue—"A Gentleman from Paris."
United Artists—"Student Prince" (2d week).
Columbia—"Surrender."
Blue Mouse—"Good Time Charlie" and Vita.
Winter Garden—"Devil Dancer."
Strand—"Rough Riders."

The Third Avenue theatre is now playing comedy drama tabs, opening Feb. 14 with Toby Leitch in 'In Walked Toby." Top, 30 cents.

The latest Columbia record of George Lipschultz, violinist, has just gone on the market, and is a good seller here. Lipschultz is playing several weeks on Pan time, and will come to the Mayflower, now building, for its proposed opening about May 1, as guest conductor.

Local clergy divided on "King of Kings." In the main, the big production won praise as an impressive biblical story.

Jeff Lazarus, publicity head of West Coast theatres, here last week to confer on broadside advertising the Seattle. He will return again for the opening. The first night will be available to theatregoers at usual prices.

R. E. Crabill, Publix representative, is here to assume new duties looking after the four de luxe Publix houses on West Coast. Headquarters in Los Angeles.

Definite date has been settled for opening new Publix, the Seattle, March 1. This is a 3,800-seater and advertised as the "largest and magnificent" west of Chi.

Al Finkelstein and Al Rosenberg announce second run Movietone and Vitaphone at their Egyptian theatre, opening March 10 with "Seventh Heaven."

SAN DIEGO

By LON JEROME SMITH

Spreckels — "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."
Pantages—Vaude-films.
Savoy — "The Wasp's Nest" (stock).
West Coast California—"Cohens and Kellys in Paris," Fanchon and Marco revue.
Cabrillo—"The Dove" (film).
Broadway — "Valley of the Giants."
Superba—"Legionaires in Paris."
Plaza—"Ham and Eggs at the Front," Vita.
Liberty—Stock burlesque.
California—"Heart of Maryland."
Bush Egyptian—"The Poor Nut."
Carteri—"The Gorilla."
Mission—"A Million Bid."

The Duncan Sisters, doing four shows a day at Pantages, packed them in for seven days and jumped the box office figures. The girls did plenty of radioing while here, KFSD featuring them on several programs.

Lionel Barrymore opened here in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," to a good house but business during the rest of his engagement was hardly above normal.

H. R. Berry, leader of the Ramona band, and wife were injured recently in a three-car collision on the highway near Oceanside.

Local beach resorts have been hard hit this winter with business 'way off. The Crystal Pier ballroom is operating only Saturday and Sunday. The Mission Beach ballroom will remain dark until summer.

The new Agua Caliente hotel, nearing completion at Tijuana Hot Springs, will have its opening soon with Herb Weidoeft and his orchestra featured.

Belasco (Shubert)—"The Letter" (Messmore Kendall); Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Co.

Poli's (Shubert) — Washington Grand Opera Co.

Keith's—K-A vaudeville.

Gayety (United Burlesque)—"Band Box Revue."

Pictures

Columbia — "Circus," for run. Next, Fairbanks' "Gaucho."

Earle—"Wife Savers" and presentation. Next, "Serenade."

Fox—"Sharp Shooters" and presentation. Next, "Come to My House."

Little—"Blinding Passion" (UFA). Next, "Iron Horse."

Metropolitan — "Missing Link" (Vitaphone). Next, "Old Ironsides."

Palace—"West Point" and presentation. Next, "Divine Woman."

Rialto—"Secret Hour" and presentation. Next, "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Local cop almost "wrecked" police court one day last week when he attempted to demonstrate, physically, the alleged improper dance performed by Jerry McCauley, Gayety burlesque.

Frank Baer, former dramatic editor "Post," is again doubling from the re-write desk to Harold Phillip's dramatic department, latter back to the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Davis will forego the annual southern trip until late in March this year. Havana is to be the stopping place, with Davis' attorney, Morris Simon, and Mrs. Simon going along, too. Davis has added another hour on at his Le Paradis, keeping it open until 2 every night now.

W. Spencer Tupman, back with Davis, at the piano of the Wardman Park hotel combination, has been haled into court by former wife in alimony dispute.

Department of Agriculture is continuing to release its educationals. Three of them in the past ten days.

Tommy Manahan, tap dancer, recently at the Earle, is now in for eight weeks at Pete Boras' new Madrillon night club.

St. Charles — "Take My Advice" (Saenger Players).

Saenger—"The Gaucho."

Liberty—"French Dressing."

Loew's State—"Chicago"-vaude.

Strand—"Rose-Marie."

Palace—"The Primrose Path"--musical.

Orpheum—"Four Flusher"-vaude.

The Tulane is currently playing a film sponsored by the American Legion at popular prices. The house has done an excellent business with worth-while shows, but they are few and far between in the south. Over $13,000 last week for Richard Bennett in "The Barker." In curtain speeches Bennett is panning institutions and cities by way of personal press agency. What a great actor Richard thinks he is!

Prominent local visitors include Jimmy Walker, Robert Vignola, Maurine Watkins, authoress of "Chicago"; John McGraw and Sid Smith, creator of "The Gumps."

In order to stimulate business the Palace is giving away a Chevrolet automobile every three weeks, and the Crescent has inaugurated a "pay envelope night."

Mardi Gras has attracted the largest quota of visitors in the history of the town. Hotels and restaurants are reaping a harvest, but the show shops are not being helped. The Fair Grounds, which closes its winter season this week, lures them, strangely enough, and perhaps retains more of the visitors' money than any of the institutions around town.

DETROIT

By JOE BIGELOW

Cass (Shubert) — "Blossom Time" (1st week). Opened Sunday. "Good News" ran eight weeks.

Lafayette (Shubert)—"Excess Baggage" opened Sunday for week.

Walter M. Roles of Chicago has been appointed manager of the Oakland (Butterfield), Pontiac, Mich.

Practical "padlocking" of the exclusive Corinthian Club, Windsor, Can., probably means the end of the club membership racket that has been such a boon to the thirsty-throated gentry from this side of the river. The club gag, explained heretofore, entitled the holders of brotherhood cards in Windsor clubs to personal lockers and to install hefty supplies therein. Decision of Magistrate Smith dampering down the Corinthian will likely serve as precedent. According to the Mag. the "guest room" privilege extended by Canadian law applies only to licensed hotels.

H. H. Hart, manager of the Corinthian, was fined $1,000 for illegal possession of liquor.

Following the killing of Thomas Ketchel, father of the late Stanley Ketchel, one-time middleweight champion, John Ketchel, son, was held on the charge. Elder Ketchel was 74.

Local office of the Bert Levey circuit has added the Liberty, Cleveland.

KOP, Detroit police department's broadcasting station, will move to Belle Isle. Clearer transmission is sought, as the station's present location amidst steel buildings downtown is believed to cause interference.

The body of a woman found slain near Plymouth has been identified as that of Mary ("Billy") Lowry, former chorus girl. Her husband, Leo Lowry, and two other men are being searched for. Lowry is believed to be in Chicago.

Shortly after discovery of the body it was falsely identified as that of a dancer who had appeared at a stag near by a few hours before. This was later reiterated by Mabel Duggan, local club agent, who booked the stag bill.

Mrs. Lowry has a long police record, with five arrests to her name, thrice on disorderly conduct charges, but never convicted. She was about 35.

For the first time in 42 years the Elks' annual vaudeville show, held last week at the Olympia, was opened to the public. Most of the acts in town appeared.

Kunsky's Royal Oak, newest of the circuit's outlying string, opens week of March 4. Straight films.

As George Gershwin sails for Europe March 5 his Detroit concert, originally booked for March 24, has been set ahead to March 1.

Cy Carpenter has succeeded Charles Hammerslough as manager of the United Artists theatre. Carpenter served as assistant to Hammerslough and previously with Kunsky.

Silver Fence, popular rendezvous for actors and newspaper men, was raided by prohibition officers Saturday night. Charles Salick and Jack Mandel, bartenders, were arrested and padlock proceedings are pending.

Claudia Muzio, here with the Chicago Civic opera at the Masonic Auditorium, missed her performance in "Il Trovatore" when her mother became ill. Rosa Raisa subbed on short notice.

Rumor current the Book estate contemplates building a large theatre and office building on Washington boulevard, opposite Fox Washington, on the site now utilized as parking space. K-A-O reported in on the theatre end of the deal.

Entire new show goes into the Florentine Room, Addison hotel, this week. Principals include Delano Dell, Babe Kane, John and Mary Jennings and an eight-girl chorus. Henry Halstead band replaces Slatts Randall's.

Jeanne Eagels in "Her Cardboard Lover," billed for the Davidson week Feb. 27, has been canceled, with "Two Girls Wanted" substituted.

Cost of rebuilding the Pabst, recently closed as unsafe, has been set at $50,000, work starting at once under orders of the Pabst Corp., owners of the building. The seating capacity will be increased.

Paul Ash, scheduled to appear as guest of honor at the musicians' ball here last week, canceled at the eleventh hour with the dance hall packed with about 4,000. Fifteen bands participated.

BUFFALO

By SIDNEY BURTON

Teck—"Countess Maritza."
Erlanger—"Wings."
Buffalo—"The Dove."
Hipp—"Rose of Golden West."
Loew's—"Rose-Marie," Ruth Elder in person.
Great Lakes—"Chicago."
Lafayette — "13 Washington Square."
Gayety—"Land of Joy."
Court Street (stock) — "What Price Glory."

Resumption of friendly relations between the Buffalo city officials and Ringling Bros. is forecast as a result of the visit here last week of Frank Cook, adjuster for the show. It is reported the show will play Buffalo again this coming season. The row arose out of the claim by Mayor Schwab that the circus officials had interfered with the Mayor's Toy Fund for orphans. The mayor refused to issue a permit, forcing the circus to take grounds just outside the city limits.

Following numerous complaints of orgies in public dance halls, Mayor Schwab Friday ordered Police Chief Higgins to make a complete survey of halls.

Transfer of jurisdiction from the state to the local police department is contemplated. Following assurances from state officials that they would assist the city in stricter surveillance of the situation, legislation will be sought to allow the Buffalo police department to regulate downtown night clubs where warranted. The mayor declares that if the legislation is enacted the closing of a number of clubs will follow.

H. M. Addison of the Great Lakes, Buffalo, has been elected president of the Theatrical Managers' association there, succeeding Al Beckerich, who recently resigned as manager of Loew's theatre in Buffalo.

Other officers are William E. Saxton (Loew's), vice-president, and William W. Bradley (Elmwood theatre), secretary and treasurer.

BROOKLYN

By JO ABRAMSON

Teller's Shubert — "The Great Necker."
Majestic—Winthrop Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Co.
Werba's Brooklyn — "Nightstick."
Cort—"Chicago."
Strand—"Patent Leather Kid" and stage attractions.
E. F. Albee—"Beau Sabreur" and vaude.
Werba's Rivera—"Women Go on Forever."
Loew's Metropolitan—"Gentlemen Prefer Blonds."
Momart—"The Merry Widow."
Fulton—"The Lady Next Door."
Orpheum—"Helen of Troy" and vaude.
St. George—"The Rough Riders."

Tony Canzoneri, featherweight champion, is the only pug hereabouts to receive a medal from the Brooklyn boro president for bringing home the title. Boro President Byrne, in handing the medal out, said:

"I present this medal to you because you have brought the featherweight championship back to Brooklyn. . . . . I knew you would win because your opponent, although he put up a good fight, comes from a slow town, and you come from a live one." Bass, the defeated lad, hails from Philadelphia.

"The Spider," with John Halliday, comes back to the Teller's Shubert next week. This show played the same house before its arrival in New York last year.

"Hit the Deck," with Louise Groody, is due at Werba's Brooklyn, and "The Play's the Thing" comes to the Majestic. At the Cort "The 19th Hole" will open next week.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

By H. D. SANDERSON

Lyceum—"The Constant Wife" (2d half).
Eastman—"The Patent Leather Kid."
Rochester—"The Blood Ship"-Pan vaude.
Regent—"Quality Street."
Piccadilly—"Two Flaming Youths."
Fay's—"The Jazz Singer."
Temple—K.-A. vaude.
Gayety—Burlesque (Mutual).

Nikitas D. Dipson and John Osborne, Batavia, and James Granidas, Olean, the "triumvirate" of the Theatrical Utilities Co., Inc., this week added the Capitol and Olympic theatres, Steubenville, O., to their already extensive chain in three States.

BRONX, N. Y. C.

Avalon, picture house, Burnside avenue, opens Saturday.

Webster, operated by Joelson circuit, has closed for repairs, it's said. Report says house may remain dark, as opposition has made it tough for this veteran film house.

Crescent, also Joelson film house, looking for dramatic stock or other stage attractions. House has been on losing side for long time.

Jerome, closed by fire about a month ago, reopened Saturday.

SAN FRANCISCO

Ackerman & Harris vaude at their Union Square, directly across the street from the Orpheum, is setting a fast pace, and giving the "big time" house something to worry about. Scaled at 20 cents mats and 30 cents nights, the Union Square is giving five acts of standard A & H vaude (changed twice weekly), a full length feature picture, a news reel and plenty of short fillers, the whole combining a lot of entertainment. On a three-a-day basis, with extra shows Saturdays and Sundays, the house can come within a few dollars of equaling the present Orpheum grosses, and the way the pay mob is responding, it looks as though they may be doing it.

Of the five acts on the last half bill one stood out. It's a three people colored singing and dancing turn, Helena Justa and Co., there being two boys in support. Helen Justa is a high brown, with looks, figure and personality, possessing a fine pair of pipes, and she sure knows her stepping.

Opening, Orlando, comedy juggler, who doesn't miss. Second Kenneth Spencer, ventriloquist. Routine well laid out but talking indistinct. The yodel song for a finale saved the act. The colored steppers on third tied up the bill.

Gary and Baldi, a comedy singing and talking act, he as a chauffeur and she as a maid. Man has a pleasing baritone voice. Closing was the Sunbeam Follies, five people musical, singing and dancing turn, that offered a lot of "flash" and revealed good talent. One of the two girls is a capable violinist, and the other gal does some neat toe and semi-classic dancing. Screen feature, "Out of the Storm."

Henri C. LeBel, organist, who opened the new Pantages here two years ago, remaining for several months, is back, and today holds the unique position of being the only featured organist in any of the San Francisco de luxe picture or vaude houses. LeBel is in for an indefinite run, but will likely be held here by Pantages until the opening of his new house in Fresno, several months hence. LeBel is a master of the keys. He wears a flaming red smock and displays his showmanship by the use of constantly changing spot colorings.

Kane's Hawaiians, for the past year featured over Radio KPO, opened an indefinite engagement at the Strand (pictures). This is a 15-cent second-run house on Market, adjoining the Embassy.

San Francisco Democrats have opened headquarters for "Al Smith for President" and plan to send an instructed delegation to the Houston convention. Plans are afoot to organize a theatrical division for the New York governor.

KPO (Hale Bros. and S. F. Chronicle) will broadcast an all-night program Feb. 29, designed for Eastern listeners-in.

Armanda Chirot, Mexican prima donna, after a severe illness, has recovered and is at the T. & D. Oakland, with her partner, Jose Marcado.

Joe Pelange (sax), with the Warfield stage band, substituted for "Rube" Wolf as master of ceremonies during the latter's layoff for a week.

Al G. Barnes Circus is first outdoor attraction announced for San Francisco this year, coming early in April.

A new marionette theatre opened here Feb. 16 at 688 Fillmore street, using double bill—Moliere's "The Doctor in Spite of Himself" and a tragedy by the William Boardman Howard marionettes.

Ackerman & Harris-Oppen's new El Capitan, being erected at 19th and Mission, will seat 3,100.

Mrs. Maria Teresa Hilgartner, 32, daughter of Mme. Schumann-Heink, was married here Feb. 17 to Dr. Charles Marvin Fox, 48, Pasadena (Ca.) surgeon.

Ruth Taylor, film actress, went "on the air" over KYA during the West Coast Theatres hour, and surprised with her ability to talk.

Embassy, San Francisco home of Vitaphone and Warner Bros.' pictures, is now on the air five nights a week. Having no stage acts to present, Embassy is sponsoring an hour's program each Tuesday and Thursday over KPO, and a similar hour each Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening over KFRC.

Chick Crapster, former auditor U. of C. and the California (West Coast Theatres), in Berkley, has been appointed cashier of the local Fox Film Exchange.

Paul Nicholson replaced Harry Adams in "The Scarlet Woman" at the Geary.

Frank Whitbeck's private menagerie at his home in San Mateo Park has made several changes. The famous duck, Abagail, and her companionate partner, Deuteronomy created such a storm of protest from the neighbors that Frank had to move them to another location, where they are now "boarding out." Recent additions are a Manchester terrier and a Roller canary (that actually sings.)

A new racket in outdoor advertising was used with the appearance here of Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, when one sheet posters were distributed advising the concert was "sold out." Menuhin's initial concert here a few weeks ago precipitated a riot when the overcapacity mob rushed down the aisles.

Fred Giesca bought "Broadway" for a two weeks' San Joaquin valley tour, following its eight weeks' run at the Curran.

State, Fresno, recently acquired by West Coast Theatres, opens March 12 with Vitaphone and Movietone.

For the third consecutive week Owen Sweenten and band are in the pit at the Granada, due to stage attraction taking up the entire time allotted between features. Two weeks ago the Kolb and Dill show occupied the entire stage. Last week it was the Eight Victor Artists and current the Four Marx Bros. are providing the entire entertainment.

Keith interests have added Frankel movie houses in Newport, Ky. (across river from Cincy), also several theatres in Muncie and other Indiana points, of late. Firm has engaged A. G. Hetteshelmer, manager of Orpheum, Walnut Hills picture house for past 19 years, to supervise its Gifts, Strand, Walnut and Family theatres in downtown section.

Coney Island, up-river amusement park, starts season May 19, with George F. Schoot as president and general manager. Covered dance pavilion with wood floor and to accommodate 2,500 people, and several new rides are new features.

Recently padlocked Castle Farm has been taken over by the new Castle Farm Amusement Co., incorporated for $250,000 with Charles Ginn, Earl and Cecell A. Vollmer as incorporators. Vollmer is brother-in-law of A. J. "Toots" Marshall, former operator of suburban cafe, who, it is understood, retains an equity in the new company and will continue as manager when padlock is lifted. New company links up with company formed by Marshall to operate Greenwich Village night club just started in Dayton, Ohio. The Dayton Company was incorporated for $200,000.

Hennepin-Orpheum — Vaudeville and "The Missing Link."
Pantages — Vaudeville ("Nite Club") and "Come to My House."
Palace—"Alias the Deacon" (McCall-Bridge musical tab).
Seventh Street—Vaudeville (Zerman, Farrar & McBride revue) and "Coney Island."
Gayety — "Hollywood Scandals" (United burlesque).
State—"London After Midnight."
Garrick—"Old Ironsides."
Strand—"The Last Command" (second week).
Lyric—"On Your Toes."
Grand—"The Magic Flame."

In connection with "clown night" features every Wednesday night, the Gayety (United burlesque) augments its chorus to 32, using 16 local girls.

Pantages theatre has one more picture coming under its contract with United Artists. It is "Two Arabian Knghts," week Feb. 25. F. & R. have the United Artists pictures again.

Jean Oliver has returned to New York and A. G. Bainbridge is using guest stars in feminine leads for balance of season.

Gayety—Stock burlesque.
Academy—Dixon's "Big Revue" (Mutual).
East End—"Saintly Sinners."

L. K. Sidney, Joe Hiller and Nathaniel Finston were here for the inauguration of the stage band policy at the Penn theatre, which started this week. Previously Dave Harman and band were on the stage playing for the units. This week the pit orchestra, augmented by some dance men, making 24 in all, took to the stage, with Don Albert doing the m. c. and conducting.

Phil Spitalny will be musical director for both pit and stage orchestra when the Stanley opens. He comes from the Lafayette in Buffalo.

The opening of the Stanley 4,000 seater, Seventh and Penn, a block from Loew's Penn, is announced for Feb. 27. The film will be "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and on the stage Anatole Friedland and revue.

Regarding company managers and advance agents—Fred Wright with "Tommy," Fred Zweifel back with "Honeymoon Lane," George Florida ahead of the Dowling show, Al Canby in advance of "Hit the Deck" and Tunis Dean ahead of Lenore Ulric.

F. F. Smith is here for a visit prior to taking the management of the new house that Loew opens in Indianapolis March 3.

Shubert — George White's "Scandals."
Broad—"The Play's the Thing."
Proctor's—Vaude-"Open Range."
Loew's State—Vaude-"Wickedness Preferred."
Newark—Vaude-"Love Me and the World Is Mine."
Branford — "Flying Romeos"-vaude.
Mosque—"Shepherd of the Hills"-vaude.
Fox Terminal — "Sunrise" (3d week)-Movietone.
Rialto—"The Circus" (2d week).
Capitol—"Dog of the Regiment"-"French Dressing."
Goodwin—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."
Empire—"The Noose" (stock).
Lyric—"Lid Lifters."
Orpheum—"Headin' Home"-films.

The Mosque with Sophie Tucker did nothing remarkable last week; "The Circus" at the Rialto disappointed, while "Sunrise," in its second week at Fox Terminal, held up fairly well, but, of course, not so well as its first week. Big business in a week of red-hot competition went to Loew's State ("The Student Prince"), which house good pictures are restoring to its former position of leadership. Proctor's, with seven acts for this week, and the Branford, where Harry Crull's excellent show packed them in. George Givot has been such a smash at the Branford that he is being retained for a third week.

The Sanford, Irvington (S-F), is putting in a m. of c. policy, advertised as "the Branford theatre jazz policy." This is the first residential suburban house to adopt this form of entertainment. Jack Bain is m. of c., and Ray Nichols' band is in. The house changes bill twice a week.

A. Johnny Mack, former manager of the Empire, was succeeded by David R. Blyth. The Empire Players in their second week did not pull a profit, but they are well liked. Ardath Marshall, daughter of Henry I. Marshall, assistant production manager Branford, joins the company this week.

BALTIMORE

By BRAWBROOK

Maryland—"My Maryland."
Auditorium—"The Firebrand" (E. H. Knopf).
Ford's—"The Bachelor Father."
Hippodrome—Vaude and picture.

"Our Betters" failed to register very strongly at the Maryland last week, getting very mixed notices and only fair public support in spite of local popularity of Ina Claire and the personal praise she elicited from reviewers. House reports about $10,000 grossed.

Edwin H. Knopf's second week of "The Captive" continued to draw good business and with a $1.50 top. Well over $6,000 was counted.

It is understood that both the Philadelphia and Philharmonic orchestras will play four concerts each here next season at an increase in prices ranging from 16 to 33 percent. This is a result of conferences between a committee appointed by Mayor Huber and the orchestras' representatives. The new price scale is less than half the increase demanded by the orchestras, but will reduce the operating deficit by about $1,100 a performance.

AIMEE'S SPIRIT TO GUIDE OWN CEMETERY—BEFORE AND AFTER

Tombstoneless Plot, with Mrs. McPherson's Resting Place Featured—Plots from $40 to $250, Payable on Installments, but Before Passing Out

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Aimee Semple McPherson is going to have the classiest cemetery in the world. It's for her Four Square Gospel Congregation, and there are 2,500 lots ranging in cost from $40 to $250.

Mrs. McPherson is going to build on the Burbank cemetery plot, to be known as Blessed Hope Memorial Park, a Chapel of the Angels which will be her own tomb. No tombstones will be permitted.

Chapel of Angels is to be erected in the center of the burial grounds as Mrs. McPherson, when she leaves the world, proposes to continue as the head of the temple workers.

Site Prices

Price of graves, starting at $40, will be those furthest removed from the leader's tomb. Coming up from the imposing entrance, the prices rise by $10, $15, $20 and $50 leaps until single graves in the consecrated circular plot at the front end of the tract, adjoining the leader's shrine, are $250. However, Mrs. McPherson's plan provides that all members of Angelus Temple, regardless of price, shall live together, die together and go away together.

In the literature telling of the project is the following: "On the appointed day, those who sleep together will rise together, under direction of Mrs. McPherson's own spirit."

That Mrs. McPherson considers purchase of burial plots in the Memorial Park is illustrated in the announcement, which says: "Prices must alway be leased before the opening—and if the demand grows they must also of necessity be increased. A single grave, a family section or a reservation of any size

George Price Playing Irving Berlin's Life

George Price is putting on a show written by Crane Wilbur, the story of which concerns the life of Irving Berlin. Price will have a role in the show and Al Yokel will be business manager and publicity director.

Yokel is reported having an interest in the show.

Rehearsals start March 5.

20,880 Bulb Signs

Figures show there are 20,880 electric signs from the Battery to 135th street. Broadway has 1,969 signs; Third avenue is next with 1,155; Eighth avenue has 806; Second avenue, 654, and Seventh avenue, 618.

Restaurants use the largest number of signs, barber shop poles follow with 2,260, automobile salesrooms and garages, 1,125; tobacco, 1,098; tailors and clothiers, 1,060; dentists and doctors, 964; drug stores, 908; theatres, 875.

FOX HIGH CLASS SUPERVISOR OF CLOTHES

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Collins in Charge of Special Department

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Collins have been given, under contract, exclusive direction of the modiste department at the Fox studios on the coast. It is a striking innovation in picture production preparation.

Harry Collins is one of the best known and foremost dressmakers in New York, that covering the country. He is an extremist in styles and has been so noted among the elite patronizing his various establishments in past years, when Harry Collins on a gown always meant real money.

With Fox, acting under W. R. Sheehan, general production director who put through the contract, the Collins will furnish the Fox women players with all of their clothes, furs, shoes, stockings, and everything they may wear of the modern modes in picture work.

HOTEL ASTOR SET AT $13,000,000

Renewal Term of 21 Years to Muschenheims—Property Rental of $650,000 Annually and $200,000 Taxes—Former Rental $425,000 — Not Highest Valued Hotel in N. Y.

WORLD'S BEST SITE

A renewal lease from the Astor Estate has been obtained by the Muschenheims on the Hotel Astor at a rental of $650,000 annually, for the term. Additionally the hotel men pay the taxes, amounting to $200,000, and totaling a rental of $850,000 per annum.

Broadway's highest rental is reported based on a valuation of $13,000,000 for the Astor site, at a 5 per cent return. On the former lease held by Muschenheims, also for 21 years and about expiring, the annual rent has been $425,000.

The Hotel Astor is reputed a profit maker approximating $2,000,000 each year. It has about 900 rooms and around 40 banquet halls. The latter are an important factor of the hotel's income, with frequently 10,000 or more people meet-

BANKS ON AIR

For the first time conservative banking institutions will enlist radio as a co-operative publicity medium when the Mutual Savings Bank Hour of Music goes on the WEAF network March 9 and every Friday at dinner time thereafter.

Louis Katzman's orchestra will be the attraction.

The programs and "time" will stand the Savings Banks' Association of New York State, which is the sponsor, over $1,500 a week or $100,000 annually. That includes the supplementary newspaper display space to call attention to the radio broadcast.

GRAND CENTRAL STATION'S FILMS; 'SHORTS' AT 25 TO 40c—800 SEATS

A. J. Parker Negotiating With N. Y. C. and Then After Other Big Stations—1-Hour Program on 24-Hour Grind—Railroad Officials Favor Idea

Negotiations are on between Austin J. Parker, former Associated Press reporter, and the New York Central for construction of a motion picture theatre in the Grand Central station, New York. Following the culmination of this deal Parker hopes to secure rights to operate picture houses in all the large railway terminals throughout the country.

N. Y. Central has accepted Parker's proposal for consideration after having turned down numerous similar offers from chain operators.

Picture houses in stations are regarded as opposition to newsstand sales, figuring the novelty and superiority of pictures as a time destroyer.

It is intended to operate a 24-hour grind house, program to run about an hour, made up mostly of shorts, estimating that most of the customers will have trains to catch. These limited film requirements eliminate the matter of supply almost entirely, while also cutting film rentals to a minimum.

The house in the Grand Central will have a drawing population of about 53,000,000 people annually (about 1,000,000 a week) to figure on. Last year, according to official statistics, the Grand Central station handled that many people. Of the total, 43,000,000 were passengers, while 10,000,000 were visitors.

Penn Opposed

There are approximately 50,000 visitors to New York daily who pass through the Grand Central. A similar number is calculated for the Pennsylvania station. Pennsylvania Railroad officials have consistently refused to consider picture houses, but it is believed that a successful trial at the Grand Central may bring a change of attitude by the Pennsylvania.

In the case of the Grand Central, railroad officials insist on laying out the plans and building of the theatre themselves, renting the space to Parker at a price reported to be $14 a square foot per annum. The house will have a seating capacity of from

LONDON AS IT LOOKS

By HANNEN SWAFFER

London, Feb. 10.

The bombshell of the week was my publication of the letters passing between the Lord Chamberlain and Ernest Edelsten over "The Cradle Snatchers," which Lord Cromer turned down for months, refusing Edelsten a reconsideration, and then licensed, some months later, for a rival management, Clayton and Waller.

"The King Can Do No Wrong"

As Edelsten had suffered, possibly, financial losses and in addition was afraid his reputation would be harmed in America where managers might refuse him plays, saying, "You cannot get them past the censor while Clayton and Waller can," he took counsel's opinion as to whether he could sue the Lord Chamberlain for damages.

"No, you have no remedy, even if allegations were brought against a member of the censor's staff, or what charges you make," said counsel. "The Lord Chamberlain can do what he likes. His act was an Act of State and the Crown cannot be sued for his act."

Problems of Censorships

Edelsten gave Lord Cromer assurance that "The Cradle Snatchers" was a very much more wholesome play than "Fata Morgana," "The Vortex" or "Scotch Mist."

"No, I will not license it," said the Lord Chamberlain, "never mind what alterations are made."

Then he did—to someone else.

The critics have been very hard on "Sauce for the Gander," as they call "The Cradle Snatchers" now. They accused it of all kinds of nastiness.

I thought it pardonable farce and said it should run a year. Apparently it won't.

A Lovable Personality

Tommy Dawe, the manager-agent, who died the other day, will be nearly as much regretted on your side as on ours. Hundreds of Americans knew him, and everybody adored his lovable personality.

He could "pull legs" all night. He liked, for instance, to start George McLellan arguing with Edward Laurilard, and then sit back laughing.

He married Ella Retford, whose personal qualities have made her a very attractive vaudeville performer, and who appeared at your Palace with great success.

The Loyal Friend

Tommy Dawe mucked along for years as an agent, sometimes flourishing, sometimes broke. Then he met James White, the financier who ran Daly's, and went with him into his last big gamble. It ended in White's suicide and Dawe's death, caused by worry.

During the days of the smash, Tommy Dawe never complained about his own troubles. He thought only of Jimmy.

Geneva's Tammany Hall

When coming out after "Listeners," Reginald Berkeley's new League of Nations play, at Wyndham's, I saw Gilbert Miller, who introduced me to his wife because she always read me in "Variety," I said, "Gilbert, now I know why America won't join the League."

Berkeley, who was formerly a League of Nations official, has written a sensational melodrama with Great Britain as the hero, and the naughty Russians as the villains.

Although you would scarcely follow the bewilderment of the plot, I gathered that Russia is going to make war on Poland, so the Soviet abducts Lord Cecil—that is who it would be—makes him lose his memory with hemp, and then blames a Polish countess so that Great Britain won't be on Poland's side.

The "Daily Express" Again

There was loud laughter in the theatre when a "Daily Express" reporter forced himself into the British delegate's rooms at Geneva. I know Reginald Berkeley used to be a leader writer on the "Daily Express," but the audience, not aware of that, thought it was another smack at me, and roared with laughter.

When, in the third act, the "Daily Express" reporter was found murdered, there was another cheer. If they had murdered some more members of our staff in the fourth act, there would have been a riot of joy, I am sure.

Edgar Wallace's Musical

In the vain attempt to rival American methods, they are going to extremes nowadays.

"The Yellow Mask," Edgar Wallace's first musical play, stages a jewel theft at the Tower of London and then goes to Chinese tortures. It begins with "The Yoemen of the Guard" and ends up with "The Shanghai Gesture."

It would do well at the Lyceum, the Palladium or the London Hippodrome, while it would have been an ideal show for the New York Hippodrome in the Burnside days. In the Carlton, which has no pit or gallery—I wonder!

Archie Selwyn Annoys London

These Archie Selwyns and Al Woods are making London managers very angry. They not only come over here and say there is no theatre, but they sell what plays they have at high prices.

For "Coquette," Selwyn asked $500 a week for Jed Harris and $250 a week for himself, besides extravagant royalties, while, for "Broadway," he demanded a $10,000 premium, fifty per cent of the profits and the author's fees, in addition.

Personally, I agree with all the Americans who can get any money out of our dumbbells, who cannot invent, and who cannot plan and who, merely go in for the canned-play business.

Another "Critic" Barred

This barring of critics still goes on. When Sir Barry Jackson did "Macbeth" in modern clothes the other night, the editor of the "Outfitter" could not get a seat!

I thought "Macbeth" dreadful. They had obviously engaged people because they could not act Shakespeare, and then dressed them up like a lot of brass hats.

The Swedish Ambassador complained, the other day, that Robert Loraine had murdered Strindberg's play, "The Dance of Death." Now, Al Woods complains that Shakespeare has been insulted.

America Insulted

The "Tin Gods" management retort, I believe, that a newspaper was wrong in saying that Archie Selwyn walked out on the first night because America was insulted. If he didn't he ought to have. It was ridiculous.

Irving Marks, who had seen the play in Paris, told me he had only taken Al Woods so they could have "a laff."

Neither Selwyn nor Woods stayed for the end. I had to.

LONDON

London, Feb. 20.

Undaunted by the failure of his last play, "Regatta" (which may, after all, find fresh life as a musical), Sutton Vane has a new one called "Go to the Devil," in which Satan himself appears. It has yet to pass the censor. Sutton Vane, originally an actor, will return to the boards in the piece.

"The Unknown Warrior," the play which caused Bernard Shaw to remark, "It's almost worth having had a war to get a play like this," has created such an impression on its production at the Little Arts Theatre Club that it will be publicly shown at the Little Theatre for a fortnight.

Little Tich, famous diminutive comedian, who died at his home in Hendon Feb. 9, was the youngest of 14 brothers and sisters, as a minstrel entertainer in 1880. He was in the first play produced at the London Hippodrome, "Giddy Ostend," and appeared in the earliest revues at the Old Tivoli in 1902. Tich was originally married to a Spanish dancer, who died in 1926, and a year or so ago he married Ivy Latimer, a music hall entertainer, who survives him, with a young son.

Another Little Theatre is to be added to London's try-out houses, Herbert Jay having acquired the Hampstead Conservatoire of Music, which will be converted into a playhouse. Sybil Arundale is interested in the management. House will be opened in March, accommodation for 800.

A liberal deal of £20,000 is claimed for "The Yellow Mask," Edgar Wallace's new musical thriller at the Carlton, London's latest theatre.

After many rumors of returning to the London stage, it seems definitely set that Elsie Janis will now come over to stage a one-woman show (encouraged by the great success of Ruth Draper). She will do character studies, songs and dances.

For the first time in her career Peggy O'Neil will play a straight role in a new melodramatic mystery play by Edgar Wallace, "The Flying Squad." She is to be featured and will receive a salary of £150 per week and a percentage to a maximum of £200 weekly. Production at Oxford March 5.

Among the budding dramatists are Anthony Gibbs, son of Sir Philip Gibbs, whose adaptation of his own novel, "The Elder Brother," has been acquired for production by Harry I. Cohen.

AUSTRALIA

By Eric H. Gorrick

Sydney, Jan. 28.

Business very brisk around the theatres at the present time. Muriel Starr is packing the Palace with a rather silly melodrama called "Cornered." "Archie" is still drawing well at the St. James for the Fullers, and revival of "Mercenary Mary" will follow.

Williamson-Tait have a hit in "The Girl Friend" at Her Majesty's. Annie Croft is the star of the attraction.

Several pantos will close, now that the school vacation has ended. Jim Gerald will open a revue season at Fullers, and Frank Neil will produce American stock plays at the Opera House next week. Gerald sails for America in April.

Irene Vanbrugh and Dion Boucicault opened in "The Letter" last week. English stars are quite a draw in this country, and big business is expected. A splendid cast includes Norman McKinnel and J. B. Rowe. This attraction will transfer to the Criterion next week and be followed at the Royal by Leon Gordon in "Trial of Mary Dugan." Players for "Mary" list Gwyneth Graham, Brandon Peters, Fred Roland and Iris West. Both "The Letter" and "Mary Dugan" under W-T management.

"A Cuckoo in the Nest" will finish this week at the Criterion and opens for a season in Melbourne.

Rufe Naylor has scored a success with "The Flim Girl" at the Empire. Bobby Jarvis, Van Lowe, Audrey Lewis and a corking ballet all help.

A sweltering afternoon found this theatre jammed for the Australian premiere of Sonny Clay and his orchestra, together with a company of colored dancers and singers. Harry Muller booked the attraction in America. On opening it looked as though the troupe needed a little more rehearsing, but all the tunes offered are brand new here. It would have been better if the boys had interspersed a couple of melodies more favorably known.

Four Covans did nicely with their stepping and Ivy Anderson, soubret, did fairly well. Buck Sanders, as m. c., proved disappointing in this respect. The colored unit takes up the entire second half of the bill. Vaudeville supplied by Armstrong and Phelps, Hector St. Clair, the Cavanaghs, and Davy Jamieson fills in first half of the show.

Pictures

"What Price Glory" will finish at the Prince Edward this week to be followed by "The Scarlet Letter." "Resurrection" still doing nicely at the Crystal Palace.

Lyceum is offering "Cat and Canary," "Swim, Girl, Swim," and a film showing the preparations for the flight to New Zealand by Moncrieff and Hood, now lost. Sid Burchall, the stage attraction.

Haymarket screening "Rose of the Golden West" and "Dearie." Armstrong and Phelps on the stage twice daily.

Lyric doing well with "Swim, Girl, Swim," and "Cat and Canary." Tilton and West on stage.

"False Shame" still running at the Adyr Hall. German-made picture has proved a big attraction for many weeks.

Empress screening "Rose of the Golden West," "Million Dollar Mystery" and "When a Man Loves."

MELBOURNE

"Student Prince" is making a heap of coin for W-T at His Majesty's. When played in Sydney for Rufe Naylor the show did not go so well and toward the end of run proved a losing proposition. Beppie De Vries and James Liddy are the featured players.

"Queen High" will quit the Royal after but a brief stay. Followed in by "The Terror" for W-T.

"A Cuckoo in the Nest" will come into the King's next week after a run in Sydney for W-T.

At the Athenaeum "The Alarm Clock" will move out this week after playing a season for the Carrol management.

Ann Suter is star at the Tivoli this week. American girl is doing splendidly. Other acts on bill include Murry, Martine and Sherry, Tom Katz and saxophone band, Christie and Daly, Hazell and Day, and Lorna Lance and Leslie.

Pictures

"Chang" opens at the Athenaeum next week at $1 top.

"Mockery" is in for a week's run at Hoyt's. Chaney a big pull in this city.

Majestic reports nice business with "Dearie" and "Back to God's Country."

Paramount offering "Swim, Girl, Swim," and "Three's a Crowd."

News From All States

Leon Gordon will do "The Squall" for W-T during his tour of this country.

It has been definitely decided by W-T to stage a revival of "The Merry Widow" in Melbourne. Beppie De Vries and James Liddy to be featured.

"Rio Rita" will be one of the big attractions offered by the Fullers at the St. James this year.

Company now playing "Rose-Marie" will open in Sydney, at a later date, in "The Desert Song" for W-T.

Following the run of "The Flim Girl" in Sydney, Rufe Naylor will stage another musical called "Take the Air." Naylor, who has been seriously ill, has now recovered and has resumed the managerial reins of the Empire.

It is reported several directors, previously associated with Naylor, have withdrawn their interests and that a new company will shortly be formed with Naylor remaining as head.

Owen Nares, English star, will play this country for W-T. He will bring a complete company with him.

W-T will stage Puccini's last opera, "Turandot," in Melbourne this year. Complete production from La Scala will be brought out. Merli has been engaged to sing the tenor role.

E. J. Tait, director of Williamson-Tait, has become a speed boy. He has attempted several times to break the record between Sydney and Melbourne—similar to San Francisco and Los Angeles. Damage done by the theatrical magnate to farmers' chickens is simply remedied by handing out passes to the injured party for one of the firm's attractions.

Members of "Cradle Snatchers" will return to America this week after enjoying a prosperous run in this country.

Ted Clifford, American dancer, has teamed with a man and woman and is now presenting a three act over the Tivoli circuit.

Louis Bennison is suing W-T for $5,000, alleging breach of contract. W-T has replied to the actor's claim by stating that Bennison appeared on the sixth night of "Road to Rome" intoxicated.

W-T discharged Bennison, who was receiving $500 a week, but later reinstated the actor at a salary of $300. "Road to Rome" failed in this country.

Bennison has returned to America, and his evidence will be taken on commission.

Picture Notes

It is probabe that "King of Kings" will go into the Prince Edward, Sydney, at Easter for an extended season.

Byron Bidwell will handle the production units for Hoyt's theatre, which opens in March. It is the management's intention to put on big stage attractions in conjunction with a picture policy.

Some of the big features to be seen here this year include "Metropolis" (Ufa), "His Lady," "The Scarlet Letter," "Chang," "King of Kings," "Wings," "Abie's Irish Rose," "The Circus" and "Sunrise."

Providing arrangements can be made with the Musicians' Union, Hoyt's will import 30 musicians, together with 30 local playcrs, for their new theatre, the Regent. Signor Kost will conduct.

Union Theatres will open its new Capitol this year. House is situated downtown on the site once occupied by Wirth's Hippodrome.

J. Wright has arrived to look after the Paramount interests in this country.

Hans Vadja, who controls the agency here for European pictures, has just floated his concern into a company with a capital of $50,000.

First of the company's release will be "The Dancer," which goes into the Piccadilly for an extended run. Other pictures to follow include "The Masked Dancer," "Passions of the Great" and "Rose Cavalier."

Rumored here that Will Hays will appoint a commissioner to watch American interests in Australia, New Zealand and the Orient.

If this rumor is correct, Australian distribution chiefs will tell Hays to keep his hands off. They resent the idea of foreign interference.

$8,850,000 TO BE SPENT THIS YEAR BY RADIO 'TIME' ADVERTISERS

Amazing Total in 1928 to More Than Double 1927 Broadcasting Expenditure — $1,103,364 Spent Last Year by Radio-Phonograph Music Alone

A comprehensive survey of radio advertising compiled by a radio executive estimates that in 1928 $8,850,000 will be spent for radio broadcasting "time" by advertisers. This is based on contracts already placed.

This more than doubles the $3,760,010 spent in 1927 for radio network advertising, figures accurately gleaned from certified reports to the National Assocfation of Advertisers' official organ which annually surveys any and all expenditures for advertising.

In the 1927 composite, the radio-phonograph-musical instrument division spent $1,103,364 for advertising, with the automotive industry, financial and insurance and foods and food beverage classifications runners-up, all in the over $400,000 class for each division.

These sums are for "time" alone and do not include the cost of talent which is actually inestimable, although roughly it should cost as much again for the permanent and guest stars entertainers.

Advertisers

The 1927 analysis of radio broadcast advertising includes the following types of ether exploiters: automotive, building materials, tobacco products, clothing and dry goods, confectionery and soft drinks, drugs and toilet goods, financial and insurance, foods, furniture and furnishings, jewelry, lubricants and petroleum products, machinery and mechanical supplies, office equipment, paints and hardware, radios, phonographs, etc., schools and camps, shoes, trunks, leather goods, soaps and housekeeping supplies, sporting goods, stationery and books, travel and amusement.

The following advertising agencies have special radio continuity and supervising staffs to care for their accounts: N. W. Ayer & Son, J. H. Cross Co., Barton, Durstine & Bosborne, J. Walter Thompson, Lord & Thomas and Logan, and George Batten, Inc.

Kidding Play Talk From London's Strand

London, Feb. 28.

An idea has cropped up here to produce British pictures of stories banned by Will Hays and play them in legit houses, tents and halls in America. The story has some reason attached to it as Marshal Neilan's deal with British Filmcraft is off, and the director will do "The Green Hat," Michael Arlen's former hit, with an all-British company.

Al Woods is supposedly behind the "Hat" film. Also Fox still holds the film rights to the play, and may be interested in the venture, somewhere.

There was some talk of Tallulah Bankhead playing her original role of Iris March, but after a trade showing of the celluloid version of "His House in Order," which stars Tallulah, it was decided to select Blanche Sweet (Mrs. Nellan).

If the boys are going after the barred plays for the screen, Woods has another, "The Shanghai Gesture."

YOUNG CHALIAPIN'S PERMIT

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Feodor Chaliapin, Jr., 20, son of the Russian singer, is awaiting action from the immigration authorities in Washington on the question of his deportation. He is under $500 bond.

Young Chaliapin came to this country on a five-month permit. He has been living in Hollywood and doing some work in pictures as an extra.

Carlton Leased

London, Feb. 28.

Clayton and Weller, in association with Moss Empires, have leased the Carlton theatre for 18 months commencing in April.

An option for prolongation goes with the lease.

Beatrice Lillie's Short

Beatrice Lillie, star of "She's My Baby," has made a Movietone short subject for Fox.

PARIS APOLLO HALTS

Variety Hall Suspends Until Autumn — Operetta Goes In

Paris, Feb. 28.

The vaudeville policy at the Apollo terminates for the present on March 15, owing to previous plans to present operetta in the place.

The project is under contract for two months, with the syndicate holding an option for an additional two months. The promoters are Swiss and they propose to stage a French version of "The Lido Lady." This may be postponed.

However, if the scheme really goes through and vaudeville is interrupted, the management of Becker, Arnaud and Lartigue will resume in September.

"Lady Mary" Witty; Aimed for New York

London, Feb. 28.

"Lady Mary," opening at Daly's, is a musical reverting to this theatre's traditional all-British productions with the exception of the music, by Albert Sirmay. It's the first serious attempt to build up a London production for presentation abroad and probably will need altering for Amcrica. Its Australian locale of the first act wouldn't mean a thing in New York.

The piece has an exceedingly witty book by Lonsdale and Hastings Turner, and shows George Grossmith at his best.

Despite the music the show has set up a record library sale with $150,000 claimed.

Capacity has prevailed at practically every performance.

Goodman Gets Chevalier

Paris, Feb. 28.

Philip Goodman has closed negotiations and awaits legal sanction of a two-season contract with Maurice Chevalier, idol of the Casino.

It is Goodman's intention to star Chevalier in a New York revue, the contract becoming effective in November.

AMER. GIRLS IN S. AMERICA

Paris, Feb. 28.

Dollie and Billie, American girls, now featured in the Moulin Rouge revue, will visit Spain in April, prior to sailing for Buenos Aires.

They open there at the Empire in June.

Reforming Yacht Club Boys

London, Feb. 28.

With Chick Endor and Billy Mann in England, negotiations are proceeding for the reuniting of the Four Yacht Club Boys again.

George Walsh and Billy Purcell are due to leave New York shortly to complete the foursome booked to open at the Embassy, London, early in March.

Hylton to Circle Globe

London, Feb. 28.

Jack Hylton and his band sail Aug. 3 on the Narkanda, to play a season in Australia and New Zealand which will last until Christmas. He will return home via America and will play a few vaudeville weeks there.

"5 o'Clock Girl" in Sept.

London, Feb. 28.

"The Five o'Clock Girl" will be produced by Clayton & Waller in conjunction with Lee Ephraim around September at either the Palace or the Hippodrome, whichever is available.

Paris, Feb. 28.

Word has just been received here of the death in Milan of Virgile Talli, eminent Italian actor in that city. He was 70 years old.

WILL MAHONEY

Sam Marx in "New York Amusements" said: "Will Mahoney is sensational. Critics are going to discover him. They're going to rave. Gilbert Seldes will write a book about him. He is a dancing fool with a glib tongue and personality plus. If you don't like him, you are the supreme egoist."

L. C. C. Strongly Set Against "Cavell" Film

London, Feb. 28.

London County Council has banned the showing of "Dawn," Arch Selwyn's intended film for America, until it has viewed and passed the picture.

If so passed, the feature is still only available for London showing at theatres with nothing else on the program. If not passed, Herbert Wilcox asserts he will screen the film to the British and foreign press, members of Parliament and will appeal for their verdict.

Last September representations were made here by the German Ambassador to Sir Austen Chamberlain before production started. It is believed that Pauline Frederick, originally cast for the "Nurse Cavell" role, was tipped as to the future trouble if the film were made. At that time Miss Frederick pulled out on a planted story regarding the necessity of an English actress playing the part.

Although the dailies are almost 100 per cent. in favor of showing the picture, the government feels so strongly it may be anticipated that the Home Office will take strong action on any attempt to exhibit the picture anywhere in Great Britain.

London Sadistic Shocker Marked Good for U. S. A.

London, Feb. 28.

"The Man With Red Hair," opening at the Little last night, is London's first literary shocker. Adapted from Hugh Walpole's novel, it is unfortunate that the play has sadistic tendencies.

Charles Laughton's interpretation of the madman is a piece of brilliant acting and uncanny skill.

Although a short play, it is otherwise a good proposition for Amcrica, with Laughton and James Whale in the cast.

Waring's Sailing Date

Waring's Pennsylvanians open April 2 at the Stanley, Philadelphia, for two weeks, making the third consecutive year that the stage band act has played Holy and Easter weeks at this house. The Warings are at the New Stanley, Pittsburgh, the following week and sail April 28 on the "Isle de France" for 12 weeks at the Ambassadeurs, Paris.

Up to April 2, the Warings are K.-A. touring in the metropolitan houses, finishing three weeks at the Palace last week.

Edith Day in "Show Boat"

London, Feb. 28.

Edith Day is the only principal in the current Drury Lane show who has been signed for the succeeding attraction.

This will be "Show Boat."

Scored in London Cafe

London, Feb. 28.

Barrie Oliver, assisted by Betty Bolton, opened a four weeks' engagement at the Cafe Royal and scored.

LYING-IN HOSPITAL PARIS PLAY'S LOCALE

Another Has Basis in Reveller's Imagined Seduction

Paris, Feb. 28.

The usual average of risky themes is upheld in the newcomers to the Paris theatres in the last ten days. One deals with a business man who goes to a maternity hospital where his stenographer is a patient, and finds his unmarried daughter there. Another carries through three acts a staid man who wakes up the morning after a merry dinner, to learn that a young woman had been outraged during the party, and imagines that he is the guilty man.

Love's Harvest

"Fruits d'Amour" is the title of the play first mentioned, the work of Lucien Descaves staged at the Theatre des Arts with Arquilicre, Evrard, Mmes. Madeleine Carlier, Grumbach and Ludger in the cast. It had a very promising start.

A wealthy contractor, proud and self-made, seduces his stenographer, but undergoes punishment when he finds his own daughter about to become a mother in the lying-in hospital where the secretary is a patient. At first he is furious, but when he is made to see the situation in which he himself stands, he goes to the other extreme, endowing the hospital and arranging for the marriage of his daughter with a young man in his employ, the father of the child having disappeared.

At Sarah Bernhardt

"Le Passage de Venus," by Georges Berr, did but fairly at the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt, produced by Isola Bros. The size of the house contributed to an indifferent reception, perhaps. A staid and studious astronomer attends a banquet and for the first time in his life drinks too much. Next morning he learns from the newspapers that a woman had been outraged and because of certain details of time and place, he is led to believe that he is the criminal. Young neighbors, who are concerned in an intrigue of their own, help along the delusion, but in the end the self-accusing student is proved innocent to his own satisfaction. Andre Berley impersonates the astronomer, Felix Gali, a youthful student; Christiane D'Or, the victim of the assault, who, by the way, does not know who her assailant was and is disposed to be pleased in imagining it was the astronomer. Alice Tissot plays the astronomer's wife.

"Mrs. Cheney," Hit

"L'Honnete Mrs. Cheney (French version of "The Last of Mrs. Cheney"), was produced under very favorable auspices at the Theatre Daunou. Louis Verneuil made the French version of the Frederic Lonsdale original. In the cast are Augustine Leriche, Jane Renouardt, manageress of the little house; Simone Sandre, Juvenet, Paul Amiot, Fernand Gravey, Cousin and Janvier.

Firemen of Moulin Rouge

"Le Pompier du Moulin Rouge," which was announced for the Scala last year, appears at the Eldorado instead. Marcel Simon is author as well as star. The piece made a mild impression, partly due to poor casting.

It tells of an innocent youth who is mistaken for the lover of a vaudeville actress and takes to a fireman's uniform to escape the wrath of her real sweetheart. All this leads to absurd adventures before the entanglement is straightened out. In the cast are Marcel Vallee, Benglia, colored comedian; Suzanne Berni and Gaby Basset.

Youngsters' Play

"His Majesty's Atanase III," play for children, was offered Saturday at the Chatelet, signed by Mouezy Eon and Alexandre Fontane. Fair prospects for success. Piece depicts an imaginary revolution in a mythical land, with usual ballets and spectacles. In the cast are Biscot, the picture star; de Garcin, Mady Berry and Jeanne Boitel.

Besides these ventures the Comedie Francaise revived Alphonse Daudet's and Adolphe Belot's "Sapho," with Cecile Sorel in the famous role created by Jane Hading many years ago at the Theatre Gymnase. The piece was last staged at the Comedie in 1913.

2 AMERICAN SINGLES ON ALHAMBRA BILL

Irene Franklin's Multiple Dates for One Week—Cecil Cunningham Not Donating

London, Feb. 28.

After a three weeks' absence, Cecil Cunningham has returned to the Alhambra (vaudeville) for another fortnight. She shares top honors with Irene Franklin.

Miss Franklin had a quiet week. All she did was appear thrice daily at the Alhambra, doubled for Jose Collins at several shows at the Coliseum, did a private performance for the Duke and Duchess of York and appeared at the press club dinner to the Lord Mayor. Following three weeks in the provinces, Miss Franklin, returns to the Alhambra for another two weeks.

Miss Cunningham, also at the press club dinner, is booked for numerous private entertainments and is being solicited for a return to the Trocadero (cabaret) as well as other cafes. But Cecil doesn't lose sleep without a commensurate stipend.

The booking of the Misses Franklin and Cunningham on one bill indicates that Stoll is going out for bigger programs. The circuit has previously never had two such expensive headliners on a single program.

Besides this, Stoll's current bill at the Coliseum includes, in addition to Lean and Mayfield, Jane Dillon, Handers and Milliss, Harry and Burton Lester (all Americans) with Jose Collins, Bransby Williams, Will Hay and Fred Sylvester (English) also appearing.

Lean-Mayfield's Hit

London, Feb. 28.

Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield proved a novelty at the Coliseum (vaudeville) yesterday, when they opened.

Their closing number was not loud enough to be heard all over the house at the matinee, but this was changed to a comedy finish at night and materially strengthened their success.

"OH KAY" LEAVING

London, Feb. 28.

"Oh Kay," breaking even at His Majesty's the last few weeks, is likely to terminate March 17, providing the management can find a successor.

The latter will either be a straight Shubert play from America or "The Yellow Mask," moving over from the Carlton.

ADAGIO TRIO SCORES

London, Feb. 28.

Myrio, Desha and Barte, adagio trio, recently in the New York picture houses, opened last night at the Kit-Cat restaurant and scored strongly.

STANLEY MERGER TALK SHIFTS TO PUBLIX---FOX QUIET JUST NOW

Possible Control of 1st Nat'l If Stanley Amalgamates with Paramount-Publix—Phila. Concern Declares Reduced Dividend and Changes Directors

Despite reports, inspired or otherwise, there are no negotiations on at present between the Stanley and Fox, looking toward a merger of the former into the Fox theatre group. Conferences on the subject in New York some weeks ago, as reported at that time, were attended by the bankers. When they failed of any purpose, the matter was not revived.

Instead there seems to be a decided rumor to the effect that a shift of Stanley's merge proposals has been made to Paramount-Publix. Just to what extent this may go is not mentioned. It is anticipated that with a "publix deal with Stanley, Publix, through Paramount and First National's stock holdings, added to those held by Stanley (25%), that the merger, if it occurs, would also pass First National into the Paramount control.

It is said that Fox is content to patiently wait in the Stanley matter, somewhat indifferent as to the outcome but of the opinion that if there should be a Stanley juncture it will be on favorable terms to Fox.

That Fox's star theatre manipulator, Harold B. Franklin, returned to Los Angeles without again taking up the Stanley subject seems to settle all question of a Fox-Stanley coalition, at least up to Franklin's next visit to New York. That will occur, it is said, the end of March.

First National Speculation

Stanley's declaration of a reduced quarterly dividend last week, of 75c instead of the customary $1, contradicted the story that it might altogether pass its quarterly payment. The dividend is payable April 2 to stockholders of record March 24. Building operations will be resumed by the Stanley Company in Philadelphia this week, from report.

Reorganized Board

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

Mrs. Jules E. Mastbaum, widow of the late head of the Stanley Co. of America, was elected to the board of directors of the Stanley Company Friday, along with E. C. Jameson, Lessing J. Rosenwald and Louis J. Kolb. They succeed Frank W. Buhler, Alfred W. Fleisher, Lewis Sablosky and Morris Wolf. Simon H. Fabian, of the Fabian theatre interests, became a director and vice-president of the Stanley Co., succeeding A. R. Boyd.

The reseath of Al Boyd on the board is foreseen through Boyd's resignation as film buyer for the Stanley houses having been placed some time ago. Boyd's open friendliness with Paramount executives leads to the opinion he may go with that organization.

This addition to the directorate is in line with Irving Rossheim's regime. Rosenwald is of the Sears-Roebuck Chicago mail order family; James and Kolb represent insurance and banking interests.

Of the retiring quartet of directors, Wolf, who is an attorney, will be retained in an advisory capacity.

The reorganization of officers of the Stanley Co. is a forerunner to an anticipated reorganization of business operation, plans for which may be set by the end of this week.

It places Moe Silver, formerly assistant to Moe Mark in the Boston office, in the newly created post of supervising managing director of the entire circuit. Buhler formerly held a position that most nearly approached Silver's position.

Rosshcim, Joe Levenson and Silver are at work on a schedule of divisional assignments which will place certain duties in charge of certain executives with an immediate responsibility in each division This is Rossheim's idea to tighten up the Stanley business operation

Buhler continues as general manager, as do Fleisher, Sablosky and Wolf.

Of the new directors, Jamieson is president of the Globe & Rutgers Fire Insurance Co. and Kolb is a

NAMES COOGAN'S MA IN ALIENATION SUIT

Mrs. Corabel Bernstein Asks $750,000—Husband Is Jack's Mgr.—Wed 10 Years

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

A long brooding peeve of Mrs. Corabel Bernstein, wife of Arthur Bernstein, took form when suit was filed for $750,000 damages against Mrs. Lillian Coogan, mother of Jackie Coogan, charging her with alienation of Bernstein's affections. Rumors that Mrs. Bernstein was out to do dirt have been current around Hollywood for some time.

In addition to the action for damages, Mrs. Bernstein names Mrs. Coogan as co-respondent in a divorce action. Arthur Bernstein is Jackie Coogan's business manager.

It is charged in Mrs. Bernstein's complaint that he was unduly familiar with Mrs. Coogan, notably on a train between Chicago and New York. Mrs. Bernstein separated from her husband last September, after 10 years of married life. There are no children.

M. B. Silberberg, attorney for the Coogans, characterized the case, so far as Mrs. Coogan is concerned, as ridiculous. He also mentioned the presence of Jack Coogan, Sr., on all the occasions complained of by Mrs. Bernstein. Charges will be contested.

Charles W. Cradick, attorney for Mrs. Bernstein, has figured out the dollars and cents angle as affecting Bernstein by listing community property between $250,000 and $300,000 in value and Bernstein's personal income of $3,000 a month. Alimony of $1,000 a month, $1,000 for court fees and $10,000 for Mr. Cradick is asked.

Ducking Verdict Against Fox Upheld on Appeal

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 28.

A picture actor, or employee, who suffers illness as the result of immersion in water during the making of a film, has a right to workmen's compensation in New York State. This was definitely established when the Court of Appeals last week denied a motion of Fox Films to appeal from the verdict of Appellate Division, which upheld an award of $4,866.67 to Paul Madderns. Madderns fell into the Hudson River while making a picture near New York in 1922 and as a result developed pneumonia and finally tuberculosis.

Every effort of Fox and the insurance corporation, represented by Attorney W. W. Dimmick, to overturn award on law and facts has been defeated. Court of Appeals, in denying leave to appeal, assessed $10 costs and disbursements for printing record against Fox et al.

An actor named Paul Madderns recently died at Saranac Lake and is believed to be the man who received the compensation award.

Clemency Petition for Macdonalds in Canada

Toronto, Feb. 28.

Appeal to the governor general of Canada to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment for Doris Palmer Macdonald, former extra and bit player for First National, will be heard this week. Doris and her husband killed Adelard Bouchard, Lachine taxi driver, last fall. A woman's outfit from Chicago are circulating clemency petitions here, but met refusal when they sought the signature of the dead man's widow.

Mrs. Macdonald told reporters from U. S. dailies that she formerly played in New York and St. Louis cabarets and was booked on the Orpheum circuit before she was picked up for jumping a hotel bill in Omaha. This led to the Canadian murder charge.

ROSCOE AILS

Just signed a Keith-Albee tour. "Edba" of "Variety" said: "Roscoe Ails' new act has everything. Great comedy, knockout dancing, whistleable music. Katie Pullman never danced better. Ralph Fenton, Doro-Ellsworth and band entertainingly lead to Roscoe's famous schuffle dance, a cannonading finale brought cheers."

PROTESTANT FILM SERIES

20 2-Reelers on Biblical Text—$5 Rentals

Religious Films, Inc., organized in Delaware about three months ago and having offices in New York, intend sending a producing unit to Jerusalem in June for the purpose of making a series of two-reel pictures based upon Biblical texts. Wilfrid North, former director for Vitagraph, will head the unit.

The project is Protestant in purpose and personnel and is being financed by a group of Protestant business men on an accumulative stock issue redeemable in five years. Rev. L. Eugene Wettling, an Episcopal minister of Oradell, N. J., is president. Board of directors includes Haley Fiske, Walter Lang, Clay McClure, Alfred Walker, Mrs. Ruth Blazer, Percy Moore, Rev. Harry St. Clair Hathaway, Rev. Randolph Ray, Rev. Richard Pressey, Rev. Peter R. Deckenbach and Rev. Augustine Elemendorf.

In order to avoid the pitfalls of denominationalism, all scripts for the pictures will adhere absolutely to text. Ministers of various sects can place their own interpretation on the events pictured. It is planned to produce 20 subjects in the first series, five based on the Old Testament, 15 on the New.

The Protestants are reported desirous of modernizing their preaching technique and are looking to the motion picture as a means of capturing the imagination of the young. The contemplated pictures are intended primarily for use in Sunday schools and mid-week prayer meetings.

A flat rental of $5 for a two-reel subject will be established. Religious Films, Inc., will arrange the financing of a screen and projection machine where necessary. They favor standard size stock and do not contemplate going into the 16 mm. field.

SHEEHAN BACK TO COAST

Winnie Sheehan is due to leave New York today (Wednesday) for Hollywood.

WEATHER FORECAST

Washington, Fbe. 28.

Fair Wednesday (29) except for some rains in New England and the north portion of the Middle Atlantic States with near normal temperatures.

Thursday (1st) increasing couldiness followed by rain Friday or Friday night.

Fair weather and somewhat colder at the end of the week.

KENNEDY ESTIMATES ONE YEAR TO REHABILITATE PATHE-P. D. C.

Bankers Advance 2½ Millions to Pathe for Production—FBO Studio Site May Be Sold—Moved to Metropolitan—Pearson Still Remains With Pathe

It is said that Joseph Kennedy has estimated it will require his continuous services for one year to rehabilitate Pathe-P. D. C. This is reported not contingent upon Cecil B. DeMille's acquiescence to the Kennedy reign. It will be with or without DeMille, from accounts, with DeMille contemplated as pliable in the reorganization of Pathe through his friendship with J. J. Murdock, Pathe's president, and a desire to act in harmony.

Kennedy is reported due coastbound about March 10. One of his immediate objects will be to decide if he will sell the present FBO studio site, adjoining Paramount's, to the latter. Should the FBO head conclude to take the profit, the chances are that he will move the FBO plant to the Metropolitan studios, where Pathe-P.D.C.-DeMille is now at work.

Pathe productions are provided for through an advance said to have been made of $2,500,000 for that purpose by the Pathe bankers, Blair & Co. of New York.

Possible Short Combine

A report that shorts will be discontinued by Pathe next season is scouted by those in the Pathe know. More likely, they say, that Pathe may take over a couple of the new short makers, probably referring to Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. There is no denial that Pathe has been badly dented this season in its short films department by the opposition.

Elmer Pearson is still with Pathe, with the same rumors persisting concerning his tenure there.

K.-A.-O.-ing Kennedy

An announcement of Keith-Albee-Orpheum buying in on FBO was sent out Sunday with a special effort behind an ordinary story of no great significance even in the trade.

To befuddle the city editors into letting the stuff run, it started with a wire, mentioning Mr. Soandso's hope that a news story shortly to be released would get full space, etc., then a personal letter referring to the wire and then the story, two solid pages, plenty padded.

Wires seem impressive to New York's city editors. Usually they are notices of a nite club opening.

The story as printed sounded like an echo of Joe Kennedy taking over the Pathe management for a trial term to insure Joe against getting nothing out of it but work and worry, the K.-A.-O. people are going to place him on their board. That leaves Mr. Kennedy with his FBO, Gen. Elect. and R. C. A. included, plus his volunteer duties to keep Pathe from being mixed up in the red.

If Luescher Erred

That the announcement coming from the K.-A.-O. press department mentioned Kennedy only, without noticing E. F. Albee, sounded like instructions from Palm Beach. Although it also failed to mention, after telling some nice stuff about Joe, that he's the father of eight children, which means more to the glory of pictures than if DeMille agreed to cut down production costs.

It's the first press notice sent out of the Keith-Albee offices in 10 years failing to mention E. F. Albee. If Mark Luescher's error, he's in for an awful bawling.

CHARLES RAY IN COURT OVER $1,500

Play Producer Got Summons —"Yen," Stage Play, Cause of Police Court Action

Wearing a tired look and anxious to have the court proceedings over, Charles Ray, screen actor, stopping at the Woodstock Hotel, appeared in West Side Court to answer to a summons charging him with unlawfully withholding $1,500.

Ray was haled to court by Edward Gray, producer, of 1587 Broadway, who told reporters that he was to have produced for Ray a stage play written by the latter called "Yen." The play, Gray said, was Ray's first attempt. The play dealt with a yen for drugs, Gray stated.

The producer said that Ray came to him Jan. 9 and asked him to produce "Yen." Gray said that he consented and gave Ray $1,500. One thousand dollars represented the first week's salary and the other $500 for the first week's royalty. Gray said he was to have the show ready by Feb. 20. Jan. 24, he said, he posted a $500 bond with Equity to assure Ray of "Yen's" production.

Soon after he posted the bond Gray stated, Ray asked him to release him from the contract. "I told Ray that I had substantial friends and that he had no need to worry," said Gray. "However, he urged me to release him from the contract. I returned his manuscript and then sought the return of my $1,500.

"Being unsuccessful I went to the Magistrate's Court and obtained the summons," said the producer.

Settlement in Court

Ray came to court attired nattily in a blue pencilled suit, and carrying a cane. He heard several court cases before his was called.

When called Ray appeared before the Magistrate, William C. Dodge. The complainant had not thus far shown. An attorney asked for a few minutes adjournment. Ray greeted newspaper scribes, "Oh, they don't know what it is all about," said Ray with a tired look on his face.

Twenty minutes later Ray's attorney and Harry Saks Hechheimer, attorney for Gray, were closeted awhile. The case was again called and Hechheimer told the court that the matter had been adjusted. The case was then dismissed. Ray's attorney had nothing to say to the reporters.

The play was turned over to Chamberlain Brown. It was produced in Cleveland and Paterson, N. J. Gray told the reporters that the play collapsed with a loss of $7,000.

OLYMPIAD FILMING

Exclusive Rights at $200,000 Starts Row in Holland

Paris, Feb. 28.

Action of the Netherlands Committee in closing for the exclusive picture rights for the forthcoming Olympic games with a Swiss syndicate for $200,000, has met opposition.

Protests have been made by representatives of the Dutch people who hold that the sporting event should remain open for filming and no exclusive privileges should be granted for a set price.

LLOYD HAMILTONS APART

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Lloyd Hamilton, screen comic, and Irene Dalton, his former leading woman, have separated after seven months of marriage.

The rift was admitted by Mrs. Hamilton, although she refused to comment on whether divorce proceedings will be instituted. Since the separation, Mrs. Hamilton has been living with friends.

U Short on Shorts

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Due to a shortage on Universal's program of westerns and short subjects, it will be neeessary to open the studios April 15.

These units will be under supervision of Wm. Lord Wright.

ACADEMY'S APRIL DINNER

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will give a dinner April 11 for delegates to the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

Invitations will also be tended to all members of the American Society of Cinematographers, as well as Academy members.

BROOKHART HEARINGS ON

SALES MANAGERS DON'T FALL FOR KENT'S NO-SALESMAN TALK

Paramount's General Sales Manager Called Secret Meeting—Proposed All Film Salesmen Be Dispensed With—No Change Occurring in Others

Sidney Kent's secretly-called meeting last week of the largest distributors' general sales managers has resulted in a perfect blank, from accounts, for Kent's objective. That was for all the distributors to dispense with their film salesmen.

Kent's argument is said to have been that the known film brands are now strongly established within the trade, and that an opporutnity was present for a decided economical movement with the suspension of sales solicitation in person.

Some report that Kent got the quiet ha-ha from those assembled, with the general sales managers present quickly deducing their own angles. It is not reported if anyone signified acceptance or rejection on the spot.

Whatever might have been said at the meeting, it was stated later that the salesmen wholesale dismissal scheme had flopped. One said they have had to use salesmen to sell film in the past, and that being a pretty good way to make certain of selling, it would be continued, indef.

PERSONAL APPEARANCES OF STARS BY "TALKER"

Norma Talmadge First on Vita for Jersey City Stanley Opening

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Personal appearance of a picture star via Vitaphone is the latest racket to crop up in Hollywood. Norma Talmadge gets the honor of being the first to do the stunt by making a one-reel Vitaphone subject to be used in place of her personal appearance at the opening of the new Stanley theatre, Jersey City, next month.

Stanley-Fabian wanted Miss Talmadge to come on for the opening, and when this was found impossible, someone suggested that Vitaphone be used. Miss Talmadge appears in front of a black velvet drop dleivering an address of welcome to the audience, besides eulogizing the beauties of the house and the capabilities of the management. The speech runs about five minutes.

Film producers and stars who get innumerable requests for personal appearances at theatre openings all over the country will undoubtedly go for this Vitaphone personal appearance proposition. Cost of making the Vitaphone reel is much cheaper than the transportation and time lost in attending the opening in person.

NITE CLUB 2-REELERS

C. C. Thomas, with offices in the Cosmopolitan studios, New York, expects to start work next week on the first of a contemplated series of 12 two-reel comedies dealing with night clubs and cabarets.

Mark Hellinger, the "Daily News" night club reporter, is supplying the scripts. Thomas will direct.

Walter Hagen's First

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Scenario staff at Tiffany-Stahl studios is now preparing an original story titled "Green Grass Widows," for Walter Hagen's first starring picture.

Golf Pro Loses $25,000

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Herbert Lupin, one of the promoters of the Roxy Theatre, New York, has dispensed with the services of Charles Guest, glof pro, acting as his private instructor for the past year.

Quest is reported to have been getting $25,000 a year to keep Lubin's head down.

DUAL FEATURE PARLOR SHOWS BY 'BICYCLING'

Amateur Exhibs Exchanging 16 mm. Reels, Both Renting Same Night—Contracts?

"Bicycling" of film, a vexatious exchange problem in the old days, has made its appearance in the 16 mm. field. Numerous instances have been reported to the 16 mm. libraries of home renters exchanging pictures on the same night. Each of two homes will have a "double feature" night at half cost by a co-operative system all their own.

Home projection machines are not yet so numerous that "bicycling" is much of a menace, but it is believed the time may arrive when amateur exhibs will have to do business on a contract basis, with plenty of "whereases" in the contract.

Sid Franklin's Record

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Sidney Franklin, film director, has just completed the longest-term contract held by any actor, writer or director in the picture business. Franklin was under contract to Joseph Schenck for the past 10 years, and has just signed a renewal covering the next five years.

Franklin's first assignment under his new agreement will be a trip to Europe in March in search of new acting talent for United Artists. He is due to return in August, to start production of "East of the Setting Sun," with Constance Talmadge.

"Kings" Chi Troubles

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Police permits authorizing the showing of "King of Kings" at the Erlanger, opening Sunday, were revoked by the police department following objections by Jewish citizenry of Chicago.

In an effort to overcome the opposition, the theatre invited 12 rabbis to the premiere and went ahead with the Sunday evening screening. But business was slim, and the audience largely Jewish. If an unfavorable verdict is resultant management will apply to the courts for an injunction.

Cohen-Pennik Team

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

A selection of Jack Pennik to team for comedy with Sammy Cohen has been made by W. R. Sheehan, for the Fox pictures. One feature comedy is to immediately start with the new pair.

The late Ted McNamara was Cohen's first film partner. His recent death brought the opportunity to Pennik.

Both the comedians have a distinct type of Jewish and Irish pan.

COUZENS OF MICH. USES FORD SIMILE

Rembusch of Ind. Goes After Dept. of Justice—Dept. Replies in Answer to Variety's Questions—Samuelson of N. J. Accuses Trade Paper Bias at Opening Sessions in Washington Monday—Haste in Ordering Hearing Keeps Some Witnesses Away

O'REILLY, CHAIRMAN

Washington, Feb. 28.

Petitions for and against the Brookhart bill are running second only to the record established in reference to the Lankford Sunday closing bill. On the latter, by actual count, 65 petitions condemning the Lankford proposal arrived in one day. Brookhart petitions seem to be about equally developed, indicating both sides are working.

Locally film exchanges and salesmen are circularizing theatre owners against the bill, while at the same time selling them film.

Several senators have introduced editorials on the Brookhart bill into the record. This morning's hearing brought more committee members and capacity in onlookers in contrast to Monday's slim attendance of both committee and spectators.

Tuesday's A. M. Session

Tuesday morning the session opened with interest apparently growing in the committee as Senator Fess, O., Norris, Neb., Dill, Wash., Robinson, Ind., made their appearances in addition to Couzens and Watson. Sidney Samuelson, continuing, cited the oft repeated story of the alleged woes of the independents under block booking terminating in the suggestion from Brecher and himself that the only out was to sell pictures on merit.

Senator Watson wanted to know what would become of the poor pictures and was informed that they would go to the same place a tailor's ill fitted suit would go, the maker taking the loss, not the buyer.

The producers were charged with insisting on block booking and blind contract signing because they did not know whether their pictures would be good when completed and not because of it being the only way to sell. This brought an insertion in the record of a statement from Charles Pettijohn, quoting figures from Sidney Kent, Paramount sales manager, that of the 7,500 theatres buying Paramount's product but 5 per cent of these bought pictures in block 100 per cent. Pettijohn said that when Kent testified he would present "facts and figures that would not only shock the committee but the industry."

Others that Pettijohn indicated would testify before completion of hearings included Schiller, Loew's, C. E. Williams, pres. Nebraska and Iowa Motion Picture Theatres Owners, and Ned Depinet of First National, although when questioned later Pettijohn stated he might only put Kent on the stand and close for the producers-distributors.

Forced Pictures

Continuing with his testimony Samuelson, New Jersey, got into the record what he said he and the balance of the trade looked upon as pictures that were forced upon them. These included Ed. Wynn's "Rubber Heels," "Beau Sabreur," "Chicago," and Eddie Cantor's. As for the latter, he added that after seeing one of his pictures, Cantor returned to the stage.

When about to close Samuelson was questioned as to his $300,000 suit against the Producers-Distributors and film boards. He admitted the suit and stated he did not in-

Old Gag With Twist

The star of a sex picture playing around Los Angeles to "men only" is the wife of a former publisher of picture fan magazines. The wife went through a series of assaults and undresses for the picture, finally appearing pretty much in the nude.

After seeing the film, the former publisher is said to have written the producer disapproving of the length of the screen kisses of his wife.

PREDICTS INTERNAT'L FILM TRADE WAR

Count De La Roziere, in N. Y., Wants French Picture Outlet and Conference With Hays

Declaring that an international film trade ware is imminent and that he is here to make a complete survey with the ambition of this being a fundamental step towards averting it, a French count is now in New York. He is Frederick Carlot de la Roziere, director of Societe Generale de Films, Paris.

Roziere, described as an emissary from film powers in England and Germany, as well as France, talked freely at the Manhattan Club. He said that the matter of securing an American release for one of his company's pictures is secondary in his current mission.

Observing that Spain and Russia are the only European countries which so far have not adopted a film quota law, the Count predicted that unless the United States reflects what he said is the good will extended our films in Europe, that within the next five years not a single American-made picture will get beyond any European dock.

"If we cannot get pictures into this country I give you my word that France and England will take the lead in preventing any American films being marketed on their side of the water."

Roziere admitted in the same breath that fully 90 per cent of European product is unfitted for American screening.

"That is because there is no co-operation from America," he stated. The Count declared that before his return to France his investigation, which will be confined to New York, will include a series of conferences with production and distribution heads and Will Hays.

Pawnee Bill as Center Of Historical Film

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

A promotion has been effected here whereby Pawnee Bill, otherwise Major Lillie, will become a screen actor for one picture.

Promoter's plan is to make a western along the lines of "The Covered Wagon," starring Pawnee Bill.

They claim they have already raised sufficient money to begin the production, but one of their representatives is now in the east endeavoring to get a release before beginning work on the picture.

They contemplate expending about $200,000 on the production.

"Abie" at $2

Paramount has apparently sidetracked "The Wedding March" until next fall and is concentrating upon "Abie's Irish Rose" as its next $2 picture in New York.

A suitable legit house is being sought. If secured, the long run stage record holder will make its celluloid bow here early in April.

What is to become of the multiple reel Von Stroheim special is not known, although it is believed that this will now go over until fall.

ROXY $5,500,000 AS FULL GROSS FOR 1ST YEAR

Ann. Week March 10—Highest Week $144,267, Lowest $83,000

First anniversary of the Roxy theatre will be celebrated week of March 10. At that time the house will show an estimated gross figure of just short of $5,500,000 on its inaugural year. This is reached by allowing the house a gross of $95,000 for the next two weeks.

Attendance figures will approach 6,500,000 with the theatre showing its high week at $144,267 ("What Price Glory?"), and a low week of $83,000.

The high day record was achieved last week, Washington's Birthday, when $29,463 was the total. This tops the previous day record by about $1,300, and was accomplished with the usual five shows. The biggest week day is recorded at $19,308, while an off day here is considered $8,700, with the low week day mark put at around $7,000.

Besides the splurge show for the birthday, Tito Ruffo will be the feature of that week's Sunday morning concert (March 11). "Dressed to Kill" (Fox), will be the screen leader for the week.

House scale for the Roxy is: Weekdays, matinees, 50 cents orchestra and balcony, loges $1.10 up to 6 p. m.; weekday nights, balcony, 75 cents; orchestra, $1.10; loges, $1.65.

Night prices prevail all day on week-ends and holidays.

The average admission on attendance and gross figures nearly 85c. per person.

'40,000 Miles With Lindy'

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will turn loose next week a three-reel special titled "40,000 Miles With Lindbergh."

Picture follows the flying Colonel from the time he left San Diego last spring until he reached St. Louis, after his recent tour on the other side of the Canal.

It is stated the film is not entirely newsreel stuff, opening footage being given over to the early stages of aviation.

"TONES" JUNGLE FILM

Series of Cameras and "Mikes" in Jungle—Also "Name" Talker

Movietone (Fox) has a couple of big feature talkers in preparation, one an actual African jungle film with a special secret expedition now in Africa. The other is a full-length talker, a la Al Jolson's "Jazz Singer," with a "name" secretly guarded but touted as important as the Vitaphone star's.

The jungle expedition has arranged for a series of microphones to be hooked up in the African woods, synchronized with a battery of automatically-grinding cameras which, day and night, will shoot thousands of feet of film of everything of natural life that comes into the wide-range focus of the series of lenses. A specially constructed truck to silently generate the "juice" for the microphone recording of the sounds of the beasts and the birds is a feature of the expedition.

Wanger's Operation

Walter Wanger is reported just about leaving a hospital in New York, after undergoing a delicate but minor operation, of much importance to himself.

There's a laugh in it if Mr. Wanger can be induced to go into details.

"CIRCUS" AVERAGES $29,500 AGAIN; L. A. TOURIST TRADE 30% OFF

Bancroft at State Tops Dix at Met, $23,000 to $22,400 —"Four Sons" Tumbles $2,000—"Sorrell" Beats 1st Week—Jolson Fading—Biz Generally Off

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 1,450,000)

Panic seems to be on. A holiday last week with most of picture houses not even charging extra tariff, and still trade was none too brisk. Army of unemployed appears to grow each week, and the railroads are bringing in 30 per cent. less tourists than last year.

Grauman's Chinese and Biltmore about the only houses not feeling the off trade. Biltmore, though light afternoons, is doing first rate at night with "Wings," while "The Circus," at the Chinese, gives evidence of going at least 20 weeks.

United Artists got a fairly good break on second week of "Sorrell and Son" by jumping $600 ahead over the first week, which was poor. Dix's "Sporting Goods" disappointed at the Metropolitan, not coming up to the average gross done by this star's pictures. A wow of a stage show and a holiday, but house fell almost $5,000 behind Loew's State. On the latter site was "The Show Down," with George Bancroft. This player is quite a local favorite, and having a good stage show to aid the week was okay.

Million Dollar's second week of "The Student Prince" skipped about $5,500 below the opening stand but was able to show black on the ledger. Carthay Circle dropped about $2,000 below the first week of "Four Sons," none too good sign as to the success of this production at $1.50 top. "The Jazz Singer," in its eighth week at the Criterion, gave strong indications of waning with "Patent Leather Kid" underlined for Feb. 29 on two-a-day policy.

"The Dove" did not cut any too much ice at the Egyptian, though house played to nominal profit. "If I Were Single" was not strong at the Boulevard.

Estimates For Last Week

Grauman's Chinese (U. A.) "The Circus" (U. A.) (1,958; 50-$1.50). Ace picture striking best average for any picture even shown in town; fourth week around $29,500.

Carthay Circle (Miller-W. C.) "Four Sons" (Fox) (1,500; 50-$1.50). No sensation with cash buyers; second week an even $12,200.

Biltmore (Erlanger) "Wings" (Par.) (1,561; 50-$2.20). Sixth week almost $17,000; great.

Criterion (W. C.) "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,600; 50-$1.50). Has shot its bolt locally; next to final week, $6,800.

Loew's State (W. C.-Loew) "The Showdown" (Par.) (2,200; 25-99). Follow up on "Underworld" for Bancroft cashed in on star's prestige; better than $23,000.

Metropolitan (Pub.-W. C.) "Sporting Goods" (Par.) (3,595; 25-75). Dix off despite good supporting Fanchon & Marco stage show; only $22,400.

Million Dollar (W. C.-Pub.) "Student Prince" (M. G.) (2,200; 25-99). Second week nothing to brag about, but okay so far as operation was concerned; $13,650.

United Artists (U. A.) "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) (2,100; 25-$1.10). Second week better than first; $15,600.

Boulevard (W. C.) "If I Were Single" (U.) (2,164; 25-50). Holiday and Gene Morgan brought this one to $7,500.

Egyptian (W. C.-U. A.) "The Dove" (U. A.) (1,800; 25-75). Just fair with holiday tariff thrown in; more expected; $8,500.

"ENEMY," $38,500

Pitt About Normal—Aldine, $12,400 —"Sabreur," $13,500

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 1,000,000)

Practically all houses did normal business last week despite bad weather Wednesday and Thursday. The Penn bettered normal with "The Enemy." Grand did a fair business on its last week for stage attractions, feature film being "Beau Sabreur." New Stanley opening takes the Grand's place as the main house operated by Stanley in this town. The Grand will retain its orchestra.

Second week of "The Jazz Singer" at the Olympic held up, picture going into a third. Aldine with "The Forbidden Woman" was about as usual.

Estimates for Last Week

Aldine (Loew) (2,000; 25-35-50)—"Forbidden Woman" (Pathe) and vaude. Around $12,400.

Cameo (U) (600; 35-40)—"Cohens and Kelleys in Paris" (U). Farewell Week did best third week house has done in long time.

Grand (Stanley) (2,700; 35-50)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par.) and presentation. Average business, $13,500.

Olympic (Stanley) (1,200; 35-50) —"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (2d week). Held up well; $4,500; stays another week.

Penn (Loew) (3,700; 25-35-50)—"Enemy" (M-G) and Publix unit. Better than usual at $38,500.

'SINGER,' 'COHENS-KELLY' DO WELL IN DENVER

$10,000 and 3d Wk. for Jolson —U Comedy $6,800 and Stays —Dix Big at $19,500

Denver, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 400,000)

Tumbling prices and holdover business marked the past week. The city's Jewish population contributed no small amount of pennies to Al Jolson's second strong week at the Aladdin and "The Cohens and Kellys." Both films have entered extended engagements, which can only mean that there must be some dough left in the open spaces.

Orpheum started its drive against Publix by going into continuous, daily and Sunday, with tickets at 15, 25 and 35 for mats and entire main floor and balcony at 50c. nights. Entire main floor and balcony listed at 60c. Sundays. Three vaude shows daily, with grind from 1 till 11 p. m. This is either going to make it tough for the opposition or throw Orpheum way out of line.

With Orpheum prices dropping, the Empress, musical stock, follows suit. Mats are 10 and 20 weekdays now, for three shows and picture, and 10-20-30 at night. Four shows on week-ends, with reserved seats on weekday mats and first night bill. Empress is only musical on Curtis street trying to get by with a bid for class patronage.

Estimates for Last Week

Aladdin (Inde) (1,500; 35-50-75) "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.). Entered second week going like wildfire; all house records broken at around $10,000 first and second weeks; one more to go; best previous mark by "Better 'Ole," which stayed three weeks here, a marathon.

American (U.) (1,500; 20-30-40) "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U). Brought this downtown step-child into limelight; around $2,000 for months; jumped to $6,800; management scattered paper all over town and made splash in newspapers; the balcony, devoid of customers so long that they'd even taken out the usher, dusted off; held for second week.

Broadway (Inde) 1,575; 50-$2). Local American Legion revue, mostly society debs and well known members of wing collar crowd, rcached out for close to $8,000 on week's run; ticket selling on the outside did the trick.

Colorado (Inde) (2,450; 30-40-50) "Helen of Troy" (F. N.). Slight disappointment at $7,000, letting up as week closed; stage show good, as usual.

Denham (Inde stock) (2,732; 25-$1). "Crime," thriller, with John B. Litel, new lead, made hit; Jean Inness, wife of retiring leading man, Victor Jory, stays on as great favorite; about $5,600.

Denver (Publix) (2,500; 35-40-60) "Sporting Goods" (Par.) and stage show. Went through to $19,500; customers declare this Dix's best; house continues storm center in this field, some weeks making it tough for the competition, but generally responsible for better shows at cheaper prices; on page giving the theatre the works (and getting its advertising), the other giving and getting nothing.

Empress (Inde musical stock) (1,800; 15-30-50). "Up We Go," stage attraction, and "The Swell Head" (FBO) on screen. Below usual intake at around $5,000; "Up We Go" one of weakest yet by Emmett Lynn and High Jinks Players; cut prices may help out from now on.

Orpheum (Vaude) (1,600; 15-50-75). With Fanny Brice show held up; extra plugging helped; with "The Coward" on screen, $9,100.

Rialto (Publix) (1,050; 25-50) "Ben-Hur" (M-G). Still has fan appeal on third showing here; nearly $4,000 at slightly increased prices; "Old Ironsides" this week for first showing.

Victory (Publix) (1,140; 15-25-30). "Baby Mine" (M-G), second half, didn't register any better than usual western; closed under $1,000; house, Hooverizing to the limit, is dropping off the big list.

TOR. SPURNS "PRINCE"; SHEARER TOPS, $14,000

After Being Held Out 3 Yrs., "Last Laugh," $10,700— "Command," $12,000

Toronto, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population 700,000)

An all-round jump of 10 per cent surprised all the wise boys last week. Unemployment is a factor expected to throw the picture houses into a nose dive, but the drifters heading into town have enough coin to take in the flickers and are show hungry.

Tom Daley dropped $2,000 to $12,000 on the second week of "The Circus," but this is practically capacity and the line-up was still two blocks long at times. Chaplin picture held over again with chances of a fourth week. English film, "Battle of the Falkland Islands," next. A special "command" performance of the "Circus" was given for the prime minister and governor of Ontario on Friday.

Loew's took its accustomed position at the top with $14,000 for "Latest From Paris," while Fred Schafer was spending a lot more money to get a few dollars less with "Old Ironsides" (Par.) and Creatores Band, 60 strong, at Pantages. Norma Shearer, always a big draw here because she's a Canadian girl, laid them out in the aisles. Title seemed to mean something. Stage show up to average and result best in five or six weeks.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" landed in a tough spot with everything but the world series in competition. Started out to an all paper invitation audience and got nowhere next day, but built steadily from mid-week on to show $9,000. Not bad for two-a-day in this 1,400 scater. Campaign cost plenty and will make a play for schools on second week.

"Last Laugh" got into Ontario after being barred three years for no other reason than that it was German made. Drew crowds all around at the Hippodrome and reached almost $11,000 by playing to a strictly downstairs crowd. Lack of titles, prominently mentioned in all reviews, frightened the upstairs trade away. Stage show fair.

Jack Arthur fell just short of $10,000 with "The Student Prince," which got worse than an even break at the hands of the critics. Stage show fell below average standard but both picture and vaude showed improvement Saturday when "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" came in. Band back on the stage and Bobby Jones trying out as master of ceremonies.

Earlier statements had it that Vitaphone was not coming into Canada and that "Jazz Singer" would run as a routine picture. Warner Brothers state, however, that Vita will appear here during the present season although the house to be so equipped as not yet chosen. "Jazz Singer" is held up pending Vitaphone arrival.

Estimates For Last Week

Loew's (2,300; 30-60) "Latest from Paris" (M-G). Surprised by leading town at $14,000; jump of over $3,000 from previous week; feminine patronage very strong and matinees therefore excellent.

Pantages (F. P.) (3,400; 30-60) "Old Ironsides" (Par.). Never here as a road show; with Creatores Band on stage got $13,700; best bill and gross in five weeks.

Tivoli (F. P.) (1,400; 30-60) "The Circus" (U. A.). Second week for Chaplin showed $12,000, practically capacity, but drop of $2,000; held for third; "Battle of Falkland Islands" (British) next.

Hip (F. P.) (2,600; 30-60) "Last Laugh" (UFA). In 1924 Ontario censors decided this one could not be shown because it was German; war ended in 1928 up here and result is good at $10,700; stage show fair.

Regent (U.) (1,400; 50-$1.50) "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U.). Opened poorly despite thorough campaign. Pulled together by midweek and closed a big gap to grab $9,000; held over with future plans for house indefinite.

Uptown (F. P.) (3,000; 30-60) "Student Prince" (M-G). Dailies couldn't see this one and stage show a little below par; result was under $10,000; not good despite strong opening.

"Student Prince," $16,000 As Lent Dents Montreal

Montreal, Feb. 28.

What would have been a near record for this city in grosses was converted by Lent into a flop the last three days of the week. But takings were so good the early part of the week that "The Student Prince," at the Capitol, finished with almost the best results of the year at $16,000. Other houses were heavily hit. "Sorrell and Son," at the Palace, fell off to $12,000, with the other big first run theatre topping this figure by a few hundreds. Trained seals at Loew's and Milton Sills got the crowds up to Wednesday, when the Lenten slump hit.

Holiday No Riot for Boston; State, $26,800

Boston, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 850,000)

Jubilation at the Metropolitan because Gene Rodemich is coming home. Gene has been very strong with the femmes.

For past week "The Secret Hour" and "Roman Nights" on the stage played to fair houses at the Met and dropped from heights of early winter.

Out at the State "Man, Woman and Sin" pulled in a lot of "Rain" fans, and Richard Herndon's revue, "Merry Go Round," was good theatre. Holiday helped business throughout the city. "West Point," at the downtown Orpheum, didn't cash in on holiday trade but played a good week.

"Jazz Singer" and Vitaphone was okay and is staying on. The Olympia, Scollay Square and Fenway picked a winner in "Patent Leather Kid" and saw some heavy business.

The New Boston played "Silk Legs," which wasn't such a hot drawing card, but Hardeen, magician, pulled some business.

Estimates for Last Week

Metropolitan (Publix) (4,000; 50-60)—"Secret Hour" (Par). Al Mitchell and "Roman Nights" on stage; $38,800.

State (3,500; 35-50)—"Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G). Herndon's "Merry Go Round," revue, on stage; $26,800.

Orpheum (3,500; 35-50)—"West Point" (M-G) and vaude. Did $22,000.

Below Normal Business, And Topeka's Alibis

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 85,000)

Below normal business accompanied below normal temperatures and below normal bookings last week. Fans had little to talk about except the Shelby's, Norman and Constance at the Novelty vaudeville. The pair only did two dances, but were declared the best the town has seen this season.

Only surprise of the week was the consistent good business of "Les Miserables" on its second run. Picture didn't do a whale of a business when road-showed at the Grand, but picked up when it came back as a straight release to the Orpheum.

Road-show bookings of pictures have had their day here. Management of the Grand, where such are booked, now only giving them three days instead of a week. Even in three days "King of Kings" had plenty of seats to spare. Patrons are complaining because, when they pay a plunk and a half, all they see is a picture, none of the trimmings being brought along, such as their friends have told them about in New York and Los Angeles.

Estimates for Last Week

Grand (1,400; 75) (National). Waddell Players in stock with "Bobby Burns." Not holding up strong and this, their fifth run here, not predicted to be a record one; company lays off Wednesday for "Broadway"; about $2,300.

Novelty (1,100; 40) (Crawford). Vaude didn't stand up any more than the rest of the offerings; only one real act, the Shelbys, dancers; just over $2,200.

Orpheum (1,200; 40) (National). "Les Miserables." On straight release, was about the only upset from the dope; good business on second run; just under $1,900.

Jayhawk (1,500; 40) (Jayhawk). "Honeymoon Madness," first half, harmless comedy and did corresponding business, and "Sporting Goods" (Par.), last half, got its draw on Dix name; week's total light, $2,600.

Cozy (400; 25) (Lawrence). "Cradle Snatchers" (Fox), first half, pulled on the strength of Fazenda; last half, "Brass Knuckles," a dud; total, $800.

"KID," $18,000 2D WK.; "ENEMY," FAIR, $9,000

"Jazz Singer" Still Baltimore's Eighth Wonder—New's $9,000 Big

Baltimore, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 850,000)

Business was spotty last week, the advent of Lent being felt generally, but being offset somewhat by Washington's Birthday. Several houses came through with good grosses, but the average was below par.

Outstanding was "The Jazz Singer" at the Warner-Met. Last week was the seventh. Picture is undoubtedly establishing a record for this town.

Downtown revealed spotty returns. "Man, Woman and Sin," at the Century, turned in a satisfactory but not sensational week, while "Patent Leather Kid," a holdover at the Stanley, got a good but not remarkable second week. "The Enemy," at the fortnight run Valencia, got off to an indifferent start. "Chicago," holding over at the Rivoli, reported business satisfactory. "Sharp Shooters," at the New, came through with an exceptional week, partly due to Van Hoven's publicity plug. The two combination houses, Garden and Hippodrome, had satisfactory but not outstanding weeks. "Beau Sabreur," at the uptown Parkway, just average.

Estimates for Last Week

Century (Loew), "Man, Woman and Sin" (M.-G.) (2,074; 25-60). Excellent publicity campaign, plus fetching title, plus screen personality of Gilbert, gave this one momentum that it held until after the holiday. With advent of Lent, business eased off; plus good impression of stage band, under new leadership of Ted Claire, house turned in close to $19,000, above average, but not outstanding.

Stanley (Stanley-Crandall), "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) (3,600; 25-60). Started second week lamely, but picked up and finished okay; stage acts added for holdover week, film going the first week unaccompanied; about $18,000.

Valencia (Loew-U. A.), "The Enemy" (M.-G.) (1,500; 25-60). Additional newspaper campaign, including an effective library hookup, failed to give picture necessary momentum for good opening week; heavy title, anti-war propaganda theme and lack of sufficient feminine matinee appeal factors in indifferent b. o. showing; Lillian Gish fails to start any stampede in this town; fairly satisfactory at about $9,000.

New (Whitehursts), "Sharp Shooters" (Fox) (1,800; 25-50). Ran counter to downtown average and turned in good week for moderate-sized house; extra press ads aided; about $9,000; exceptional here.

Rivoli (Wilson Amusement Co.), "Chicago" (Pathe) (2,500; 25-60). Returns apparently justified the holdover of this one; not remarkable, but reported consistently satisfactory holiday aiding.

Garden (Schanbergers), "Four-Flusher" and K.-A. vaude (3,200; 25-50). Good picture for this house; Nazimova headed vaude; satisfactory and better, but under previous week; about $17,000.

Hippodrome (Jearce & Scheck), "The Siren" and K.-A. vaude (3,200). E. K. Nagel's unit show headed stage end of the bill; same show got a remarkable draw here last spring; picture dramatic and liked; ahead of previous week, but not outstanding.

Metropolitan (W. B.), "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,400; 25-50). Eighth wonder of local picture game; jumped $1,400 ahead of sixth week with holiday; ahead of "Don Juan's" endurance record in this house and end now indefinite; about $11,500.

Parkway (Loew-U. A.), "Beau Sabreur" (Par.) (1,004; 15-35). Downtown run about exhausted this one; business at this uptown stand just average; around $8,900.

The Imperial is getting better pictures and did quite a business with "Wife Savers." Princess repeated "The Desert Song" with same company as first showing and sold out first part of week. Gross went to around $22,500. His Majesty's (Legit) went dark for third successive week without much sign of any future bookings.

Estimates for Last Week

Capitol (F.P.) (2,700; 40-85)—"Stark Princess" (M-G). Packed them in first four days, when it emptied some of the back rows; could have run another week; $16,000.

Palace (F. P.) (2,700; 60-85)—"Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) Fine picture, but feminine interest cut by censors, which reacted on attendance; $12,000.

Loew's (3,200; 45-75)—"Valley of the Giants" (F. N.). Milton Sills popular here and shared attraction with Odiva and seals; $12,500.

Imperial (K.-A.) (1,900; 35-80)—"Wife Savers" (Par.). Plenty of laughs; standout from pictures usually run here; $4,500.

Strand (U. A.) (800; 30-40)—"Legionaires in Paris" (F. B. O.); "Woman Who Did Not Care" (Col.); "Alias the Deacon" (U.); "On to Reno" (Pathe). All together, $4,000.

'Talkers' for Amateurs With 16mm. Projection

General Electric, with its show business associate, FBO, is reported contemplating the G. E.'s "talking picture" device as an attachment for the amateurs' 16 mm. home projector, as well as the regulation.

There is a reported demand for the talkers among the amateur picture makers. Sufficient of the smaller size projectors now in use to make the home talking scheme feasible and profitable.

Orders well in advance for the home projectors are said to be placed with the manufacturing companies. The report adds there is an unlimited field amongst the amateurs from the present outlook.

ROXY DID $29,463 ON HOLIDAY; GOING TO $121,000 ON FULL WEEK

"Four Sons" Starts to Capacity at $2, $14,000, at the Gaiety—M-G-M's "Crowd" Move to Astor Is Called Smart—Paramount Did $73,750

Allowing that George Washington was good to his country, let it be said that the first man to actually say, "I do not choose to run" is still much appreciated. Verily, George far outran Abe for 1928. Feb. 22 and "Washington we are here" was the password at the Roxy, where $29,463 was the actual deposit between those well known a. m. and p. m.'s. It's the one day top for that house, or any picture house.

Other houses along the street also cleaned plenty on the holiday.

M-G-M got a lot of Broadway attention with the decision to move "The Crowd" from the 99c. Capitol to the Astor for $2. The newspaper space used up in announcing the unique move may have eaten heavily into whatever profits $80,-200 brought at the Capitol, but the street admitted it a "smart" move if continuing, to believe that a rescuer was 'way overdue at the Astor for "The Enemy." The new Vidor 86-minute picture won't be long at the 45th street house, however, as "Trail of '98" is due there March 13, although a week's postponement is not only likely, but probable.

The Paramount's first "Take a Chance Week," with "Love and Learn" (Par.) behind the masked billing, didn't particularly feel the pre-Lenten business flare. At $73,-750 the ace Publix house was slightly behind Dix's previous week. Neither could "Shepherd of the Hills" at the Strand take advantage of the turn in the tide. Doing $26,-300 was $10,000 short of "Patent Leather Kid's" second week. Going over $29,000 on the holiday gave the Roxy $121,000, the first time in weeks it has been up around $120,000.

English-Made's Run

Colony took the gambler's chance by holding in "Hunchback" for a second week and lost at $8,900 with the Chaney reissue. The British-made naval film is doing what it can at the small Cameo, and all right. For its second week "Battle of the Falkland Islands" eased by $7,300. Now in its third week, it will stay a fourth.

Jannings, in his fifth week at the Rialto, showed the first signs of easing up in dropping off $8,300, to $30,900. Gloria and her "Sadie" dove $9,400 at the Rivoli, where $34,750 is a good third week figure, but not exceptional in lieu of Wednesday's coin influx.

Some of the two buck silent attractions were swelled by the mid-week populace entertainment bound. "Four Sons," at the Gaiety, was so close to $14,000, capacity, it doesn't make any difference, and "Jazz Singer" scampered back over $18,-000 again. "Wings" clipped it off at just shy of $16,000, and "Love" keeps its hat in the ring at $10,300.

Not so "Drums of Love," which has had a sorry stay of it at $2. Griffith film departs this Saturday after six weeks of mediocre business. Understanding is that when this picture comes back to the Rivoli at pop prices it will have a different finish.

"Enemy" did its final show Friday and "Uncle Tom" was unable to catch many of the joy crowd at $7,500, "Simba" had a total of $12,000.

Estimates for Last Week

Astor—"The Enemy" (M-G) (1,-200; $1-$2). Retreat from Moscow finally ended Friday night; made way for "The Crowd" (M-G-M), which moved down from the Capitol and caught $5,000 on its first weekend at $2 after playing up the Street at pops; move caused a lot of inside talk and was admired; "Enemy's" off business factor, however; "Trail of '98" may not reach here until March 20, due to unavoidable delays; if so, will give "Crowd" three full weeks.

Cameo—"Battle of Falkland Islands" (Artlee) (549; 50-75) (3d week). Enough interest in Britain's navy to bring better than $7,300 on second week; picture holding over for fourth week; Canadian film bunch much interested in its run at this house.

Capitol—"The Crowd" (M-G) (4,620; 35-50-75; $1.65). Good notices from dailies, but mixed comment by patrons; heavy newspaper ads for announcement of continuance at Astor; with holiday did $80,200, increase of $13,800 over "Rose-Marie."

Carroll—"Simba" (997; $1-$2) (6th week). Has made good stay of it, lingering fortnight beyond original intention; may leave next week but no definite decision on that as yet; $12,000.

Central—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) (922; $1-$2) (17th week). Holiday or no doesn't seem to make much difference here; $7,500.

Colony—"Hunchback of Notre Dame" (U) (1,980; 25-50-75). Held Chaney reissue for second week, but hardly successful at $8,900; stage shows going back here this Saturday.

Criterion—"Wings" (Par) (836; $1-$2) (29th week). Went up a little, but not enough to cause comment; steady and satisfactory at $15,900, approaching six months' mark.

Embassy—"Love" (M-G) (596; $1-$1.65) (14th week). Easing along easily; clinch opus minding its own business and with plenty to do at $10,300.

Gaiety—"Four Sons" and Movletone (Fox) (808; $1-$2) (3d week). Practical capacity at $14,000; continuous b. o. lines matinees and nights; apparently getting much drop-in-trade.

Liberty—"Drums of Love" (U.A.) (1,234; $1-$2) (6th week). Hasn't made a go of it and departs this Saturday; $8,000 liberal estimate; supposedly coming back to Rivoli with substitute for tragic ending.

Paramount—"Take a Chance Week" with "Love and Learn" (Par) (3,400; 35-50-75-90). First stunt of kind here and results just fair; $73,750, slightly under preceding week.

Rivoli—"Sadie Thompson" (U.A.) (2,200; 35-50-75-90) (4th week). Took decided tumble despite Wednesday's recess, but $34,750 deemed good.

Rialto—"Last Command" (Par) (1,960; 35-50-75-90) (6th week). Went into first real slip since opening; $30,900, indicative of enough power for two more weeks.

Roxy—"Girl in Every Port" (Fox) (6,205; 50-$1.65). Joyful week of it at $121,000; holiday hung up day record of $29,463; but didn't hold picture over; total figure is $15,000 over previous week; house getting ready for first birthday week March 10.

Strand—"Shepherd of the Hills" (F. N.) (2,900; 35-50-65-75). Stayed dormant through b. o. flurry around it; far from hot at $26,300.

Warners—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,360; $1-$2) (21st week). Crept back to again peek at $18,600.

MARDI GRAS GAVE N. O. GOOD MONEY

Not Bit of Red Along Entire Line for Once—Saenger, $23,100

New Orleans, Feb. 28.

Mardi Gras was responsible for the biggest picture week of the winter. Saenger did above $23,000. Loew's State came pretty close to establishing a record for all time when it passed $20,000. Not a splash of red last week. Extraordinary!

Estimates for Last Week

Saenger (3,568; 65)—"The Gaucho." Fairbanks came into his own here with his latest effort; $23,100.

Loew's State (3,218; 50)—"Chicago." Local holiday period got $20,400.

Orpheum (2,400; 75)—"The Four Flusher." Visitors helped Orpheum along with the other houses. Theatre rented for one day; $9,200.

Palace (2,300; 40)—"Primrose Path." Clara Bow biggest feminine draw in New Orleans; $6,200.

Strand (2,200; 50)—"Rose-Marie." Picture not so forte, but crowds sent it to $5,600.

Liberty (1,800; 50)—"French Dressing." Along route of parades, Liberty did $4,700.

Tudor (800; 40)—"The Dove." Helped through location and surprised town when drawing $2,800 to this house.

"BLONDES" FLOP

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which opened at the Million Dollar Feb. 23 for a three weeks' engagement, flopped so badly opening day it will wind up after one week.

"Legion of the Condemned" substitutes.

Davis Winding Up

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Owen Davis has arrived here to finish his contract with Paramount. He is doing originals.

MARX BOYS BOOST GRANADA INTO $30,000

Is $10,000 Jump—Warfield, $21,000 With Wolf Away—Jolson Also $21,000

San Francisco, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 756,000)

The expected happened. With proper exploitation and publicity and with a substantial screen feature to back them, the Marx Brothers brought a new lease of life to the Granada last week. Topped their Los Angeles engagement at the Metropolitan by better than $3,000. It was the biggest week the Granada has had in months and bettered the preceding week by fully $10,000.

Second surprise on the main stem was the spurt of "The Jazz Singer," which grossed close to $1,000 better than its opening week. Figuring the small seating capacity, the Embassy is running ahead of anything else on Market street.

Warfield had a satisfactory week though off several "grands." Part of this may be attributed to "Rube" Wolf being away on a vacation for a week. Second and final week of "The Student Prince" at the California held up well. Picture might have been held for third week to a small profit, but two weeks generally plenty at this house and management taking no chances.

Another good week for "The Gaucho" at the St. Francis. General comment favorable on this one, and third week less than $4,000 below the second. One more week to go and then "Ramona." Showmen are agreed that Ash Wednesday falling on Washington's Birthday cut down holiday business 20 per cent. At that, it was big all over town, with everybody satisfied.

Estimates for Last Week

Granada—"French Dressing" (Par.) (2,785; 35-50-65-90). Marx Bros., recently here in "The Cocoanuts" at $3.85 and sure fire at Granada prices; with substantial screen feature house had little difficulty reaching $30,000; demonstrated they will come to the house if the fare is to their liking.

Warfield—"Feel My Pulse" (Par.) (2,672; 35-50-65-90). Bebe Daniels a fair draw in this town, but picture drew no raves; novelty stage show, with Rube Wolf out for week, helped intake; figured at $21,000.

Embassy—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,367; 50-65-90). Second week started off with a bang; great over weekend and holiday pushed it to within a few dollars of $21,-000; looks at this point like easy eight weeks.

California—"Student Prince" (M-G-M) (2,200; 35-65-90). Business held up consistently; second and last week close to $15,000; very satisfactory.

St. Francis—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (1,375; 35-65-90). Fairbanks has strong b. o. appeal and customers liked his latest; third week $11,000, and one more to go.

HOLIDAY SAVES MIL.; "SORRELL," $8,800, H. O.

'Helen' Disappoints, $5,500—Town Likes 'Dove' and Roland, $18,000

Milwaukee, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 650,000)

Washington's birthday and holiday prices brought what a snowstorm and cold wave the balance of the week shook out. "King of Kings" slid out of the Davidson after two weeks and the house went back into legit. The Wisconsin took down plenty with "The Love Mart." Gilbert Roland threatens to give Gilbert, Golman and the other lads a run as far as local girls are concerned. Roland has been here in three films in almost as many weeks, and the girls sigh when they see him.

Universal's new "Cohen and Kelly" film brought the Alhambra back from the depths, while "Sorrell and Son" did well enough at the Garden to hold over. "Helen of Troy," at the Strand, was expected to wow them, but failed to register on the unimaginative flapper brains. Those who didn't read the Erskine book couldn't get the drift and the Strand didn't get the shekels.

The Merrill, with "The Lovelorn," failed to set any stampede, even though the story ran in serial form in a local daily, a matter that did help Sorrell.

Estimates for Last Week

Alhambra (U), "Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (U) (1,800; 30-50). Jumped up a bit to lift off some of the red written in the past few weeks; did $15,400.

Davidson (Brown), "King of Kings" (Pathe) (1,600; $1-$1.50). Could have stayed third week if pushed; close to $16,000 second week.

Garden (Brin), "Sorrell and Son" (U. A.) (1,200; 25-50-75). Little house hit again; aided by recent closing of serial in local daily and much plugging; holds over after first week at $8,800.

Majestic (Orph), "Grandma's Boy" (Pathe) (1,600; 10-25-40). Reissue and vaude did fairly; just about $6,800.

Merrill (Midwesco), "Lovelorn" (M-G) (1,200; 25-50). Couldn't catch on, despite heavy plugging and recent serialization in a daily; house barely reached $6,000.

Miller (Midwesco), "Ranger of North" (M-G) (1,400; 25-50). Stage band policy; dog pictures draw at this house; hit $5,900.

Palace (Orph), "Main Event" (Pathe) (2,400; 25-50-75). Vaude big item here and picture didn't mean much; house always in same class; close to $18,000.

Strand (Midwesco), "Helen of Troy" (F. N.) (1,200; 25-50). Picture didn't seem to hit right with public; not enough read book; around $6,500.

Wisconsin (Midwesco) "The Love Mart" (F. N.) (2,800; 25-35-50-60-75). Stage show drew, but much can be given names in picture; both Dove and Roland mean much to local fans; return of Richter, organist, helped, too; above $18,000.

CHARLIE BEATS SYD BY $7,700

$25,000 Palace's Record—Fox, $27,000—Capitol Big

Washington, Feb. 28.
(Estimated White Pop., 450,000)

Past week presented a study in contrasts, grosses running from $5,500 to $28,000. Palace (Loew) with "West Point" and Publix presentation (Manhattan Steppers) had its Saturday and Sunday records smashed. Same thing happened to the Washington Birthday former high and then, to make it good, finished the week to a gross above anything ever recorded in the 10 years of the house. This is the second time a picture of this nature has run up a big gross here. "The Midshipman" got plenty, too.

Another startler was the big pick up at the Fox, with intake of an additional three to four thousand over previous credited to the stage end. Picture, "Sharp Shooters," above usual standard and liked. House presents permanent chorus and ballet and is in this field by itself.

Chaplin got business at the Columbia with the show being turned over eight times daily (five on Sunday) to a knockout figure for scale and capacity.

Some improvement at the Earle. Spotty business, though, and not satisfactory. One week up and then down. Met staff was none too joyful with Syd Chaplin in the Vitaphoned "Missing Link." Here was a real contrast and a bad break for the Met. Brother Charlie was just two blocks away.

Rialto still struggling with Negri in "Secret Hour." Opening last Saturday for current week with return of "Hunchback of Notre Dame" gave best Saturday in several weeks.

"Old Ironsides," current at Met, got good start and introduced to the town the first time commercial pages of the papers have been used for spread advertising. Quarter pages in all of five dailies.

Estimates for Last Week

Columbia (Loew)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,232; 25-50). Management appreciates chance to run eight daily; almost $17,200; very big.

Earle (Stanley-Crandall)—"Wife Savers" (Par.) (2,300; 35-50). Palace got cream through playing this in Washington's birthday and holiday aided, as with others, with improvement over previous week; close to $12,000.

Fox (Fox)—"Sharp Shooters" (Fox) and presentations (3,432; 35-50). Business beat previous week combination of Clara Bow and Clark and McCullough on stage; front page breaks on Fox acquiring theatres plus Congressman Sol Bloom's idea to put the Metropolitan opera in for a week annually all helping materially; many musical comedy names last week; above $27,000.

Met (Stanley-Crandall)—"Missing Link" and Vita (W. B.) (1,518; 35-50). One of 20 odd pictures bought with each expected to go for runs; Syd Chaplin bucking brother up street not so good and title bad, too; may be $9,500 and out for "Old Ironsides."

Palace (Loew)—"West Point" (M.-G.) and Publix unit (2,363; 35-50). Riding on top the world with 80 percent of the customers repeating without even checking up on what is playing the house; broke previous record held by "Flesh and the Devil," which drew without help from stage; current week more than $25,000.

Rialto (U.)—"Secret Hour" (Par.) and Erma Powell revue on stage (1,978; 35-50). Picture did little, but slight improvement over previous week; possibly $5,500.

DUNCANS JUMP PAN $12,500 TO $21,000

5th Ave., $15,100—"Student Prince," $9,000—Blue Mouse, $8,000

Seattle, Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 475,000)

The new 3,800-seater, the Seattle, opens Thursday, and somehow the past week was rather slow at the picture shops. Maybe the opening will pep things up. Not only the show business but things have been a trifle slack generally.

A bright spot the past week was the Pantages, where the Duncan Sisters (in person) opened strong and went to $21,000 for a record. Previous week house did $8,500. Menjou's b. o. appeal in "A Gentleman from Paris" was not crushing, and "Student Prince," also, was well liked but held merely fair during its second week. Much plugging for "The Last Command," opening next week at United Artists.

Columbia had a nice pleaser in "Surrender," but the big ammunition is next week with "The Circus." Chaplin hasn't been here for months.

Estimates for Last Week

Fifth Avenue (W-C) (2,700; 25-60)—"A Gentleman from Paris" (Par.). Smooth goods and liked, while F & M "Follieties" idea welcome change for a week; fast stepping presentation minus usual bevy of gals and costumes; $15,100.

United Artists (U. A.-W. C.) ($,-100; 25-60)—"The Student Prince" (M-G). Not bad for second week, but not a second week picture for Seattle; $9,000.

Columbia (U) (1,000; 25-50)—"Surrender" (U). Fair biz and music a feature; $6,000.

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (950; 25-75)—"Good Time Charlie" and Vita (W. B.) and Movietone (Fox). Another pretty good week; $8,000.

Orpheum (2,700; 25-75)—"Bare Knees" (Pathe). Picture a little stronger than usual; biz ahead of last week, which was low mark of season; $11,000.

President (Duffy) (1,650; 25-$1)—"The Nightstick" (Duffy Players). Liked and b. o. good; $4,850.

"ROSE-MARIE," $14,000

Leads Portland, Ore.—"Lightnin'" Next at $13,000—"Love" Out 2d Week

Portland, Ore., Feb. 28.
(Drawing Population, 310,000)

Business at most of the picture emporiums was not especially up. Oriental, which for the past few weeks has been hitting the top, didn't do so much with "Lightnin'." Picture was not given exploitation or publicity. Newness of house has worn off, too.

"Rose-Marie," at the Broadway, did not get the kale expected, although it clicked profitably. Liberty improved over past weeks with Gene Dennis, psychic, who appeared at the house as a return engagement. "Pleasure Before Business," Irish-Jewish comedy, did not mean a thing.

Universal's Columbia sailed along to excellent business with "Alias the Deacon" and Nadj Rossett, operatic star. Film was forced to pull "Love" after it had completed a satisfactory first week's business and was scheduled for a second week. It played four days of the second week, with "Old Ironsides" replacing.

Estimates for Last Week

Broadway (W. C.) (2,000; 25-40-60), "Rose-Marie" (M-G). Picture just all right; Fanchon and Marco's "Lampshade Idea" and Ollie Wallace assets to bill; $14,000.

Oriental (Tebbetts) (2,700; 25-35), "Lightnin'" (T-S). House needs more exploitation. Srodkas Band and Glean Shelley, organist, okay; $13,000.

Liberty (Fox) (2,000; 25-40), "Pleasure Before Business" (Col.). Picture didn't mean a thing; Gene Dennis, mental marvel, on stage, saved house from going in "red"; $6,000.

Pantages (Pan) (2,000; 35-50), "Seventh Heaven" (Fox). Second week brought great business; first time in months picture has been held for more than a week; around $12,500.

Rivoli (Parker-Fox) (1,210; 35-50), "Love" (M-G). In three-day run of second week cashed to about $4,500; "Old Ironsides" (Par.) followed and held over.

Columbia (U) (850; 35-50), "Alias the Deacon" (U). Brought house good profit; Nadj Rossetti, stage feature, clicked also; "Gold Rush" following; $5,000.

Music Box (Henry Duffy Players) (1,300; 25-50-$1), "Cradle Snatchers." A riot; turnstiles kept busy all week; ticket showed over $6,700, about $1,500 clear.

Hollywood (Fox) (1,600; 15-25-35), "Wild Geese" (T-S). Picture brought house fair intake for four days; around $2,000 for run.

"CIRCUS," $40,100 AT U. A., CHI; "PRINCE" DOES $32,000, 2D WEEK

Near Panic Last Week With Holiday—No Tilt in Scale—"Four Sons" Tumbles $2,000—"Sorrell" Beats 1st Week—Jolson Fading—All Biz Off

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Most of the picture house managers ought to go out to Washington Park and lay wreaths at the foot of a certain statue. Washington's Birthday was a life-saver for the boys who didn't have cinch pictures to buck a week full of weather.

Chaplin's "Circus," besides giving the new United Artists a high mark to shoot at, displayed the most convincing drawing quality of anything in the Loop. It sailed through seven days to $40,100. A close second was "Student Prince" in its second week at McVicker's, dropping just $4,000 to a good $32,000. No other film since "Big Parade" has given the house such a break. Haines' "West Point" was held to $49,000 by the weather. However, this is far from a squawk gross. Oriental went bye-bye with the cold wave, dropping to $39,000.

"Jazz Singer" pulled out after 15 weeks at the Garrick, taking a final spurt to $16,000. Jolson picture has been one of the town's most successful roadshows, maintaining a consistent, profitable gross throughout the engagement.

"Les Miserables" was confined to $14,500 in its first week at the Roosevelt. "Blondes" and "H. O. T.," the houses' two previous attractions, both had $18,000 first weeks. Heavy advertising by the Monroe on Mussolini's Movietone reel, with special exploitation in Italian papers, brought a good $5,200. A John Gilbert reissue, "Shame," was the feature. Other grosses less than customary.

Erlanger was converted from legit to pics Sunday for opening of "King of Kings" as a special. The Woods, another legit house, goes celluloid March 4 with "Simba."

Estimates for Last Week

Chicago (Publix)—"West Point" (M-G) (4,100; 50-75). While considerably above house average, not quite up to expectations; $49,000, with bad weather break.

Garrick (Shubert)—"Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.) (1,293; $2.20). Brought $15,000 in 15th and final week; highly profitable run and house reverts to legit with "Oh Kay!" musical.

McVicker's (Publix)—"Student Prince" (M-G) (2,400; 50-75). After coming within $2,000 of house record first week, only dropped $4,000 in second week to a big $32,000.

Monroe (Fox)—"Shame" (Fox reissue) and Movietone (975; 50-65). Mussolini on Movietone credited draw, bringing strong $5,200, with special exploitation on the Duce.

Oriental (Publix)—"Ladies' Night" (F. N.) (2,900; 35-50-75). Film not so much, and with under average stage show let the weather get the best of it; $39,000.

Orpheum (Warner)—"Crimson City"-Vita (W. B.) (776; 50). Below customary mark with $6,800; little heard of the film.

Playhouse (Mindlin)—"Greed" (M-G). Reissue and some arty shorts brought house fair money; $3,300.

Roosevelt (Publix)—"Les Miserables" (U) (1,400; 50-60). First week okay but not outstanding at $14,500.

State-Lake (Orpheum)—"Stand and Deliver" (Pathe) (1,400; 50-60). Good vaude bill, but picture couldn't draw above regular week, $16,500.

United Artists (U. A.)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,702; 25-75). Chaplin didn't let the weather hurt and established record for new house with $40,100; at present gait can run five weeks; house did nine shows mid-week, with 11 shows Saturday.

Tacoma Remains Off; B'way, $6,600; Pan, $4,900

Tacoma, Feb. 28.

(Drawing Population, 125,000)

Town doesn't seem to do what it ought to, and probably never will. Still, there is hope. Past week a local capitalist handled the Admiral Oriental freight line of boats, and will be terminal hereafter. This gives Tacoma high rank as a port. It will mean increase in payroll and more railroad offices here. A factory town and the lumber capital of the world, Tacoma fundamentally sound. Were it not for so many lodge and club amateur shows there would be more in the professional tills.

Estimates for Last Week

Broadway (W. C.) (1,600; 25-50) "Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G). Dic. $6,600.

Pantages (1,450; 25-50). "Pajamas" (Fox). Went to $4,900.

Blue Mouse (Independent) (1,200; 25-50). "Silver Slave" and Vita (W.B.). Drew $3,500.

Rialto (W. C.) (1,250; 25-40) "Student Prince" (M-G). Picture liked here; $4,100.

Colonial (W. C.) (850; 25). "Jesse James" (Par.). Lifted by patrons and biz up a little; $2,100.

"SHANGHAI," $14,500; GILDA, $32,900, IN DET.

Garbo Normal at Michigan, $38,500—"Gaucho," $23,000—Chaplin, $18,000

Detroit, Feb. 28.

Ups and downs last week. Previous week's low ones took the rise and the big boys slumped.

Best improvement was shown by the Capitol. With Gilda Gray on the stage and her film on the screen, house turned in its speediest furlong in some time. Thrice Miss Gray has tapped this town in two-way performances, and each time success ully.

"The Gaucho" proved a redeemer for the United Artists, following the new theatres' off second week with "Sadie Thompson." Fairbanks clicked immediately, accomplishing a large week-end after a Friday opening. Neat pace retained all week and returns were good on the seven days. Dropped somewhat going into the current lap, but has chance of sticking out a third if continuing as at present.

Chaplin slipped considerably at the Adams, failing to provide as profitable a second week as the initial gross suggested. Break for this house at the last quotation, nevertheless, and it still looks like four weeks minimum for "The Circus." Third week decline of "Sunrise," at the Washington, seemed natural. First fortnight for the Fox film was retarded by obvious lack of exploitation.

State returned to normal after the Elder influx, and is again back on an equal level with the Oriental. Latter went heavily on "Streets of Shanghai" as an attraction last week and beat the State by a noticeable margin. No further price reductions by this pair, with both possibly having reached the bottom, unless wishing to razor where it will hurt. However, with the way they've been giving it to each other, anything may happen.

Madison had a fair opener with "Les Miserables." "The Patent Leather Kid" is being held in readiness. This will be the "Kid's" repeat here, after a two-a-day showing at the Miles early this season.

Greta Garbo was the draw at the Michigan, helping the big house to a slightly better than normal sum. At this moment she is a certainty here.

Estimates for Last Week

Adams (Kunsky)—"The Circus" (U. A.) (1,770; 50-75). Deuce week should have drawn better than $18,000; unexplainable reduction in exploitation, a happening that turns up frequently in Detroit; Chaplin will not need forcing to go four weeks, but might have found it easier.

Capitol (Kunsky)—"Devil Dancer" (U. A.) (3,446; 50-75). Gilda Gray responsible for high jump; up to $32,900 after previous depression; nice start for "The Big City" (M-G), current.

Madison (Kunsky)—"Les Miserables" (U) (1,976; 50-65-75). Opened to $15,000 and will find it necessary to improve to stick; "Patent Leather Kid" (F. N.) prepared to open any time, and billed as coming without date.

Michigan (Kunsky-Publix)—"Divine Woman" (M-G) (4,100; 50-75). Big house normal with Garbo; $38,500.

Oriental (Miles)—"Streets of Shanghai" (T-S) and Pan vaude (2,950; 25-90). Meller with good name cast, plus usual Pan bill, and up to $14,500.

State (Kunsky)—"Ladies Night" (F. N.) and Loew vaude (3,000; 25-75). Back to regular run after Elder; last week off from all angles, $12,000.

United Artists (U. A.)—"The Gaucho" (U. A.) (2,000; 50-65). Fairbanks running against two other U. A.'s last week, Chaplin and "Devil Dancer"; big start and kept going to $23,000 week; retained gait over last week-end and shows signs of three-week tenacity.

Washington (Fox)—"Sunrise"-Movietone (Fox) (1,778; 35-50-65) (4th week). Took natural drop, but house okay with $9,000; six weeks probable.

CORKING GROSS IN PHILLY, THOUGH LENT

Stanley Got $36,000 and Fox, $30,000—Specials Doing Well

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

With special presentation attractions and some rather strong film features booked, most of the downtown picture houses overcame the handicap of the opening of Lent.

Extended-run pictures also fared well, considering the Lenten handicap.

Next Monday "Four Sons" is scheduled to come into the Fox-Locust for a run, and "Ben-Hur," already road-showed here, is at the Stanton.

Estimates for Last Week

Stanley (4,000; 35-50-75)—"Wife Savers" (Par). Hatton-Beery comedy liked, but stage feature Sophie Tucker. Combination got $36,000; great business with Lent starting.

Stanton (1,700; 35-50-75)—"Student Prince"—(M-G-M—2d week). Romance received with mixed notices but held up nicely at $14,000. Announced to leave Saturday but may stay another week.

Aldine (1,500; $2)—"Wings" (Par—13th week). Aviation special claimed $15,000. Great under the circumstances.

Karlton (1,000; 50-75)—"Love" (M-G-M—4th week). Strong at end with almost $8,000 claimed. "The Circus" for run this week.

Arcadia ($800; 50) — "Quality Street' (M-G-M—1st week). Strong enough to hold over, something of surprise. $4,000.

Fox-Locust (1,800; $1.65)—"Sunrise' (Fox—7th week). Last two weeks announced and that helped. $9,000.

Fox (3,000; 99)—"Woman Wise" (Fox). Picture didn't mean much, but Clark and McCullough did. About $30,000; corking.

MIDLAND, $20,000, K.C.; $15,200 FOR "WINGS"

Kansas City, Feb. 28.

(Drawing Population, 700,000)

This was Home Products Week, and the big stores turned over their display windows for the exhibition of goods manufactured here. Amusement managers did the best they could along this line.

"Wings," at the Shubert," was given unusual publicity, and the Sunday opening, in spite of road-show prices, saw a turnaway. Balance of week found good crowds for the evening performance, but mats were pretty skimpy. Washington's Birthday gave everyone a slight break, much needed with Lent just starting.

Although unintentional, it seems as though bookers for the local houses think along the same lines at times. One week found every house with a woman star; other weeks they have run to heavy stories, and this week four of them are showing pictures with the story laid in distant countries. In spite of these various offerings, none of the houses showed any unusual activity. Just a fairly steady play.

Estimates for Last Week

Midland (Loew)—"Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G) (4,000; 25-35-60). Jeanne Eagles is real home-towner, stage held J. M. Anderson's Annual Revue; daily reviewers kidded the film of newspaper life, did not warm up to Miss Eagles and let Gilbert down easily; Gilbert's girl contingent, however, ate it up; $20,000.

Mainstreet (Orpheum)—"Flying Romeos" (F. N.) (3,200; 25-50). Circus week and show held novelty acts; turnaway Sunday business gave house flying start, but something happened and some of the performances were poorly attended; maybe too much "Patent Leather Kid" the week before, when some 64,000 tickets dropped into the choppers; close to $15,000.

Newman (Loew)—"Devil Dancer" (Par.) (1,980; 25-35). Gilda Gray has been seen in person here, but picture started Saturday and Sunday better than any since house went to 35-cent top; advertising stunt, with a radio set given to the person holding the key that would open the lock, attracted considerable attention; $5,100.

Pantages—"Gateway of the Moon" (Fox) (2,200; 25-30-50). Story and Dolores Del Rio okay; $8,100.

Liberty (Ind)—"Chicago After Midnight (F. B. O.) (1,000; 15-25-35). Underworld thriller directed by Ralph Ince, with Ince starred; should have been played just as Ince wanted it; $2,300.

Shubert—"Wings" (Par) ($1-$1.50). First showing here of air super, and the Sunday night premiere had turnaways; papers played picture up and business held nicely for nights; afternoons off; held for the second week; $15,200.

PATIO LAMAZE

The world's most unique restaurant.

Acclaimed sensation of Palm Beach.

Valencia, Madrid, the Riveria, too, hardly encompass the atmosphere that George Lamaze, the well-known restaurateur of New York, has introduced in his already famous Patio.

"JAZZ SINGER" GOT $8,600 IN PROV.—H. O.

First Time in Months Majestic Got Break in Good Bills—Money Against Opposish

Providence, Feb. 18.

(Drawing Pop., 300,000)

Good weather and some first rate offerings found everybody happy last week. Despite the hole that the Opera House made in the movie possibilities with "Good News" storming the city at $3.85 top, the screen held its own with excellent bookings at nearly every house.

The Carlton held its breath after giving up its vaude policy and turning to two-change-a-week movies. The week was small in gross, but the educational work set in to open the switchover was more than satisfactory. Majestic killed them with Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," and for the first time in months the house scored a total that warranted a holdover.

Uptown went back to sensational gross with a second run combination of "Helen of Troy," "What Price Glory" and "Saint Elmo," along with some attendant publicity gathered in by a benefit for the widows of two slain policemen.

Estimates for Last Week

Strand (Ind) (2,200; 15-50)—"Beau Sabreur" (Par) and "Light in Window" (RA). Nothing extra; too much opposish; $7,750.

Majestic (Fay) (2,500; 10-60)—"Jazz Singer" hit; held over; best yet at about $8,600.

Carlton (Fay) (1,474; 10-35)—"Satan and Woman" (Cons) and "Blood Will Tell" (Fox) first half; "Return of Boston Blackie" (FD) second half. Drop in price and new policy turned in about $2,700.

Fay's (2,000; 15-50)—"Mystery Ship" (Col) and good vaude. Better break in vaude days since Carlton quit acts. About $5,500.

Uptown (Ind) (1,492; 15-35)—"What Price Glory" (Fox) and "French Dressing" (FN) first half; "St. Elmo" (Fox), with "Helen of Troy" (FN) close of week. Second run excellent gross at $2,500.

Rialto (Fay) (1,448; 10-25)—Second showing, downtown house gathering overflows for $1,450.

Opera House (Wendelschaefer)—"Good News" lived up to rep and varsitied about $15,000.

"ENEMY" COULD NOT BETTER $24,100 IN ST.L.

St. Louis, Feb. 28.

(Drawing Population, 1,000,000)

Harold Bell Wright's "Shepherd of the Hills," at the Ambassador last week, proved popular with St. Louisians, probably because of its locale, the Ozark Mountains of Missouri.

Estimates for Last Week

Missouri (Skouras) (3,800; 35-65). "Feel My Pulse" (Par). On the stage, an elaborate and colorful presentation, "As You Like It," and most every one did; $22,500.

Loew's State (3,400; 35-65). "The Enemy" (M-G), Lillian Gish's latest, lacked properties to make it her greatest; $24,100.

Grand Central (Skouras) (1,700; 50-75). "Jazz Singer" and Vita (W. B.). In ninth week, but still doing fairly well; $7,600.

Ambassador (Skouras) (3,000; 35-65). "Shepherd of the Hills" (F. N.). Film okay and with Ed Lowry on stage; $24,700.

St. Louis (4,280; 35-65). "The Night Flyer," with William Body and Johyna Ralston; vaudeville headliner was Mexican Typica Orchestra.

Orpheum (2,200; 15-25-35-50-65). "That Certain Thing" and vaude.

Capitol (Skouras). "Pitfalls of Passion" played its third and last week for men only; this week starts for women only.

MINN. UP, THEN DOWN; STATE DIVES $15,000

Chaney's Weak Spot, $10,500—No 2d Wk. for 'Ironsides'—'Coney Island' Okay

Minneapolis, Feb. 28.

(Drawing Population, 470,000)

It was too good to last. After a week of record grosses all along the line the bottom again dropped out. Adverse weather and comparatively weak attractions helped the patronage retreat.

Week started with a blizzard, a below-zero temperature and wound up similarly. A moderately pleasant Washington's Birthday was a life-saver.

"Old Ironsides" proved a distinct disappointment at the Garrick. Exploited heavily, it did only what might be described as moderately good business. Another picture that received a slap from the critics was "London After Midnight" at the State. House tumble over $15,000 from the previous record week for "The Jazz Singer." One week was evidently enough for "The Last Command." Last seven days of the fortnight run were not good.

With the young Foys cancelled at the last moment because of their father's death, and with nothing in the way of a vaude name or screen offering that meant b. o., Hennepin-Orpheum, in the last week of its reserved seat policy, took the beating it might have expected. Show and picture were mediocre, which made matters worse. Drop from the previous week amounted to fully $5,000.

"Come To My House" at Pantages, showed box office value and as a result theatre suffered less than the others and enjoyed fair trade. The Lyric and Grand also had exceptionally strong offerings in "On Your Toes" and "The Magic Flame" (second loop run), respectively, and did normal business. Reg. Denny pictures used to go into the 60 cent State, ace F. & R. house, but the 35 cent Lyric has been getting the recent ones.

Estimates For Last Week

State (F. & R.) (2,500; 60) "London After Midnight" (M. G.). Vitaphone and organ presentation. Picture panned by critics and not well liked by patrons; show on whole pleasing, but held nothing special as a lure to crowds; Chaney not as much of a card here; about $10,500, bad.

Garrick (F. & R.) (2,000; 60) "Old Ironsides" (Par.). Two weeks confidently expected for this one, but returns not strong enough to warrant retention; critics didn't treat it any too well, but patrons seemed satisfied; $9,500 profitable but not a real draw.

Strand (1,500; 50) "The Last Command" (Par.) (2d week). Jannings had critics waxing enthusiastic and town talking, but after a fine first week picture nose-dived; around $4,800.

Lyric (1,350; 35) "On Your Toes" (U). Reg. Denny has fair following here; picture well liked; around $2,500, good.

Grand (1,100; 25) "The Magic Flame" (U. A.). Second loop run and trade close to normal; $700.

Hennepin-Orpheum (2,800; 50-75) "The Missing Link" (W. B.) and vaude. Neither Syd Chaplin film nor stage helped box office; quality of show below par and takings smallest in some time; around $9,700.

Pantages (1,650; 50) "Come To My House" (Fox) and vaude. Picture accounted for draw, good under circumstances; Olive Borden a card here; about $6,000.

Seventh Street (1,480; 40) "Coney Island" (F. B. O.) and vaude. Picture much better than house usually offers; good show and satisfactory returns; $5,000.

CAREWE'S OPERATION

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

One-Eye Connolly may rate as a champion gate crasher, but he can't keep out the crashers.

Four weeks ago Connolly was dolled up in a uniform and put on the Fox studio gate. Too many people got by him and he was taken off the job last week.

342 INDIE FILMS FOR 28-29

$5,000,000 TIED UP IN DEAD STORY MATERIAL ON COAST

$10,000,000 Annually Invested by Studios for Scripts —Producers Becoming More Conservative— Want Originals from Trained Writers

Los Ange'~~ Feb. 28.

Picture producers have more than $5,000,000 tied up in story material, the bulk of which, for a number of reasons, will never reach the screen. In addition to this, there is considerable money invested by individual directors, stars, small independent producers and play brokers who have purchased outright, or have taken options on screen rights, to published works, originals and stage plays.

If all money now tied up in screen rights were loaned out at six per cent., the revenue to be derived would be astounding. Yet, in the subsequent use of a story, interest on the investment, or cost of that particular story, is seldom thought of in fixing the story charge to the production.

Film $25,000 12 Years Ago

As an instance, one film producer purchased the rights to a well-known stage melodrama about 12 years ago for $25,000. After many treatments and as many conferences, it was decided the script was unsuitable because of its underworld background. Consequently, the play was shelved, only to be revived this year when the underworld type of picture came into demand. When the price of the story was charged off to production, the producer failed to add the interest of the original cost, which would have amounted to $18,000, or a total of $43,000 for the rights. Proving that stories in stock are a liability and depreciate in value the same as any piece of machinery.

Only in rare cases does a recognized story increase in value after its peak of popularity has been reached. So, considering an approximate total of $10,000,000 invested annually in story material, a loss of $600,000 over the same period is affected by this investment.

Feared Pop Story Shortage

Years ago when the picture business became alarmed over a visionary shortage of popular works, many producers plunged into the market and gobbled up all available works outright or at option. After the storm, many found that what they had purchased did not conform with the ever-changing cycle of public demand, causing stories to be shelved until such time as they would be more suitable for production.

Paramount and M-G-M are believed to be the largest holders of dead stories First National, Pathe-DeMille and Universal follow, while Fox, rated as the most conservative story buyer, is holding the least amount of dead stories in comparison to their volume of production. Joseph M. Schenck is possibly the largest individual holder of stories and will, in time, produce them or sell at bargain prices to other producers.

Producers are becoming more conservative. They are demanding originals from trained screen writers assigned to do a certain type to fit the producer's immediate need. These stories are not the work of one writer, but often come from a staff working with the director.

WAMPAS GETS $5,400 FROM FROLIC IN L. A.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Wampas Frolic, in the Ambassador Auditorium, Feb. 25, grossed only $23,000 with expenses $14,000 The Wampas share of the $9,000 net was $5,400 with the Motion Picture Relief Fund beneficiary of the remaining $3,600. As result of the poor biz it is expected the Frolic of 1929 will be in San Francisco.

The 13 new Baby stars of 1928 were officially presented to the people of Los Angeles at the event. They are Gwen Lee, Lina Basquette, Lupe Velez, Ruth Taylor, Molly O'Day Sue Carol, Alice Day, Sally Eilers, June Collyer, Flora Bramley, Dorothy Gulliver, Audrey Ferris and Ann Christy.

An all-star entertainment was put on under the direction of John Le Roy Johnson, with Leo Forbstein, musical conductor at the Million Dollar, functioning in the pit. Forbstein also directed four orchestras which provided the music for the dancing.

The proceeds of the frolic this year are divided so that 40 percent goes to the Motion Picture Relief Fund of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, with the balance used for the insurance fund of the Wampas, which allows $1,000 free insurance a year for each year that a man has been a member of the organization up to a maximum of $7,000. The Wampas has 120 active members who participate in the insurance plan.

Ray Davidson was in charge of the business administration of the Frolic, with Sam W. B. Cohen in charge of the publicity. Besides them, the committee in charge of the event were Ray Coffin, president; Harold Hurley, Joe Sherman, Joe Steele, Howard Strickling and Mark Larkin, who was general chairman of the event.

Larkin will be elected president of the Wampas at its meeting this week, as his candidacy is unopposed.

Grandmother's 2d Protest Of June Mathis' Will

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

The will of June Mathis, scenario writer, who died suddenly in a New York theatre last year, is again being protested here by her grandmother, Mrs. Millie Hawkes. According to the will, the grandmother was to receive a life interest in half of the estate, more than $100,000, the other half going to the girl's husband, Silvano Balboni. The latter offered the will for probate, but the grandmother contested it, desiring to inherit outright instead of on a life interest.

Court set aside the will and informed Mrs. Hawkes that under the inheritance laws Balboni would receive everything. Now, Mrs. Hawkes has filed a petition asking that the will be reinstated and admitted to probate. Judge Crail, in Probate Court, set a hearing for March 23. Meanwhile, Mrs. Hawkes is being taken care of by Balboni.

U. A. Studios Re-Start

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

United Artists studios intend to resume general production March 1, with Norma Talmadge starting on "The Woman Disputed," Henry King directing.

Following will be the new D. W. Griffith picture, "Battle of the Sexes," scheduled for March 15, with a possible cast of Jean Hersholt, Belle Bennett, Mary Philbin and Phyllis Haver.

PRODUCERS HAVE IMPOSING LIST

More Than in 8 Yrs.—FBO Leads With 56—Columbia and Tiff.-Stahl Each 36—Gotham 30—General Belief Is Cruze Will Help —Raising Production Cost

SIXTEEN AT $100,000

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

More pictures, and of a better grade, will be made for next season release through the independent market. Present indications point to more releases slated for the independents than at any time during the past eight years.

Independent producers and distributors are busy lining up deals for the coming season, with all practically figuring on raising production cost to meet the demand for films that can hit the secondary first runs in the large cities.

Invasion of the independent field by James Cruze has some of the boys worried, but the majority feel his entrance into the independent market will help bring that branch of the business back to the place it belongs. Cruze will make 20 pictures a year for five years and will personally direct four of these at a production outlay of $100,000 each. The other 16 pictures will be supervised by Cruze and will run around $50,000 each.

Cruze's Exchange Deal

The Cruze deal with independent exchanges provides for a substantial cash deposit upon signing of contract, and cash advances on each picture as delivered by the producer to the exchange. The contract further provides that the producer cannot cancel the contract with the exchange unless the latter is in default on the contract, with all exchange deals covering a period of five years.

The exchange, however, has the privilege of cancelling the deal by giving 90 days' notice to the producer. Harry Sherman is handling distribution for Cruze and has already signed contracts with three territories, although a general campaign has not yet been launched.

The Lineup

Columbia Pictures and Tiffany-Stahl, both graduating from the state right market because of their control of all exchanges, are each listing 36 pictures for next season. Columbia's average production cost per picture is about $30,000, while Tiffany-Stahl will make 'em for about $50,000, with perhaps 12 of the program listed as specials and going to $100,000. FBO is not definitely set on quantity but will likely produce its usual 56 at an average production cost of $45,000.

Gotham, headed by Sam Sax, leads the list of the strictly independent producers and distributors.

Fay Wray in Court Over Agent's 25 Pct.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Fay Wray is playing a big court scene this week before Judge Warne. Miss Wray declares excessive and wants voided her present arrangement with Edna Schley, casting agent, who has been receiving 25 per cent of the film actress' salary.

The contract between Miss Wray and Miss Schley was signed in 1926 when the former was under contract to Universal. Since then Miss Wray has played the lead in Eric Von Stroheim's "Wedding March," with Pat Powers, sponsor of that lengthy effort, transferring his contract with her to Paramount. Miss Wray started at $500 a week, with a $250 increase on each picture.

She is now receiving $1,250 weekly and wants to be freed of the 25 per cent commission angle under her five-year contract with Miss Schley.

Ind. Films by Cost

Number of independent films as scheduled by count and cost for 1929 is as follows:

$100,000	16
75,000	24
50,000	40
45,000	56
30,000	36
15,000	20
25,000 to $50,000	30

This list totals 222 of what may be termed "high cost" pictures with the "low cost" tabulation, not listed in this box, figuring 88. The remainmaining 32 films to be accounted for in the full 342 are of miscellaneous production cost with no figures announced.

RAYART'S 20 FEATURES; NO WESTERNS, NO SHORT

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Ray Johnston, president of the Rayart Pictures, is on the coast making final arrangements for next season's program. It will include 20 features, eight from stories, eight from originals, and four specials that will have unusual exploitation value.

Rayart will not release any westerns or short subjects on their 1928-29 program.

Trem Carr has been appointed to act as supervisor of the new season's product with Percy Pembrooke, Duke Worne and Harry J. Brown directing. Production headquarters at California studios.

Request Release Given Girl Who Played Russian

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Pathe-DeMille has released Sonia Karlov from her stock contract. Miss Karlov has been idle and under salary since Dec. 1.

This is the girl who assumed the Russian cogomen accent and appearance after being unable to crash pictures under her real name of Jean Williams. She was placed under contract by Felix Young, picture agent, at the time, and the latter, unaware of the masquerade, sold her on contract to Cecil DeMille. When Lina Basquette recognized her as Jean Williams, former "Follies" girl, Miss Karlov revealed her true identity to DeMille, who laughed at the gag she had put over.

When the publicity broke about the masquerade, the film company did not take advantage of it by casting her in a picture. After a number of weeks Young asked for her release, claiming she should not be kept off the screen indefinitely.

PICTURE'S 2D DEATH

Rudolph Berquist, Cameraman, Killed in Auto Smash

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Rudolph Berquist, 42, cameraman with Fox for years, was killed in an automobile collision at Santa Monica boulevard and Palm drive. He was rushed to the Good Samaritan Hospital, where he died.

Berquist was working as chief cameraman with Arthur Rosson on Madge Bellamy's current film, "The Sport Girl," at the time of the accident. He was driving in a studio car with William Pummell, assistant director to Rosson, when the crash occurred. He leaves a wife and three children.

This is the second death which has happened on this picture. A week ago Rosson lost an electrician who was killed in a fall from a set.

DANE'S NAME AND PAPERS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Rasmus Karl Thekelsen Gottlieb, otherwise known as Karl Dane, has filed application for citizenship in this country.

At the same time he was given permission by the U. S. District Court to use his film name for all purposes.

KYNE STORY STOPPED BEFORE TOO LATE

Al Rogell Advises M-G-M Censorship Dangers in "Tide of Empire"

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Running afoul of censorship conditions, M.-G.-M., after putting three days on "Tide of Empire," a Peter B. Kyne story, suspended production after an expenditure of around $15,000.

Before the picture was put into production Al Rogell directing, informed the M.-G.-M. officials that the story might be distasteful to the Spaniards and Mexicans, as it was a yarn dealing with the hate o' these two countries for the Americans. It is a story of early California and several of the characters in it were Spanish menaces. Rogell, however, was instructed to proceed shooting the picture.

With the daily reports which reached Louis B. Mayer and Hunt Stromberg after three days of shooting, it was decided M.-G.-M. might save themselves several hundred thousand dollars by discontinuing the production, as it had had experiences with other pictures which had run afoul of censorship methods with four reported to be on the shelf and impossible to distribute.

Rogell had been borrowed for six weeks from Charles Rogers at First National and will be unable to direct the picture when it is resumed, as the story is being rewritten by Paul Bern, Waldemar Young, Rogell and E. Richard Schayer.

Rogell will stay for the balance of the three weeks on his contract working on the story and then return to the Rogers organization, for which he is to make a picture immediately.

Joan Crawford and Norman Kerry were playing the leads in the picture. Miss Crawford has been withdrawn and will start in "The Dancing Girl," Harry Beaumont directing. Kerry will continue when the new picture is begun about April 15. The balance of the cast were paid off and dismissed.

Allan Dwan, who has been with Allan Kane, will direct the new version.

Mrs. Larry Semon Wins Suit Against Her Father

Kansas City, Feb. 28.

Jury in the circuit court at Sedalia, Mo., awarded $7,500 to Dorothy Dawn, wife of Larry Semon in a suit on a note against her father, Melvin Ilgenfritz, formerly of Sedalia, but now living in Houston, Tex. The legal action was peculiar in that the note was given in 1911 when the actress was a minor.

It was contended by Miss Dawn and her mother, Mrs. Nancy Dorothy Smith, of Los Angeles, that the note was given in a separation agreement between the defendant and his former wife for which he was to be relieved of the support of his wife and child. His defense was that the note was given Dorothy through her mother to take care of her education. He said he had not the money at the time, but wanted to see the girl was properly educated. He had never made payments on the note, he said, because he was never able.

Statute of limitations does not affect a minor, and the suit was brought by Mrs. Semon as soon as she became of age.

FEDERAL ACTION MAY BE TAKEN AS OUTCOME OF CHICAGO LOCKOUT

Department of Justice Reported Having Completed Investigation—Violation of Sherman Anti-Trust Law May Be Charged—Chi Film Board Refused Local Exchanges Permission to Furnish Indies With Pictures, Obliging Houses to Close

Washington, Feb. 28.

Department of Justice is set to take action on the Chicago exhibitors' strike, and the refusal to sell films to the houses not participating, it is said, for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Col. William J. Donovan, assistant to the Attorney General, is, and has been for several days, out of town. It is known that he has conducted an extensive investigation of the Chicago affair.

With the Chicago Film Board of Trade alleged to be implicated to the extent of issuing the order to withhold films to those not participating in the strike, a tie-up is seen between this phase and the sudden decision of the Senate interstate commerce committee to start hearings on the Brookhart bill aimed to stop block booking and to investigate the entire industry, as Senator Brookhart has stated.

Rushed Hearings

Decision to open hearings here yesterday (Monday) was reached two days previously, hardly time enough for notifications to be sent out. Those close to Mr. Brookhart say this sudden rush was to get the hearings over, if possible, before action was taken by the Department of Justice.

Strike a Lockout

The Chicago strike of late last summer was more properly a lockout. It was instigated by the Orpheum Circuit in Chicago, fell in with by some of the local picture managements, and resulted in a complete rout of the managers. It was claimed as the most decisive victory for union labor in this country for years.

During the period of the lockout independent picture houses in Chicago wishing to remain open for business found themselves unable to secure films. This inability was said to have been through an order of the Chicago Film Board to exchanges not to supply any theatres with reels.

It is this latter phase which has been under investigation by the Department of Justice.

Dolores Del Rio Wins Cup; Gives Dir. Credit

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Dolores Del Rio, a Wampas Baby star in 1926, won the Wampas achievement cup at the Annual Wampas Frolic. Trophy was awarded Miss Del Rio for having accomplished the most in films during 1925 and 1926.

Votes were cast by the public during a 30-day radio broadcasting questionnaire, with more than 20,000 film fans in on the poll. There were 26 contestants in the race.

In accepting the cup, Miss Del Rio gave credit to Edwin Carewe, her producer, manager and director, as being responsible for her success.

Fox's Social Party

A most enjoyable film affair was held by the Fox Athletic Club in the Roosevelt Hotel Saturday night. Features were the "Fox Snooze," conceived and produced by Truman H. Talley, and "Cut It Out," stage panorama of music, songs and dances.

About 2,500 were present.

SITTING OUT CONTRACT

E. C. King Drawing $1,000 Weekly at FBO as Others Perform Duties

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Edwin C. King, vice-president and in charge of technical production at FBO, is said to be sitting out the balance of a one-year contract at $1,000 weekly, following his refusal to take a settlement. King was originally brought here two years ago.

About a year ago, William LeBaron came to the Coast, was made vice-president in charge of production, with King having his duties transferred to business administration. Three months ago Charlie Sullivan was brought here and shortly afterward elected vice-president, taking over the business duties of the studio. It was figured at the time that if King would waive his contract, Sullivan would be elected as vice-president in his place. When King balked, Sullivan was given the third vice-presidentship and is now functioning as business head.

DeMille Buys Contracts; Josephson Quits March 1

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

DeMille studio is endeavoring to diminish the number of contract writers and executives. In many instances the firm has been buying up contracts.

Julian Josephson, considered this lot's star scenarist, leaves March 1, having taken a settlement on his agreement which had eight months to run. He will free lance.

Goodman's 16 Westerns

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Barney Goodman, independent producer, will make two series of westerns, eight in each, for state rights.

Goodman just finished a series and is returning from New York where he completed arrangements to make the additionals.

He will use the California studios as his producing headquarters.

STUDIO PAINTER'S SUICIDE

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Paul J. Turner, 32, former studio painter at FBO, committed suicide by jumping from the 10th floor of the Guaranty Building in Hollywood.

Turner was recently discharged at the studio and according to police reports had not been working since. A widow and four-year-old son survive.

CAMERA DELEGATES

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Joseph Dubray and Charles Rosher will represent the American Society of Cinematographers at the 46th annual convention of the Photographic Association of America at Louisville, Ky.

Dubray and Rosher will carry various picture camera equipment to demonstrate various phases of photography.

TALLY IN EUROPE

Truman Tally, editor of Fox News and Varieties, goes abroad March 10, but on which ship he has yet to decide.

Tally will be gone eight weeks, during which time he will visit Fox cameramen and make changes in routine. He will cover the entire Continent while away.

In his absence J. E. Durst associate director, will supervise the Fox news and shorts.

HERBERT HALE WRITING

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Herbert Hale, for a number of years with Sam H. Harris in New York, has established himself here as a comedy material writer.

He is specializing on stuff for picture people making personal appearances in vaudeville houses.

U Studio Cut Includes Laemmle's Relatives

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

With shutdown and economic moves at Universal, Henry Henigson, general manager, and Walter Stern have been cutting the payroll to a minimum. This is being done under Carl Laemmle's instructions and three of the latter's nephews have been dropped.

Julius Bernheim, who has been production manager of several units, and was general manager of the studio at one time, is off the payroll. The other two nephews are Bob and Gaston Wyler, both assistant directors.

Other relatives of Laemmle have been given four to five week layoffs during the shutdown, and are to return at less salary when the studio reopens.

Universal has been decreasing its staff in New York and will discontinue its road show department this Saturday.

Studio in Confusion As Lawler Is Pinched

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

The Paramount lot was thrown into plenty of confusion and excitement when Deputy J. B. Kelly came for Harry Lawler, reader with Paramount, wanted on a fugitive warrant. Kelly spotted his man in a corner of the studio and started for him as Lawlor made a desperate dive through a plate glass window of one of the offices.

The sheriff in pursuit opened fire with his gun into the air in an effort to stop Lawlor.

Everyone on the scene began to dodge and run and a near riot was on.

When the excitement subsided and Lawlor was safe in the hands of the officer, the latter explained that Lawlor was charged with having jumped a $1,000 bond in connection with a forgery count.

Lawlor had obtained his position on the recommendation of a state official at the studio.

Conway's Titling Work

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Jack Conway, formerly of Variety, has been quite busy lately titling pictures.

He is just finishing "Honor Bound" for Fox and next week will go over to the FBO lot to title two more. His first one will be "Sally of the Scandals," featuring Bessie Love, and the next, "Backstage," Ralph Ince production, formerly called "Notices."

"Backstage" is probably but the working title, as a picture under that name is now on release by Tiffany.

MET STUDIO'S INDIES

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Metropolitan studios, now leased by Pathe, is being diverted into a regulation leasing plant for independent producers. Two companies have just completed the usual seven-day variety productions at this studio, and three more indie companies are now negotiating for space.

This in addition to James Cruze, believed to start soon on a series of state right features.

LANGDON ON F. N. LOT

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Harry Langdon will make his next picture on the First National lot. He had practically completed negotiations to move over to Metropolitan studios.

Langdon figured he could save on production cost by moving, but received price concessions from Richard Rowland, of F. N., to stay in the home yard.

YOUNG LAEMMLE'S INVENTION

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has invented a device to carry regulation picture cameras through difficult spaces and record scenes from any angle desired.

It is an improvement over the present day cumbersome camera trucks and trolleys used to obtain freak shots.

Nationality Films Growing

Moving pictures by, with, and for different nationalities appears to be a new development. Within the last couple of weeks two companies have been in production in New York, one by an Italian group, another by a Greek unit.

In both cases the principal figure has been promoter, producer, director, scenarist and star. Ercole Montagna, president of the Riviera Film Corp., appeared in "A Boy of New York" as his own star under the name of Bruno Vallety, and Paul Tellegan, president of Paul Tellegan Productions, is now shooting at Cosmopolitan studio a Greek picture based on the Pygmalion legend. Tellegan, like Montagna of the Italian group, is an ex-performer from vaudeville, new to the picture game.

It appears the nationality propositions are put over with the cooperation of the foreign language press, the capital and screen aspirants coming from the readers thereof. The matter of distribution of the completed negative is rather hazy.

JACK WARNER QUITTING?

Turning Over Production to Zanuck —Vita Has "Nanette"

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

With the announcement in local papers that Darryl Zanuck is now general manager of Warner Brothers studios, reports are current that Jack Warner, who has been executive head of W. B. out here, is retiring as a picture producer. Zanuck, former scenario writer on this lot, was appointed assistant to Jack Warner about a year ago.

It is understood that Jack Warner wants to be relieved of production duties and is turning the studio over to Zanuck to operate. Warner, just returned from Europe, announces arrangements to have three picture made in both England and Germany to comply with the quota and also that he has bought Vitaphone rights for "No, No, Nanette."

Charles Bros. Pictures

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

M. N. Charles and John M. Charles have organized an independent producing concern to be known as Charles Bros. Pictures.

They will make a series of six features for the state-rights market, with headquarters at the Metropolitan studios. First two to go into production will be "Flapper Ann," by Cora Harris, and "Four Bells," by Charles D. Payne. Bruce Mitchell will direct, starting March 5.

First "Gag" Woman

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

William DeMille has engaged Beth Brown to act as gag woman on "Tenth Avenue," which he is directing for Pathe-DeMille.

Miss Brown is the first woman to be engaged solely for suggesting gags and comedy for a picture while in the making. She was formerly a "Follies" girl.

3RD TITLE CHANGE

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Title on Milton Sills' present picture for First National has been changed for the third time. First it was "The Hawk," then "Night Birds." Now it's called "The Hawk's Nest."

Production has just started under direction of Benjamin Christensen.

MANKIE'S NEW CONTRACT

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Herman Mankiewicz, head of Paramount Author's Council, will remain with the organization for another three years.

Company insisted that Mankiewicz take an extra three-year contract instead of permitting them to exercise options on his services every six months as they do with other title writers.

ONLY TWO INTERIORS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Konrad Vercovici, Gypsy novelist and author of "The Bear Tamer's Daughter," Edwin Carewe's next for United Artists, may come here from New York while the picture is being made. According to the script, there will be only two interiors in the entire production.

Directors' Association Officers

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Officers of the Motion Picture Directors' Association for the ensuing year are Henry Otto, director; James Horne, assistant director; Fred Niemeyer, technical; Frank Cooley, treasurer; Francis Powers, secretary; Reginald Barker, William Beaudine, J. Reeves Eason, Phillip Rosen, Roy Clements, George Irving and Nerville MacGregor, trustees.

PUBLISHERS AFTER FILM NOVEL RIGHTS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Alexander Grosset, senior member of Grosset and Dunlap, publishers, New York, is here negotiating with picture producers for novelization rights to coming road show attractions.

Henry McMahon, publicity director for Pathe-De Mille, is the author of three such screen novels published by Grosset and Dunlap. These are "Orphans of the Storm," "Ten Commandments" and "King of Kings."

Average sale in America of a novel adapted from a picture is quoted as from 30,000 to 50,000, but "Ten Commandments" has exceeded the 200,000 mark. This has convinced the publishers that the demand for such literature is climbing, possibly accounted for by improved methods of distribution. Heretofore, distribution of screen novels were confined to book stories, but since the larger chain drug and department stores have started to handle the new form of novels, sales have increased more than 150 percent. Special exploitation by the film producers and publishers, when the particular picture is being played in the store's town, has done its share to help.

Two ways for a producer to cash in on national distribution of a screen novel. One is the exploitation tieup and the other a three-way royalty on the sales of the book, the other two parts of the royalties being divided between publisher and author.

Foreign rights to screen novels are sold outright between publishers with the provision that a small royalty be paid only to the author.

Fox Releases Rex King But Holds Onto Name

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

The big fuss Fox made over its successor to Tom Mix has ended up as a flop. Rex King, a young cowboy whom they backed as surefire for a series of westerns, was released after four days' work on a picture to have been known as "Wild West Romance." After $6,000 had been spent on production it was decided to scrap the film and look around for another cowboy.

This new cowboy will also be given the working name of Rex King. R. L. Hough was directing the picture which was scrapped.

Technicolor's Own Films

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Technical Pictures Corp. plans production of feature pictures in Technicolor on their own, and is now searching for suitable story material.

The company has been making two series of color short subjects for national distributors.

The short subjects will be continued when the feature program is launched.

HONEYMOON ACCIDENT

San Diego, Feb. 28.

Leon D'Usseau, superintendent of production at F.B.O. studios, and his bride were severely cut and injured in an automobile accident here Sunday afternoon. They are confined to the Scripps Memorial Hospital at Lajolla. They will recover.

Accident was the climax to a week's honeymoon trip.

List of Canadian Houses

Washington, Feb. 28.

Department of Commerce now has list of motion picture theatres in Canada.

Code number is BE-1380. List may be secured by addressing the department and referring to that number.

PARAMOUNT HARD HIT BY INDE EXHIBS, $337,000 ANTI-TRUST VERDICT IN TEX.

Case Tried for Four Days Before Jury in Federal Court in Dallas—Stinnett and Charninsky Alleged Put Out of Business by Paramount's Methods—Asked $450,000 Damages—Appeal Expected—First "Trust" Trial Judgment of Kind

Dallas, Feb. 28.

A jury before Justice F. O. McKinsey, in the federal court here, 95th district, returned in less than an hour after a 4-day trial a verdict of $337,500 in favor of Ray Stinnett and Si Charninsky, local indie picture exhibitors, against Famous Players-Lasky (Paramount), in an action brought by the exhibs last February, under the Anti-Trust law. The plaintiffs alleged they had been forced out of the exhibiting business by the methods of the producer and distributor.

Though the defendants were represented by counsel, no defense was submitted. Defendants' lawyers placed all of their lengthy arguments upon an attempt to reduce the exemplary damage, including the lost profit plaintiffs claimed.

Exhibitor-witnesses testified they also had suffered through the restraint of trade practiced by F-P-L, and were unable to secure first-run pictures. The plaintiffs stated a combination headed by Paramount had been created against them, crushing them in business in every way, with this claim dating back, from their testimony, to the time Harold B. Franklin was at the head of the Famous Players' theatre department. Correspondence was introduced written by Franklin to various people.

John Moroney was the attorney for the successful exhibitors. He is the lawyer who won for another exhibitor in Austin, Tex., about a year ago in an oppression suit.

It is expected that Paramount will appeal. The full amount of damages demanded, $150,000, was allowed with the exemplary damage cut from $300,000 to $187,500.

Sweeping Effect

This is the first open court anti-trust decision gained against Paramount-Famous Players. Its effect is anticipated to be sweeping, especially if the verdict is upheld on appeal. Local attorneys who watched the trial seem agreed the judgment will stand.

Plaintiffs conclusively proved they were forced out of business at their Capitol theatre by the methods of Paramount, and the witnesses substantiated the claim of a combination formed against them by Paramount to prevent the Capitol securing first runs and other attractions. It eventually forced Stinnett and Charninsky to sell their theatre.

Witness after witness called by the plaintiffs testified to the inability of the independent exhibitor to secure new or first-run films.

Should the final result of the suit open the picture market to independent exhibs, say Stinnett and Charninsky, they will build a 2,500-seater in this city and resume business.

The Boss Case

The last recorded "trust" damage action brought against Paramount was known as "The Boss Case," with an exhibitor, "Boss of Oklahoma," starting it in that state.

As it approached a trial date about two years ago, a settlement was reported in Variety, with Boss reputed to have received $90,000 in cash from Paramount. That report was not denied at the time, with the understanding it had been a pledged settlement—none of the parties to reveal it, Variety's information was most reliable.

The successful counsel, John Moroney, impersonally speaking after the verdict, said:

Testimony

"It was proved that in the summer of 1924 and since that time the Paramount theatres in Dallas have tied up most of the leading pictures available for first run in Dallas, either by contracting for them or by stalling the film exchanges along until the pictures became old and lost a large part of their exhibition value. That left the independent theatres without first-class product, although the number of films tied up by Paramount theatres was much more than they could use or expected to use.

"The entire nature of the film business was developed, including the Hays organization and the film boards of trade, so that the court and jury could understand the facts shown in connection with the plaintiffs' case.

"Defendants were the Paramount Exchange here and several subsidiary corporations which operate the Paramount theatres in Dallas.

"It was brought out that in March, 1925, Franklin wrote a letter to the plaintiffs in which he said that he understood they were planning to install Pantages vaudeville, and he advised against it, stating if they carried out their intention it would be well to consider the result of a "ruthless, destructive competitive situation"; that in May, 1925, plaintiffs bought five United Artists pictures which Franklin complained about, and that in the summer of 1925 Franklin directly threatened plaintiffs that he would see to it that they got no more good pictures for their theatre.

"It was shown that, on account of these threats and the picture tie-up in execution of them, the plaintiffs were forced to sell their theatre at great sacrifice.

Before and After

Before being molested they were making a net profit of $40,000 a year and had five years to run on their lease.

"Among the witnesses called by plaintiffs were Joe Luckett, of United Artists; L. B. Remy, of Fox; Karl Hoblitzelle, of the Interstate Circuit, and several others on minor points.

"The jury retired for only an hour, in which time they elected a foreman and found for plaintiffs on six special issues and arrived at the damages. It's the largest verdict unliquidated damages ever awarded in this section.

"Illustrating the picture tie-up during these years, it was shown that Franklin bought the Warner block of pictures in the summer of 1924 and never played them, and that a year later he offered them to an independent theatre here. It was also testified to that in some instances films of leading exchanges were tied up and have never seen a first run in Dallas, and that this was a national policy of the Paramount organization."

Bud Barsky May Go Back to Own Films

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Roy Fitzroy, better known to the industry as Bud Barsky, made an agreement with Tiffany-Stahl to produce and supervise six Jack London stories. Four have been made, but the balance was held up by assigning Fitzroy to supervise "House of Scandals," directed by King Baggot and "The Scarlet Dove," now being directed by Arthur Gregor.

In the meantime preparations are being made to film the two remaining London pictures titled "Stormy Waters" and "The Sea." John Adolfi and Edgar Lewis are assigned to direct. Upon their completion, Fitzroy will terminate his present contract with Tiffany-Stahl and possibly return to his old standby as independent producer of state right pictures.

DELAY CORINNE'S "WOMAN"

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Production on "The Divine Woman," Corinne Griffith's next for First National, has been set back to April 1 instead of March 1.

Walter Morosco, husband of Miss Griffith, and who will supervise production, has selected Marie Dressler for a featured role and is making several tests for a male lead. John Seitz, cameraman under contract to M-G, has been borrowed to film the new picture. Frank Lloyd is scheduled to direct.

Geo. O'Hara Filling In

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Hard times in pictures mean nothing to George O'Hara, screen actor. Finding few roles for a leading man at $600 a week, he promoted himself as a scenario writer at M-G-M and is writing the continuity for Lew Cody's untitled film which Mal St. Clair will direct.

O'Hara is getting about $250 a week for the writing job, but he figures that's better than nothing until production starts full force again.

U Puts 'Broadway' and 'Mating Call' on Market

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Universal has placed the picture rights to "Broadway" and "The Mating Call" on the market. U purchased the screen rights to "Broadway" at a reported figure of around $100,000 and planned to make a special at a cost of $500,000. "The Mating Call" is a novel by Rex Beach.

Under the new production plans of Universal no Jewels will be made costing over $60,000, except "Show Boat," which is practically ready for production under direction of Harry Pollard when the studio reopens in April.

SWITCH EVE SOUTHERN

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

After rewriting "The Scarlet Dove" in an effort to create a part for Eve Southern, Tiffany-Stahl abandoned the idea when a better part for their contract player presented itself in "Clothes Make the Woman," an original by Tom Terriss. Latter will both direct and act in the picture.

"Dove" is now in production with Josephine Borio playing the lead, and Arthur Gregor directing.

SIMMONS OFF "TELEGRAPH"

Michael L. Simmons, picture editor of "The Morning Telegraph," is leaving the sheet, to became eastern scenario editor for Gotham and Lumas.

Lon Young, whom Simmons succeeds, is to produce films independently.

U. A.'s Demands May Keep "Circus" from K. C.

Kansas City, Feb. 28.

Unless United Artists makes concessions, or some of the local theatres change policy, there is little chance for "The Circus" being seen here. It is understood the picture will not be released for a showing under two weeks and at a b. o. price of less than 50 cents.

The Midland, which has first call on U. A. product, charges the price required, but shows pictures for a single week only. The other Loew house can hold a picture indefinitely, but has an established top of 35 cents.

"The Circus" was offered the Liberty, which can make its prices fit and run a picture until unconscious, and was just about ready to take it when a guarantee was demanded, and all negotiations were declared off. To date the Chaplin is not set for a local showing.

SAM GOLDWYN'S DENIALS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Sam Goldwyn, whenever leaving the Coast, is always bound to issue what he considers a vigorous denial to any rumor his press agent can think of.

When Goldwyn left here for Europe his press agent sent out a statement which began: "As he boarded the train en route to Europe, Mr. Samuel Goldwyn issued a vigorous denial to a cabled story emanating from London that his two stars, Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, had signed contracts with British film producers."

According to the Goldwyn press agent, the dispatch declared that the Goldwyn players were at the head of a half dozen film celebrities who were deserting Hollywood for British studios, and that Charles Chaplin was among them.

Mr. Goldwyn, noted for his brevity of speech, declares: "If there is any raid, I am not contributing to it."

Goldwyn also in the statement makes it known that Coleman and Banky were unknown when they left England and Hungary, respectively, three years ago, and that he is sending them back to their native countries as famous stars.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

In addition to the present erection of a $250,000 administration building for Samuel Goldwyn on the United Artists lot, a stage with 50,000 square feet of floor space is being built for the exclusive use of the Goldwyn unit.

It will be used to produce six individual Ronald Coleman and Vilma Banky pictures this year.

WEEKLY STUDIO SURVEY CHECKS 43 FILMS

36 Features, 3 Westerns, 5 Comedies, 4 Vita Units —Half Studios Dark

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Studio activity for this week shows 36 features, 2 westerns, 5 short comedies and 4 Vitaphone units in production, and 12 of the 24 studios dark.

Paramount heads the list for activity with seven companies working and five more scheduled to go into production March 5. Pictures now in production at this plant are "She Wouldn't Say Yes," Clarence Badger directing; "Three Sinners," by Rowland V. Lee; "Easy Come, Easy Go," by Frank Tuttle; a George Bancroft picture, Joseph von Sternberg directing; "Quick Lunch," by Charles Reisner; "Super of the Gaiety," by Hobart Henley, and "Gun Shy," by F. Richard Jones.

M-G-M has seven features and one western in production, including "Diamond Handcuffs," John McCarthy directing; "Detectives," by Chester M. Franklin; "He Learned About Women," by Sam Wood; "Polly Preferred," by King Vidor; "Under Southern Skies," by Robert Flaherty; "Man About Town," by Malcolm St. Clair; "Tide of Empire," by Al Rogell, and a Tim McCoy western being directed by Nick Grinde.

Fox has five features and two short comedies in production including "Four Devils," by F. W. Murnau; "Hangman's House," by John Ford; "The Red Dancer from Moscow," by Raoul Walsh; "Thief In the Dark," by Al Ray; "The Sport Girl," by Arthur Rosson, and the two untitled comedies.

Pathe-DeMille has five features in production, one on location in New York. They include "The Godless Girl," by C. B. DeMille; "Tenth Ave.," William DeMille; "Man Made Women," by Paul Stein; "The Last Cab," by William A. Howard, and "The Cop," by Donald Crisp.

First National has three features in production and is preparing to start five more around March 1. Pictures in work are "The Yellow Lily," by Alexander Korda; "The Hawk's Nest," by Benjamin Christensen, and "The Butter and Egg Man," by Richard Wallace.

"Poverty Row"

Columbia, the only active plant on "Poverty row" this week, has the usual quota of three pictures in production including "Broadway Daddies," directed by Fred Windermere; "After the Storm," by George B. Seitz, and "The Desert Bride," directed by Walter Lang.

Warner Brothers has one feature working, with preparations on for a series of five to start March 15. This is in addition to the four Vitaphone units operating all the time.

FBO and Metropolitan studios have but one feature working, "Notices," a Ralph Ince production, at the FBO plant, and "Hell's Angels," a Howard Hughes production, for United Artists release.

Tiffany-Stahl has two features working, including "The Scarlet Dove," directed by Arthur Gregor, and "Ladies of the Night Club," by George Archinbaud.

Universal City is quite dead with a padlock on the front door, but space is being rented out to other companies. Working here are "The Chorus Kid," being directed by Howard Bretherton for Gotham, and "Code of Scarlet," Ken Maynard western, for F. N., with H. J. Brown directing.

Hal Roach studios, the only short comedy producers active at this time, have three subjects in production.

Studios found dark and inactive when this survey was made include Mack Sennett, Christies, Educational, Tec-Art, United Artists, Stern Brothers, Richard Thomas, Mission, Chaplin, U. M. Dailey, Sunset and California.

Bess Meredith's Scenario

Bess Meredith has joined the M-G-M forces and will do a scenario for Fred Niblo's production.

It will be a sea story.

BRONX ARCHITECT OPENING OWN HOUSE—NO ONE WANTS IT

Territory Over-Seated—Avalon, Seating 1,750, held Out Too Long for Bidding—No Bidding Happened After House Was Completed

Admission by theatre operators that the Bronx is becoming over-seated was vouchsafed with reluctance of any to take over the new Avalon, picture house seating 1,750, on Burnside avenue near the Grand Concourse. The house opened Saturday in possession of I. L. Crausman, its architect.

Crausman, who has designed many local picture houses, secured the site some time ago and decided to build himself. Offers were made for the theatre during its construction but Crausman decided to hold off until its completion to let the various circuit operators in the borough bid among themselves.

The house completed, the local theatre operator decided to lay off, figuring Loew's Burnside and the Jerome, Consolidated Amusement Enterprises house, both nearby, too much opposition.

Crausman decided to open it himself and made a deal with the Steiman Bros., who have the Metro, Congress and Daly, for "Sharpshooters," Fox picture, as his opening attraction. Crausman does not yet know where he will get his pictures to keep his new house open, but is more concerned with somebody to take it off his hands.

NO U EXEC. CHANGES

Scenario Dept. Readying 6 Scripts for May 1 Shooting

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Carl Laemmle declares there will be no changes made in the company's present executive presonnel when the studio reopens May 1.

Scenario department, in charge of Edward Montagne, is preparing the following stories with writers and directors assigned: Earl Snell, writing "Blue Heaven"; Nat Ross directing "Grease Paint," is being written by J. Grubb Alexander; Matt Taylor is working with Harry Pollard on "Cohens and Kellys in Turkey," Pollard to direct; Charles Kenyon is adapting "Girl on the Barge," Ed Sloman to direct; Beatrice Van is preparing "Why Announce Your Marriage," no director assigned, and John J. Climber is writing continuity for "The Geezer," William Wyler's second feature for U.

These will all be ready for production May 1.

BROOKHEART HEARINGS ON

tend to bring it into the hearing. Immediately the committee became interested and wanted details but this was postponed at request of Senator Brookhart to enable Mrs. A. E. Kearns, Philadelphia, of the National Conference of Parents and Teachers to appear.

Censorship Out

Testifying as morning session closed, she stated that block booking was the basis of fostering vulgar sex pictures on public. Incidentally Canon Chase, the censorship advocating reformer, put in his appearance though receiving little encouragement as Senator Watson repeatedly told witnesses the question of censorship could not come into the hearings.

Hearing's Opening

High-lighted by a bitter attack on the Department of Justice by Frank Rembusch, of Indiana, and a like scolding of the trade press for "its failure to disseminate real news," from Sidney Samuelson of New Jersey, the independent exhibitors opened their fight yesterday to secure government regulation of the industry through the passage of the Brookhart bill.

Senator Watkins, Ind., chairman of the interstate commerce committee, and two of its members, Couzens, Mich., and Metcalf, R. I. (only three present, though Senator Gooding, Idaho, was present for a few moments), were told by Rembusch that had the independents received a square deal from the department of justice they would not now be asking Congress for help.

Rembusch charged Col. Wm. J. Donovan, assistant to the attorney general, of "sitting on the investigation for five years and doing nothing." He also charged that in "whitewashing" the Film Boards of Trade the department "gave me the greatest shock of my life." To back this up he cited how an investigator named Eugene Martin, after spending months in his territory, had informed him (Rembusch) that the whole thing "was an awful set up." Martin's report, said the witness, was ignored and "he, the agent, was transferred to California."

All of which developed following the presentment by Leo Brecker of New York, of the same charges voiced at the trade conference last October, the same charges as made for several years—the inability of the independent exhibitors to buy choice of pictures and their desire for an open market. Or, as Mr. Rembusch put it, a return to the time "when producers and distributors were not in the exhibiting end."

Senator Couzens brought in the Ford simile that has been cited on previous occasions. The Michigan senator failing to see, and so stating, why a Ford agency could not be taken away by the manufacturer if he desired to open his own agency. It was Brecher's answer to this that developed the monopoly phase with the committee indicating a desire to shift the proceedings to the department of justice, until the charges came from Rembusch against that department.

Samuelson's Open Charge

Samuelson's charge against the trade press came with his assertion that Brecher and Rembusch had overlooked the real issue—the public. He stated that the producers—distributors controlled everything including the trade press with the consequent failure on the part of that press to give any real news.

He failed to amplify on this statement, going directly into another charge against the producers, stating that they "even set the price of admission of his theatre." This immediately got a response from the committee who, demanding proof, were shown contracts with M-G-M for "Ben-Hur" and "The Big Parade" wherein this stipulation was stated to be incorporated.

Senator Brookhart opened the hearings with a statement as to the purposes of the bill. The senator stated he was glad to get the hearing, even if it was on such short notice as to prevent some of his witnesses from being present. Later Senator Watson assured him that though starting without notice the hearings would continue until all estimony was secured.

Senator Brookhart stated that the film industry was controlled by a few men. That these men had eliminated the independent producer and were not out to do likewise with the independent exhibitor.

False Propaganda

It was charged by the senator that much false propaganda had been circulated against his bill. In answer to this he stated that it was not his intention to bring government control or that the federal trade commission, in whose control the bill places the industry, should settle all controversies or that it should set prices. He stated that the sole purpose of the commission would be to act as does the interstate commerce commission, namely, to set standards to be adhered to.

Film boards of trade were characterized as "kangaroo courts" by Senator Brookhart, who added that though three exhibitors were named, the "industry was so dominated by the Hays organization that these exhibitors were hand picked."

Gives Charlie a Ride

He also took Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization, to task for going out into his state and "lining up some 32 exhibitors out of 1,500 and having that small minority adopt a resolution condemning the bill."

Though Senator Watson cited the usual procedure permitting those favoring a measure to appear first, Pettijohn was here permitted to make a statement praising the film boards in which he cited statistics on the results obtained through arbitration. He told Senator Brookhart "he was a better senator than he was a picture man." Pettijohn told of the new contract developed last week in Chicago and filed in the record a "galley proof" of that contract.

He informed the committee that the government should control everything that needs controlling, but that he did not think the picture industry did. He proposed that the committee forget the Brookhart bill, get together with a group from each faction and bring out a remedy, other than gove.nment control, that would adjust their differences. No inclination evidenced from the three senators present to act on the Pettijohn suggestion.

Independents, following the hearing, gave expression to their disapproval of Pettijohn's "maneuvering himself in for a statement before they got their case on the record."

Leo Brecher, who followed, proceeded, as have all others in all previous public airings of the difficulties within the industry, by accusing Pettijohn of "half-truths," and following this up by citing incidents in the statement of the producer's counsel that were "not facts."

Brecher's statements to show the "set ups" in the film boards and the monopoly of pictures to the detriment of the independents led to the series of questions from Senator Couzens that kept the New York exhibitor from following his prepared statement terminating in the Ford analogy. For a time it left the Michigan senator stating his question was not being answered.

Arguing

The old question as to who started the producers into the exhibiting end popped up during Brecher's and Pettijohn's statements, the former claiming the Pettijohn contention that First National started it by the exhibitors combining to make pictures was all wrong, Brecher stating that F. N. was organized to meet the exhibition move of Famous Players (Par).

These controversial points brought an observation from Senator Watkins to the effect that there seemed to be a difference of opinion. Later during the Rembusch statement the senator stated that his interest had been aroused and "that he would like to go over privately with the witnesses several phases of the industry."

This request followed a general discussion of Indiana conditions, from whence hail both the Senator and Rembusch.

Led to the point by Senator Couzens during the monopoly discussion Brecher stated there was "no trust but that the inter-relationship was such that all producers favored the others to the detriment of the independent."

Couzens' Attitude

The questions of Senator Couzens indicated to observers that the biggest task ahead is to convince the committee, who state they know nothing of the picture industry, that that industry is any different than, as the Senator put it, the Ford automobile.

Senator Couzens stated that "he must be dumb as he couldn't see the difference, particularly as his analogy in citing the Ford car was based on the fact that that particular make of car was as much in demand as any picture ever could be."

"Congress," added the Michigan Senator, "could not force Mr. Ford to sell his cars at auction or to a competitor of his own agency, no matter when he established that agency or as to the amount of money that was invested by the competitor should he have formerly even been the agent."

The morning session Monday was terminated at this point.

After a brief statement from Mr. Brecher, when the committee resumed in the afternoon, the monopoly and Department of Justice element developed. This was precipitated by Senator Brookhart informing the committee that though he had requested action by the department, including an opinion on his bill, he had not yet received word from them nor heard of any action. Mr. Rembusch, in opening, likened the present condition "as a civil war within the industry." He characterized the opposing factions in that "civil war" as "the affiliated privileged exhibitor" against the "unaffiliated under-privileged exhibitor."

Starting out to answer the Pettijohn printed "memorandum re Brookhart Bill" Rembusch presented but little of his prepared statement. He did state, however, before interruption by the committee, that though Pettijohn belittled the copyright phase he wished the films weren't copyrighted. "That would be one way out," said Rembusch.

Government Regulation Preferred

Rembusch informed the committee that "government regulation, in fact any kind of regulation, was better than Hays regulation."

He stated that he had informed the Department of Justice that a uniform contract was but the beginning of the monopoly of the industry by the producers-distributors.

This launched his attack on the department and Col. Donovan, during which he stated that he had gone to the office of Mr. Donovan and was there told that "water once gone over the mill stayed over as far as the department was concerned." He added that Col. Donovan had informed him further that the department's investigation was completed and that the producer-distributors were within their rights.

Sidney Samuelson, who followed, was testifying when the committee adjourned, just prior to which adjournment he stated the competition on Broadway was ruining the business for the exhibitor on Main street.

Among the independent exhibitors present at the hearing, in addition to Rembusch, Brecher and Samuelson, were Sol Raives, N. Y.; Fred Wehrenberg, Mo.; Moe Harwitz, G. W. Erdmann and P. J. Wood, all of Ohio; N. Friedberg, Pa., and J. L. Shuiman, Conn.

Donovan's Statement

Questions put to Col. Donovan at the Department of Justice following the hearings as to whether or not he desired to answer Mr. Rembusch brought forth the statement that the department could not touch the case during the five years complained of because it was before the Federal Trade Commission.

Asked for a reply to the Rembusch charge of whitewashing the producers-distributors, Col. Donovan stated that when the Indiana exhibitor came to the department that an attempt to secure facts from Mr. Rembusch brought no results. The Colonel added that all he could get was generalities.

Questioned further as to what official action the department might take on the anti-trust action in Dallas, where a verdict was given Ray Stinnett and Si Charninsky, with damages totaling $337,500, due to the charge that Paramount had put these men out of business, Col. Donovan stated that as yet the case had not come to his attention. He promised a statement after going into it.

He also stated that when the full report on the investigation of the industry now being conducted by the department was in, that he would then act.

Brylawski's Status

Always leaving those of the industry, whenever gathered together, guessing as to his true status, Julian Brylawski still further complicated the situation yesterday at the opening of the hearings on the Brookhart bill to stop block booking.

During the trade conference in New York city last October Mr. Brylawski, affiliated with the producers-distributors through his connection with the Stanley Co., sat with the affiliated group but spoke for the unaffiliated.

Yesterday he sat with neither group but at the press table as representing one of the trade journals.

Brylawski is looked upon as an out and out chain man by the genuine indie exhibs. His associations in a business way run to chain connections.

O'Reilly as Chairman

Charlie O'Reilly, past president of the T. O. C. C., was elected chairman of the Congressional Committee of exhibitors (yesterday) Monday, to represent the independents in the hearing on the Brookhart bill.

National Plan

The Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce has under contemplation a plan to launch a movement for the Brookhart Bill in as many state legislatures as independent exhibitor leaders can be found to cooperate.

If the Brookhart bill is not adopted as a federal regulation, it is thought probable that the independents will carry out their proposed measure.

It seems likely that the bill will first be introduced in the New York state legislature to set an example for exhibitor organizations throughout the country.

$10,000 Fight Rights

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Tom White, former casting agent and now holder of the film location privileges at Catalina Island, paid $10,000 for the picture rights to the fight between George Godfret and Paolino Uzcuden.

If Uzcuden wins, the foreign rights are figured very valuable by White.

DE MILLE'S MODERN YARNS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Lenore Coffee, contract scenario writer for C. B. DeMille, now writing original for DeMille's next special.

DeMille will make two more modern stories following "The Godless Girl" before attempting another period costume picture.

TOUGH TIME WITH STORMS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Production on "Under Southern Skies," now being made by J. R. Fiaherty and W. S. Van Dyke in Tahiti, is reported nearly completed in spite of many tropical storms.

Company left Hollywood early in January and is working under supervision of Hunt Stromberg, who receives a daily report by radio at the M-G studios.

FEBRUARY — A Short Month But Long on Accomplishment

1st —William Fox purchases the motion picture rights to "The River," the new novel by Tristram Tupper, which is proving a "best seller" everywhere.

3rd —With the two tremendous sound-proof Movietone studios nearing completion at Fox Hills, California, Winfield Sheehan announces that J. G. Blystone soon will start work on the first complete audible feature "Mother Knows Best," based on the novel by Edna Ferber.

5th —"Park Row," the new building at the Fox West Coast studios to house directors, authors, scenarists and title writers, is formally dedicated with Will Hays and other notables.

8th —Plans for an international theatre building program announced by Clayton P. Sheehan, foreign manager of Fox Films, on the eve of his departure for South America.

10th —Despite a general curtailment of production throughout the industry eleven companies are working at top speed at the Fox studios turning out big attractions for next season, including F. W. Murnau's "The 4 Devils," Raoul Walsh's "The Red Dancer (of Moscow)," and John Ford's "Hangman's House."

13th —"Four Sons," John Ford's latest road-show special, opens indefinite engagement at the Gaiety Theatre, New York, and settles down to an immediate standing room routine at every showing, making it one of the biggest screen successes in 10 years.

18th —Winfield Sheehan announces the signing of Charles Francis Coe to assist in the direction of his two great stories, "Me—Gangster" and "The River Pirate," just purchased by Fox for next season's release.

20th —William Fox announces record plans for having four $2.00 attractions running simultaneously on Broadway: "Sunrise" at the Times Square, "Four Sons" at the Gaiety, "Mother Machree" at the Globe, and "Street Angel," which will open in March at another legitimate theatre.

22nd —"A Girl in Every Port" Victor McLaglen's first starring vehicle, breaks the world's record for a single day's box office receipts at the Roxy, New York, when it grossed $29,463.00 on Washington's Birthday.

FOX SHARES ATTRACT BULLISH TIMES SQUARE; PATHE LOOKS UP

Usual Film Leaders Lag in Price and Interest—Stanley Makes Stand Against Pressure Close to 50—Bull Outlook for Present Unattractive

In a general market that tended altogether toward bearish views for the immediate future, only two stocks stood out of the dullness over the past week. Spectacular expansion of Fox appealed to players of all sorts in Times Square and downtown. Reports that appeared to have some substance were circulated that new bull lines were being paid out, some of the clique that took part in the last Fox move from 70 up having returned to an aggressive campaign.

The only other development of interest was the improved appearance of Pathe. Possibly Pathe got a play because it was the only one of the amusement group that seemed to have been pretty thoroughly liquidated. In spite of the hard road before it, the issue has been hammered down so drastically that it offers some chance of upturn and its long pull prospects are good. Besides at the level of 12 (it touched 15 yesterday) a long-shot player can't go far wrong.

Kennedy's Influence

The prestige of Joseph P. Kennedy in his association with the concern is a help to Pathe's market position. The Keith connection was always looked upon askance by the wise Broadway insiders. Keith's has never been associated with a winner on the ticker and showmen who play the board never could see any rich advantage in the connection from Pathe's side, particularly on the basis of the vaudeville entrance.

Keith's never handled its own film buying or exhibition with success, and insiders argued that film promotion at the concern's hands would fare no better. With Kennedy at the helm it's different. Kennedy is close to the ground in the movie trade and he has the background of successful operation in FBO.

Over in Philadelphia, Stanley seemed to be looking up. Usual weekly crop of reports about new affiliations and new mergers, none of which was definite enough to have any market weight. But the stock has now apparently discounted anything that is likely to happen. If it isn't likely to get any lower, it ought to stage a recovery, according to the logic of the tape. Anyhow, it was steady at and fractionally below 50, compared to its bottom around 47.

Leaders Lag

In Loew and Paramount there was practically no move. Both stocks have moved up steadily for a considerable period — Loew during the whole "Coolidge market" and Paramount since last August. In the present situation, with business uncertainty ahead and the banking moguls insisting that there must be a credit adjustment in the loan account, the percentage is against any spectacular upturn. This is a condition that continues from day to day. It may change tomorrow or next week.

On the other hand, players on the long side are never disposed to go in for heavy commitments during February and March. Many severe breaks have come in those two months. The traditional season for bullish activity is the old "spring rise," the usual time for which is not far off. The uptown crowd seems to be waiting for the first heralds of that turn, expected with the robins.

Nothing happened in a news way, but developments only went to rather emphasize all the elements against market progress that have become familiar for the past two months, such as unemployment throughout the country, reduction of studio activity on the coast, which may be merely seasonal, but does not look particularly bullish even at that, and, above all, disposition to expect that still further shake-outs are required before the loan total has been readjusted to the satisfaction of the Reserve bank authorities.

NEW CONTRACT CLAUSES

Basically, the new standard exhibition contract, resulting from the session of the representative contract committees at Chicago, remains the same. There are several new provisions but none is enforceable except at the discretion of the boards of arbitration where, the exhibitors claim, their complaints have not been given just treatment in the past.

According to the new agreement, scheduled to be adopted in the trade May 1, 1928, the exhibitor "Shall not be required to accept for any photoplay described in the schedule as the photoplay of a star, director or based upon a specified story, book or play, or by an identifying description, any other photoplay of a different star or different director or based upon a different story, book or play, or not corresponding to such identifying description, as the case may be."

There is no penalty for the failure of producers or distributors to deliver goods promised by contract description and no provision whereby the exhibitor may pick equally desirable product.

The clause which has caused more complaint than any other, whereby it is possible for producers to withdraw a strong picture from the regular program releases after it has been sold, has been modified. Clause 16 reads:

"In case the distributor shall be delayed in or prevented from the performance of this contract with respect to any of the photoplays herein specified by reason of the elements, accidents, strikes, fire, insurrection, acts of God, the public enemy, public calamity, court orders, censor rulings, delays of any common carrier, or of the United States postal authorities, delays in production or failure of the producers of any of such photoplays to make or deliver them to the distributor or of any star or other performer to appear therein in time for delivery as herein provided, then such delay in or prevention of performance shall be excused and all claims or causes of action for damages therefor or arising therefrom are hereby expressly waived by the exhibitor. In any such event the time of the distributor to perform his contract with respect to any such photoplay shall be extended for a period equal to the time of such delay, provided, however, that in case any such delay or prevention shall prevent the distributor from 'generally releasing' any such photoplay during the period specified in paragraph (b) of Article Second, the provisions of such paragraph shall govern, unless performance because of the happening of any such clause and contingency is rendered impossible, in which case performance by the distributor with respect to any such photoplay shall be waived.

"The resumption of performance by the distributor shall begin promptly after the removal or abatement of the contingencies or causes of such disability or prevention of performance and the distributor shall deliver to the exhibitor any such photoplay at the earliest available date thereafter, and any such delivery in any such case shall be with the same force and effect as though delivery took place within the period herein above limited and the exhibitor agrees to accept, pay for any exhibit any such photoplay at such later period pursuant to the terms thereof."

The modification is in the last half of the clause. Formerly producers were not obliged to deliver at all if a picture could not be furnished within three months after date of delivery.

Exclude 10 Per Cent.

Clause 20 provides: "If the license herein granted shall apply to an entire group of photoplays offered by the distributor to the exhibitor at one time, and not otherwise, the exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from this contract up to but not exceeding 10 per cent. of the total number of such photoplays, but only if the exhibitor shall give the distributor written notice to such effect at any time not later than 14 days before the date fixed for the exhibition of any such photoplay is available for exhibition hereunder, and if at the same time the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor one-half of the license fee payable in respect of any such photoplay. In computing such 10 per cent. fractions of less than one-half shall be disregarded. If any such photoplay shall, because of such exclusion, be thereafter licensed by the distributor for the same run as that specified in this contract, for exhibition at another theatre where such excluded photoplay would not have been exhibited if not so excluded; then one-half of the license fee (up to but not exceeding the amount paid by the exhibitor to the distributor as a condition of so excluding such photoplay) received by the distributor for such re-license shall be credited to the exhibitor by the distributor."

While this provision seems equitable on its face value, it can be rendered useless through price manipulation by the producers or distributors on the pictures exhibitors may wish to reject.

Clause 21 is: "If the exhibitor shall claim that the exhibition at the theatre hereinafter specified of any photoplay licensed hereunder will be offensive to the public in the place where such theatre is located, because of racial or religious subject matter, and if the exhibitor shall give written notice to the distributor of such claim within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for the exhibition thereof hereunder such claim shall be immediately submitted to the Board of Arbitration herein specified. If such Board of Arbitration shall specifically determine that the exhibition of such photoplay at such theatre will be offensive to said public because of racial or religious subject matter, then such photoplay shall be excepted from this contract, and not otherwise. The distributor may exhibit or license the exhibition of any photoplay so excepted when and where desired by the distributor free from all claims of the exhibitor."

Final Judgment

Leaving final judgment on objectionable pictures to the Board of Arbitration practically removes the exhibitor as a factor in the exhibition of such pictures he may consider doubtful. The Board of Arbitration, with the interests of the producers mainly at heart, may not be inclined to pay much attention to pleas made by theatre owners.

In the approved additional clauses it is provided that for each picture road-showed by the distributor the exhibitor may reject one of the pictures in the schedule. It is further agreed that newsreels and short subjects shall not be included in block sales. These additional clauses, if accepted, will be included in the schedule.

London, Feb. 18.

Ostrer Brothers, bankers, find, after having formed the Gaumont-British merger and brought in a theatre end via the Davis houses and the Biocolor Circuit, they still can be jammed for play dates and releases by Provincial Cinematograph Theatres.

P. C. T. can say to a distributor: "Here's 120 week we can give you on that film. Gonna play?"

And the distributor not only plays, but frequently P. C. T. calls the tune and time of general release. While the Ostrers, with some 17 houses, can say what?

So they form the Denman Trust and buy themselves a lot of theatres all over the country. Get some practical fellows associated with their operations, too. And these put up cash money. Charles Woolf, to wit. He does. So does E. E. Lyons, having bitten himself off a nice large piece of dough over the sale of the Astoria theatre to the Szarvasy-Gibbons crowd. Moreover, the Denman Trust buys picture houses as is, and haven't to fiddle around making former vaude theatres into flicker palaces.

Among others they buy the Phillip Hyams theatres, which the Szarvasy-Gibbons folk were supposed to be onto—five of them, and one the best suites in East London. And credited with having bought the Blue Halls, which are three—Blue Hall, Edgware Road, ditto Putney, and the Palladium opera house, Brighton.

As well as the Collins Circuit, which consists of four houses in the Potteries District.

Deals are on for a lot of others. The dope inside is the floating of a large-size public company by which the Denman Trust will sell the properties to the public and the Gaumont-British firms, which include Gaumont, the W. & F. Film Co. and Ideal Film Co., will have an outlet something approaching rivalry with P. C. T.

More Production Money

Herbert Wilcox, who made "Nell Gwyn" and money, "Pompadour" and a good picture, "London" and has been forgiven for it, takes his company to the public this week.

Out of a capital of $2,500,000 he is asking for $1,155,000 in 220,000 shares of $5 par (10 per cent participating preference) and 220,000 of 20 cents each (deferred). Former get one-third of profits after their 10 per cent and latter take the rest.

Films already made are "Mumsie," with Pauline Frederick; "Dawn" (Nurse Cavell subject) and "The Woman in White," Wilkie Collins' novel, now being shot. These three go to the W. & F. Co. for distribution. Further films are to be distributed direct, under the new company's name, British Dominions Pictures, with brother Charles Wilcox in charge of distribution.

Picture material scheduled includes Hall Caine's "Bondman," "The Mountains of Mourne," "The New Clown," "When Knights Were Bold" and "Drake." For this last they are trying to get Ronald Colman, now on his way here, which has saved Herbert Wilcox and Nelson Keys their projected trip to Hollywood. Keys is a member of the board of the new company, and has been instrumental in getting it financed and underwritten.

Studios are to be built at Harrow as soon as the public has put up its money. Meantime production is going on at the Stoll studios, Cricklewood. Board includes W. Henderson-Cleland, Russel E. Fawcas, Raymond P. J. Ireland and H. T. Marsh, all city men, with Nelson Keys, Herbert Wilcox, Charles Wilcox and Charles H. Travers also on the board, the two latter as managing directors. The vendors sell the existing producing company and its films for 29,000 preferred and 575,000 deferred.

A Raw One

On the eve of this flotation there breaks a story all over the dailies telling how the German ambassador had made an official request the Nurse Cavell film, "Dawn," shall be banned as likely to arouse "bitter feeling."

Funny thing this never struck the authorities till the film was almost ready for pre-view, isn't it?

Billy Batten, the company's press agent and formerly news editor of the "Weekly Dispatch," cashed in beautifully on the protest, even assuming he did not inspire it.

Jaydee Objects

When J. D. Williams filed his action against British National, claiming damages for wrongful dismissal, the defense scheduled to put in an answer alleging Williams had misrepresented his position and influence in the film business, was grossly extravagant, and refused to obey orders of the company.

The defense got an order in chambers recently from Justice Branson to amend this plea to one of nothing but a refusal to obey orders. Jaydee appealed against this, stating he did not know what defense he had to answer, and got an amendment from Justices Scrutton and Astbury making an order for the announcement of the matters which would be the snubject of the evidence-in-chief on the part of the defense.

Waiting or Coming

Others on their way—either actually or in the cops' sense—are the Welsh-Pearson Co., which has been at a standstill as far as shooting goes of late. R. C. Buchanan, once an actor and a teacher of elocution at the Glasgow Athenaeum, and now an exhibitor on a large scale, is to go on to the board of this company.

The Hagen-Henry Edwards-Dion Titheredge crowd is quiet at the moment, so is the W. P.-Neoart flotation, though the existing line-up is producing "The Rising Generation" with Alice Joyce at St. Margaret's.

Then there are British Screen Classics, Victoria Films, British Controlled, the Granger Company and several others underwriting, trying to underwrite or wanting to get underwritten.

Blattner Line-Up

After some switching around of the original ideas, Louis Blattner has shaken down to the ultimate position of his production enterprises. A company is to be shortly floated, Viscount Esher as chairman and Blattner as managing director. The public issue will be $2,000,000 all underwritten by Lawson & Ormerod of Manchester Ormerod, of this underwriting firm, has been behind Blattner in earlier enterprises, notably the buying some years ago of the Gaiety theatre, Manchester, and its conversion to pictures, with much profit to both Studio building is scheduled to begin March 22, with two studios ready before the end of the year. Production is to go on meantime at the British International plant, where a floor has been leased for nine months.

The biggest end of this promotion is the contract with Joe Schenck, calling for two pictures a year for five years to be released world-wide by United Artists. These will also serve as United's quota films for this country. (Mr. Schenck, in last week's Variety, denied any English arrangements to distribute on this side.)

Contracts have also been made to produce three a year each for five years for Gaumont and British, and Central Europe has been sold on all productions for 40 per cent of negative cost.

Normally, product is to cost around $60,000 a picture, and the prospectus is putting forward estimates of $20,000 in the United Kingdom and the same amount from the rest of the world.

This is just a little more conservative than most of the prospectuses which have so far gone over, and ought to be easy to live up to unless they make movies so bad they can't be released.

Rest of the 200 acres of land owned is to be turned over to a development company to split up and build on. Blattner's early idea was to have the one company do both studio and other building and produce films, but too many complications acrose, and it has sorted out to a straight picture-making promotion.

Astoria Figures

It was a nice price paid for this theatre; nice, at any rate, for the sellers and the stockholders.

$1,350,000 was the figure at gross, the net being $1,225,000. The difference went in $50,000 to Norfolk and Prior, West End estate agents who made the deal, and $60,000 to the former directors as compensation for relinquishing their directorial contracts. E. E. Lyons (who is running for vice-presidency of the Exhibitors' Association this year) and T. Underwood, both prominent picture house owners, were on the old board.

Stock was originally issued a little over a year ago for the Astoria Theatre Company in $5 mortgage debentures, which have been paid out at par, and 20-cent deferred, which get $8 per share as a result of the sale. Stockholders were notified of the proposed terms of sale, but as something like 75 per cent of the total stock was held on the inside, it is said, the request to the other stockholders was merely formal.

STRONG AGREEMENT TO HOLD EXHIBS IN SAPIRO-HEADED ASS'N

Intent of Contract to Put Indies Back on Business Feet—Runs for 3 Years—No Interference With Policy of House—Protection Only

The agreement drawn up among approximately 250 New York independent theatre owners who recently formed the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, with Aaron Sapiro as its executive head, includes provision which, if enforced, should go far toward putting the independent operator back on his feet.

One of the most important clauses in the Operating Agreement is to the effect that the association will attempt to secure the insertion of provisions in standard film contracts which would limit the producers from invasion of exhibitor-territories for the purpose of protecting the exhibitors from destructive competition by the producers themselves.

Among themselves the exhibitors have agreed, in the contract, that they will not build any more theatres in Greater New York during its term, which is for three years, expiring Jan. 1, 1931. The exhibs have also pledged themselves not to buy or lease any more theatres built by others, or to reopen houses closed by other exhibitors, for the next three years.

Exceptions to this rule may be granted at the discretion of the board of directors by majority vote. This is to provide for new districts which may develop sufficiently in the next three years.

The association has been organized by a committee of 12, including Mr. Sapiro as chairman, Lawrence Bolognino, William Brandt, Leo Brecher, Bernard Grob, J. Arthur Hirsch, Elias Mayer, Hyman Rachmil, Henry Siegel, John W. Springer, Samuel Strausberg and Harry Suchman.

Board in Control

The affairs of the association are to be controlled by a board of 18 directors. Nine will be chosen by members representing eight or more theatres, five by members representing from three to seven theatres, and four directors elected from names submitted by members representing less than three theatres. Six of the directors are to be elected for a term of three years, six for two years and six for one year. After the expiration of the terms of each director, vacancies will be filled at the annual election for terms of three years each. There is not to be more than one director from any single corporation or group of affiliated corporations.

In signing the agreement the exhibitors have constituted the association, acting through a special film buying committee, the exclusive agent and attorney-in-fact for picture buying. They waive all rights to withdraw or cancel this power of attorney before Jan. 1, 1931. Exhibitors will notify the committee of pictures wanted, indicating a price considered fair and any other conditions that should, in their estimate, be included in the contract. Exhibitors agree that the committee shall have access to pertinent books and accounts and shall have the right to study records so as to compute ability to pay.

This special committee is to meet representatives of producers for purchase of pictures and negotiate in the name of each exhibitor. The exhibitors agree to be bound by any contract or purchase and by the terms.

The position of this film buying committee is not as arbitrary as it first seems, since it is subject to change or substitution by the board of directors. Members of the committee may be temporarily withdrawn and other substituted for special negotiations.

Majority Vote

Before negotiations are begun the committee will notify each exhibitor of the proposed terms affecting him and the exhibitor will have the right to withdraw his requisition or proceed subject to notice of dissatisfaction. In such cases the exhibitor has the right to appoint two other directors to act on his behalf with the committee. If the four are unable to reach a decision the president will be called on and the majority vote effected.

The agreement is binding on exhibitors, their successors or assigns. It runs with the land and is to be recorded as an obligation against each theatre owned or controlled by members of the association. This does not restrict sale of the property though change of ownership automatically brings the new proprietor into the association.

The agreement went into effect Feb. 28. The exhibitors have agreed to pay the association five per cent. of all film bought, starting Feb. 20, 1928. Funds are to be used for association purposes and any surplus at the end of the year is to be placed as a credit against accounts of the members for the following year.

Dissolution

The by-laws will contain a provision that, on resolution passed by the Board of Directors or on a petition signed by one-sixth of the membership, a special meeting of the members may be called to vote upon the dissolution of the association and the corresponding cancellation of all contracts. A dissolution can be effected only by affirmative vote representing 60 per cent. of the total membership. A meeting of this kind must be called on 10 days' notice and the dissolution must be effected within 40 days after date of the meeting.

The exhibitors have agreed that failure to abide by the agreement is an unfair trade practice on anyone's part against member exhibitors of the association. In event of such violation the association is empowered to go into court to secure a restraining order, the exhib agreeing to shoulder costs. If the exhibitor is not stopped by injunction from pursuing unfair trade practices, then the association claims the right, according to the agreement signed by the exhibitor, to collect liquidated damages amounting to 10 per cent. of the net price to the exhibitor of all film purchased or leased and of all properties bought, built or leased, in violation of the by-laws of the association. The 10 per cent. provision is fixed as liquidated damages.

It is expressly stated that nothing in the agreement shall be understood to provide for or permit the standardization of admission prices. The association will occupy itself in straightening out matters pertaining to:

Purchase of film.

Standard contracts.

Intelligent regulation or building and construction.

Co-operative or collective purchase of supplies.

Co-ordination in policies, practice and operation and standardization of practices and operations.

Employment and labor policies.

The agreement has been purposely drawn with the object of keeping the elusive exhibitor factions sewed up for a sufficient length of time in which they may be taught the value of co-operation.

Skouras' Policy Changes

Indianapolis, Feb. 28.

The three Lieber theatres here, taken over by Skouras Bros. for themselves and Publix, are slated for policy changes.

The Circle will have a stage band and m. c., and the Indiana will be included in the Publix stage band unit route. The Ohio will play straight pictures.

ARBITRATION DECISIONS

A case on the calendar for disposition today (Wednesday) before the Joint Arbitration Board from the T. O. C. C. and New York Film Board of Trade is expected to establish a precedent when the decision is handed down.

Two exhibitive interests have filed a complaint against United Artists, both trying to cancel contracts signed for Chaplin's "Circus."

Harry Suchman, of the Joelson-Suchman Circuit, is one of the exhibs and will legally represent his circuit at the hearing. The other exhibitor is Henry Siegel who has a chain of movie houses in New York. Louis Nizer (Phillips & Nizer) is looking after the legal end of United Artists.

The contention of the plaintiffs is that contracts signed with United Artists must be performed within a year and that the Chaplin contract lapsed as a consequence. Some delay was occasioned in the making of the Chaplin film which deferred the release.

The defendant is offering a series of reasons why the contracts should be lived up to, accordingly.

If the Suchman and Siegel claims are upheld and the contracts declared null and void the decision will affect many similar contracts.

Other Cases

A number of cases were disposed by the Arbitration Board last week. The Alhambra, 214 5th avenue, Brooklyn, claimed the Fox Exchange had broken a contract playing a picture at another house and not serving it (Alhambra) which claimed prior rights. The Board found for the exhibitor and awarded the Alhambra $100 damages.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sued the State, Boonton, N. J., on an alleged abrogation of contract, the amount involved being $3,712. M-G-M was represented by David Rosengarten, the New York branch manager, while Attorney Leon Rosenblatt looked after the State's interests.

The theatre claimed its contract was properly disposed of when it had sent cancellation prior to the receipt of a confirmed copy. The exchange answered it had not received any such cancellation and that, furthermore, the house had after its alleged cancellation played "The Big Parade" and "Ben-Hur."

"Circus" for 11 Days

The 72nd Street theatre, New York, filed a claim against United Artists which resulted in the Board deciding the exchange should give the house "The Circus" (Chaplin) on an 11 days' contractual basis and that if the theatre did not play it for that period, the exchange had good ground for action for damages.

The theatre demanded that U. A. grant a certain 11 days' booking on the picture, with the exchange contending that the house did not intend to exhibit the Chaplin film for that time, but really wanted to hold up the print. The exhib, on the other hand, declared that he would play it for the 11 days if the time was granted.

It appears that the contract was one of the old forms in vogue when the late Hiram Abrams was head of the U. A. In the forms the time period was left blank, and it was this time that caused the 72nd Street's complaint.

A special session was held Feb. 27 to hear the request of the Monroe Theatre Co., which has Louis Hirsch and Louis Geller as its operators, asking for an injunction grant against Universal, wishing to prevent U from serving pictures to the Ward theatre, in the same neighborhood, ahead of the Monroe.

The Board refused an injunction but disposed of the case by giving the U exchange until March 10 to clear its present Ward status and after that time deliver pictures to the Monroe ahead of the Ward. This was indicated as a breach of contract on the exchange's part.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN "The CIRCUS"

earns $10 a seat at IVOLI ~ Toronto

From VARIETY FEB. 22, 1928

"Mrs. Chaplin's favorite son breezed into town and got all the loose coin with "The Circus" laying them out in the aisles. Picture collected $14,000.

Three records were broken by this Chaplin film, which earned $10 for every seat in the house. Opened to $3,000 (all this 1,400 seater can possibly hold at 60-cent top), ran seven times a day, caused a man to laugh himself to death and another to laugh himself into a hospital. The lineup at times reached two blocks, four abreast, and the casualties came the same night, with William Sangster, Vancouver insurance man, being so overcome as to die in his seat before a doctor could reach him."

Shooting Stars

(BRITISH MADE)

Two entirely opposite opinions on one English-made subject, "Shooting Stars," by members of Variety's London office staff. Both are printed herewith for future decision.

Oddly enough the favorable comment on this British-made is by an American (Jolo), while the adverse opinion is by an Englishman (Frat).

Neither ventures to say what chance this picture might have in the U. S. The American at least should have so stated. All reviews of foreign-made when reviewed outside the U. S. or Canada for Variety should carry this opinion, which may be qualified to any extent.

London, Feb. 2.

Original story by Anthony Asquith. Scenario by John Orton. Produced by British Instructional Films, Ltd. Directed by A. V. Bramble. Distributed by New Era Films, Ltd. Lighting by Karl Fischer. Camera-men, Stanley Rodwell & H. Harris. Pre-viewed at the Plaza, Feb. 1. Running time, 72 minutes.

Mae Feather.....Annette Benson
Julian Gordon.....Brian Ahearne
Andy Wilks.....Donald Calthrop

There is no other film critic in this country faced with the difficult position before me. Film production is starting here as a serious industry; the public pockets and the banks' coffers are at last open; there is sound finance, as well as finance which is nothing but sound and will end in fury.

And I have written for and supported the establishment of film-making in this country to a far greater extent than has any other qualified writer. I am assailed now because I do not slobber praise over every British film I see. I am accused of "attacking" British productions because I do not join in the chorus chanted over pictures which the film-going public later reacts against from the very fact of their having been oversold.

I know, before anything yet appears, the trade press and the newspaper critics will claim "Shooting Stars" as a masterpiece—and once again a few tyros will hail each other as superior to Griffith and mightier than Lubitsch or De Milie.

That does not prevent me from saying this is a rather stupid and childish attempt to make a motion picture. When in a three-verse piece of doggerel over the signature of Anthony Asquith, I read a claim that the climax "out-Wells Wells," I was fearful. And after I had sat through an hour and a quarter of silliness I knew I had cause to be fearful!

It has been claimed loudly that this picture would strike an entirely new note on the screen; that it would revolutionize film production. If that were all the film might just be passed up as meriting no attention. But it will be sold to the public as the work of a genius, and once again British films will get a black eye when this one gets to the screen. If the "friends" of British films would realize the enormous harm they are doing by their slavish praise they would temper it with a little sane comment.

Some of this film is devoted to a sneer at the type of film fare the general public makes its entertainment. The rest is imitative of the Ufa. "absence-of-lights" complex, traveling the camera till the looker-on becomes dizzy, and an even more ordinary story than the one jeered at by implication in the film itself.

Mae Feather is a film star, married to her leading man. She loves a slapstick comedian working in the same studio. Mae gives the comic the key of her apartment, supposing husband will be away on location.

Husband is cleaning a gun in readiness for a day's shooting, not expecting to work, and Mae slips a cartridge into her bag in mistake for her lipstick.

Andy, the comedian, gets to Mae's apartment just as the news has come through on the radio he has been badly hurt. It was a "double" who was hurt, however, and Mae's relief at seeing Andy, together with the comedian's possession of the key, raise hubby's ire and he announces divorce intentions. A contract to go to America has just been signed by May. It has a penalty clause for scandals. As the next day a shooting sequence is to be taken in which villain fires at hero (hubby), she loads gun with the stolen cartridge.

Only one barrel is fired and husband escapes. Then gun is borrowed for a comedy scene with Andy in another picture, and he gets killed by the cartridge intended for friend husband.

Time elapses (a typical stroke of genius is a blank screen for a few seconds) and husband has become a famous director. Mae is now a crowd worker, and even her husband does not recognize her as she goes to him after a day's shooting is finished and asks "Don't you want me any more?" He shakes his head and goes on reading his script, while she makes a long, long exit right down the floor, stands silhouetted against the door and then closes it behind her. Finish. And about time!

Acting and photography are both good. The rest is inexcusable.

Frat

London, Feb. 10.

This picture was reviewed by a member of Variety's London staff, a man of vast newspaper experience, and especially in films, together with a technical knowledge of picture making possessed by few of the film critics. There is no question of the honesty of his criticism, but this confrere in the same office takes issue with him on his opinion in the present instance.

The writer made a canvas of the picture colony, the "wise" folks of show business in the West End and elsewhere, and has not received one opinion coinciding with this (his own), with the exception of a prominent official in the Famous-Lasky office.

Visitors to the Plaza were heard to remark—droves of them—that it was "terrible." The picture did excellent business at the Plaza during the week and was retained a second week, but the writer is willing to concede this was due to the fact that the story emanated from the brain of Anthony Asquith, son of Margot Asquith and Lord Oxford and Asquith, former prime minister of England, and hence the picture for the first week was a draw of no mean proportions from "the best people." Perhaps for the same reason it has been booked for 65 of the provincial cinematograph theatres, more or less under the direction of Lord Ashfield.

It is understood the picture was peddled about in film circles in America with no takers, which may, or may not, be another argument in favor of the original film review aforementioned.

The viewpoint of the writer is that the picture is too modern for the average moving picture patron, who is confronted with the difficulty of carrying in his mind a story within a story and even then part of another story within the inside story.

From the outset he is intrigued by the opening of the picture which begins with a closeup of the conventional clinch and closes with the shutting of a door. If one stops to consider for a moment, it is the exact reverse of ordinary picture routine. It appeals in no small measure to the imagination.

The only chance for anything of this sort here would be if it were made by a continental producer (shall we say German?) and then the English audiences would not be expected to understand it and would remark on its artistry. But, made by a native producer, it apparently hasn't the proverbial Chinaman's chance.

Jolo.

While it is true that almost every English critic goes into ecstasies over continental art productions, box office experience has shown that the public does not necessarily take the same angle. Examples are "The Street," directed by Karl Grune, newspaper success 100 per cent, and a box office failure in about the same ratio. Also chief critics' angles are Lubitsch's "Variety," where the symbolic and technical devices, which in almost every case passed over the heads of the audiences.

"Caligari," "The Golem" and "Destiny" are three other outstanding continental pictures which did not repeat their newspaper success at the box office.

This state of affairs has become so recognized to the majority of provincial film salesmen that they figure when a picture is hailed as a big artistic success by the London critics, there will be very considerable difficulty in booking it.

Hired Man.....Tom Dugan
Swede.....David Wengren

Good title, minus names and a story based on a mere thread of an idea which nears extinction in the process of the narration, represents the unattractive total upon which this production may be judged.

Continuity is dull and draggy. Not a punch in the picture. Story unconvincing.

It's another version of the brutal treatment given the newlywed wife with the object of teaching her to appreciate the true worth of her papa. In this case it's lightly disguised under the heading of divorce and alimony.

According to the story the secretary to a divorce lawyer has a vague, half formed ambition to marry a money man with the object of retiring on alimony, following a divorce. She is given further encouragement by Lorna Estabrook, an old and experienced divorcee, who has milked several wealthy husbands.

The girl secretary, Nancy Woods, finds that Stockney Webb, the man she agrees to marry after a three-day courtship, is in love with her and it doesn't seem fair. But, through an open door Webb overhears Lorna advising Nancy on the wedding day how to carry out divorce and alimony proceedings.

Webb stays away from the bride during the honeymoon. Later, Lorna comes on the scene with the intent of getting Webb for her own while giving the impression that she is compromising the boy to help Nancy secure a divorce.

Laughs light and sparing. One title tells the story. The secretary, looking at an alimony check, says: "I get $35 a week for making good and she gets $1,000 for failing."

Madge Bellamy interesting in several brief interpretations. Best is where the girl does sample court routines, teaching prospective alimony-seekers how to vamp judge and jury. John Mack Brown is suitable male lead. Support capable.

LATEST FROM PARIS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production and release. Starring Norma Shearer and featuring George Sidney. Directed by Sam Wood from A. P. Younger's original. Titles by Joe Farnham, with William Daniels, photographer. At Capitol, New York, week Feb. 25. Running time, 73 minutes.

Ann Dolan.....Norma Shearer
Phil Bigelow.....George Sidney
Joe Adams.....Ralph Forbes
Abe Littauer.....Tenen Holtz
Chick Dolan.....William Orlamond
Louise Martin.....Margaret Landis
Bert Blevins.....Bert Roach

Light comedy of no particular importance but with the Norma Shearer name and enough laughs to see it through for program purposes. Productionally the picture doesn't fulfill what the title promises. Miss Shearer, however, looks good all the way, gets a chance to be kittenish here and there, and does well with the assignment as a whole. Looks like a good matinee film.

Main trouble with the feature is that the love story doesn't convince. Miss Shearer as Ann Dolan, the star of a clothing firm's sales department, falls for Adams (Forbes), a rival salesman, who apparently hasn't much but nerve and allows himself to be forced into an engagement with Louise Martin (Miss Landis).

How a girl with Ann's supposed mentality can become weepy over Adams, as Forbes plays him, is something the scenario asks you to believe. Rather an imposition on the script's part, although if girls prefer blondes, too, they may take to Forbes. But it's doubtful if he'll ever get the men or a majority of the women.

Against the Potash and Perlmutter background most of the story takes place in a small town which other than cast salaries and an overlong studio snow sequence makes the "mut" on this one appear most reasonable. The snow thing has the lovers walking into the open minus wraps or hats and so enthralled with each other that they saunter along unmindful of the weather for close to 1,000 feet. The start of this bit is a solid laugh, and follow-up snickers are strung out.

The prolongation tempers the first impression. As a 73-minute picture it would have more punch if cut eight or 10 minutes. Lobby stills display scenes which never cropped out on the screen, so the boys and their scissors have likely been at it already.

The star flaunts various costumes, mostly of the sport type, which should catch the feminine eye, and seem particularly adept in a short bit where she solos a rehearsal with herself on bawling somebody out.

It's all carefree and gay, with George Sidney doing capably with the heart interest when it looks as if Ann is going to lose her man. Farnham's titles do their part and the camera work is standard.

"Latest from Paris" registers as a bright little picture for Miss Shearer from a personal angle. It will neither make nor break box offices.

THE LEOPARD LADY

Pathe release of a De Mille production. Directed by Rupert Julian. Adapted from play, and features Jacqueline Logan, Alan Hale and Robert Armstrong. J. J. Mescall, cameraman. At Colony, New York, week Feb. 25. Running time, 67 minutes.

Paula.....Jacqueline Logan
Jim.....Alan Hale
Chris.....Robert Armstrong
Berlits.....J. Bradbury, Sr.
Heotor.....Dick Alexander

Maybe Keith-Albee has an argument as to why it won't pay any more for pictures than it will for a No. 3 act. "Leopard Lady" could be a reason. This picture might also clarify, to some extent, when K-A hasn't helped Pathe or Pathe K-A.

Film features like this don't make it tough for the opposition. Here's a mystery thriller that's a perfect fit for the third-grade houses or where it can linger only one day. The saps may shiver and a coupie may squeal, but nearly everybody is going to get a laugh out of a ridiculous sub-title that pops up in the midst of a dramatic scene. How any pre-view projection room could fail to detect it is a marvel. Studio must have just labeled the film "cut and send," without bothering to take another look.

Johnny Mescall, now screen credited as J. Joseph Mescall, has tricked up the photography to snare early attention, and Rupert Julian, directing, has undone that good work by stringing out, endlessly, a deal between the secret service head and Miss Logan, which takes place in the latter's dressing room.

Berlits, the silent cop with a white mouse Julian evidently thought was a scream, will give Paula 20,000 kronen if she'll clean up a circus that either leaves robbery or murder in its wake. The money will fallow the girl to quit and join an officer in the U. S. merchant marine.

The tent show's part owners' trained ape has been bumping everybody off. For what reason nobody'll ever know. Paula's cats eventually turn on her, but Caesar saves. For that she's about to let him get away, when Chris comes in a little the worse for wear after a tussel with the ape. That takes all the sentiment out of Paula as far as Caesar is concerned, and as the boys fisticuff about a bit she socks the Russian strong boy from behind.

And here it is that Chris is made to say, "Now I know you love me."

Well, sir, you should have heard that third or a house laugh.

Finale has Paula cornered by the ape, which she eventually induces to shoot itself with an automatic pistol. "Ape commits suicide"—great for the tabs and those composite photos.

Picture might have been all right if it hadn't been butchered.

Very dramatic most all the way, Miss Logan, like the rest, is prone to overplay. And that's direction. Each of the principal players has turned in good performances in other pictures, but not here. Miss Logan was once in a film called "Java Head." Neither before nor since has she looked as good as her

New King Feature Lineup

The new and final lineup on the changes in King Features Syndicate and all its Hearst subsidiary news and feature services is as follows: Col. Guy Viknisski, general manager; Joseph V. Connolly, editorial manager; J. D. Gortatowsky, business manager; Jack Lait, magazine editor; Rudolph Block and Jack Lait, editors of comic strips; Alexander Black, art editor.

M. Koenigsberg, who retired as vice-president and general manager, leaves this week for an extended hunting trip to Colorado, after which he will announce his plans The report of the syndicate's moving to the new Hearst building on South street appears definitely off.

Highland, N. Y., Feb. 23.

Editor Variety:

Dear "Pseudo-Intellectual":

Lovely, lovely.

The brief notes in the recent issue of the Bible of the Theatrical Stage Door Entrance, concerning my recent adventures with the Macfadden outfit gave me my biggest laugh of the century. Even more so than the hifflesquibble pishposh of a Menckonian attack on the Puritan bigwigs in the heavy sticks.

And I doted on your calling my new magazine "Selah," and when your lamps glimpse along the dictionary columns just what "Selah" means you will have a horse chuckle on me, Sugar Papa of the Broadway Panhandlers.

I lift my earlaps up here on the Palisades and let the echoes of your ribald riffraff of words percolate into the innermost doldrums of my thinking "open spaces where men iz men, b'gosh."

I salute thee, O Master of the Turgid Excrescence and Leader of the Lost Battalions of Thought.

It may not interest your Fuzzy Fancy as Playboy of the Theatrical Profession, to know that my new magazine is to be called "Swap," and not "Selah." Facts may not intrigue your galumphing intelligence, but them's iz thuh facts, Old Timer, them's iz. Selah.

Faithfully,
Harold Hersey.

(In the usual alleys of stage doors this might be construed as a pan. But with translation, who can tell? To prevent Mr. Hersey being prejudged either way, will some owner of a high-class dictionary please interpret and forward. Only one translation from one dict.).

"Mercury" Corroborates "Rope"

Coincidentally or peculiarly the March number of "The American Mercury" out last week, shortly following the premiere of the Stribling story, "Rope," in play form at the Biltmore, New York, has a story corroborating the big kicks, if any, in the play.

In "The Mercury" it is named "Ku Klux" and by W. A. S. Douglas, Washington correspondent for the Baltimore "Sun." Mr. Douglas tells how in a small dried up oil boom town of Oklahoma, the local Ku Klux was led by a no good so-and-so, and how the loafers of the town joined it for privileges and immunity. It's a very interesting tale and as Mr. Douglas is an authentic writer, a true one. It relates the horsewhipping of a young girl and boy of the village, among other things, and how a dumb returned foreigner, but a vet marine, tried to kill off the entire Ku Klux parade on the 4th of July.

In "The Rope" is brought out the composition of the White Caps and their swaggering tendencies when en mob. A lynching and whipping are also suggested.

Carvalho Leaving Hearst

It was announced at the Hearst meeting in Atlanta last week that S. S. Carvalho will depart from the Hearst organization April 1, next.

That occasioned as much surprise as the recent resignation of M. Koenigsberg from the Hearst executive forces. Those added to the recent leaving of Bradford Merrill and others as well as those reported who may leave within the near future have brought about unmeasured wonderment.

Carvalho like Koenigsberg has been among the ace men of the Hearst staff. It seems the departing members are those most thoroughly versed in the publishing end of the Hearst papers. Both were among the earliest men to align themselves with Hearst. Carvalho has been ranked second to Hearst only in the direction of the Hearst paper enterprises.

It was about 25 years ago that Koenigsberg started to organize Hearst's International and Universal news services, Kings and International feature services, besides the Premier service, bringing all to a profit basis with the total net a very large sum annually from report.

Just what so many of Hearst valuable aids mean leaving so closely together appears to be a matter of much surmise. It's doubtful if any voluntarily took the step, as all thought they were with Hearst for life after the many years in his service. Together they compose the essence of the rise of William R. Hearst as a publisher, and together they may mark the commencement of another extensive newspaper syndicate. Or individually, as with Koenigsberg, create their respective ventures.

Hershfield's Column Hits

Harry Hershfield's "Broadway Unlimited" daily column, syndicated and appearing in New York in the "Evening Journal," has rushed into the hit class before its second week finished. Known as one of the brightest toastmasters and a smart gagger, besides his nationally famed "Abie, the Agent" comic strip, Hershfield starts as a columnist with his saleable value greatly enhanced on his own name. That is something seldom occurring to any Broadway columnist. Those who got over to any extent had to make their name. With the "Journal's" circulation 700,000, "Broadway Unlimited" is immediately reaching a big field.

As a matter of fact, Hershfield has been feeding other columnists for some time, so much so that the idea of a column of his own came to the Kings Feature people, who also syndicate "Abie."

One of Harry's best gags is his own column and likely to be run daily is a single line, reading:

"If I'm wrong, sue me."

Leslie Catton Dies

Leslie Catton, 33, newspaperman known to the fraternity as "Cato," died at Bellevue Hospital, New York, Feb. 18 from a fractured skull. Catton encountered the accident Feb. 16 when leaving the Newspaper Club, having tripped down the stairs. Funeral services under the auspices of the Newspaper Club, New York, were held Feb. 20 at Campbell's Funeral Church, with remains shipped to Auburn, N. Y., for burial.

Catton was born in Auburn and entered the newspaper field at 20. He had been connected with newspapers in Springfield, Mass., Boston and New York. A widowed mother survives.

retired business man, active in public affairs.

1st N. Uneasiness

While curious exhibitor vistors at Fox's local exchange market were being informed this week that the Fox-Stanley deal was off and while official inquiries at the Fox headquarters met with less forceful replies, more than one subordinate at First National was sounding the field for a job.

Employees who have been in the First National home office for five and even 10 years this week, for the first time in their careers, manifested an uneasiness obvious even to casual observers.

One minor executive expressed the opinion that the majority of First National job holders are good for another six months on the basis that a deal could not be consummated within a shorter time "because of the condition of the books."

From other sources at First National, who claimed to know, opinions were expressed that the Hawley organization would experience only a minor shake-up at the very worst.

LONE HOUSE OPERATOR FIGHTING WASH. UNIONS

Washington, Feb. 28.

Harry Wardman, one of the town's wealthiest real estate operators, is dabbling in the exhibitor end of pictures to the extent of operating the one-story neighborhood, Park, on 14th street.

Recently, he let out the entire union crew. This resulted in several reported robberies with one entrance late at night, resulting in the finding of the projectors broken the next morning.

Neighborhood has been flooded with handbills condemning the house as non-union.

Edward Gill, 49, and formerly operator in the house, was arrested last week, charged with having placed offensive "bombs" in the theatre. Gill denies the charge.

Wardman employs only union labor in his building enterprises.

opening shot in that one. She still has appearance, but Julian has made her go 'way overboard in a flirtation sequence and has timed the story spasmodically.

A much hoked dramatic release that occasionally shows flashes of what it might have been, good for the big independent neighborhood houses. Now, if they play it, they'll be taking a chance. Sid.

SAILORS' WIVES

First National production and release, directed by Joseph Henaberry from story by Warner Fabian. Featuring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes. At the Hippodrome, N. Y., week of Feb. 27. Running time, about 60 mins.

A weak sister. May be used as a filler in the split weeks, or with strong stage show support. Misses as a first-run house feature. Pictures loses out because of story which may have been fine reading, but does not translate into action or even interest on the screen.

Tells of a girl who, knowing she is to lose her eyesight, runs from the man she loves and has promised to marry. When he finds her later she tries to impress him as a flirt who did not mean what she said when she first met him.

Girl finally shoots herself when she becomes blind, and bullet lands at an angle which relieves pressure doctors had been afraid to attempt to alleviate via an operation. She regains her sight.

Miss Astor looks and carries herself well, but film without climaxes, vital love interest or action. Production rates among the seconds. Mori.

Battles of Falkland Island

(BRITISH MADE)

(Canadian Review)

Toronto, Feb. 25.

Produced by H. Bruce Woolfe for W. and F. Film Service, Ltd., with co-operation of British Royal Navy and technical committee from (late) Imperial German Navy. Released in Canada by Regal Films Ltd. Directed by Walter Summers. Scenario by Harry Engholm and Capt. Frank C. Bowen, R. N. Cast not directly named. Filmed in the Mediterranean. Previewed at Tivoli, Toronto. Running time (fast), 75 mins.

From the standpoint of the British Empire, particularly Canada, where British films are seldom seen, this history of two naval battles is sure fire and a money maker. It is a triumph of direction in the mass and strictly impartial as to the merits of the crews in these South Pacific and South Atlantic fights.

Belling credits "35 ships and 40,000 men," which is an exaggeration.

Billing credits "35 ships and and in a few spots too much time is wasted on details, but despite this the picture does not lag and holds suspense throughout its 8,000 feet. Aside from actual battle scenes, which are excellent even unto trick photography, hitherto a serious drawback of British productions, the story is in the behavior of its characters. How the German Admiral Von Spee refused to drink "Eternal damnation to the British Navy," but preferred as a toast "The health of a very gallant foe." How this same admiral refused to leave his battered ship when a boat drew up alongside him and how Cradock, the British commander, fights rather than run away when badly outnumbered in ships and guns.

The story is simple. Cradock has a small fleet near Coronel in the south Atlantic. He hears the enemy is in the vicinity and tries to prevent them getting into the open sea, where they could attack Allied commercial ships.

His only battle cruiser develops engine trouble and is left far astern. Coming up with a much larger German outfit than he expected, he is advised to run away, but stays to fight and is sent to the bottom. The Glasgow, a light cruiser, escapes, and the missing battle cruiser never gets into the engagement.

England gets the wind up, and Lord Fisher, first lord of the admiralty, orders a large squadron southward under Admiral Sturdee. He is told the fleet, led by the Invincible, cannot leave for five days after he has told them to go, but insists they weigh anchor by six p. m. Dec. 6. Feverish work in the dockyards gets the boats ready, and they push off on a record run to the Falklands.

Meantime, at a big banquet in Valparaiso, where he is acclaimed a national hero, Von Spee announces his intention to capture the Falklands and make them useless as a British coaling station. When his ships reach the harbor Sturdee's fleet is coaling and unable to sail.

The Germans go about but Sturdee chases them into the night and sinks all but one without loss of a ship.

The characters of Lord Fisher and Admiral Sturdee are the best interpretive bits put on the English screen. Photography is good, particularly on inside shots, and no "we won the war" stuff mars the close-ups of gunners, stokers and bridge officers. Where individual acts of heroism were done by Germans this is faithfully shown, such as where Sturdee orders cease fire against "Gneisnau," which is crippled except for one gun and rapidly sinking. The lone gun keeps barking, and the ship goes down stern first with a sailor waving the German naval flag far up on the prow.

Practically no comedy relief but some human interest stuff when the Glasgow, survivor of the first fight, finds itself out of coal in pursuit of a German cruiser. Furniture is smashed and thrown into the fire, and eventually the chaplain's treasured organ goes in, too.

This is "The Big Parade" of the sea. Sure of real money in the British Empire and Germany and should also draw in the U. S. Sinclair.

COMRADES

James Ormont production, releasing through First Division. Directed by Cliff Wheeler. Cast includes Helene Costello, Gareth Hughes, Donald Keith and Joseph Swickard. At Loew's New York on double feature program one day, Feb. 24. Running time, 60 mins.

Fair enough and moderately priced independent that will suffice where they're used to dropping in regardless of titles. Yarn is familiar, but has sufficient pace to hold it to its limited purpose, and the Helene Costello name may help.

Delves into the war after starting in a military prep school where the two pals (Hughes and Keith) are introduced, one a physical coward. When the draft is called the younger and braver of the two takes his friend's place under promise that the latter will step in the following year when he reaches 21 and his name will be called. Sister of the weakling overhears the promise, and that gets the silent hero back his ring. France and the usual heroism and cowardice, with the local papers crediting the wrong boys in each case because of the name switch. Homecoming of the youths carries on the situation until a mentally deranged father, who has lost his sons in the war, pulls a gun on the supposed coward, whence the lad who couldn't force himself out of a trench steps in front of his companion to receive the bullet. A dying confession puts everything right, including the knowledge that he has overcome his fear.

Cast work is better than the production. War stuff is ordinary with the military academy barrack scenes not true, except of the "boy scout" schools. Picture will have its troubles standing up alone for three days. It is fair one-day material, but will be more at home with a companion to share the burden. Sid.

WOMAN WISE

William Fox production and release. Directed by Albert Ray. Featuring William Russell and June Collyer, supported by Walter Pidgeon and Theodore Kosloff. Titles by Malcolm Stuart Boylan. At the Academy, New York, Feb. 27-29. Running time, 60 minutes.

A novel film comedy that has many things to recommend it. Delivers neat and compact entertainment without going to extremes of slapstick and still holds genuine laughter. It isn't often that polite film story telling has this balance of intelligent fun, getting surprises and laughs from situations that are away from the Sennett technique.

The whole business is expertly shaped. Picturesque backgrounds in oriental atmosphere of U. S. Consul's office in Persia. Soldier of fortune from nearby camp of American oil prospectors gets involved with native woman and consul in saving him from native dignitary, recognises in him an old buddy. Natives want to shoot prospector for flirting with their women, but hard-boiled guy won't compromise. So consul knocks him cold until he can smooth things out, then he makes him at home.

The entertainment lies more in the incidental comedy tricks than in the story itself. There is one rich bit, where a prospector's dog, scream of a wooly pup, has a flirtation of his own, which apparently turns into a fight, for the pup is seen departing from the rendezvous in a sadly wrecked condition. The departure is done in slow motion and is a scream.

Another dog scream bit is later.

The film has a world of action to support its hour of running time. The native bandits at the order of the Pasha besiege the consulate, where there is a fine, full gun battle, with victims falling from high walls into the lawn lake; desperate riding of picturesquely costumed orientals and finally the summoning of the American gang from the oil camp for one of those to-the-rescue sequences. Behind all there is excellent scenic locale, fine photography and good character playing.

This Walter Pidgeon is coming to the fore as a leading man. He plays naturally and makes a clean-cut human figure without a hint of the familiar actor type, good looking enough without being too handsome to distract attention from his character. June Collyer has a pale part, playing it gracefully which was about possible.

William Russell makes a mistake every time he plays a role that is not pure comedy. He has a great role here in the he-man who boasts of his knowledge of women, but gets double-crossed every time he hooks up with a dame. And he does it well. It is a good deal more convincing than the heroic stuff that ends up with a clinch. It isn't always easy to take Russell seriously as a straight hero. Here a comedy role fits him perfectly.

Kosloff is sunk in an impossible heavy part, impossible in itself, but used only as a foil and feeder for the straights. It isn't always easy to take Russell seriously as a straight hero. Here a comedy role fits him perfectly.

First-rate light comedy-drama that will please any grade of clientele on the three-day or straight week booking plan. Rush.

Little Mickey Grogan

FBO production and release. Directed by Leo Meehan. Frankie Darro (kid) starred. Johnny Ralston and Crawford Kent featured. From story by Arthur Guy Empey. At Loew's New York, on double feature program.

Fair enough picture for the single dayers. Or in the small towns where it may be held according to the rental.

F. B. O. may be desperately trying to put across a kid actor, Frankie Darro as Mickey Grogan. For the information of F. B. O. and its staff, if it means anything, the reviewer who watched the picture at the New York on a double bill, without previously knowing the title of either, was surprised upon emerging from the house to find the title was "Little Mickey Grogan."

The attempt to make a kidlet a star may be very good if it can get over, but not in a story of this nature. The boy is incidental, notwithstanding what may be tried. It's like the dog films; they don't convince.

Taking the reviewer's unbiased opinion as he watched the film, thinking the kids in it were incidental for comedy and that the story hinged upon Johnny Ralston, it may prove to the producers that if they are to star or feature kids there must be kid pictures.

It's impossible to carry conviction with impossible tales for children Kids can not be made too mature.

This Frankie Darro is a nice kid actor, following direction. But his face will never be a screen panic, and there is no outpouring sympathetic feeling toward him. Sending the boy onto the city's dumps to salvage what he can and letting him meet the girl there, or in fact putting these children into the centre of misery does not help them as film favorites.

Here the story is so so, machine made. An architect is losing his sight, but regardless of that never attempts to help himself by wearing glasses. That's a fatal oversight that must have started with the script and was never caught. And another was the burly lover of the girl. Calling him a prizefighter could not square that.

Still the kid angle as incidental helps a little and makes it a one-dayer.

Burning Up Broadway

Sterling production. Directed by Phillip Rosen from story by Norman Houston. Supervised by Joe Rock. Starring Helene Costello. Cast includes Robert Frazer, Ernest Hilliard, Sam Hardy, Max Asher and Jack Rich. At Loew's New York. One-half of a double feature program. Running time, about 50 mins.

A speedy, entertaining production making up in action what it lacks in polish. Fine offering for the small theatres.

Very little of Broadway in the picture. Story deals with rum runners whose chief operates a speakeasy. The young man from the west, on his first trip to New York, is taken into the place by a friend just to get a glimpse of life in the raw. The boy falls for one of the chorines and, on returning a second time to press his attention, is slugged by the proprietor, who has fallen for the girl himself.

From planted wires the audience is given the idea that the boy's friend is the leader of a gang of hi-jackers who are planning to stage a holdup on the bootleggers. The girl's actions, her half-hearted attempt to appease the heavy while not encouraging his attentions too strongly are clothed in mystery.

For the finish the girl is revealed as in the employ of the revenue department working with the supposed leader of the hi-jackers, also a Government man. Mori.

INSIDE STUFF

ON VAUDEVILLE

It's pretty certain that Alexander Pantages will be given protection by William Fox, despite the recent purchase of the West Coast and F & R houses in the territories of the Pantages circuit. It is said that the Fox policy is to stick by those who stuck. In carrying this out, the Fox people from accounts do not intend to build or invade in sections where their product has received a proper showing.

Pantages comes under the heading of those who stuck with Fox when Fox was making his heavy fight for representation as a producer. Though Fox will have to do some acute figuring to let Pantages in on the Fox product and still handle his own film house bookings in the same territories, it's understood that this will be done, with William Fox having issued a personal order that Pantages be taken care of, regardless.

This is even more significant in view of the Orpheum circuit (Keith-Albee) houses that line up against Pantages' in many cities of the west. Orpheum is still confined to its present picture sources, which have not given the Orpheum houses any drawing films of moment during the past two seasons. It's suspected that the Orpheum with its quality of films not improved and its reduction of the cost of vaudeville bills with the Orpheum's changed policy from two-a-day to three-a-day for acts, will show a marked effect, while Pantages, brightening his stage bills and playing class picture product, will benefit.

A certain set has been obliged to unavoidably notice the altered attitude of a former high hat booker in the Times Square section. At one time an ordinary mortal, the high hatter found himself elevated into what he thought was a permanency while his term contract kept alive. The airy stares started. His former companions passed it up as a head that would get back to normal, if not by one way, then another.

Of late the same fellow has grown more sociable with that certain set, his head having been well pushed under his hat in several ways. But the old mob is not forgetting nor forgiving, for it didn't mean a thing to them, before or after.

Alleen Stanley, interviewed by Fred McQuigg, who signs as "The Optimist" in the Chicago "American," said among many other things, that her engagement as co-feature of "A Night in Spain" (Shuberts) in Chicago was due to a page advertisement she had placed in Variety immediately following her arrival in New York after a long stay abroad. J. J. Shubert saw the Stanley announcement and wanting a successor to Marion Harris in the show, immediately sent for Miss Stanley.

That was rather nice of Miss Stanley in that interview to credit Variety and as nice for McQuigg to write it and have it printed. It was also a peach of an interview McQuigg did, with the streamer headline across the page, reading: "Alleen Stanley Wins Prince of Wales and Reporter."

After many years as a director in pictures, Tom Terris returned to the Orpheum stage in Los Angeles with his former playlet, "Scrooge" (from Dickens) renamed "The Three Shadows." He was asked to continue with the sketch over the Orpheum circuit but is under engagement to direct a big Russian picture for Tiffany, and had to decline. The picture will be called "Clothes Make the Woman."

It's about 15 years or so since Mr. Terris came over here from England. He's a sterling character player and had no difficulty in playing all of the vaudeville time on this side until mixing with pictures. Now he says that one week's return did him a world of good, because he again knows that there remains such a thing as applause.

Al Grossman is a vaude booker who spends much of his time haunting the Loew offices which gives him a pretty good break with his turns. Al has among his acts the Rehan and Faye revue and it was booked in Rochester last week. As Al hails from Rochester he decided to go up and play up the revue in the home town papers. Al's name went in the ads and being a local boy, the reporters wrote Al up and put in his picture.

The thing got on Al's nerves so that he didn't return to Broadway, making his stay there a week-end affair.

Al bought out about every paper in Rochester so he could bring back proof that he got the write-up and his map in the papers.

One of the late Eddie Foy's favorite stories ran to the effect that decades ago he was a "free act," doing flipflops in Kohl and Castle's Dime Museum, Clark street, Chicago. The ballyhoo for each dime show led the mob to a free show. Foy worked in black tights, whited up, and every bunch that came through meant he had to do his stuff, whereupon they were ballyhooed into the next dime show.

One July Saturday, Foy walked into the office of the late C. E. Kohl and said, "I can't stand this. It's 110 in the shade and I've done 110 flipflops." Kohl looked at the thermometer and said, "It's 112—do two more."

Patricia Salmon, discovered in Shelby, Mont., at the Dempsey-Gibbons' fight by the New York sports writers, is doing a turn nowadays on the floor of the Parody nite club, New York. Miss Salmon sings songs, as she did in the "Follies" and later with the Sells-Floto circus when astride a horse in the ring.

It is easily detected why Patricia appealed so greatly to the newspaper men as a gem in the desert when with the rep show in Shelby. She's a bright and good looking girl, of some personality, and must have stood out like a million dollars in the tent troupe. But at the Parody she's a single. Her previous career is not mentioned when introduced as a floor turn.

Once a month an official vaude guide appears in New York. It is supposed to make its substance on the ads placed by vaude agents, bookers and offices in and around Times Square.

Where an agency doesn't give the racket a tumble it seems that the telephone number of that particular agency or office is printed wrong.

Apparently, this is done to get the goat of the office in question and cause it to advertise to have same rectified.

K-A-O agents must hereafter submit prospective material to the general booking office before submitting to bookers according to an ultimatum handed down.

The new edict goes two ways, one as a weeding out process on acts undesirable to the circuit and the other being a general check up on agents in general that have been passing up good material. The agents figure the order just another bugaboo to keep them on their toes for new material that is desirable.

Though denials are issued as customary, the fact remains that S. Z. Poli has leased his Lyric, Bridgeport, Conn., to A. C. Winstrom. That would indicate the Poli people do not expect Max Shoolman of Boston will take over the Poli Circuit.

Shoolman's first option expired Jan. 3 and was twice renewed. Whether it's still alive, no one in New York knows.

It is said that the duties of Pat Woods in his new assignment under J. J. Murdock in the Keith-Albee offices will be particularly to check the vaudeville shows around New York—number of bows taken, cost of bills, conflicts on program, act given at supper show, its time, etc.

Though Keith's has been in existence over 35 years, this is the first time such a check-up has been ordered.

GERALD GRIFFIN

The Brooklyn "Citizen," November 16, 1927, said:

"GERALD GRIFFIN AT THE ALBEE THIS WEEK

"The Albee Theatre presents a program of such uniform excellence that it is difficult to choose any other than a nominal headliner. First in our preference came Gerald Griffin, in a wonderfully balanced selection of songs and stories. He has a remarkably sympathetic voice, besides being an accomplished story teller."

BIG TIME PASSING IN AUSTRALIA TOO

Sydney, Jan. 28.

Australia is slowly being educated to the idea of seeing class vaude acts in most of the movie houses in each principal city. American producers have been imported for that purpose.

Big time vaudeville is slowly dying out here. Of this there is no doubt whatsoever.

The Fuller people were the first to recognize this fact, and have dropped straight vaudeville from most of their bills. Revue units have replaced.

The Tivoli circuit is practically the only chain playing big time at present. It is significant that this circuit has also experimented with revue attractions on several bills.

Far reaching effects of the slump in vaudeville can be understood when a country like Australia turns to pictures with the audiences knowing they will see standard acts on the picture programs at half the vaude price.

'Baby Face' at Academy

Jimmy McLarnin, the "baby face" lightweight from the coast who knocked out Sid Terris in the first round at the Garden last week, will open as the star stage attraction tomorrow (Thursday) at Fox's Academy, New York.

McLarnin will do a bit of a spiel and illustrate the blow winning him the bout, also shadow boxing.

Booking by Arthur Lyons.

E. H. Lennie Collapses

E. Harrison Lennie, of Clayton and Lennie, who collapsed while playing the Monday matinee at Loew's State, New York, and was removed to Polyclinic Hospital, remained unchanged yesterday, his condition being serious.

Lennie suffered a hemorrhage.

LARRY SEMON FOR STANLEY

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Larry Semon has been booked for six weeks by the Stanley circuit to open in Philadelphia March 12.

Engagement made through Walter Meyers, William Morris office.

WALTHALL'S STAGE RETURN

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Henry B. Walthall returns to the footlights after years of activity on the screen.

Walthall has been signed for the lead in "Speakeasy," which shortly comes to the Orange Grove.

2 PLAYERS RETURN

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Harry Myers, screen actor, and his wife, Rosemary Theby, who retired from films several years ago, are getting an act together for a fling in vaude.

CUT RATES MADE FOR N. V. A. ADS IN BENEFIT PROGRAM EDITION

45% Off Present Rates, Says Letter—Special Inducements for Big Money National Advertisers—Names Back Stage and in Lobbies

Cleveland, Feb. 28.

Under date of Feb. 20 in a letter signed by Wm. J. Sullivan, local managers with theatres belonging to the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association have been advised that a discount of 45 per cent. will be allowed from present prices for advertising in the benefit program of the National Vaudeville Artists. The benefits are dated for Sunday evening, April 22, at the Metropolitan, Amsterdam, Hippodrome, Knickerbocker and Jolson theatres, New York.

The letter appears to accept that house managers will become advertising solicitors for the N. V. A. It says:

"Please be advised you are privileged to sell advertising." No offer of commission is made to the managers.

Inducement

An extra inducement is sounded this season for national advertisers, with the demand for the regular space apparently falling off to the extent that a cut rate of 45 per cent. off is offered in the hope of helping the N. V. A. slug on the actor for the yearly take. For $1,000 a national advertiser is offered a double page with a promise that an engraved card will be hung backstage in the Keith-Albee-Orpheum theatres and the name of the advertiser will also be printed on a card containing other names for the lobbies of the same houses.

The letter carries a notice that the closing date for advertising copy is March 31. While no commission is offered the managers who successfully solicit, neither is any punishment threatened for any manager who may throw the letter into the debris.

47 ROUTINES IN 1 ACT

These are divided into 39 straight, with eight held out for encores.

The cabaret entertainers appear from 11 p. m. until about 4 a. m. nightly. During this time they average each night from 25 to 30 of the routines. The latter are mostly songs with comedy business, including talk worked into them. Each routine averages around eight minutes. None is without business of some nature and all are participated in by the three boys, Jimmy Durante, Lew Clayton and Eddie Jackson. Their salary at the nite club is $3,000 weekly.

It is thought to be the largest number of routines ever in continual use by a single act. A list of them is posted in the boys' dressing room at the Parody where they were counted by a Variety reporter.

ARTHUR PAGE'S HEAD

Stopped Panic in Pawtucket Theatre—In Audience at Time

Providence, Feb. 28.

The speedy action of Arthur Page, vaudeville actor, in jumping to the stage of the Capitol, Pawtucket, and putting on an impromptu act, averted a panic among the 1,000 patrons who became alarmed when a film exploded in the projection room during the movie show.

Page, of Page and Shaw, was catching the movie from the front of the house. A flicker on the screen warned him of what had happened and he was on his feet in an instant. He pleaded with the audience to keep their seats and proceeded to divert their attention from the blazing booth by staging an act all his own in company with the organist of the house, who did not leave the console.

The sprinklers got in their deadly work and in a short time the house was quieted and the vaudeville end of the bill was put on.

A Club Record?

Frank Small's Dancing Debutantes may have established a record when playing four club dates in one night between the hours of 7.30 and 12.30.

In each of the four places Cavanaugh's Restaurant, Vanderbilt, Waldorf and Commodore hotels, the girls made six changes of costume. John Robbins made the booking.

Marx Bros. Booked

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Four Marx brothers will continue playing picture houses. They have been booked for three weeks by Balaban & Katz at $10,000 a week, opening at the Chicago, Chicago, April 2.

The booking was engineered by Walter Meyers, of the William Morris office, who also negotiated the deal whereby they played their initial two-week picture house engagements for West Coast here and in San Francisco.

The Marx boys have a supporting company of 18.

BARD'S STAGE WORK

Los Angeles, Feb. 18.

Ben Bard (Bard and Pearl), who has been doing picture work for Fox, is en route to New York to make personal appearances in the Fox houses.

Bard is under contract to Fox Film and is said to be working out part of his contract by stage appearances. He has about six months to go on a year contract.

Loughran's Monolog Costing Keith's $2,500

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, is playing the current week at Keith's with a monolog and a few rounds of shadow boxing.

Tommy just returned from a three-week trip to the south seas—not for his health. He was accompanied by Rev. Joseph Kelly, who coached Tommy on his spiel.

Lester Jefferies hung the Loughran act on the bill for a slap of $2,500 for the week.

George Young, directing manager of Keith's, has been going to banquets, meetings and the like arranging parties of Tommy's friends to try and write off the heavy dough.

AUTO SMASH CANCELS ACT

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Orange Grove Trio, male harmony singers who closed with "The Connecticut Yankee" at the Mayan, replaced Robin and Hood at the Orpheum.

Latter act, formerly Peggy Bremmer and Brother, were hurt in an auto accident in San Francisco, according to a wire received at the local Orpheum.

LYONS' TWO VITAPHONES

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Jimmy Lyons, vaude monologist, now playing West Coast theatres for Fanchon and Marco, has just finished making two Vitaphone records.

MORE HIT AND RUN MARRIAGES LEAD TO CHICAGO'S DIVORCE MILL

Guy Voyer Gets Divorce and 3-Year-Old Son—Monologist Couldn't Stand Wife's Socks—Couple Split After 13 Days—"Follies" Girl Gets Alimony

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Another brisk week for the Chi divorce mill.

Guy Voyer secured a divorce from Marian Arminger on desertion charges through Attorney Ben Ehrlich. Married 12 years, Voyer secures custody of a three-year-old son.

Early Kylberg, monologist, lived up to the standard of his calling by getting a decree from Ruth Edith Kylberg on the charge that she was "of austere temperament, guilty of passionate outbursts of obscene language and that she socked him on the jaw twice. It was a short marital affair, marriage taking place in March, 1927, and separation occurring a month later. Attorney Leo A. Weisskopf represented Kylberg, who has sailed for Sweden.

Jack Born, playing in Mae Murray's "Merry Widow Revue," has filed suit through Attorney Phil R. Davis against Mildred Born, formerly known as Yvonne Holly (Holly Sisters). The Borns were married in September, 1927, and, according to Jack, never shared bed or board. Furthermore, he says, the little gal was caught in emoarrassing circumstances just a week after she had pledged fidelity to her hubby. Which made Born burn.

Mabel Heckner Krueger, of "Criss Cross," has asked Judge Lynch to grant her a divorce from George C. Krueger, musician, claiming he blew out on her in 1925 without reason. They were married in 1923.

Lasted 13 Days

Mona Kearney married Robert Kearney of "Artists and Models" in October, 1927, and lived with him 13 days before alleged cruelty made her call it off, says her suit for divorce, filed through Attorney Weisskopf. She says she couldn't stand the knocks.

Florence Barrel Allen, Foster girl, has plenty to say in her suit filed through Attorney Davis against Joseph Barrel. She claims Joe had a habit of walloping her and at one time took $1,800 of her mother's money. Her protests, she alleges, were greeted with additional wallops. She'd rather not be a Barrel. They were married in April, 1926, and separated the following month.

Kitty Kemper secured a divorce from Charles L. Kemper (Kemper and Bayart) on desertion charges. Attorney Weisskopf, representing the husband, arranged for a settlement of $25 weekly alimony as long as the girl retains her divorcee standing. She was also granted the right to resume her maiden and professional name of Kitty Dawson.

Lucille Greiner, formerly Lucille Storer, "Follies" girl, was given a divorce decree and $500 monthly alimony at the expense of C. A. (Dick) Greiner, son of a millionaire leather merchant. In the event of her husband's death, Mrs. Greiner will receive a $50,000 lump settlement. They were married in February, 1917. She charges cruelty.

Charles Kaley, temperamental band leader, working in the Marks Bros. theatres, is the defendant in a suit for separate maintenance filed by Mrs. Alfred Cohen Kaley, his second bride within three months. In December, Kaley married Anna Williams of the Williams Sisters, with the marriage immediately annulled, through efforts of the girl's mother.

A month later Kaley eloped with Mrs. Cohen. This second wife charges Kaley wasn't on the level with her as far as dames were concerned, and that he deserted her Feb. 21. Kaley's income is named at $500 weekly. He has been restrained from leaving court jurisdiction until the suit has been decided.

BUSTER CRUSELLO'S SENTENCE

Buster Crusello, 24, dancer, of 185 West 134th street, was sentenced to three months in the Workhouse by the Justices of Special Sessions following his plea of guilty to petty larceny.

According to Mrs. Della Leonard, of 263 West 138th street, Crusello stole a watch valued at $35 from a dresser in her home while he was visiting there on Oct. 4.

WAS DOROTHY BURNHAM SOCKED BY MANAGER?

Jackson, of Loew's, London, Ont., Counterclaims—Artists on Same Bill Take Sides

Who socked who and why is the basis of a controversy now raging by wire between Manager Jackson of Loew's, London, Ont., the Loew home office and Dorothy Burnham, singie, who claims she was made to weep by the brutal treatment of the manager.

The argument is said to have developed when Miss Burnham asked that her scenery might be taken down early Wednesday night so she could make an early train.

Miss Burnham charges Jackson used vile language and struck her. Jackson claims Miss Burnham did the same to him.

Miss Burnham says Walter Yant, Thora Keeler Revue, Ralph Wolverton, Helen Turner and George and Ray La Mar, on the bill with her, will prove her side. The manager says the stage hands will prove his side.

Actress the Victim Of Unsolved Murder

St. Louis, Feb. 28.

The wavering life-line of Mary Lowery, former local actress and once the wife of a prominent attorney here, was snapped suddenly with the finding of her body in a ditch near Detroit, after an unsolved murder. Miss Lowery had been shot to death. Detroit police wired here that they were seeking her husband, Joe Lowery, missing since the actress' body was found.

Miss Lowery was the former wife of Attorney Anthony Canzoneri, who divorced her several years ago. The body was identified last week, shortly after the murder, by the young woman's uncle, George Du Cray, druggist.

A daughter of the attorney and the former actress has been making her home in East St. Louis with the Du Cray family. Mrs. Lowery, since she left the stage had lived in Chicago and Detroit.

M. B. MILLER OF HIP, YOUNGSTOWN, SUICIDE

Youngstown, O., Feb. 28.

Markham B. Miller, president of the Hippodrome Theatre Co., of this city committed suicide Thursday. He was found in his bed shortly after noon by his wife, with a bullet wound just below his heart. Taken to the hospital in a semi-conscious condition he passed away a few hours later.

His brother, C. W. Miller, manager of the Hippodrome, stated he could give no reason for the act. The dead man had been suffering from sinus trouble and the theory advanced is that he was temporarily deranged from the pain and shot himself with a revolver that he always kept under his pillow.

Markham B. Miller was 56, also president of the H. L. McElroy Furniture Co., of this city, and was active in the conduct of its business. He was president of the Ohio Furniture Dealers' Association. He and his brother held the controlling interest in the Hippodrome.

Deceased was a member of the Elks, St. Albans Lodge, F. & A. M., and Scottish Rites bodies in Youngstown and Cleveland.

LOWRY'S VITA CONTRACT

Skouras Boys Fix $5,000 Deal—Give M. C. 3 Wks. Vacation

Chicago, Feb. 28.

While in New York Skouras brothers spoke to the Warners about Ed Lowry, their St. Louis m. c. They topped it off by signing a $5,000 Vitaphone contract for Lowry.

They are giving Lowry three weeks' vacation to keep the Coast engagement and are paying all expenses.

LAYMAN IN UTAH WANTS BETTER ACTS

Not Enough Talent Seen at Provo—Inquires About Old Timers Who Entertained

Provo, Utah, Feb. 20.

Editor Variety:

I want to ask what has become of the good variety?

Vaudeville such as shown 20 years ago.

I am a resident of Provo, Utah, and not in the show business but attend the shows here at the Paramount theatre, our vaudeville theatre in Provo.

I understand this theatre is booked by the Ackerman & Harris Circuit. Here are the line-up of acts we have been getting: dancing acts, two and three or more on each bill; also too many singing acts, and the so-called flash acts with but little talent.

What has become of the acrobats, the sketches and good novelty acts we have seen in the days gone by?

I will ask why we can't get these acts?

Where have all the old-timers gone to? Every bill I have seen here has pretty nearly all young people, but they don't give the talent the old-timer had.

I read Variety every week and I note where there are some of the old-timers still left, but they don't come out this way. I have asked the manager here what is the trouble that he cannot get the better class of acts? He says he has tried other circuits and their acts are no better. He says why should he pay big money to the larger circuits and get no better acts than Ackerman & Harris is furnishing him?

I hope you can tell me what has become of the old variety acts.

Yours for better vaudeville,

Albert A. Ford.

BAL LLOYD IN BELLEVUE

Pass Up Nite Club Bill—Gave Personal Property for Taxi Fares

Bal Lloyd, brother of Al Lloyd, and formerly in vaudeville with Gilbert Wells, is in Bellevue Hospital for observation.

Lloyd visited a night club accompanied by another chap whom he said had plenty of coin, something around three millions. Lloyd ordered champagne and when presented with a bill for $125, started wandering about in taxi cabs. After riding up and down Fifth avenue the driver called for a showdown, Lloyd then saying he had no money, but giving the driver his overcoat.

Lloyd engaged another taxi with the same result. He gave that driver his signet ring. A third taximan desposited him at the East 57th street police station and from there he was sent to Bellevue.

"Musketeers" Sellout In Capital at $4.40

Washington, Feb. 28.

Omitting Monday, which was held for a dress rehearsal, Ziegfeld's new "Three Musketeers," with Dennis King starred, got close to $40,000 on five-night and two-matinee week. This at $4.40 and the first time Ziegfeld has gotten that price for a new one. He previously sold them at $3.50, stating no new show was worth more.

National was practically sold out before the engagement opened.

Katherine Cornell, in "The Letter," at the Belasco, ran to around $12,000, in spite of much adverse comment on the piece.

Poli's was dying with the local Washington Opera Company, in fact did "die" on Friday night, house failing to open for the final three scheduled performances.

"COMPANIONATE" DUO MAKING A GO OF IT

Girl Wants to Be Stage Dancer —Hubby Ushering, Bellhopping and in College

Kansas City, Feb. 28.

Josephine Haldeman-Julius, companionate bride of Aubrey Roselle, whose marriage was recently given great publicity, has been busy turning down professional appearance offers. Young woman went to Lawrence, Kans., last week to appear in a dancing act at the local theatre. Husband is a student at Kansas State University there. When the local papers gave it notice, the booking agents got busy. She was sought for road shows, tent shows and vaudeville, but declined. One agent left contracts, and the young couple may consider these later.

The bride states she wants to become a dancer, but that her school work comes first. She has enrolled in Lawrence high school, where she can be with her husband, who is working his way through college. As he receives only a small allowance from his parents, he puts in some time as usher at the local theatre and as bellhop at the leading hotel. The kids are trying.

COLLECTING COMMISSION

Pan Agency in N. Y. Talks It Over With Agents

A direct collection agency protecting its agents may be installed by the Pantages Circuit's New York office unless present plans go astray.

At a meeting held last week with the eastern representatives of the Pan Circuit and the 12 enfranchised agents the matter was taken up.

If accepted it will mean that both the booking office and agents' commissions will be deducted from salaries of acts playing the circuit, with the agents receiving their percentage from the New York office instead of depending upon acts to remit.

Perlberg Weds Miss Brox, Then Books Act in L. A.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

William Perlberg, of the William Morris office, and who came here but recently, hopped to Pasadena Feb. 15 and married Bobby Brox, of the Three Brox Sisters.

Miss Brox had been in Vancouver but came here to visit friends. She had known Perlberg in the east. The couple motored to Pasadena, where they were married by a Justice of the Peace.

To be sure his wife stays around for some time Perlberg has booked the Brox Sisters for four weeks with Fanchon and Marco, opening at Loew's State here March 16.

Ben Bard as M. C.

Ben Bard is using up 12 weeks of his Fox picture contract to appear as master of ceremonies in the Fox theatres. He started this week for Fox in New York.

Bard appears in "Dressed to Kill," a Fox feature film that will open at the Roxy, New York, March 10. He will probably make a personal appearance at the Roxy with the picture, along with Mary Astor, also in New York, on her honeymoon, and the co-featured lead with Edmund Lowe.

Doctor's Stage Return

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 28.

Having given up the stage years ago to study medicine, Dr. Sydney H. Smith, well known physician of Council Bluffs, Ia., has in turn given up his practice to return to the stage.

According to a statement by Dr. Smith, now that he has made sufficient money from his medical practice to live comfortably, he will return to the rostrum, his first love.

Arthur Byron's Skit

Arthur Byron, from legit, for vaudeville, will be equipped with a skit by Edmund Burke entitled "A Family Affair."

Albees Returning

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Albee, Mr. and Mrs. Reed Albee and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Laudor return to New York from Palm Beach this week.

KEITH'S MERGED AGENCIES IN CHICAGO DIRECTED BY PIAZZA

Brought Back From Coast to Direct Keith's Western and Association—Tink Humphries to Rebuild Booking Organization in Middle West

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Ben Piazza, of the Orpheum Circuit's coast staff, will go to Chicago to assume general management of the merged Keith-Albee-Orpheum booking agencies in that city.

They are Keith's Western office and the Association, the latter including the Orpheum Jr. houses not booked from New York.

Chicago, Feb. 28.

With the report that Ben Piazza will have the general management of the combined Keith and Orpheum agencies here, it's said that Tink Humphries, present Keith representative at this point, will make a supreme attempt to rebuild the Association. This is possible through Tink's popularity and the confidence he has inspired in all mid-western vaudeville.

Piazza is said to have been selected by the Keth-Albee-Orpheum heads in New York after they concluded that Humphries' valuable standing should be commercialized to the nth degree in bringing back to the Association the prestige it lost under the Orpheum's local administration.

Another report is that Sam Kutter Kahl will resign. Kahl has declared himself that he will be either boss out here or nothing for the K-A-O. It looks like the cipher.

Jolson Film in Fox Houses

When "The Jazz Singer," the Al Jolson Vita picture (Warners) plays the Fox vaude houses, there will be no curtailment of the regular vaude section.

The Jolson film is booked for the Academy and Audubon week April 16, with subsequent bookings for Fox's Savoy, Ridgewood and Jamaica.

Fox houses are wired, for movietone, so can take the Vita talking and musical attachment.

LOEW'S RADIO TEAM

Happiness Boys, of radio fame, open for Loew next week at the Willard. Billy Jones and Ernest Hare, as the team is otherwise known, are limited to the metropolitan houses because of radio and recording contracts.

Team has turned down picture house offers in the past because of the greater lucrativeness in their morning phonograph dates.

PASS TAX INSURES MGRS.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 28.

Employees in the 73 houses of the Butterfield Circuit are to be insured for $1,000 each under group life insurance, policies in force from March 1.

Premiums will be paid by assessing a tax of 10 cents upon each pass issued for free entrance to any of the theatres.

T. O. B. A. WILL BETTER BACKSTAGE CONDITIONS

As a result of some of the squawks made against dressing room conditions in some of the T. O. B. A. houses, colored circuit's heads intend to remedy this as well as other existing conditions causing discomfort to the artists.

Of the houses specified, the Orpheum, Newark, N. J., comes in for the worst panning.

MARRIAGES

Frances Elisabeth Studley, picture actress, and Robert James Tyson, wealthy San Franciscan, have taken out a marriage license at Los Angeles.

ORPHEUM-WVMA PRESS STAFFS TURNED LOOSE

Monyhan Handling Everything —"Death Trail" and Fair Dept. Being Eliminated?

Chicago, Feb. 28.

First official news of retrenchment by Keith-Albee in taking over the Orpheum Circuit is the entire discontinuance of Orpheum and W. V. M. A. publicity departments. A staff of 12 men in both departments was given air.

Floyd Scott, Orpheum's general publicity director, will return to New York. Frank Monyhan will handle routine picture and billing matter for both local offices. He has been moved from 11th floor offices to desk space on the fifth level.

It is understood the fair department is next on the list to be thrown out.

It is also reported on good authority that the Orpheum Coast route, commonly known as the "death trail," will be done away with. Also that the Orpheum executive offices, occupying half the fourth floor in the State-Lake building, will be given up May 1.

So far no division of authority has been made here. At present all K-A-O business will be handled on the fifth floor.

Miles Cancels Act Which Played K-A Detroit House

Detroit, Feb. 28.

Reverse English was seen to work Sunday when Charles H. Miles, owner of the Oriental, exercised the opposition clause in his Pan franchise and refused to permit the Gloria DeVon company to go on.

About three months or so ago, the act worked the Uptown, K-A neighborhood house here. Miles' clause prohibits acts playing any competing stand within a year previous to its Oriental booking. Thario's Circus was substituted.

It is reported DeVon will protest the cancellation.

TURNS BACK PARK LANE

Loew Gives Up O'Reilly-Gould House—Combo Policy Again

Loew has turned back the Park Lane, New York, to O'Reilly and Gould, owners. The switch sends the house into a vaule-film policy this week (Feb. 27), with Sidney Rheingold, Jack Linder Agency, booking five acts on a split week.

Loew took over operation of the house on a percentage arrangement last December and installed a straight film policy.

Prior to Loew taking it over the house had been playing vaude and pictures, the acts booked by W. N. Stephens, then connected with the Gus Sun Agency.

Loew's turnback is said to have been precipitated through the house not clicking with straight films and the circuit not wanting to book in vaudeville because of the Park Lane's proximity to Loew's Orpheum, a few blocks away.

Goldenberg Succeeds Jack McKeon in Acme

A change became effective in the Acme Booking Offices Monday in the Bond Building when Jack McKeon, president and general booking manager, was succeeded by William K. Goldenberg of Philadelphia. McKeon resigned and severed all connections with the Acme organization.

The Acme is a subsidized organization controlled by the Stanley Company of America and formed to take care of the booking of all theatres operated by the Stanley Co.

McKeon sailed Saturday for London. He had been the head of the Acme since its organization.

Goldenberg has been in close touch with Stanley for a long time. He acted as secretary for eight years to the late Jules Mastbaum. He's a clean cut man, easy of approach and possessed of a magnetic personality.

Mr. Goldenberg said he would have nothing to do with the vaudeville booking for the Stanley houses; that they would be continued to be booked by Harold Kemp and David Beehler in the Keith-Albee-Orpheum offices. Beehler handles mainly the vaude attractions for the Stanley chain through New Jersey.

Theatre's Free Acts

Third Avenue theatre, 31st street and Third avenue, is reported as getting practically all of its acts free. Turns avail themselves of the house to break in new routines and combos.

"Orange Blossoms," a 16-people flash, used the theatre to rehearse in for two weeks and then played three days gratis with everybody reported satisfied.

3 Orpheums' 3-a-Days

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

Within the next three weeks three more Orpheum circuit houses will toss off their two-a-day policies to take on three-a-day and a picture.

Tomorrow (Feb. 29) the Orpheum in Winnipeg takes up the "grind" with Vancouver playing follow the leader the next week. And the week thereafter the three show policy becomes operative in Seattle.

Orpheum now has but two twice daily houses on the Coast—here and in Los Angeles. Oakland only plays two-a-day Mondays to Fridays.

Omaha, Feb. 28.

Orpheum, playing two-a-day, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, when it went to three, will turn to the three-daily grind all week.

Scale of 50-75 at night will be continued, but other performances not indicated. New policy of continuous from 1 to 11 p. m. goes into effect March 4.

Minn. Is Dubious Over Orpheum Policy Change

Minneapolis, Feb. 28.

Resentment is heard on every hand here over the change of the Hennepin-Orpheum theatre's vaude policy from two to three shows daily and from reserved to non-reserved seats, with top prices slashed from 75 to 50 cents and matinees to 35 cents.

The general prediction is the new policy, effective this week, will not prove successful.

The apparent impression among theatre-goers is that the Hennepin-Orpheum has dropped into the category of cheap vaudeville houses, like the Seventh Street theatre Association house here.

Billboards' advertisements call the policy change "good news," which appears to be rubbing it in. Newspaper announcements insist that there will be no change in the number of acts or the quality of the shows, but you can't convince the lay public that the house has not been removed from the ranks of first-class theatres. Newspaper ads carry the line "Keith-Orpheum Vaudeville," with Keith preceding Orpheum.

BUCK JONES EAST—FOX

Buck Jones, former Fox western star who left that organization because of reported dissatisfaction with the prominence given Tom Mix, is to appear in the east in Fox theatres.

After playing one week for the Orpheum at their local stand Jones hopped a train and is en route to New York to fill a booking deal made by the Los Angeles William Morris office through Bill Perlberg. Jones opens in the east March 12 and will play Fox's Academy and Audubon.

BROADWAY'S BIG RENT

Opposite the Astor and also occupying the block front between 44th and 45th streets is the New York Theatre building, owned by Paramount. It is estimated worth between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000. The wide discrepancy in the two valuations on the opposite sides of Broadway is partially explained through the Astor site having a depth of 300 feet, with the New York but 160 feet.

World's Greatest Publicity

Though the Astor is paying Broadway's biggest rent, its location is not considered the most favorable in Times Square. Realty experts say that the most valuable site, taking in its publicity possibilities and also mentioning it as the best in the world for that purpose, is the triangular site from 47th to 48th street between Broadway and 7th avenue. The property's fronts on four streets is majorly employed now for advertising signs. Walter J. Salmon is lessor of the entire triangle and is reported securing a net income of over $400,000 from the ordinary looking buildings, in construction and height.

On the 48th street end and about 75 feet deep, Salmon has an income of $250,000. He holds a renewed lease on the property owned by the Mather Estate. It is for 21 years at $25,000 annually. The northern end of the plot is 125 feet deep, owned by an assembled group and renting to Salmon for $36,000 a year. His net for that is around $150,000. The 48th street front is said to return to the lessor $225,000 yearly for the sign displays on it.

Despite the $850,000 annual rental charge the Astor is under, it's not New York's highest rent nor cost hotel. The Waldorf-Astoria is reported paying $900,000 with its land alone at 5th avenue, 33d to 34th streets, valued at $7,500,000. Another topper of the Astor is the Hotel Pennsylvania, opposite the station, on 7th avenue. Its rental reaches nearly $1,000,000, with property carrying the estimated valuation of over $15,000,000.

Muschenheims have operated the Astor since it opened, about 20 years ago. The family is one of restaurateurs and got its start from a comparatively small but popular table d'hote on West 31st street, called The Arena.

ILL AND INJURED

Austin Smith, playwright, is in a hospital at La Jolla, Cal., with heart trouble.

Norman Trevor, after a recent illness, has left the California Lutheran hospital, Los Angeles.

Mrs. Reginald Barker, wife of the picture director, is recovering from a major operation at California Lutheran Hospital, Los Angeles.

Arthur Ripley, scenario editor for Harry Langdon, is in the Osteopathic Hospital, Los Angeles, recovering from pneumonia.

Marlow and Burke were compelled to cancel last week, due to the illness of Martha Burke. The team will resume their vaude dates upon Miss Burke's recovery.

George Clark of the Aerial Clarks is recovering from a severely strained back, suffered in doing one of his stunts three weeks ago. Now able to appear, though in some pain.

Lew Duthers (Reed and Duthers), ill in San Francisco. Reed working as single in Los Angeles.

Howard Reeves Husted, brother-in-law of Frank Dayton, said to be a movie actor, arrived in New York City, Feb. 27, on the "Martinique" from Columbia, S. A., where he was taken ill. He was moved to Bellevue Hospital.

Joe Schenck was forced to leave the bill at Loew's State, New York, last Saturday, ill with laryngitis. For several days he did little more than play piano, Gus Van carrying the song assignment alone. Schenck was unable to appear at the Silver Slipper either and was ordered away by his physician.

Earl Carroll has been confined to his bed since last Friday with an acute attack of sinus. Contrary to reports production of his next "Vanities" will not be started until late in March.

STANLEY
(PITTSBURGH)

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.

Amidst pomp the long awaited opening of the new 4,000-seat Stanley occurred yesterday at 3 p. m. A dinner at the William Penn for the officials of the company and other prominent people followed the dedication.

Opening performance was scheduled at 4:30 and started exactly 10 minutes late, very good for an opening. Entire house was reserved with $1.65 for orchestra and $1.10 for balcony with the few tickets that were sold taken the first day of the seat sale.

The theatre's 4,000 seats are on two floors. Auditorium constructed to allow holdout standees to see the show. The chandelier hanging from the main ceiling is the largest yet seen in a theatre, being 8 feet, a mile in circumference, with other smaller chandeliers and light fixtures neatly placed. There was no confusion at all in entering and much credit is due James Balmer, manager.

Also a word or two about the fine publicity campaign that preceded the opening would not be amiss, not a theatre being overlooked from banners on the streets to fronts of street cars and outdoor billing. Charlie Raymond is the man behind the guns in this department.

"Star-Spangled Banner," sung by Virginia Futrelle, officially opened. Then dedicatory speeches by Max Kline, Irving Rossheim, president of Stanley, and a representative for the governor, who could not be present, all this broadcast.

Phil Spitalny led the orchestra in the overture, "Capriccio Italien," and did a "B" number, "Wabash Blues," featuring his cornetist. Very well done and went over big.

News reel followed, with Fox and Paramount splitting the shots. "Spirit of Pittsburgh," with the Stanley male ensemble, appropriate, a scene of the steel mills, with men singing. A fables and a scenic followed the tableau.

Elias Breeskin, violinist, and Steve Wenger, singer, did their stuff while scenic was unreeled. Anatole Friedland and his "Club Anatole Revue" followed. It has not changed much since playing the de luxe houses. Phil Spitalny's Victor bunch played behind the acts, under the direction of Al Jockers, although Phil did a number with the band.

Feature was "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and was well liked.

Mark down another successful opening, and, with Gilda Gray booked next week and Sophie Tucker to follow, it looks like crowded houses.

If they continue to give them the shows there need be no worry for the executives who manage this one.
Bahmer.

CAPITOL
(NEW YORK)
("Tick Tock"—Unit)

New York, Feb. 25.

Over the two-hour limit again this week, but the customers won't mind it. With Norma Shearer's "Latest from Paris" (M-G-M) on the screen, house was doing plenty of business Saturday afternoon. Practical capacity with possibly 100 seats open in the back downstairs and standees waiting for a break down front. The full program hasn't been under two hours since the Capitol public was same in here. Current presentation is the first constructed locally and solely for the Capitol. Titled "Tick Tock," and it'll do.

Good looking set backgrounded in blue with the stage band of 26 in black patent leather coats grouped under the usual rear platform. Only harsh note was the out and out steal of the Warings' routine for "Ice Cream." Lifted bodily and so raw as to be objectionable. That the Capitol boys fell 'way below the Warings' on execution goes without saying, the latter combination having used this at the Palace, New York, three weeks ago. No attempt to disguise the lift.

Amongst the specialties, Bayes and Speck, two boys from vaude, did as well as any with a few old gags, some comedy chatter and hoofing. They were allowed seven minutes in front of the band. Al and Gussie Bloom did a burlesque Apache with a new twist (how to handle a wife), and Frohman and Gary, two more youths, offered vocalizing.

Helen York sopranoed a bit and 12 Rasch girls looked great and twice routined neatly. The girls were especially sightly in black and silver, and then yellow gowns surmounted by large hats which looked summery.

Nothing of smash potentialities during the 31 minutes of stage time but smooth, fairly fast and a few laughs. Band concentrated on the "Ice Cream" thing, used its dialect pianist for a chorus and one of the Frohman-Gary team for an effeminate interpretation of the lyrics. House liked it.

Orchestra started playing behind a drop which was dominated by a large and lighted clock with the lift revealing swinging pendulums on each side. Staircases on both sides were used for the finale, which permitted a mammoth pendulum to come down from the flies with a girl and boy therein, plus a platform drop rising to reveal inserts of life figures, lighted from the rear.

Entire Publix-Loew production staff present for the second Saturday show and ushers perspiring freely trying to find loge seats for the exces. Even a couple of agents there. Stage band sounds better than it did for the first P-L show three weeks ago.

"Morning, Noon and Night," the overture, after which the 66 men in the pit took a bow. Then into a seven-minute newsreel which had four shots from M-G-M and one each from Paramount and Pathe. Paramount's Navy target practice stuff might as well have been from its library. However, the newsreel claims the Navy ordered no targets to be shown and no splashes of shells as they hit the water. Why, only the Navy knows—but the sea dogs should remember they've done enough lately to curtail enlistment without barring any spectacular stuff from the country's screens which might help enrollment. In view of recent disasters, the Navy right now needs all the boosts it can get with the home populace and the screen is a pretty fair medium.

No organ recital from H. B. Murtagh on the first de luxe show and nary a "short."
Sid.

WARFIELD
(SAN FRANCISCO)

San Francisco, Feb. 25.

Stage show quite draggy at the second performance today, opening. Some high spots but mostly ordinary entertainment.

Al Herman is featured, but for some unknown reason the "black smoke" failed to click as is his wont. Caught just a few days ago over in Oakland, Al was a riot. Today he barely registered. Maybe the pay mob didn't relish the Herman entrance and his bid for applause before he offered his wares. The first "demand" for a bigger reception might have passed unnoticed but when Herman repeated it the blackface did not seem to sit so solidly. Then, too, it looked to the casual spectator that Al didn't try any too hard to please 'em.

Other draggy spots, notably the burlesque of the orchestra "quitting in disgust" because Russ Wolf always performed with his back to them." Several of the band boys were introduced as "celebs," with Rube leading the applause to bring 'em on stage. Finally the boys are back, declaring that having watched Rube from the front they figured they'd better get behind him. It didn't seem to click at all with the Saturday afternoon crowd—and there was quite a sprinkling of customers.

Applause winners were Barnett and Clark, nifty dancing team, and Marietta, contortional dancer. Opening overture was a cute selection of Puccini's "hits," with Wolf soloing on the cornet. Nicely received.

Those four talented singers, the Cheer Leaders, are back after a week's absence in San Jose, and once more proceeded to entrench themselves as Warfield favorites. Their youthful, collegiate appearance wins them new friends at every show. The boys are now out of the band, where they have been spotted, and rightly should be as the public can't be fooled too often about "musicians" who turn out to be singers.

A band number, "Changes," with the Cheer Leaders singing the refrain, and then Marietta. This gal comes on all dressed up in white. She doffs coat and hat and does her act very much undressed. Just a few beads. Her contortional novelty dance was the gravy. "Flying Romeos" on screen.
Edwards.

T. & D.
(OAKLAND)

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 24.

E. Max Bradfield, band leader and m. c., is in town after an absence of 10 months, this time at the T. & D. He opened this week and started clicking off the bat. Bradfield has a nice personality, is a thorough musician and knows how to "sell" acts. The house band now bears the title of "The Versatilians."

A Fanchon and Marco show surrounds the new leader, and some capable talent is on view. Topping was Al Herman, who tied it up. He's the same Herman of old. Hokum, kidding the customers, by-passages with the m. c. and the band boys, and a couple of comedy songs. A show-stopper in every way.

Opening overture followed a "Hello" by Bradfield. Bradfield soloed while his co-worker, Al Kaplan, up from L. A. for a few weeks, responded on the trombone.

Armanda Chirot, recently off an operating table, on next and wowed. Then, duetting with Josi Maranda, registered solidly again. White and Manning drew a lot of laughs, but failed to score as heavily as at the Warfield (San Francisco) two weeks ago. Deserved more than they got. Herman followed for nearly 30 minutes.

Closing band number was a pop, with "West Point" (M-G) the screen leader.
Edwards.

MINNEAPOLIS
(STATE)

Minneapolis, Feb. 23.

State stage shows these days are running largely to organ presentations, excepting when outside acts are brought in. When the elaborate and costly stage band presentations failed as drawing cards F. & R. probably figured it was useless to continue making a splurge. The organ presentations are comparatively inexpensive and modest, but they prove highly entertaining and effective.

This week's presentation, built around a pop musical number, is a pretty conceit worked out by Eddie Dundstedter, house organist, and C. P. Murphy, head of the F. & R. production department. It opens with Dundstedter giving his organ interpretation of the number while the words are flashed on a screen. The selection is tantalizingly catchy as played by Dundstedter. Screen ascends to reveal a girl sitting on a cobweb-streaked half-moon suspended in mid-air. A youth in white Pierrette costume, returns a mandolin-like instrument attached to a broom handle, sings the verses of the song to the girl, who later warbles one of the choruses herself. At the end of the song six State ballet girls, wearing tight-fitting colorful Pierrette suits, are on for a clever broom dance to the same melody. Dundstedter, of course, furnishes the musical accompaniment for the singers as well as the dancers. A toe dance by a pair of girls in regulation ballet attire follows.

Rise of the back plush curtain shows a huge rope spider web set against another curtain of green plush. The girls, spread over the web, do a bit of kicking and cavorting from their positions while the singers offer another chorus.

International News opens the show with some interesting shots. Two Vitaphone numbers in succession, "The Serpentine," a dance offering, and "Realization," Hugh Herbert's playlet, both well received. "The Flag," a patriotic screen drama in colors, was particularly appropriate for Washington's Birthday. Feature film, "London After Midnight" (M.-G.), did not take so well with feminine fans.

Presentation is a good example of what can be accomplished in the way of pleasing stage entertainment at a small outlay by the display of a bit of ingenuity. Business off, due to the weather and picture's unpopularity.

METROPOLITAN
(LOS ANGELES)

Los Angeles, Feb. 23.

Lot of flash and color in Fanchon and Marco's "Pan-American," with Bee Jackson, Gaucho Marimba Band and the "Pan-American" girls, otherwise 16 F. and M. dolls. These girls were practically the essence of the show, which started off the opening day with retarded speed and not enough vim. Opened with a line layout from one end to another, giving full play to an eyefull of scenery that couldn't miss attracting.

Tropical idea carried all the way until the finale, when, for the sake of a nifty specialty by Miss Jackson, the spirit was brought back to the native heath.

Business considerably above average at first show Thursday, declining somewhat later in the afternoon and rapidly rising again in the evening.

Al Lyons and his musical gang were on the stage all of the time and blended perfectly with the surroundings. Lyons had little to do aside from tendering some good-mannered introductions and lending a hand where needed. Gaucho Marimba Band, recently at Grauman's Chinese when the Fairbanks picture played there, came to the fore in the opening with well-selected numbers and elegantly played. Seven, with one deftly handling the gourde, native instrument, looking like an oversized Indian club.

While the boys were playing "La Paloma," Dorothy Adaire, blonde baby from the line, went through an acrobatic specialty to the tune, and scored with figure, looks and a ability. This gal should be spotted in as many specialties as available.

Marimba soloist, Senor Petroza, made an impression with his cultivated tenor voice, although singing in Spanish. He is a "lady killer" on appearance and knows how to deliver without detracting from tonal qualities.

Miss Jackson flashed a new twister, titled "La Runpa," otherwise some hot and heavy movements of figure and form. She knows her wiggles. Formation routine by the group of gals had each on their toes and showing good form.

Lyons swung his combination into action with an arrangement on Spanish-American melodies, winding up with a medley of tunes that made a well-timed finish. Lyons' personally trained vocal trio in this got over with harmonious warbles through the megaphone. Senor Petroza again scored with a Latin number in English.

Fanchon's desert dance by the girls in line set the pace up several notches, and indicated an even balance in group routine which was of interest.

Although throwing the atmosphere out of line, Miss Jackson's "Varsity Stomp" was liked. Her collegiate "hotsy-totsy" is at least different. Time table of the stage portion was kept within conservative boundary at 36 minutes.

Paramount had few items of newsworthy interest in its news reel. Mostly topical events without unusual angles. On the screen, "Chicago."

"Mitey" Ann Leaf, personality kid at the organ, picked up the strains on the console and let loose with some rhythmical notes that kept the mob in overtime. Miss Leaf is not doing any feature stuff for the present, but more than likely will before long.

ROXY
(NEW YORK)

New York, Feb. 26.

The Roxyettes, in a Joseph Nussbaum offering entitled "Fascinating Vamp," outstanders in the first half of the stage show. Attired in gowns that make up in attractiveness what they lack in length, the girls are presented in a new series of drills and formations, all pleasing. Applause steady and strong.

"The Gay Musketeer," in the latter half of the program, is a light operatic version of Dumas' "Three Musketeers" in four scenes. Two rival anything produced on Broadway, picture house or musical comedy stage, in the past year for beauty of design and brilliance in coloring.

The finale of the presentations, placed in the ballroom of the palace of Louis XIII, is reminiscent of a similar scene produced in the Roxy last year, and equally effective.

The first scene, during which the three musketeers and D'Artagnan are introduced amid duels and insipid song, is too slow, while both the music and lyrics are tiring. Second scene, Garden of the Palace, depends entirely on beauty of construction and sight appeal. Ballet hoofing mostly and doubtful if appreciated. Ballet stuff has been eliminated in one or two houses along the street in the past few months.

Following the orchestra overture, Charles Previn conducting, Fradkin, concert violinist appeared for two violin numbers. He soloed in the first, "Nola," but seemed unimpressive on account of the size of the house. His offering was further hampered through the entrance and seating of incoming people. Fradkin was backed up by four violinists for his second effort.

Gladys Rice sang from the balcony at the left side of the house, first alone and then accompanied by Fradkin and the Kentucky Jubilee Choir, colored songsters. The colored boys preceded Miss Rice with a negro spiritual entitled "Cain Killed Abel" to favorable returns.

In the newsreel Fox had seven shots, including three on four Movietone items. Pathe, International and Kinograms contributed the balance. Movietone numbers received favorable recognition and appear to be a popular feature for steady picture house diet. A wildcat hunt, Movietoned, was particularly fruitless.

"Soft Living" (Fox), film feature, weak.
Mort.

UPTOWN
(TORONTO)

Toronto, Feb. 25.

Jack Arthur dragged his orchestra out of the pit and made it a stage band with Bobby Jones as master of ceremonies. The bill was top heavy with dancing honors going to a seven-year-old chocolate brown lass and the m. c. himself.

Opens with a hot pop, an end man from the band swinging the baton. The boy was nervous introducing the new m. c. Erceile Sisters got them in proper mood with a couple of blues, eased into a hoof duet and finished up hot. Got enough to come back with an old number well handled. Blondes with white lace frocks—the house had no squawk on looks.

Bobby Jones, with the help of the band, grabbed plenty of laughs with the gag broadcast of a bedtime story. Done here before, but went over big. Told them about "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," with the bass horn, trombone and tenor sax declared in. Whitey Roberts got fair applause with some old hokum. His song was zero and a pair of gags too vulgar for a family house, but they seemed to like his black bottom. Roberts liked it, too.

Li'l Esther was the chocolate mammy who made the white folks sit up and take notice. Her song got sympathy, but when the kid started to strut she pulled them out of their seats. Her three dances were much the same. An idea of the m. c.'s was the black bottom contest among the acts. He led all the way to win cased up.

Jones didn't give himself much to do on the opening—probably just as well. Band is to be on stage for week or two.

Fifteen minutes of Fox and Pathe news, with many European shots, was longest magazine run of season. Mack Sennett short, "Girls from Everywhere," was cleverly different. The femmes thought "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (Par.) was great. The boys gave it a yawn. Biz fair; weather very cold.
Sinclair.

MICHIGAN
(DETROIT)

Detroit, Feb. 24.

This is the big and "class" house of the town. Local stand for Publix units.

And, but for a dissimilar lobby, strikingly like the Chicago, Chicago. Physically, theatrically, even to the atmosphere, the two are veritable twins.

Michigan has a similar monopoly on the town's "class" patronage. To attain and retain it, the Mich plays up the orchestral and other toney departments, giving full sway to class stuff on stage and screen.

This week's show lengthy and good, with the "Dancing Feet" unit, usual house stuff by the Del Delbridge band, Edward Woerner pit orchestra and Arthur Gutow at the organ, with "The Divine Woman" (M-G-M) as the feature.

Class and jazz portions about equal in the patrons' estimation, measuring by response.

Usual highbrow orchestral opening is partially ducked for a novelty, though with only a slight lowering of the brow. Woerner sacrifices his formal overture spot to accompany an interesting short film, but not without substantial reward. Short is "The Flag" in color and themed as the title implies.

News reel, extraordinarily short, followed the picture-overture and Arthur Gutow, organist, proceeded. Gutow is the husband of Doris Gutow, also an organist in picture houses. The success of the Crawfords as a mixed team on the keys should suggest that this pair do likewise.

Gutow is an excellent organist, though mainly a straight-player and reported with shortcomings at writing slides. He illustrates his ability with the straight and splendid playing of "Souvenir" this week. It followed the Michigan's class idea and found high favor.

"Dancing Feet" remains intact since traveling westward. It is a fast hoofing production (Paul Oscard staged) and scored in its first Detroit showing. The wow and clincher here was Harry Rose, who was forced to keep the curtain up and speak off. Unit fell a moment or two short of 40 minutes in running time.

Del Delbridge, conducting the stage band, was formerly in a like capacity in Chicago. In his final week in that city, Del's attention was called to the fact that a spark of some new sort of Delbridge showed itself in his closing efforts, and it was bemoaned at the time that he waited until his final week to show the mob he had something.

It seems that in Detroit Delbridge has fanned that spark to life. Always a pleasant personality, but never peppy of tongue or flip in his announcements, and therefore an unusually subdued band conductor and mimic as a send-off mob. But he can play the piano. That's what he did in his last week in Chicago. He's playing it this week in Detroit and they won't let him stop. It's a cinch to see that is his forte; but difficult to realize why he doesn't make use of it more often and to more advantage.

The Michigan wants only a quiet conductor, and that's okay for the Michigan. But not for Delbridge, who should be shipped elsewhere. It is doubtful if he rates at all as a drawing medium here, but that, too, is the fault of the house.

The Mich seats 4,100, and maintains an average weekly gross of 10 times that in dollars. Trade is consistent and reliable, and the gross seldom goes much above or below $40,000.

STATE
(BOSTON)

Boston, Feb. 28.

A full bill, with "The Divine Woman" on the screen and Jack Crawford and his jazz orchestra on stage, opened yesterday to a capacity for every performance. Crawford scored instantly with his droll humor and sparkling harmony. His first number, a modernization of several gems from "Pagliacci," was popular, but when he announced that he was going to play a number which had been written last spring by a friend of his that hadn't been played much thus far and then broke out with "My Blue Heaven," the cash customers went wild.

Jack kidded the audience with his inimitable radio line about making records and not being allowed to mention on the stage just who he made them for. They all fell for it, too. Crawford's band brought along with them Harvey and Connors, a pair of nifty soft shoe steppers, who gave Boston a real close up of the "Baltimore," the night club dance.

Aside entirely from Jack's gushing and amusing personality and the side issues of dancers and quartet numbers, the music furnished by the orchestra was the best that has been heard in the state for some little time. Every number brought forth whole-hearted applause, not the handclapping of a few dozen, but generous plaudits of a well-pleased house.

An M-G-M news reel and Roach comedy topped off the bill.
Libbey.

CAPITOL
(ST. PAUL)
St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 21.

Louis Hill, Jr., son of the multi-millionaire chairman of the Great Northern Railroad board of directors, and grandson of the late James J. Hill, builder of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads, is doing the tango three times daily and four times on Saturday and Sunday this week here. This is F. & R.'s ace local house. Society buds and debs are appearing as models in a style revue, and other society leaders as entertainers on the same stage which young Hill is gracing.

It's all in connection with the second annual tieup between F. & R. and the St. Paul Junior League. The league formerly staged its own show annually, but found it could earn more for the support of its working girls' rest hospital through the present arrangement whereby it shares in the Capitol's gross for the week.

C. P. Murphy, head of the F. & R. producing department, staged the present offering, called "The Junior League Night Club." More than 30 of the younger society leaders appear. Families of which the 18 models and 8 chorus girls are members are estimated to possess total wealth in excess of $100,000,000. The society girl models look great.

Murphy has endeavored to break away from the conventional style posing by bringing the girls down to the footlights in various formations, backed by specialty numbers offered by singing waiters, cigarette girls, etc.

The Rainbow Cafe idea is utilized to provide color and a splash.

MAINSTREET
(ORPHEUM)
Kansas City, Feb. 24.

Organ novelty, with slides and verses playing on the titles of automobiles, put the flivver owners in good humor. Stage opening brought on a dandy ballyhoo band with Walter Donaldson doing the announcing. After a short number in front of the drop, the entrance to the big show, the gang entered the top and the scene changed to the interior of the tent. Six Uyeno Japs opened with a fast routine of tumbling, followed by Babe Henderson, juvenile toe and contortionistic dancer. Miss Henderson gave a remarkable demonstration of toe work and is seemingly untiring. Paul Sydell and his dog, Spotty, then offered some neat tricks.

For the band number, selections from "Faust" were chosen. Excellently played and hearty applause. Lentini, the three-legged man; Major Delbert, midget, and Ruth Duncan, giantess, were introduced. Lentini talked about himself and his extra limb, giving one or two demonstrations of his ability to use it. The others sang, kidded and pleased with their contrasting sizes.

Harlan Christie, m. c., had comedy verses relative to George Washington, and then Chilton and Thomas, negro dancers, were on. Did the neatest and fastest dance routine seen here in some time.

ORIENTAL
(CHICAGO)
Chicago, Feb. 24.

Not so hot. "Circus Days," presentation, was subjected to the painful operation of having its finale removed after two performances. It was still under ether when caught. "Ladies Night," the feature film.

Miss Abbott's Abbott Girls made an ambitious attempt to do a web number for a finale, but the girls had to call it off, and it left the presentation without a finish.

Opened with Paul Ash and band marching down a center aisle to the stage for circus effects. They were met on the stage by the eight chorines, four of whom climbed on to movable elephant heads, which went up and down as Ringmaster Ash snapped his whip. A strong start.

To full stage, the band climbed on to its platform backed by an impressive drop showing interior of the big top. First specialty was Gay Nell, clever tap hoofer with plenty of variations, but they cut her short here and left her without much chance to draw recognition. Coleman Goetz, who used to work as semi-master of ceremonies with Ash at McVickers, was introduced lengthily by his old pal. Goetz didn't need the gab, clicking on his own both in talk and songs. His monolog got good results in playing with big words, and his singing is the topper.

Ash had to pay the price of his own following in playing a highly embellished orchestration of "Away Down South in Heaven." It started off with all the earmarks of a pit overture, so the flaps and oily heads started a rival faction of conversation. It was a tossup, although the music was as good as the band has ever done. Ned Miller followed with a song; judging by how he was inserted without chance for applause or selling himself, it's 10 to 1 he's a plugger. The Abbott Girls finished his number with specialties. Two were okay.

Julia Gerity, blues singer who is apparently a stock attraction here, got along well with two numbers often jazzed up beyond recognition. The closing act, Dezso Retter, is from the vaude houses. Some of his new talk sounds like Moran and Mack and another portion is so extensively used a majority of people will think Retter is copying. But they gobble his comedy acrobatics, especially his one-man wrestling bout. Retter fits into picture houses. With more original talk, he'd be a standout.

Curtain dropped abruptly after Retter's turn, and house was plainly disappointed. Henri Keates, solo organist, played a medley of numbers and comedy slides around the theme, "Ain't Love Grand?" Going at his community singing without the customery amount of pep, he didn't get results until half finished.

Business not good compared to what house has been doing.

WISCONSIN
(MILWAUKEE)
Milwaukee, Feb. 24.

It seemed that this Wisconsin show, presided over by Dave Schooler, seemed to have a smack of the burlesque. "Mornin' Judge" was not unlike Irish justice and there were wiggles, too. Audience liked the offering, though, except for the wiggle gal who flopped with a thud the night the show was caught.

Opening flash was a court room in black and white outline. Walls lined with caricatures of cops doing fairy dances. Lady Godiva and similar burlesque-like atmosphere. Band is the jury box with Jimmie Adams, a lad who would, if he wanted, make a snappy Dutch comic in any Mutual show. But too clever.

Knight Barry Dancers were garbed as coppers with Billy Meyers, stock tenor, as bailiff. Song by Meyers and a dance by the girls and in trots Schooler, who tells, in verse, that he is the attorney for the defense. A surprise for the opening case. Thomas Dealcalde, a sweet tenor, did classical numbers and went big. A little out of place in a jazztime court room, but what a voice. Next a Miss Harriett. Miss Harriett reminds of Lena Daley. Short, plump and bare. A little wiggle with "Judge" Adams pulling "all in favor of that motion say I." Then Miss Harriett does the bit with a few handsprings thrown in. Hardly a ripple did she get. The only femme, except the chorus, on the bill.

Band played a pop, and Meyers sang, followed by Frank DeVoe. Nice line of patter and song. He is a show stopper and went in accordance with the semi-risque tenor of the program. Jimmy Adams again and good. Smith and Hadley, two young chaps with educated feet, took high honors.

To bring the show to a real burlesque climax, dancers stepped forth again and the judge brands their steps as hot. They tell him he is "wet," proceed to show what a hot dance is and at the blowoff the pictures on the wall dance and a lobsterscope effect brings down the curtain.

A shining light of the program was the return of Arthur Richter, organist. Richter, whose organ logus have been missing for weeks, gives just the right touch to usher in "The Love Mart" (F. N.). Shorts complete the bill. It packed them in—so it must be good. Israel.

GRANADA
(SAN FRANCISCO)
San Francisco, Feb. 25.

It's either a feast or a famine at the Granada. For innumerable weeks, prior to the one just ended, ordinary screen features (though good stage shows) left a depressing atmosphere a week ago with an all-round good picture and a corking stage offering, business nearly reached the high level. This week they've a feature film in "Chicago" and a stage show that promises to again bring the bacon.

Owen Sweeten, orchestra director and m. c., is back on stage for the first time in three weeks (due to heavy stage productions forcing band boys to the pit). Moss and Frye, colored comics, first engagement on the coast in several years. Also Helene Hughes and Roy Smoot, and Vivian Fay, San Francisco product, who has developed into a toe dancer par excellent. With the San Francisco Beauties (Fanchon and Marco line girls) for a background, the Granada customers have real entertainment.

Opening overture is a novelty in that it presents Arthur Smith, pianist, playing the "Rhapsody in Blue," supported by the band. Then Hughes and Smoot, singing the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore." Miss Hughes was a vision in black with silver trimmings. The duo have voices and were liberally received.

Sweeten next sent the band into a novelty arrangement of "Charmaine," played to a jazz tempo.

Moss and Frye drew all laughs, and big ones. If unknown to many at the opening day mat, it won't be long before they are established with the picture house clientele hereabouts.

Another band number and then the moving stage elevated to reveal a tableaux, and bringing on Smoot and Hughes for "Diane," the while little Miss Fay demonstrated her ability as a toe dancer, with four other toe dancing girls cavorting about stage as a suitable background.

Show in toto rates as one of the best Granada has had in many moons. It ought to click handsomely. Edwards.

LOEW'S MIDLAND
(KANSAS CITY)
Kansas City, Feb. 24.

Last season, when Publix units were clicking weekly at the Newman, the presentations ran to dancing with an adaglo team featured, and the chorines in hoop skirts. This season the Loew-Publix presentations are strong on circus acts. The Loew Annual Revue this week had three acrobatic and contortion turns, but still kept the girls in Colonial costume. The revue is credited to John Murray Anderson. It has a picturesque opening and a flash finish. In between it's just a vaudeville show.

In honor of Washington's birthday, Carbonara selected "An American Phantasy" for the overture. Nice light effects, including a picture of Washington, were used during the offering. M-G News followed and then the revue.

An introductory song, "Loew's Holiday," brought the chorus on above the band, and then down the stairs to the stage. An impromptu violinist played as the chorines, in Colonial gowns, paraded. Effect was pretty, but didn't mean anything.

Norma Maxine, a tall dancer, with a great high kick, was on for a few moments and then the Lime Brothers with their contortion routine.

Sylvia and Clemence, pair of chunky, bare legged flappers, tapdanced through "Poet and Peasant" without creating much excitement. Girls would do better with another tune and more pep. Roy Cropper then sang a ballad nicely. Three Kemmys, posing and strength act, worked on the back elevation, "gloryfied" by "Hearts and Flowers" music and song off stage.

Band offering had a vocal interpolation by one of the gang. Runaway Four next and came near running away with the show. Cropper back again for theme song, which ran through the finale.

Screen feature "Man, Woman and Sin" (M-G) followed. Jeanne Eagels, opposite John Gilbert, is a home town girl. Friends and admirers turned out heavy. Hughes.

SANFORD
(IRVINGTON, N. J.)
Irvington, N. J., Feb. 24.

Sanford claims it was the first house in the east to introduce the stage band policy, antedating the Branford. At that time the policy was not successful, but it has now been brought back heavily billed as the "Branford Theatre Jazz Policy."

This is a valuable and appropriate billing, but the show in no way represents the Branford routine. It is, however, presumably what is commonly used as the m. c. policy and serves to explain why that plan is not as successful as the Branford's. It is possibly the best that a neighborhood house can do. It is understood that later shows will use stuff from the Branford.

Show opens before a pleasing drop used previously at the Branford. Ray Nichols' band (9) sounds a little thin. Ray introduces the members, each demonstrating his instrument. This was liked. Nichols is pleasing and registers. Jack Bain, the m. c., is introduced and leads the band, which goes strong. Bain does well enough, although he doesn't seem entirely at home. This having what amounts to two masters of ceremonies, is a basic mistake.

Four Hamel Sisters, brass quartet, who also sing, start the features, to be followed by Mary Dowling. Dressed in a tux, she dances and clicks. Harris and Hallen offer a grotesque costume dance, while Dorothy Rogers does acrobatic dancing. Bain pulls some gags and sings with good delivery. Miss Dowling offers a military tap, and the Hamels conclude with more playing, dancing, a trombone solo and a smashing finale.

No attempt at scenic effects or novelties during the show's 46 minutes. Nearly capacity house received all numbers with enthusiasm. Prices for nights have been raised to 40 cents, with children 20 cents.

Fox newsreel for 10 minutes and "The Devil Dancer" (U. A.) complete the program, which runs two hours and a half. Austin.

Harry Thurston sailed for his native land, England, Saturday, after a professional visit here from October, 1925. It was one of several returns for the artists, between America and Australia.

PALACE
(St. Vaude)

Will Fyffe, doing 28 minutes and pretty late, held them in almost solidly Monday night. His intermissions are filled by seven pipers, who get nowhere except into the Land of Noise. The old Scotch comic system of leaving the stage bare for changes, even extended ones, was better.

No getting away from Fyffe. He's a great comic. Fyffe's best numbers were "The Man from Glasgow," "Scotland Will Be Scotland" and "I Love the Sea." He started slow, but soon he had them warm. To those who had never seen him, and possibly not Lauder, either, he was a startling revelation in comedy of the reposeful, wholesome order scarcely known under the free skies of this blessed nation of giddy-ap. There is no questioning that he has the class and ranks for sterling merit with any act in vaudeville today.

Whiting and Burt cleaned up ahead of him. Sadie, trim and cute, first on a comedy wedding number, next a violent gold-digger ballad, then their burlesque on "The Dove," still fresh, and the finish was "Blue Heaven." For a change no other act sang it on this bill, and the one who did wrote it. They mopped.

Florentine Singers (New Acts), flash novelty of artistic worth, closed intermission hot. Chamberlin and Himes, with little variation from either their "Follies" or last week's Palace routine of knockabout double and sweet low comedy, walked off with a washtub full of gravy, as always. The gal is a sweetie for a rough comic, and Ziegfeld isn't the last revue man that'll make eyes at her.

Norma Maxine, a tall dancer, with a great high kick, was on for a few moments and then the Lime Brothers with their contortion routine.

Sylvia and Clemence, pair of chunky, bare legged flappers, tapdanced through "Poet and Peasant" without creating much excitement. Girls would do better with another tune and more pep. STATE
(Vaude-Pcts)

Gertrude Ederle, the big noise at the State this week, is one of the few topical freak attractions who can still survive the memory of her accomplishment. The channel swimmer has a sturdy act and as presented by A. J. Clarke (unbilled), with the Baker Sisters (Marion and Ethel) in support, it's a shapely aquatic turn, the figure of speech going both ways.

Clarke ballyhoos Miss Ederle impressively, although that "world's most famous woman" and the Trudy and Lindy comparisons is a bit thick, albeit acceptable. There have been tank acts before and there will be tank turns after Miss Ederle, but her channel conquest, coupled with the sex angle and the publicity, makes the aquatic turn a box office proposition.

Act is smoothly introduced. The assortment of newsreel shots, from Miss Ederle's greasing up to the welcome home reception, sets everything pretty and sends Trudy in like nothing else could.

Miss Ederle's business managers and bookers, if they maintain the pace and handle her as expertly as they have 'till now, can maintain for her a public hold that need not be as ephemeral as the average momentary celeb's popularity. Ederle booking, considering its relationship to "Rose-Marie" (M-G), a weak picture, evidences the uncanny co-ordination of the Loew film and vaude booking systems, at least as far as the State is concerned. It has never failed that where the flicker is off, the show is strong, and where a feature is sufficient to bolster the show, the stage portion has been judiciously economized upon.

The show played well and to good purpose. Eschewing the song plugging, A. Joseph Jordan and his trench boys who may well vie with any vaude aggregation in these parts featured a novelty "Doing the Town" overture that is readily adaptable by any house maestro. It is a variation of the "Sidewalks of New York" idea, a musical tour of the city, with appropriate musical motifs for each sector of the town. Incidentally Jordan's ivory dexterity with the trick piano stuff recommends his continued featuring thereof.

Opening were the Three Weber Girls, who extended their stuff unduly. In the past this novelty acrobatic threesome kept it down to seven minutes. Clocked at 11 minutes, it retards the general effect. Fleurette Jeaffrie, comely soprano, did three songs and could have made it a fourth if inclined to force it. Frank Sinclair Co., with familiar fol-de-rol, have a turn patterned for popular consumption and found themselves sufficiently rewarded. Act runs 20 minutes and can also be hooverized to better results.

Gene Greene, vet song salesman, worked vigorously but overstayed. Some of that audience whoopee didn't sound on the level, although probably okay. Greene carries a novelty accompaniment in a pianist and traps manipulator. Amputating some of the gags, and not necessarily those which do not click as big as several of the racier wheezes, would help it along.

Pisano and Landauer were a solid hit with their wop-Swede stuff. The doggerels recalled them twice and almost tied it up altogether. Miss Ederle closed. Abel.

RIVERSIDE
(St. Vaude)

Bright young minds, smart young showmen. That applies to Waring's Pennsylvanians and a lot of what Waring and Co. have got is what the Riverside seems to need. Monday night the tide of cash customers had washed back considerable rows behind what has been average at this house for some weeks. If the extra trade came out for any particular reason this plus ultra band was it.

The latest—and in many respects the worst—of the Aesop's Fables opened without a murmur. The usual rehash of the unhappy farmer who is driven to his wits' ends by a tribe of clever mice. There might be some reason for this dish of tripe for matinees, but it seems unkind to perslst year in and year out in compelling grown-ups to sit through these cartoon tortures.

The Pickfords, or rather Pickford and his dressed-up property man, entertained with neatness. However, Pickford's versatility seems capable of producing an act of easier proportions than at present. Caroll McDevitt, programmed, was replaced by Lewis and Winthrop, two class male steppers. About six minutes was the full count for the boys. Ought to be a little longer, but present speed should not be sacrificed to extend running time.

Lois Delander, holder of the "Miss America" title of 1927, has been surrounded with six other title-holding beauts, a young tenor and M'sieur Lucille, a gown creator with loose cloth and pins. M'sieur Lucille runs the works with somewhat more assurance than success. His singing, although intended to be incidental, is not even that. His jocular comment lands with thick thud-like sounds, and unless he owns the act will be deleted. This turn (New Acts) is not bad and has publicity-getting possibilities that K-A-O probably needs too urgently to overlook.

Miss Lelander, the fairest damsel that ever stepped daintily across Chicago street in Joliet, Ill., tops her ensemble in looks and charm. The six girls with her are lookers, but excepting Miss Perrin Nite and Miss New Orleans are light on personality.

Frankel and Dunlevy, blackface (New Acts) flopped as jokesmiths but clicked as singers. That gives the boys rather a poor average which they can improve by dropping most of their insipid slang. Mother, father and song identified with the Norman Phillips name have a young production (New acts) by the busy Edgar Allan Woolf which they bring to New York for the first time. It closed intermission. Norman, Jr., announced he would play host Saturday afternoon to all the little boys and girls attending the matinee. They'll have to be smart kids to keep up their end of the repartee.

Cortini, rightly billed "the master manipulator," opened intermission and delighted with his deft sleight of hand.

Preceding Waring's Pennsylvanians, Gracie Deagon and her new partner, Charles Cannefax (New Acts), offered her classic interpretation of a young female moron. It was solid for laughs.

The Warings pitched in pronto and cut themselves a large piece of cake. They proved their case not only as business builders, but as show closers and audience holders.

Vaudeville needs more of this college spirit. Land.

ACADEMY
(New York)

Only one answer to the kind of shows the Academy has been giving. This week it's Clark and McCullough. Elliott-Dexter-and six other turns, besides a brand new picture, "Woman Wise" (Fox). At the 50-cent evening scale the lower floor was capacity by eight o'clock, and loges, at six bits, were comfortably filled.

Alert showmanship here. Last-minute feature for the second half was grabbed in Jimmy McLarnin, conqueror of Sid Terris. They got out handbills for distribution to the incoming crowd. McLarnin will

FLORENTINE SINGERS (35)
Varied Songs
35 Mins.; Full Stage (Spel. Inset)
Palace (St. V.)

A flash, with 35 men and women, garbed in a dazzling multi-hue and poly-pattern costumes, all with grand voices, singing a selection of hymns, opera and Italian folk songs, with several extremely meritorious soloists of both sexes. Range from Pagliacci's Prayer to "Toreador" and the prolog of "Pagliacci," and back again to "Santa Lucia." A choir conductor beside the orchestra leader in the pit and a piano accompanist, supported the understructure.

Such voices and such mighty, massive harmonies have scarcely ever been heard in a vaudeville theatre. After each number tumultuous applause, even though mostly from upstairs, indicating that the Neapolitans had gathered. It is said, and it looks it, that among the singers are members of Italian nobility. The thing is rather a chorus or choir than a concert formation.

On appearance and art value, it is questionable whether vaudeville can hold this outfit. Any of half a dozen managers (page Bill Morris or Maurie Gest first!) would tour them, otherwise the picture circuits must grab them. Far too good and big for vaudeville. And how can that decaying racket travel such a gang that must carry not less than 40 people?

At the Palace an out and out and continuous sensation, stopping intermission. Lait.

LOIS DELANDER CO., (8)
"Miss America" Revue
20 Mins.; Full (Special)
Riverside (St. V.).

The old vaude stunt, "gowns made before your eyes," has been employed as a framework and excuse for assembling seven of the Atlantic City prize beauties, including Lois Delander, "Miss America of 1927." It's okay as a publicity-getter, but the act itself should be improved.

The male dressmaker, M'sieur Lucille, dominates the act, almost giving the impression that it's all to glorify him. A male singer, who introduces, is seen but little thereafter with Lucille taking unto himself the labor of song, also humor. He should stick to his dressmaking.

Miss Delander enters late and is confined to a couple of cross-stage promenades, thence posing for a fitting in a gown called "Miss Humanity." The other girls, mentioned by city only, are the Misses Terre Haute, Spokane, El Paso, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and New Orleans. All parade in bathing suits.

This act should have "it" and ought to be acceptable for its probable space-grabbing potentialities. It's a little too long in running. Land.

RHYTHM ROAMERS (8)
Girl Band
19 Mins.; Full (Special)
Temple, Detroit (V-P)

Initial production of a vaudeville act in or around Detroit is rare. The infrequency is natural, with several reasons.

Rhythm Roamers, therefore, is a rarity. A girl band, and as such will be classed as a novelty turn by bookers, if getting to them. Eight pieces: violin, piano, drums, pair of saxes, banjo, trumpet and trombone.

Shining point is the extraordinary strength in the brass department, usually the weak spot in feminine aggregations.

Straight routine and special set. Act clinches at the finish when the banjoist, very cute girl, steps out to hoof for the curtain. Temple engagement augmented by Detroit society girl and radio fav, Irene Kessler. She copped her share of honors but doubtful if will stick with this turn. Blues singer and blond.

For the larger stands a specialty dancer could be taken on. Picture house possibilities also, providing four or more pieces are added.

As is, excellent novelty act and strong on youth.

HART'S KRAZY KATS (7)
Acrobatics
7 Mins.; Three
Hippodrome (V-P)

One of the cleverest tumbling routines on the circuit. An opening act of this kind sets the customers for the rest of the show.

Four of the tumblers are in cat costumes at opening and are led on by a girl. Later, two midgets, in puss makeup, supply irresistible comedy.

Boys have everything, but score mainly on speed with which they deliver. Mark.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN, JR. (4)
Sketch
14 Mins.; Full (Special)
Pantages, Los Angeles (V-P)

Young Bushman is following on the heels of his father, who recently got through with the flickers and entered vaude. On the stage he is confronted with the same problem of other screen luminaries, material. With this piece Bushman, Jr., cannot hope to get very far.

It is hoke of the kind that isn't funny enough to laugh at and not serious enough to be more than passingly interesting. Bushman is the young newspaper reporter who lays for a story where he thinks a murder has been committed. Ensuing events bear out that he has been barking up the wrong tree and he bows out nonchalantly. The girl in the case is his sister, Leonore Bushman, who looks plenty pretty, but that's about all. Irving Victor attempts a comedy bootlegger, while Richard Fielding appears but briefly and is dubiously identified as the "Weasel," a mysterious crook. Walter Weems, who does some title work for pictures, and Harrington Reynolds are credited with the pen work.

It can be whipped into better shape. Bushman's name may carry it along for a while.

BILLY LAMONT FOUR
Wire-Walkers and Comedy
Full Stage
5th Ave. (V-P)

Quite some merit in this turn if condensed. With the useless matter thrown out, it might develop into a standard act in demand.

Two elderly and two young people. It's probably a family act—father, mother, son and daughter.

Daughter is the star. She's a versatile performer of good looks and attractive figure, who is too hard worked here. Either one of her dances should be cut out to save her strength, with the first dance the one, as her high kicking or itching dance is well worth while. She's lively also on the wire and active on the floor. What she does is well and quickly done.

All are umbrella walkers, although the elder man does not walk. He does comedy, though, and that's what should be condensed, the more the better, including his Demarest stuff and the 10 back handsprings, while the water pouring should have been cast away forever before this act ever hit the 5th Avenue. That was in Jim Madison's budget 20 years ago.

The boy has animation, walks the wire fairly, and since the mother but dresses the stage, perhaps these two young people should be permitted to see what they could do alone. They might do a lot and neither would have to talk or make fun.

For this girl may yet land in a production if properly handled. Her side kicks may be yet worth more to her than the wire-walking, and for a longer period. But she should continue practicing the side kicks until proficient with either foot.

Doesn't look like a new act, but new in Variety's files.

As at present, turn should be cut down in running length, especially if closing show as here.

FRANKEL and DUNLEVY
Songs, Talk
12 Min.; One
Riverside (St. V.).

Harry Frankel and Joe Dunlevy, blackface twosome. Slow at start and into a dull routine of gags of this character: "Born to Mr. and Mrs. Bigger a little Bigger." The answer: "Bigger than what?" There are, at the most, hardly five real laughs in the talk. All of it could be chucked on the principle that anything else would be just as good, and probably a whole lot better.

Boys have good voices and a pleasing way of putting across numbers. It is in this department their professional progress lies. Not a good act at present. Land.

DEAGON and CANNEFAX
Comedy
20 Mins.; One
Riverside (St. V.)

Essentially the same act Miss Deagon previously did with Mr. Mack. The new partner, Cannefax, is not the expert feeder his predecessor was but has class and belongs. He makes a good straight and will probably improve.

Miss Deagon's characterization is life-like and therefore infectious. Her silly, word-swallowing giggly girl is a gem. Act gets laughs all the way and is "there" 100 per cent. Land.

"THE MONOLOGIST?" (5)
Sketch
"One" and out front
Palace (St. V.)

An old idea but a lot of new cracks by Edwin Burke (no players or producer credited) that smacks it across. Monologist comes on, interrupter down the aisle shouts at his "wife" in a box, which brings up a fake violinist out of the pit and arouses the wrath of the principal comic in an opposite box.

Sounds too stale to get over. But the Palace Monday nighters, and they're vaude-wise, laughed themselves silly. Cracks up to the minute, not too dainty, very personal and crude, but funny.

This will be played by many a troupe on many a circuit. It will live to have fringes on it, its comedy will grow stale and it will creak. But right now must be rated a snapping, crackling laugh-dragger, even though it lacks distinction and isn't within a mile of either good taste or legitimate amusement.

But when you mention that old "get over" business, judged by the house, a wow. Lait.

BUCK JONES and SILVER
16 Mins.; Full (Special)
Orpheum, Los Angeles (St. V).

Instance of another of filmdom's colony leaving the studio to grab off some vaude money. Jones, who has been a Fox western star, makes no bones about not being an out loud actor and it is evident he is here because of monetary compensation alone. Why else? As he doesn't do anything to deserve allbis it is hardly necessary to comment on his performance other than that he's a good cowboy and sticks by his trade.

His trustworthy pony, "Silver," is a clever performer on the screen and does not disappoint "in person." The steed, dressed in royal regalia, trots out like a war veteran and abides by all rules and regulations. Jones has a few lines that he spills without pomp or ceremony, heading right in with "Howdy Folks?" He puts the horse through several routines, clever but not extraordinary. Jones then turns to some rope manipulations. His manner of handling the rope is strongly from a cowpuncher's angle. No fancy flourishes or stunts. He makes one change and has a brother rancher throw some boomerangs around. The old boy, likewise, is a straightaway shooter.

On the coast Jones' name means as much as any of the others who have stepped out of the screen ranks. They don't get excited here about picture names. Too many of them seen around all the time. For eastern cities Jones would probably draw with everything split weeks now.

RICKARD and GRAY
Ventriloquism
One (Special Drop)
5th Ave. (V-P).

Man and woman and a dummy with a cut-out back drop of a hotel's desk, on which the dummy is placed. Sort of assistant to the office clerk, who is Mr. Rickard, the ventriloquist.

Comes on Miss Gray, looking for a room for a respectable woman. The dummy says they have one and to bring in the respectable woman, so that tells everything in the talk line.

Pie for the small time, all of the talk, taking in the ventriloquism and Miss Gray's french horn solo, besides Mr. Rickard's ventriloquism, and let the dummy go in, too.

Act doesn't look or sound new and strictly for the family trade.

If Mr. Rickard ever wants to make England as a competitor to Prince or Coram, he'll get some talk that's funny above 34th street.

FAIN and DUNN
Songs and Piano
11 Mins.; One
Audubon (V-P)

A male singing combo which later introduces by the announcement of one that the Sammy Fain with the act is the composer of "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," which they proceed to give in their own way.

The men sing well together. Harmony effective but nothing out of ordinary.

A song different in comedy conception was "I'm Bound for the Bronx," a travesty on all the mammy songs and the boys all headin' south, etc. Lyrics especially certain of register in New York.

Not a bad combination, this Fain and Dunn, and they did very well at the uptown Audubon.

The men could also impress in the picture houses, especially on their close harmony stuff. Mark.

THE NORMAN PHILLIPS
"Parents" (Skits)
23 Mins.; One and Two (Special)
Riverside (St. V.)

Edgar Allan Woolf authored this running yarn of highly sentimental and moral flavor. Opens in one with Norman, Jr., weeping over his lost pup and Norman, Sr., a wealthy passerby, asking him what the trouble is. The boy expresses his views of life gleaned from the daily press. Two flashbacks, one showing a rich couple, another a poor couple, in each case the little boy, very unhappy. Back to the scene in one for the expected theatrical adoption of the boy by the rich passerby and his wife who happens along. Also the recovery from an ash can of the missing poodle.

Whole affair is intended primarily to exhibit the precocious talents of younger Norman Phillips. This lad, reared in dressing rooms and strictly adult in his assurance, bearing and attitude, is the type that excites wonder as to his age. Apart from some set mannerisms he is developing, he handles his heavy assignment well. He has a handicap in his cocksure manner which does not always blend into the role of a semi-wistful street urchin.

Moralizing type of act, once fairly familiar, is now seldom seen. The Phillips will find the field that much better as a result. Land.

SERGE FLASH
Japanese Juggling
14 Mins.; Full (Spec)
Palace (St. V)

Billed as the first American tour of the only occidental expert in Japanese juggling, the part about the first American tour is okay, but the "only occidental expert" forgets Felovis, no slouch at this sort of thing.

However, it isn't a bad publicity angle to play up Flash as the white man conqueror of a difficult Japanese accomplishment in agility.

Flash is big league, but his act seems overlong. His dressing also seems old schooley and could be improved.

Throwing of large rubber balls into the audience and catching them on the upside of a stick held in his mouth is Flash's standout. His other examples of agility are good but Serge has a habit of missing a little too often.

Still he was worth bringing over. Land.

JUVENILE STEPPERS (12)
Dancing
11 Mins.; Three
Hippodrome (V-P)

Team of male hoofers offering a variety of flashy buck and strong enough to appear by themselves. Fast on their pins and have routined themselves with new and effective business.

Between numbers boys are backed by more hoofing which has the effect of deadening their high spots.

Working in formations with taps, ensemble is pleasing and gets returns. Similar material has been seen in the Publix unit shows.

A pair of girl hoofers filled in nicely. Mori.

DICK AND MARY RYAN
Singing, Talking
14 Mins. One
5th Ave. (V-P)

Dick Ryan suggests Jans, of Jans and Whalen, whom he imitates, also using one of the latter's numbers. He also has something of the fly manner and style identified with Jack Benny, using his partner, Mary Ryan, in much the same way Benny is using his femme stooge.

Ryan is the budding protoplasm of a flip comic of dimensions and class. His present material and act is okay and a frame to build on. Mary doesn't do much, but does it well and helps.

A promising combo. Land.

FRASER BROS.
Equilibrists
7 Mins.; One
Audubon (V-P)

Two men in gym suits appear in "one" and proceed to do a nifty routine of hand balancing. The hand lifts looked even harder done so close to the footlights. Several of the tricks are pippins and elicited immediate applause. Mark.

YONG KEE TROUPE (4)
Agile Japanese
10 Mins.; Full (Special)
81st St. (V-P)

Neat opening turn of three lads and a girl. The latter is exclusively ornamental. Act carries bright, flashy drop, although otherwise not as colorful as some turns of its calibre.

Tricks are impressive and applause-winning. Mostly contortionistic equilibrism with some plate-spinning and similiar work weaved in.

Can play any house as an acceptable opener, shy of the sensational rating. Land.

make a whale of a popular feature, of course, irrespective of what he does. For this clientele it's perfect. They ballyhoo coming features liberally on the screen, too, like Sophie Tucker.

First half line-up looked better than it played. It had slow spots, with Clark and McCullough a clean-up next to closing. Here's a pair that plays to high-scale clientele, but never miss in their clinch on the pop crowd. Their talk is funny and the hoke business goals a mob like this, making it sweet going and coming.

Elliott Dexter, late in the running, made rather a slow spot with his one-man sketch and "in person" talk. This scratch frame-up doesn't do a sterling actor a bit of good. Richard Mansfield or Edwin Booth couldn't go on alone, and almost without props, before a pop audience and deliver a sketch as Dexter tries to do. He has fine approach and excellent bearing, besides a robust method of reading, but in this solo talk he has nothing but his screen prestige to hold him. And that won't do with a bunch that laughs at neck falls. Third in weight for the show was Al Vann with his gang, 10 jazzists, helped out with two specialty acts (New Acts).

Rest of the show was just routine material. Herbert Clifton was billed well up and, on the returns his heavy-handed hoke got, he deserved it. Clifton probably goes in harder than any other female impersonator in the known world for monkey comedy. His "Spring Song" burlesque is as rough a bit of clowning as you can find on a stage. The Pola Negri travesty is not much more subtle. One of those acts that gets loud but scattered laughter. As it happened, the bill needed low comedy in Clifton's spot, for he had the first go for the giggles. The returns were heavy while he was on, but when he exited applause was only perfunctory, indicating that 15 minutes gave 'em all the Clifton travesty they needed.

It was otherwise with Joe Roberts, lone banjoist in street clothes and without comedy, who was a riot No. 2. Why such an act should arouse 14th street to something like a frenzy is one of those vaudeville mysteries. All Roberts did was play two pops and "Hungarian Rhapsody" all by himself, and they din't want him to go. The "Rhapsody" on the banjo is quite a performance at that. Never realize how much a banjo can be made to sound like a marimba until Roberts does this bit. He did 11 minutes and could have stretched to 17.

Helen Higgins and her boys have a sightly dance turn, and that lets it out. The girl's numbers are mildly pleasing and her first two dances merely excuses to show clothes. Her stepping is only so-so. But she does get somewhere with a lively black bottom done in a pretty costume that displays lots of Miss Higgins. Her boys can dance, but dancing boys don't get anywhere in a turn of this kind.

John Olms Co., doing legerdemain with a vast variety of watches and clocks, made an amusing opener, and Hori and Co., Jap balancers, closed. Rush.

AMERICAN ROOF

(Vaude-Pcts)

A few bright spots on the American show Monday evening. One act in particular, a joker, saved the show from a nose dive.

The apathy around apparently affected the acts, especially those on during the first part. And why is that intermission period atop the roof still there? Complete stopping of a show at a time when it is just picking up is disastrous.

But toward the close the Yorke and O'Brien (New Acts) whipped hokum so fast that the house was panicked. The Wonder Girl opened the show, teeth stuff in midair being her best bet. Her talk is weak. Marie Welis Co. (New Acts) were followed by Brady and Mahoney. Pair of hale gaggers hew close to the lines of their yesteryear routine, but found some response. Tommy Christian's Band (New Acts) closed the first part.

After intermission Goetz and Duffy appeared in their familiar act, seen at this house before. Doing their quick change from old age to youth and also closing with the whistling dance. Well received. Shean, Phillips and Anger worked hard and got nice applause on their dancing travesty. Then Yorke and O'Brien.

The Bardelangs, as billed here, are also the Barderland Bros. seen in other local houses. A classy, corking act with some nifty hand balancing. Would look fancy in a picture house with a band playing mellow music. Screen feature, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Mark.

NEWS FROM THE DAILIES

This department contains rewritten theatrical news items as published during the week in the daily papers of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and London. Variety takes no credit for these news items; each has been rewritten from a daily paper.

NEW YORK

United German Societies of New York determined to use all means to oppose showing here of "Dawn," film based on Edith Cavell case. Arch Selwyn holds American rights to British subject.

Testifying before a referee in her annulment suit, Mabel Withee declared her husband, Leon Sharshik, serving time for passing bad checks, had borrowed her engagement ring to use in a real estate transaction, borrowed $3,500 from her and had defrauded her in check transactions. She is seeking to prove that Sharshik was a crook before she married him.

Senator Philip M. Kinefeld, of Coney Island, introduced another bill calling for the abolition of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Education, and Democrats are behind the measure. Governor Smith has always advocated repeal of censorship law, but several bills to that end have been defeated in Albany.

One of those tabloid-made engagements between Marilyn Miller and Ben Lyon was declared off, the elaborate story having it that Marilyn Nixon is now engaged to the screen actor. Just to make it right, the tab blew up the old one of Marilyn's engagement to Jack Warburton, New York society man.

New York Court of Appeals ruled Edward W. Browning must pay $4,384 counsel fees for his former wife, "Peaches" Browning, now playing vaudeville dates.

Maria Corda broke a finger in a taxi collision and the next day sailed on the "Paris" for France, with reports she sought a divorce from Alexander Corda, her husband-director. The associated ideas of Paris and Helen of Troy were irresistible to the rewrite men—net result, an acre or so of newsprint.

When Charley Ray was going good he had the reputation of being the most up-stage star in Hollywood. When he gets into type nowadays it's always in some unpleasant connection. This time Edward Grav show pro oter, had him summoned to court to explain unlawfully withholding Gray's $1,500. Ray sold a play to Gray for $1,500, then called the bargain off and asked for the play back. Gray said he didn't return the $1,500. Case was called off when Gray withdrew complaint.

Louise Hunter, after an operation, left "Golden Dawn," calling off her five-year contract with Arthur Hammerstein, and has quit the stage to be with her husband, a Chicago business man. Hammerstein recalled that Mary Ellis had had to quit his management, and said he was off grand opera prima donnas for life.

Thomas Dixon, novelist, entered suit against Robert Lehman, banker, and Julius Tannen for $500,000, growing out of alleged abandonment of a film production of Dixon's scenario, "The Torch."

Cleo Brown, a chorus girl in "Lovely Lady," and Dave Chasen, comedian in "Rain or Shine," are engaged. They plan to be married in June.

Supreme Court Justice Callahan refused to interfere with police surveillance of the Alexander Club, No. 239 West 72d street. Alexandria Raymond, proprietress, sought an injunction against Commissioner Warren.

John McCormack, the tenor, has been elevated to the Papal peerage, with the title and dignity of a Count.

"The Baby Cyclone" has been sold to M-G-M for pictures, price withheld. This play and the other Cohen show, "The Merry Malones," opens in London and Australia with special companies in a few weeks.

CHICAGO

Dolorcs Wheeler, 15, whose testimony sent Joseph Glaser, former owner of the Sunset cafe (black and tan) to the penitentiary for 10 years on a statutory charge, is being questioned by the State Attorney's office regarding a repudiation of testimony.

Federal Judge Lindley has removed the permanent padlock from the Pan-Hellenic cafe. A. J. Mouzakiotis, the owner, convinced the judge that waiters were responsible for violation.

George Robinson, 30, self-styled show producer, has been arrested on a statutory charge. The complainant alleges that he retained her to "recruit a burlesque chorus" and then attacked her. Robinson is not known to Chicago theatredom.

Violet Stewart, recently employed as an entertainer at Beverly tavern, is held in the $133,000 train robbery case. Miss Stewart, another girl and two men were arrested when they visited the home of one of the men who admitted having part in the hold-up.

Dancers from 30 cities will vie here on April 18 for the annual eccentric dancing contest at the Trianon ball room. Local elimination contests have already been started. They will seek to evolve a new dance craze.

Jeanne Eagels, recently injured here in a taxi accident, was insured for $100,000.

Walter Harmon, dance promoter, staged a "prize" masquerade dance at the Marigold Gardens. At 2 o'clock in the morning, when no prizes were forthcoming, the dancers cut loose, busted furniture, windows and other properties. Harmon had advertised $6,500 in prizes for the event. Police were called and the crowd dispersed.

Charging that agents of the Federal prohibition department themselves violated the Volstead act when, during the recent mass raid on Chicago cafes, they themselves did the drinking, Fred Mann, proprietor of Rainbo Gardens, has opened his defense.

Benedict J. Short, Mann's attorney, filed the charges in the Federal court at Chicago. Irving Herriott, attorney for Pierre Nuyttens of the Chez Pierre, filed a similar paper, making identical charges, but adding that if the government persists in its present policy it must close every public place of every nature in the United States.

Mayor Thmopson has made an appeal to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, protesting against political persecution by Chicago prohibition agents.

LOS ANGELES

Mrs. Lillian R. Fraser, recently divorced from Earl A. Fraser, wealthy Ocean Park amusement man, has to pay a judgment of $254.35 obtained against her by J. M. Glaze for a hotel bill. Judge Russill ruled that Mrs. Fraser was amply provided for by her husband, and must pay.

The case against William Nigh motion picture director, charged with assault on Edward Usher, Jr., football player, has been reopened. Nigh will appear in court for a hearing this week. He recently pleaded guilty to a battery charge and paid a fine of $100 in an El Monte court. At the same time Jean Jarvis, film actress, over whose affections the fight took place, complains Nigh took possession of the $5,000 automobile he had given her before Usher came upon the scene.

Ruth Jane Mix, 15, daughter of Tom Mix, decided upon Albert A. Kidder, attorney, for her guardian after the court gave her the privilege of making her own choice. Her mother, Mrs. Olive Stokes Mix, divorced from Mix years ago, petitioned the court for the appointment of a guardian for the girl and also for an increase of allowance from Mix. The latter was willing to grant the increase, but wanted to know for what purpose the money would be used.

The domestic tangle in the household of Roy D'Arcy was settled in divorce court when Judge Archibald gave Mrs. Laura Rhinock D'Arcy an interlocutory decree on grounds of cruelty.

Clarence Hennecke, scenario writer, asked that the interlocutory decree of divorce which was granted to Ruth M. Hennecke six months ago be set aside. Hennecke declared he wanted his wife back, but she feels different about it.

Hugo Hallman, owner of the Angelus Photo Service, and three others were arrested on charges of "outraging public morals" in connection with the sale of morgue pictures of the mutilated body of Marion Parker. Investigators of the city prosecutor's office are trying to discover where the men obtained the negative.

Pat Somerset, actor, has made up his little differences with his current wife, Shelby Worrall-Curtis Somerset and everything is quiet again in the actor's home. The Somersets, who were married but three months ago, started off on the wrong foot on their wedding night when both landed in jail. Somerset bawled his wife out for being responsible for the affair and she promptly left his fireside. It's all straightened out now.

Joe Fielding, 66, ex-heavyweight boxer, has a watch given him by Bob Fitzsimmons. When a holdup seized the timepiece, Fielding became incensed. Cops rescued the would-be holdup. It was hours before he could be revived.

Mrs. Millicent Sunday, ex-wife of Billy Sunday, Jr., must pay Mrs. Olive Day, motion picture actress, $10,000 for alienating the affections of the latter's husband. Judge Sproul in Superior Court awarded the judgment to Mrs. Day after a brief hearing. Mrs. Sunday did not contest the case.

Ray W. Owens, arrested several months ago for posing as Joe Dundee, the boxer, and trying to obtain picture work that way, got into further difficulties when his wife had their marriage annuled. She found out that Owens was living in a handsome apartment with another woman.

Priscilla Dean, picture actress, now in vaudeville, was sued for $60,000 damages by Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Ross in Santa Ana, Cal. Complaint alleges the actress drove her car into the parked automobile containing the defendants.

Rosetta and Vivian Duncan must appear in court within 10 days if they wish to contest the $1,219.23 suit filed against them by O. E. Smith. Latter is acting for Claude I. Parker, attorney, who claims the amount due for services.

Jack Dempsey and Gene Normille, leading bookmaker at Tia Juana, are understood to have jointly paid $50,000 for a one-fourth cut of the future earnings of Armand Emanuel, sensational Jewish heavyweight from San Francisco.

Mrs. Paul Berlenbach, wife of the former light heavy champ, wants to map out a movie career for herself. It is up to her husband to consent, she says.

As a result of the scalding Charles Morton, film actor, says he received at the hands of his wife, it was revealed that the latter is Lola Medona, Chilean heiress. They were secretly married about a year ago. Both are under age.

Rudolph Schildkraut and Fritz Feld, film actors, were nabbed by Santa Ana cops when the pair came driving through that town at 50 miles per.

Montagu Love obtained a divorce from Gertrude Fanny Love on grounds of desertion. They were married in England 12 years ago. Property settlement was made out of court.

Irving Berlin emphatically denied the report that came from New York saying his wife, the former Ellin Mackay, was seriously ill at Palm Springs. Berlin declared his wife was in perfect health.

Mrs. Wallace Beery, wife of the screen actor, received judgment of $50 against Hollywood Cleaning & Pressing Co. for damage done to garments.

"Little Orphan Annie" will be produced here some time this spring.

Mrs. Margaret Powell Stagg, recently convicted of defrauding the mails in connection with the death of Helen St. Clair, screen actress, made application to the U. S. District court for probation. Hearing for the petition was continued for two weeks allowing for evidence to be introduced as to the mental condition of Mrs. Stagg.

Edward Leroy, former owner of the Red Lantern Cafe, now serving a two-year sentence at Lincoln Heights jail for Wright act violations, has gone on a hunger strike. Leroy has been in for 11 months. He balked at the food given him and complained about conditions in the jail.

Having finished "The Tempest" for United Artists, John Barrymore will take a vacation of several weeks to Central America. He is going on his yacht.

Phil Ainsworth, former husband of the late Barbara La Marr, was arraigned before Judge Baird in Municipal court on charges of forgery. His bail was fixed at $3,000 pending preliminary hearing Feb. 28. Ainsworth was arrested on complaint of Joseph and Walter Dedrick and the Bank of Italy.

SAN FRANCISCO

Gordon Jennings Laing, dean of the graduate school of arts and literature of Chicago University, told the Chicago alumni at the Commercial club that an inviting field awaits development by those who realize the possibilities of movies as educators.

Julius W. Smith, Oakland musician, was charged with reckless driving when a policeman caught him driving and apparently asleep at the wheel. The cop had to fire a shot before he could arouse Smith, who told him that he was returning from a party and was all in.

Local exhibitors have turned "thumbs down" on a film depicting the life of "Hickman, the Fox," convicted kidnapper and murderer of little Marian Parker in Los Angeles.

Although he is named as a beneficiary in the sum of $5,000 in the will of Mrs. Ella F. Murray, who died last September at the Fairmont hotel, where she long resided, Rudy Seiger, violinist and leader of the Fairmont orchestra, filed a claim for $750 "for services rendered at the funeral." Mrs. Murray named Seiger as a beneficiary "because of the hours of happiness his music has given me."

Colored Horseman's Horse for Dave Marion

When the new racing season opens at Bowie track in Maryland, one of the stables installed there will be owned and raced by Sherman (Uncle Dud) H. Dudley, the colored theatrical magnate.

Among the five horses carrying the Dudley colors of old rose and blue, will be a two-year stud, christened Snuffy the Cabman, after Dave Marion, the ofay burlesque producer.

Marion gave Dudley his first chance to make something of himself in show business. Today Dudley is rated as about the wealthiest negro showman in the U. S.

Billy Pierce, the New York theatrical agent, visited Dudley last week and went to his big farm, Oxen Hill, at Washington, where the racing horses are stabled.

Since the recent death of his wife, Mrs. Dudley being shot and killed by a white Washington policeman, who is in jail, Dudley has devoted most all of his time to his horses.

STAGE MARRIAGE

Shirley Day, Chorister, Weds Non-Pro M. C. in Washington

Washington, Feb. 28.

On the stage of the Gayety one evening last week Shirley Day and Edward F. Sullivan were married by Police Judge Robert E. Mattingly, after a courtship of five days. The bride is undecided whether she will continue with the "Band Box Review," of which she is a chorister.

American Legion post made the event a special occasion at the theatre, with Sullivan, non-pro, acting as master of ceremonies.

MUSICAL TAB IN HARLEM

The latest of the Irvin C. Miller colored musical tabloids is an all-girl show for the T. O. B. A. houses.

It is having its New York premiere this week at the Lafayette. Among the principals are Marcia Marquez and Josephine Byrd.

Miller is using six grand pianos on the stage at one time.

OLYMPIC DOWN IN MAY

The Olympic, on East 14th street, New York, is to come down next May.

The house is a part of the Tammany Hall building, recently sold to mercantile interests, with Tammany Hall to build a new wigwam a little further up in that section.

Theatre is playing burlesque.

ED DALEY'S NEW SHOW

Ed Daley will produce a show for the Mutual wheel, "Broadway Scandals," starting at the Gayety, Brooklyn, March 19.

When the Columbia shows were absorbed by the Mutual, Ed Daley's "Bare Facts," headed by Lena Daley, was continued as a Mutual attraction.

NO RUNWAYS IN BOSTON

There will be no runways in any of the Boston houses playing Mutual burlesque.

Jim Curtin's Soft Job

James H. Curtin is still on the Mutual payroll, his former Columbia connection not being severed with the amalgamation of the two circuits.

Jim is now a relief manager at the three houses playing Mutual shows.

Columbia, Detroit, Is Burlesque Prospect

Detroit, Feb. 28.

With a flock of stock burlesque stands on Monroe all doing business, it is said Kunsky contemplates swinging the Columbia over to that policy. The reported drawback is Kunsky's aversion to dabbling in that field. The Columbia has been a small time vaude-film stand for years, booked by Billy Diamond (Chicago).

Meanwhile tremendous trade continues in the five downtown stock places. The experiment at Alec Schreiber's new Loop theatre, with only 500 seats and 40-cent top, is proving successful, though so far dependent on the burley-q influx. Secret here seems to be the grind and consequent turnover.

R. R. STATION'S FILMS

600 to 800 seats, and admission will range from 25 to 40 cents.

If the film theatre operators undertake to run a three or four-minute railway scenic with the program, it is reported there may be a slight reduction in the rental.

Union station, St. Louis, is believed the only terminal in the country now showing pictures. The main railroad gateway in Paris also has inaugurated the idea.

Bands and Orchestras

Routes for Next Week (March 5)

Permanent addresses of bands or orchestras will be published without charge.

No charge is made for listing in this department.

For reference guidance, initials represent: H—hotel, T—theatre, P—park, C—cafe, D H—dance hall, B—ballroom, R—restaurant.

As far as possible, street addresses in larger cities are also included.

FOREIGN FILM FANCIES

wanted. Spain is a Catholic monarchy, with a strong Republican party and ruled by a military dictator.

The Spanish "matinee" is from seven to nine. Dinner is at 10, with the second show but sparsely attended. Theatres may operate on Sundays after 4 p. m.

Theatres are mostly small and 20 years behind America, although some houses are being built and one theatre in Madrid has a modern house organ, the only one in Spain.

France

French resent any picture dealing with France which is not authentic in detail or spirit. While liking American pictures in general, they refer repeatedly to the banality of the average American movie plot.

Double features are the rule in the bigger houses but do not prevail in the smaller. This reverses the scheme of affairs in America. France has yet to see its first daily change grind.

Presentations, although new and confined to Paris, are becoming popular.

Jean Sapene, French film producer, recently established a weekly page of movie news and reviews in his newspaper, "Le Matin." This is the first serious treatment accorded movies as news by the French press.

Publicity exploitation in its infancy in France. The characteristic attitude of the Frenchman toward movies is one of high-brow condescension.

Swedan

Theatre-building is booming in this country. A 3,000-seat house has opened and another large theatre is building in Stockholm. This will be probably the first "atmospheric" theatre in Europe outside of London. It is to be called The Chinese.

All theatres are closed in Sweden from June to August. During the summer it does not grow dark in Sweden until 11, and nobody will attend a theatre.

Swedes spend their summer evenings on the water. There are more racing and sail boats in Sweden and Norway than in the rest of the world combined.

Norway

From a showman's standpoint conditions in Norway are bad, although the Norwegians are moviegoers. All theatres in Oslo, capitol, are owned by the Commune.

Competition does not exist, house managers take little interest in running their theatres, and rentals are low.

To evade the law two houses have been built just outside the city limits of Oslo by independent capital, and distributors can get twice as much rental from them as from the Commune.

The Commune, however, threatens to retaliate by barring pictures from second and third runs in Oslo.

Finland

Helsingforce, capitol, with a population of 180,000, has 20 theatres and is movie mad.

Over 86 theatres in the various Scandanavian countries are now equipped with two projection machines. Only two houses were so equipped three years ago.

Portugal

This country is hopelessly behind the rest of the world so far as movies are concerned. What few theatres there are, are well attended.

Belgium

Brussels, capitol, with about 800,000 population, has almost as many seats as Paris with 3,000,000 population.

GREENWICH VILLAGE AS IZ

By LEW NEY

(Self-Designated Mayor of G. V.)

The illiberal Liberal Club passed out years ago when the tolerant members of the short-lived Macdougal Street organization clashed eventually with schoolmarms from Maryland and ostracized college professors from everywhere. Today it seems that the Village liberals and their leaners loaf at the Civic Club, 18 East 10th street.

There a Massachusetts governor and a Worcester judge would be jarred into jellyfish. There 11 jurors of Dedham (the other one is dead) would weaken and quail. For there one reads on the wall a memorial to Sacco and Vanzetti that thrills with sincerity.

There one meets most any day Pat Quinlan, who isn't radically different from the Pat who sat at Joel's years ago, and Roger Baldwin and H. L. Mencken, when he is in New York, and Joan London. Jack's own and only daughter, and Norman Thomas, who is always running for governor or something on the Socialist ticket, and Arthur Garfield Hays and Padraic Colum and Ernest Boyd and James Weldon Johnson and so forth.

Hubert Davis has designed the colorful and jolly costumes for Hot Pan, the gold rush comedy thriller now playing at the Provincetown Playhouse. Bela de Tirefort is exhibiting his ceramically treated paintings in the black coffee and smoke room of the Fifth Avenue Playhouse. Henry, the deliberate doorman of the Inn on Sheridan Square, admits that business is rotten.

Ginger Gone

The Golden Panel has reopened. Sam Ginger has disappeared for a while for no good reason. John Rose Gildea has been seen in New Orleans by Beryl Titus, the daring dancer, and Gildea was on his way to Arizona. Charles Willis Thompson has moved from 12th street to the Bronx, but he comes back for air and otherwise.

Hank Doerr, late of the Pepper Pot, later of the Open Door, and latest in the Village Mill, has finally opened his own cabaret by taking over the late Alimony Club. Benno Preval is plastering the guests on the wall with his talent for making portraits.

Broadcasting Poetry

Charles A. Wagner and A. M. Sullivan are broadcasting their poetry a few minutes every week. Angelina still dispenses atmosphere and doesn't know it. Palatowski, the portrait painter, has just returned from Paris. Drug stores, dispensing everything from soft boiled eggs to belladonna plasters, are as numerous hereabouts as guinea pigs in a laboratory.

Intemann's, that oldish ice cream parlor on 6th avenue just above 4th street, is fully 50 years old next birthday. The "Village Gossip" is

BROADWAY GUIDE

(Changes Weekly)

For show people, as well as laymen, this Guide to general amusements in New York will be published weekly in response to repeated requests. It may serve the out-of-towner as a time-saver in selection.

Variety lends the judgment of its expert guidance in the various entertainments denoted.

No slight or blight is intended for those unmentioned. The lists are of Variety's compilation only as a handy reference.

PLAYS ON BROADWAY

Current Broadway legitimate attractions are completely listed and commented upon weekly in Variety under the heading: "Shows in New York and Comment."

In that department, both in the comment and the actual amount of the gross receipts of each show, will be found the necessary information as to the most successful plays, also the scale of admission charged.

NEW FEATURE PICTURES OF WEEK

Capitol—"The Latest From Paris" (Shearer).
Colony—"The Leopard Lady."
Paramount—"Feel My Pulse" (Daniels).
Rialto—"The Last Command" (Jannings) (run).
Rivoli—"Sadie Thompson" (Swanson) (run).
Strand—"Chicago" (De Mille).
Roxy—"Soft Living" (Bellamy).

NEW SPECIAL FEATURES WORTH SEEING

"Love" (Gilbert-Garbo) "Four Sons" "Drums of Love"
"The Crowd"

NIGHT LIFE

The Parody, with the inimitable Clayton, Jackson and Durante as the features, is recommended at all times.

Vincent Lopez's Casa Lopez holds Roseray and Capella. For a change of pace and a Bohemian atmosphere, don't miss the Club Barney, in Greenwich Village.

The hotels like the Roosevelt (Ben Bernie) and Pennsylvania (Johnny Johnson) should not be overlooked for relief purposes for straight dining and dancing purposes, before or after theatre.

The Little Club has a fast show. Ambassadeurs, former Le Perroquet, is a roomy cafe, with new black-and-tan revue.

The class spots are the Montmartre, Mirador and Lido, the latter with the unique Fowler and Tamara as the dance features, and Moss and Fontana at Mirador.

Van and Schenck are strong at the Silver Slipper, with an excellent supporting show. The Everglades is faring mildly; the Frivolity is continuing its usual healthy trade, and the inimitable Benny Davis at the 54th St. Club always produces a fast entertainment.

Up in Harlem the Cotton Club has a whale of a hotsy-totsy brown-skin revue.

Helen Morgan has reopened her new Chez Helen Morgan at the old 300 Club. Ernie Golden and his orchestra are now the features of the Knickerbocker Grill, which opened this week with a new show.

RECOMMENDED DISK RECORDS

Columbia No. 1230—Al Herman has recorded excellent back-to-back monolog in "I Thought I'd Die," getting his diction and comedy across nicely.

Victor No. 21119—Sizzling stomp music by Paul Whiteman's ites featured. Titles are the "Whiteman Stomp" and "Sensation Stomp," both corking for dance.

Edison No. 52171—Ernest Hare, otherwise one-half of Happiness Boys, baritone solos, "Chloe" and "Away Down South in Heaven." Former is unique composition, weirdly orchestrated.

Columbia No. 1321—Ed Lowry, m. c. extraordinary, Ambassador, St. Louis, does "Cobble-Stones" and "Waiting for the Rainbow" in engaging fashion. Both light numbers, excellent for Lowry's delivery.

Victor No. 21150—Sensational midwest band, Jean Goldkette's, offers pair of midwestern dance hits, "So Tired" and "Just a Little Kiss from a Little Miss," fine for dance purposes. Vocal interludes by "Hoagy" Carmichael, Myron and Lorin Schultz and "Pinkie" Porter punctuate the dance recordings.

Brunswick No. 3724—Louis Katzman and his Salon Orchestra, new concert unit. Their initial numbers, Finden's "Kashmiri Song" and Friml's "Allah's Holiday" are delectable renditions as scored by Katzman.

RECOMMENDED SHEET MUSIC

"Plenty of Sunshine" "So Tired"
"I Never Dreamed" "Waiting for the Rainbow"
"Together" "My Melancholy Baby"

Dancer's "Specials"

A muscle dancer used for stag affairs advertises on her business card that she has "special dances, costumes and music for lady audiences."

3 DANCERS AND MARINE IN STOLEN AUTOMOBILE

Two of Quartet Are Fighter and Bank Clerk—All Held for Grand Jury

A boxer, a bank clerk and two tango dancers were arraigned in West Side Court before Magistrate Thomas F. McAndrews on the charge of the theft of an automobile. The boxer pleaded guilty. The trio pleaded not guilty. Court held the four in $2,000 bail for the action of the grand jury.

They gave their names as Walter Perelli, 23, featherweight boxer and also a member of the Marine Reserve on the U. S. S. battleship Illinois, moored at 96th street and the North River; Robert Miller, 17, former dancer and now clerking for a trust company and residing at 33 South Elliott place, Brooklyn; Alfred X. Cuneo, tango dancer, of 211 19th street, Bellaire, L. I., and Eugene Lockwood, 21, tango dancer, of 211 19th street, Bellaire.

The four were charged with stealing a Nash sedan owned by Edward Wagner, of Rockville Center, Long Island. Wagner had parked his auto on Morningside avenue and 93d street. When he sought the machine it was gone. Several days later the police found the car with the quartet in it at 196th street and the Harlem River drive. Perelli was at the wheel.

Patrolmen E. J. McManus and Ray Quinn of the 17th precinct saw the four in the car. They had received an alarm for the car. The license plates had been changed. Perelli told the court he stole the car, fearing that the Marine authorities were after him. He stated that he intended to flee New York.

Lockwood told the magistrate he had recently finished with a vaudeville sketch called "The Sky Pilot." He said he was rehearsing for another act. The two dancers and the bank clerk said they had been invited for a ride by Perelli. In court was Lieutenant Bob Fischer of the Marine Reserve of the Illinois.

He explained to the magistrate that Perelli was A. W. O. L. He also stated that Perelli was disgracing the Marine uniform and asked the court to have the fighter remove certain trappings on the uniform. The court directed Perelli to do so, which he did. Fischer went to the Tombs to have the Marine uniform taken off Perelli.

FRUITLESS POKER RAID

15 Men in Game at Hotel Flanders Room—3 Arrested, Dismissed

A squad of detectives under Deputy Chief Inspector James S. Bolan raided an alleged poker game on the fifth floor of the Hotel Flanders, 135 West 47th street and arrested three men. They were taken out of the hotel to the West 47th street police station and "booked." They got bail.

They gave their names as Herman Savage, who said he owned the Empire picture theatre at 517 9th avenue; Maurice Ginsberg, of 928 56th street, Brooklyn, who stated he was in the picture business, and Max Klein, 32, a waiter, of 1475 Longfellow avenue, Bronx. All three were charged with keeping and maintaining a room for gambling.

When the sleuths swooped down on the players, over 15 were gathered around the table. They were playing "blind poker" the sleuths told reporters. Stakes were high and the "kitty" for one hour, the sleuths said, was $10.

The defendants denied that the game yielded an income. They stated that what moneys came from the game went for eats. Savage, the sleuths told reporters, hired the room. Savage said he used the room to change his clothing. The defendants were freed because of lack of evidence by Magistrate Dodge in West Side Court.

Mike and Al, colored vaudevillians, go abroad in March, having signed contracts to appear first in Berlin and then London and Paris.

Palm Beach

By Sam Kopp

Palm Beach, Feb. 25.

Broadway managers, producers and stars wintering here got behind the second annual Kiwanis Club benefit for under-privileged children and as a result the best variety bill ever presented below the Mason-Dixon was put on at the Paramount last week. Through the efforts of Joe Leblang, Sam Harris, Ned Wayburn, Al Jolson and a host of others approximately $25,000 was raised. Seats sold for $25, $10 and $5. Boxes $500.

Al Jolson acted as master of ceremonies and never seen to better advantage on any stage. His introductions drew laugh after laugh, and going on next to closing he won the capacity crowds completely. His gags, mostly locals, about slayed the wise mob here.

Willie Collier and Arthur "Bugs" Baer shared the master of ceremonies assignment with Jolson. Collier also appeared in a blackout with Dorothy Dalton (Mrs. Arthur Hammerstein).

Collier and Bugs crossed one another, each telling the same gag as stage hands were moving a piano across the stage. It was the one about the woman who boasted that her piano went back to Louis the 14th. Her friend remarking that hers went back to Gimbel's the 15th. Bugs made it Sak's. Collier was on first.

Ted Lewis was an added starter. Ned Wayburn handled backstage. No encores were permitted and the show was run off in big league style.

George Gershwin played his "Rhapsody in Blue" for big returns from the society mob that has taken George up socially this season.

A Goelet as Act

Ogden Goelet, college boy and scion of a noted family, did a banjo act and then went into his dance. Jolson in introducing the kid described him as "a millionaire who is trying to be an actor, while I am an actor trying to be a millionaire."

Alex Leftwich, who came down as Leblang's guest to lend a helping during rehearsals, remarked:

"If I had this kid's millions I'd buy myself two banjos, beat one of them to death and throw the other in the lake."

Young Goelet took the kidding good naturedly but burned when he learned that someone had monkeyed with his banjo before he went on. His hoofing wasn't bad—for a millionaire.

Irene Castle's Idea

Al Jolson Night at Venetian Garden following the benefit show at the Paramount packed the room. Al, taking charge of affairs, sang two numbers on the floor and introduced Irene Castle, Ted Lewis, Ned Wayburn, Joe Leblang and many other celebrities who were at the ringside.

Miss Castle, now Mrs. Frederick J. McLaughlin of Chicago, modestly disclaimed credit as a style leader, as Jolson described her, but insisted that she deserved praise for giving up dancing before it became so intricate.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Harris threw a great party for the theatrical crowd here Thursday in the Alba Hotel.

Colored Favs

Broadway Jones and Euble Blake (Sissle and Blake) are being kept busy playing private parties. Broadway, colored baritone, has been working Palm Beach for a dozen seasons and is a big favorite. Blake, who composed the music for the best of the colored shows, "Shuffle Along," is plugging his latest, "Chicago Loop."

Romaine Loudermilk, Arizona cowboy entertainer, was brought here by the Stotesburys to entertain at a party given by Jimmy Cromwell, Mrs. Stotesbury's son.

Spot for Those Three Boys

Christo, having returned to New York, John Steinberg, the other half of John and Christo, came down to help count up at the Venetian Gardens, which still continues to pack 'em in nightly. Morton Downey, Grace Kay White, Ralph Wonders and Murray Smith's orchestra have proved a great combination here this season. Downey leaves shortly to fulfill engagements in England, and John Wagner, associated with Christo and Steinberg in the venture, is dickering for the services of Jane Green.

What a spot this would be for Clayton, Jackson and Durante!

The northward exodus started soon after the Washington's Birthday ball at the Poinciana, marking the height of the season. Tanned faces will soon begin to be noticed in the Hunting Room of the Astor. Joe Weber and Lee Shubert left Saturday.

They think nothing of spending $5,000 to $10,000 for entertainment here at private parties. Allan Prior, tenor, and Evelyn Law, dancer, appeared at a party Saturday given by Col. and Mrs. Hayward at the Oasis club, booked by Harry Bestry for $1,000 each and expenses. Others entertaining were Morton Downey, Markel's Melodians and Harry Rosenthal.

Murry Stand has arrived.

All music publishers here are pushing their latest numbers. Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn have returned, writing songs. Marco D'Abreau and Polly Day, dancers, closed at Muleteer grill, Alba hotel, Saturday.

Stick-Up Man Identified; 4 Pick Him in Line-Up

Edward Meehan, 23, 418 West 55th street, was held without bail for trial in General Sessions when before Magistrate Dodge in West Side court on a charge of robbery. Four out of seven men who were victims of the robbery identified Meehan.

Feb. 14, three men, armed with revolvers, entered a restaurant at 220 West 58th street, operated by Charles Clark. In the place were William Murdock, waiter, and two patrons. The gunmen ordered everyone to hold up their hands.

One of the men frisked everybody's pockets for money and jewelry. One stepped to the register and relieved it of $25. While the holdup was in progress two more patrons entered and were forced to submit to being robbed. One of the patrons, James C. Todd, 1 Fairview place, New Rochelle, a tall, well-built man, was mistaken by the bandits as a detective.

"We got a bull," declared one of the stickup men at the same time striking Todd a brutal blow in the face with the muzzle of the gun. After gathering up money and jewelry to the value of $417, the men backed out. As they did so one of the bandits threw what looked like an automatic gun on the floor.

"Try and use that on us as we're laming," shouted one of the robbers as the trio left the place. Later when the gun was picked up it was found to be a cigaret case in the form of a gun.

Detective John Walsh, West 47th street station, was notified and learned that Meehan was one of the men. He arrested him.

Drunk and Forgetful

In West Side court there was a line-up of about eight men. Meehan selected a place among them and the various victims looked over all of the men. Four identified Meehan as one of the three holdup men. Some of those held up were Herbert McKenzie, 10 Midwood street, Brooklyn; James Berlew, 3261 54th street, Woodhaven, L. I.; James C. Todd, 1 Fairview place, New Rochelle, and George Byrne, 809 West 177th street.

When questioned Meehan said he was quite sure he had not committed the crime but admitted he had been quite drunk and did not remember clearly just what he did that day.

Glad-Handing Chezzers

From the little Orphan Annie of organizations, shifted and shunted and spurned by a cold, bitter world, the Cheese Club is now a much wooed outfit. The Chezzers are to be feted by Signor Sardi at Sardi's on West 44th street on March 5, which marks the first anniversary of that Times square eatery.

On top of that, the Chanins are ogling the Cheesers with a view of luring them to 8th avenue and 44th street for shelter and food at their new Lincoln Hotel.

It's quite a problem with the Chizzers considering this unusual volley of attention and approbation, after being spurned so often.

ON THE SQUARE

A Slicker in Skirts

Up north is a story of Bradley's down south. It's of the famous gambling resort at Palm Beach and how Bradley's good heartedness resulted in a woman securing the return of $25,000.

A man known by name only and new to the Casino lost $25,000 one evening during this season, according to the tale. He paid and left the place. Shortly after a woman in much agitation asked to see the proprietor. She was conducted into Bradley's private office. The explanation was her husband was the man who just left after paying his losses of $25,000 for the evening; that a part of that was his firm's money with the remainder all her husband had saved; that they had overstayed their vacation limit and she could see nothing but ruin for herself and family and jail for her husband.

Bradley cogitated and commiserated, then announcing his decision; if the woman would promise that her husband would never gamble again, anywhere, he would return the money. This the woman did and received the $25,000 in cash.

Next evening in again came the same man, seating himself at a roulette table and buying $500 worth of checks. A floor man noted him and reported. Then a page touched the player on the shoulder, asking if he would kindly step in the office to see Mr. Bradley.

Bradley told the man he had an understanding that he would not again gamble, not only in Bradley's but anywhere. When the man asked why, Bradley told him the story.

"That sounds great," said the man, "and its only flaw is that I am not married."

They are still looking for the slicker in skirts.

Al Mahr Passes Out

Al Mahr, 62, well known in sporting and theatrical circles, died in New York Feb. 24 of cancer. Formerly an actor, he appeared under the direction of John Stetson of Boston, later going over to the H. W. Savage shows, being in "The Sultan of Zulu" and other attractions under the same management. He also was in "McFadden's Flats."

Mahr stepped away from the other side of the footlights and became identified with horse racing on the betting end, but he never lost his love for the theatre. He was an inveterate first nighter on Broadway and for major sporting events. Mahr was of the elder school of Broadwayites, a familiar figure in Rector's, Sherry's, the old Metropole, the Knickerbocker, where he resided for many years, and, of course, Jack's.

A dapper little man he was, always jovial and a good friend to many along the White Way. During the 30 years of his Times square experiences, he always had his hand in his pocket for those who needed aid.

Bob Cannefax Dies in Arizona

Robert L. Cannefax, 37, former world's champion three-cushion billiardist, died at Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 26, of tuberculosis. He was reported failing of late, but a telegram received as late as last Saturday stated that he was improved. His wife, Jackie, said to be ill of the same disease, a son and a brother, Charles, in vaudeville with Gracie Deagon, survive.

Bob Cannefax, despite his youth, was a picturesque character around the Friars, where he was unique and popular. Possessed of humor, quick witted and a quaint manner of expression, he attracted people of all sorts. As a billiard player the world has had few equals. His coolness under stress was extreme. Even when playing for the title, he would frequently make an aside that he would give the opponent "the oil."

Around Wichita, Kan., he played professional baseball, and even when one leg was amputated continued in the game, later becoming an umpire. The physical handicap never seemed to bother Cannefax, and certainly not his cleverness with the cue. He appeared for a time in vaudeville.

When apprised of his affliction several years ago, he demurred, and he delayed going west for treatment.

Wine Buyers Who Don't Pay

Wine buying this season, as before reported, has been at a minimum in the nite clubs of the mid-town. One of the owners the other evening speaking of the loss of the sucker list, expressed some pleasure, as he related this:

"We carried a little wine but there has been no demand. Perhaps we had a dozen bottles. Well, last night we sold seven and got paid for two. It was a rush and looked like we would sell out. And I'm just as pleased there is but little left for we will buy no more.

"One fellow ordered a couple of quarts and another sitting near by ordered one. Then he ordered another and when he reached the fifth, said he had had enough but couldn't pay. So he signed a tab. What could we do? But the other fellow paid for his two.

"This is no kick. Just to let you know how funny they sometimes come, all at once and then you don't get it."

Kelcey Allen's $65

During an entr'act of the premiere of "Rope," at the Biltmore last week, Kelcey Allen alleged his pocket had been picked of $65 in cash. Kelcey claimed it was picked while he was seated in an aisle chair and during the revival singing finale of the first act.

Mr. Allen wouldn't say whether it had been pay night or he had shot craps or how he got ahold of $65 in cash in one day. Nor would any of the boys believe his story nor print it as a gag. Yet Kelcey said it was true and he didn't know how he could go home and face the squaw without the roll.

In the daytime Mr. Allen's chief duty is to parade Times Square with "Women's Wear" under his arm, title facing out.

Jimmy and the Cardinal

When the story came to New York, wired from New Orleans, of Mayor Jimmy Walker's remark to the King of the Mardi Gras, as the latter said:

"We have been waiting 200 years for you."

And Jimmy's answer:

"I have never been that late."

It brought up the reported visit of a Cardinal on the Mayor. Informing the prelate the liberty of the city was his to the full, "and I trust you will see it all," added Jimmy, "except please omit the Grand Central and Pennsylvania stations. I don't want you to see all of those red caps."

Bill Rogers Laid Off

When Charles L. Wagner, the manager, first approached Will Rogers on the lecture tour proposition, he sent a letter back stage at the Ziegfeld Follies, outlining a plan guaranteeing Rogers $30,000 a month. Wagner never received a reply and for some time was nonplussed at the idea of anyone being so indifferent to such a wad of dough. Rogers silence was finally explained when he admitted he thought Wagner's letter was a frame by a group of Friars who had signed to it the names of a steward at the club, another Charles Wagner.

Irish in and on Mystery Play

While not Celtic in atmosphere, "She! the Octopus" has plenty reminders of Old Erin about it. The authorship goes to Donald Gallaher and Ralph Murphy. Gallaher and Jack Welch are presenting it. The two leads are Clifford Dempsey and Harry Kelly. In the box office are Bob Burke and Frank Halligan. The company manager is Dan P. Conway and the doorkeeper's name is McCormick.

Tip is out, however, that the financial backers are not Irish.

STEW SAYS NITE CLUB "KITED" HIS CHECKS

Harold Reynolds Arrested—Patron Muddled, but Claims to Remember

Charged with suspicion of forgery, Harold Reynolds, 34, of 152 West 49th street, said to be connected with a night club, was arraigned in West Side Court before Magistrate William C. Dodge. State Senator Abe Greenberg, attorney for the defendant, was granted an adjournment until March 5. Bail of $5,000 was fixed by the Court. Reynolds obtained it.

Detectives John Coleman and Tom Walsh of the West 47th street station arrested Reynolds on the complaint of George W. Moser, broker, of 125-02 Liberty avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I.

Moser had complained to the district attorney's office that he had visited a night club with which Reynolds is connected. He said he had a few drinks and the check was $10. He was given a blank check of the Chatham and Phoenix National Bank and made it payable to Cash. Being a bit hazy, the detectives said, Moser but partially signed his name.

Discarding the check Moser asked for another and made it out. This occurred on the night of Jan. 22. The check he had partially signed his name to, he told the sleuths had been forged.

$300 Added

His signature, he said, had been completely written out. The amount, he claimed, had been raised from $10 to $210. The second check that he had completely written out for $10 dollars, the police said, had been "kited" to $110.

The check for $210 was cashed Feb. 7. The one Moser had made out for $10 and raised to $110 was cashed Jan. 24, he said. When the checks came through the bank, Moser recalled the amount and the incident vividly.

He then went to the district attorney's office and consulted Jacob Banton. The latter assigned detectives Coleman and Walsh to the case.

Police Commissioner Warren has a special squad of detectives, of which Jack Cronin and Eddie Fitzgerald are the head, to get rid of night clubs that have been "kiting" checks.

AIMEE'S PLANTING IDEA

should become an excellent investment."

Personally Conducted Services

As an inducement for the members of the flock to purchase burial plots, Mrs. McPherson will personally conduct the services for those of her members who decide their abiding place must be near that which she has chosen for herself.

Mrs. McPherson does not think that tombstones are proper, as she doesn't desire any melancholy echo of mourning to pervade the atmosphere.

The plots are being sold on the basis of 20 per cent down and monthly installments of 10 per cent of the purchase price, with 7 per cent interest added until the full amount is paid.

342 INDIE FILMS

with a program of 80 films for '28-'29 to be made at a cost of between $25,000 and $50,000 each. Sterling has scheduled 10 for next year, production to average around $15,000 each. Burton King is also planning a series of 10 at the same production cost.

Harry Garson, former producer of Clara Kimball Young pictures and the Lefty Flynn series for FBO, expects to get going with his proposition calling for 24 pictures running up to $75,000 each. Duke Worne and Trem Carr, between them, will deliver 20 features to Rayart and First Division schedules 12 for the year. The balance of the independent producers line up with low cost pictures. Charles Hutchison and Barney Goodman expect to make 20 features; Weiss Brothers will produce a number for their own distribution; Dave Thomas has four Jack London stories scheduled; Cliff Broughton plans six; Duke Worne will make eight, in addition to his quota of 10 for Rayart, and Morris Schlank will deliver about 10. Cliff Elfelt is now selling a series of 20 to be made by himself. Sierra has 20 listed.

U. M. Dailey, head of an acting school, will use his pupils in comedies, serials and westerns which he expects to throw on the independent market at whatever they will bring.

In addition to the above layout, some of which will never be produced, but nevertheless are now planned, there are other deals pending providing for about 50 pictures to go through independent channels.

Some of the producers named above are amply financed to carry through their year's program, while others will make two or three pictures and wait for the money to come in before finishing their series.

Investigation of the independent field shows there is still plenty of money obtainable for this sort of production, if the right sources are tapped.

LOOPING THE LOOP

(IN CHICAGO)

Psycho Racketeers

Mental solace is being promised to those who are "worried, unfortunate or unsuccessful" by a group of spiritual readers and advisers who are advertising extensively in Chicago dailies. Posing as advisers, psychoanalysts, spiritual experts and readers, these racketeers ply their trade. One "analyst" caters exclusively to the theatrical profession and enjoys a lucrative business.

Gray Hair for Pass

"The first 100 fathers in line when the box office opens at the LaSalle Saturday morning will be admitted free as my guests. Your gray hair will be your ticket of admission."—"L. E. Goets." (Adv. of the LaSalle theatre in Chicago papers. House showing a pop health film—"Is Your Daughter Safe.")

Gambling Fire in Hot Springs

Hot Springs, winter rendezvous of Chi professionals, opened its season Feb. 15 to take care of the usual crowd of breezy city guests. Three shiny new gambling houses were on hand to greet the visitors but one was converted into a beautiful bonfire the following morning due to a little investigation originating in the district attorney's office. It was the Belvedere, owned and operated by Chicago capital, and the bonfire represented $20,000 in new furnishings.

10c. Film Lodging House

"Sleep and be entertained—10 cents," might be an apropos slogan for the Alcazar theatre, loop all night movie house. Homeless men go in, see the show or slumber 'till dawn. Fire broke out in the basement recently, sent smoke up through the floor, but the audience slept on until evicted by the fire department.

There is belief among certain members of the "Just Fancy" company, who participated in the Henry Ford-Mrs. Whiffen publicity stunt during the Detroit engagement, that there will be several latest Ford models awaiting them upon their arrival in Boston as gifts from Henry Ford himself. The auto king is reputed to have received an "awful kick" out of his association with the "Just Fancy" company, with Joseph Santley creating a warm acquaintance with the Ford family.

For over a year one racketeer agency has been cutting the 'phone bill in half. Its proprietor discovered that by taking the coin box off the wall, and tilting it slightly after each call, the nickel would roll out in the refund slot.

Cut Rates With Haircut

Instead of "Shampoo, sir?" it's "What do you wanta see tonight?" at one Loop barber shop.

The shop is doing a rushing business in lithograph pasteboards, selling the supposedly free ducats at one-half regular box office prices.

And a lithograph "agent" with a Loop office, having a sense of humor, has had painted on his door:

"Sample Merchandise Company."

Misunderstood slang may throw mud all over a rep. A little gal who makes extra money evenings in a taxi dance hall startled a family party when asked what business she was in.

"Oh, I'm not really working right now," she cooed, "but I do pick up about $7 a week in cabs."

Bunco Subject to Police Raid

Bunco, Chicago's most popular diversion for femmes, has taken such severe hold on its patronizers that the city revenue commission has rejected a plan to license the 500 bunco parlors now in existence, classing them as undesirable.

The dames go after the game day and night, in most of the parlors paying a 50c or $1 charge for house privileges and slight refreshments. In an elementary sense, the game is simply shaking dice for prizes.

Some of the bunco "parlors" are ordinary apartments and flats, in many cases conducted by a family as its sole means of support. The commission's ruling entitles cops to raid all parlors not conducted in licensed entertainment places such as cafes. Some also will be closed by the Health Dept. on charges of unsanitary conditions.

Extras in One Evening

One night was a night in pain for certain members of the cast of a "Night in Spain" at the Cohan's Grand. Whilst Cortez and Peggy were going through one of their fast dance whirls Peggy slipped and flew into the orchestra pit, busting up the 'cello and putting herself to sleep. Ted Healy came on as Peggy was being carried back stage through the pit door and calmed the audience.

A bit later on, two chorines had a run in. One stepped on the other's foot and the other retaliated with a butt. Down went the curtain while the difficulty was ironed out.

Peggy came back for a bow, apparently uninjured, a bit later.

Cut rates are helping "Just Fancy" to stick in the real coin at the Olympic. Nowhere else are cut rates utilized as they are by the Shubert system in Chicago.

One of the advance agents in town was asked the gross for his attraction. His quotation was higher than the capacity of the theatre. It's not like the old days, when the advance agents carried capacity sheets in the inside pocket.

United Artists' new electric sign on the Apollo has made a real White Way out of the corner of Randolph and Dearborn.

Advance agents and managers even playing theatres a stone's throw from each other seldom see each other nowadays in Chicago. There is no meeting place except at the newspaper offices, and then the boys pick their own time so as not to conflict. The office of Fred McQuigg at "The American" is the only hangout.

While Chicagoans have numerous private "clubs" where the dice may roll and the roulette wheels spin one in particular furnishes its members with expensively prepared membership cards, notifies them of special events by telegram, and mails frequent engraved announcements and invites. When a "closed period" is believed desirable, members receive a telegram reading: "Club closed, you will be notified of opening date." The club also issues lavish greeting cards on holidays, and mails them to all members.

JOYS AND GLOOMS OF BROADWAY

By N. T. G.

A few days ago it was our pleasure to conduct arrangements for a dinner party which marked the conclusion of a world congress of executives of a great corporation having headquarters in every country in the world. Fifty men attended, and 50 girls, practically all from our night clubs and cafes, were their guests. After 11:30 about 20 girls from various shows dropped in for a while.

In the eyes of our friends from other lands, the girls were a revelation—in charm, qualities, intelligence and beauty.

Practically every girl we know now in current revues and night clubs are extremely young, unsophisticated and very much on the level. We have met close to 1,000 girls during the past four years, and find that the majority of the girls have others depending on them.

Florentine Gosnova in Hospital

A note from Florentine Gosnova, former Ziegfeld star and one of our great toe dancers, tells us that she is in the Orthopedic hospital where she has been four weeks with a spinal disorder. She says she gets her chief happiness from the radio and tells us that practically every one in the hospital likes the spirit of the night club broadcasting best of all.

Benefits

Two weeks ago we expressed the opinion that Eddie Cantor's illness is due to overwork doing 157 benefits in one season. The following letter is a follow up:

N. T. G.,
Variety, New York.
Dear Granny:

The enclosed clipping is one of the best things you have ever written. I happened to be with Eddie on most of those benefits. (Stage hands, musicians, etc., got paid.)

One night Eddie started out with George Olsen's band and myself. We played the Metropolitan opera house, jumped to the Belasco theatre and held the stage for twenty-five minutes and ended up by closing a show in Carnegie Hall.

Three benefits to every one but ourselves.

One of Olsen's boys had a valuable horn lifted, Eddie paid all the cabs (and how he worked), and it cost me plenty to have my costumes cleaned.

What price benefits?

Horton Spurr.

Earl Carroll's Reception

Earl Carroll made his first appearance, very much against his wishes, since his return to New York when he was forced to take a reluctant bow at the party run on board the Italian motor ship Saturnia last week. Earl had assisted in preparing the show and beauty contest and was sitting on the floor watching the entertainment when Jackie Osterman dragged him up and introduced him. He received an overwhelming reception from an audience composed largely of society people, with only a sprinkling of Broadwayites. The warmth of his reception was tremendously gratifying to Earl.

Plaster First

Al B. White tells a funny experience at a club date. Someone phoned him at his home at Freeport, L. I., explained his was a contractor and builder and was giving a party to plasterers to demonstrate a new plaster, and wished some entertainment. Would Al go? Al would. For how much? Two hundred bucks, said Al. Okay, says the plaster guy.

Arriving at the hall, Al was confronted by a motley crowd of workmen and employers, some with plaster still on their shoes. They were eating and drinking and carrying on as Al started to tell his stories. He was going great, and was just starting his fourth when the chap giving the party whispered:

"Would you mind if you stopped now? You see, we've arranged for a demonstration of this plaster. It's all prepared, and if we don't do it now it will set, and we can't work."

Want Lookers

We were talking to showmen from Holland, Denmark and Sweden while sitting at one of our local night places noted for its lookers.

"This show would make a fortune in Amsterdam during the Olympic games," ventured the Hollander. "Europe has never seen anything like them."

"Sweden would go mad over them," ventured the guy from Stockholm. "My country is in splendid shape financially just now, and feels it is rather neglected by visitors and tourists from America. These girls would be wonderful there."

The French Way

Which reminds us that our loveliest American girls, such as adorn our best shows and cafes, have never been seen abroad, or, if so, never to the best advantage. A delegation appeared at the Les Ambassadeurs last season, but were not our best girls, and were insufficiently trained and badly displayed.

We asked a French showmen what he thought of a complete cafe show in Paris composed of girls such as, for example, the Guinan girls. He surprised us by saying it wouldn't do. Pressed for a reason, he stated that as soon as the patrons found out they could not go out with the girls after the show they wouldn't come any more. This is expected, he said, in every cafe in Paris except the Ambassadeurs.

On the Riviera

By David Sturgis

Cannes, France, Feb. 15.

Broadway is cavorting on the Riviera. And so is Count Salm.

Broadway is winning at the baccarat tables at Cannes—but Count Salm is losing all along the line. He is still chasing American poultry.

The Dolly Sisters. Nurses prop them up at the tables—while they bag the gold of the Greek syndicate. Diamond merchants along the Croisette wait for the dawn to come in. When the gleam of day is ripe, another stone of Saturn flickers on the psychic digits of the fair Jenny. And what of Rosie?

Let Mrs. Nash tell the tale.

Yes, she is here—is Mrs. Nash—now Madame Dubonnet. So subdued, so chastened with domesticity is she—that the old loves shake their heads—and speak of young Dubonnet in whispers. Robert Browning snatched Elizabeth from the grave and gave her fifteen years of felicity. Such is the miracle of love. But who will sing the song of the liquid potentate of France—who broke Mrs. Nash to a fireside—and turned those dragon eyes into blue columbine stares

Page Elsa Maxwell. She is gleaning on the Riviera. She has been approached by some syndicates—visible or otherwise—to turn the Cote d'Azur into a summer resort. She is here ahead of time—with her group of nouveau riche, crippled royalty, pious couturieres, and aging debutantes—working for the beauty of France—without a thought of gold—though with no little feeling.

Broadway. Broadway. These names are mustard to you. They are becoming tres moutarde with the years. And Charlie Schwab is playing the lean, and Schwartz, the toy man, is playing the fat; and Thelma Morgan Converse Lady Furness reclines in a robe of gold—forgetful of the days when Sam Goldwyn almost starred her at Hollywood.

As I write, something has happened. They are putting Count Salm out of the baccarat room. What has he done? Flirted with a lady over 13?

NAILED PHONEY COPS

Two Posing Sleuths Offered "Protection" for $50—Accepted $25

When Thomas Commerford, 34, 2674 Valentine avenue, and William Lawlor, 34, 2284 Grand avenue, entered the restaurant of Bernard Bonat, 308 West 53rd street, to sell police protection, they were unaware that two real detectives were secreted behind a piano.

As a result, they were arrested on charges of extortion after accepting $25 on account. According to detectives Gilroy and Dugan, West 47th street station, Commerford and Lawlor entered the restaurant on Thursday about 3 p. m. Commerford said he was "boss of the cops in the district" and for $50 could guarantee protection.

In substantiation, the detectives said, Commerford produced a badge. Bonat told the two "officers" that he did not have enough money at the moment and suggested they call some other day. They said they would and left. Later Bonat notified the detectives.

While Gilroy and Dugan were in Bonat's place investigating the case, a partner of Bonat's came in and said he saw Commerford and Lawlor enter a house next door, also a restaurant. The detectives told Bonat to invite them in and then marked $25 in bills which they instructed him to give them.

The two pseudo detectives entered and they were placed at a table near a piano behind which were Gilroy and Dugan. Bonato told the men he had gotten $25 and would be able to get the additional $25 they asked in about a week. Commerford and Lawlor said that would be all right and, the sleuths said, the two men assured the owner he would not be molested.

Before they had a chance to leave Dugan and Gilroy came from their hiding place and confronted the men. Commerford dropped the bills on a chair. Both were arrested and taken to the station house. They declined to make statements.

When arraigned before Magistrate Dodge in West Side Court they were held in $1,000 bail each for further hearing.

INSIDE STUFF

ON SPORTS

Strong for Schwarzer

Manhattan College alumni are reported to have contributed to a fund for Joe Schwarzer's salary as football coach, believing through his connections that Manhattan will be able to secure some big games.

The college, now located in new quarters in Yonkers, N. Y., has not been getting enough attention from the New York dailies, according to its supporters. They believe a few big games will change this attitude.

Golfing at Palm Beach

Palm Beach has its sunshine, bathing and so forth but for showmen the real portion of the day is spent in golf. A daily foresome had Joe Leblang, Sam H. Harris, Arthur Hammerstein and Maxie Blumenthal as the players. Side bets between them is the big idea.

Harris and Leblang were fighting it out and it looked like a cinch for Harris. He was three up and four to go as they approached the 18th hole. The odds were anybody's but Leblang copped all four holes and what Harris said is of classic trend. It made Joe's trip to Florida complete.

Aronson's Basketball

Jules Aronson, connected for many years with theatricals and who for the past few years promoting sports in Philadelphia, grabbed a lot of heartaches when taking over the local franchise for big league basketball. He is several thousand in the red but recently wired an offer of $50,000 to Jack Dempsey to fight Jack Gross, local heavy in one of the ball parks next summer.

With any kind of a weather break Aronson should recover his losses with open air boxing as he is personally the most popular promoter with the fans.

The Garden's Raspberry

For some reason the New York state boxing commission started a fresh drive against smoking during professional cards at Madison Square Garden last week. The place was packed for the McLarnin-Terris encounter and, heeding a warning of expulsion, those at the ringside kept down the smokes.

Joe Humphries started to thank those present for complying with the non-smoking edict. In answer the fans gave him a long, loud raspberry. It sounded even funnier over the radio. Immediately afterwards, matches flared up all over the upper regions.

McLARNIN NEXT CHAMP; KNOCKS TERRIS COLD

"Baby Face" With First Right Sock Eclipses Sid in First Round

By JACK PULASKI

Tommy McLarnin, the sensational lightweight from the coast, made his eastern debut at Madison Square Garden Friday, and was accepted as the leading contender for the world's championship. He knocked out the fleet Sid Terris, past leading contender of New York and it only took one wallop. Sid went out cold a minute and 46 seconds after the opening bell.

McLarnin, popularly called "baby face Tommy" on the Pacific, came this way with the rep of being a knocker out. He was not overrated. Some of the best of the little men are his victims, including Kid Kaplan and Joey Sanger. Tommy has a tendency towards the welterweight division, but his poundage was announced as less than the lightweight limit of 136. He looked more.

Some of the smart fight people regarded Tommy's prowess with skepticism. That was before the fight. They were inclined to bet on Terris and said so, even though the last minute odds switched from 8 to 5 on Terris to 6 to 5 on McLarnin.

Ticket Sale Stopped

The Garden was packed as never before. Firemen stopped the sale of standee tickets, and the fans slipped into every nook and corner. Plenty of money at $11 top—and to look over a new boy. Shows how fight followers love a socker. Even though the battle was one of the briefest since the Garden's opening, money's worth was delivered. The fans were somewhat shocked. Sympathy went to Terris, who was revived in his corner only after several minutes of cold water, ice and salts. From the moment of the knockdown, the entire Garden stood until finally Terris climbed out of the ring. Then only did the mob disperse.

Plenty did not see the blow. It was a right hand to the chin, a short vicious chop. Terris had been knocked down before, and sort of had the rep of a glass jaw. But before the coming of dynamite baby face, he always got up at nine, and more than once fought his way back to victory, as last summer when toppled by Ruby Goldstein, he arose and sent Ruby to dreamland. Sid never was never hit so hard before. He dropped on his face and there was but one feeble squirm to wriggle up. Then the lights went out for him.

Favorite Over Mandel

The forfeits are up for a match between McLarnin and Sammy Mandel, the present champ. There is little doubt but that Tommy will be made the favorite when they meet and the chances are he will cop. If Terris could not stay away from the little mick's right, Sammy will probably find it as difficult.

It may have been that Terris took Tommy's rating too lightly. It may be too that he realized the only way he could win was to stop baby face. Within the first 30 seconds, Sid shot a right to McLarnin's face. Maybe it stung but didn't disturb the coast kid. The tales from the west say that Tommy has been brought along very carefully. Few knew about him until this season, when the news of the knock-out conquests filtered this way.

It was Erin's night. McLarnin entered the ring with the greenest green bathrobe in the world. On the back was a large harp and the robe looked so stiff that it might have stood by itself.

Sammy Dorfman Won

There were three eight-rounders preceding the main event. Sammy Dorfman outpointed Chick Suggs, the clever New England colored lad. It was a close decision and only a knockdown of Suggs in the first minute saved the bout for the East Sider. Sammy cracked a left hook to the jaw and Chick crumbled to his shoulder, not getting up until nine. Dorfman could do little with the colored boy thereafter. He failed to use his right until the fifth round, and after that but occasionally.

Preceding, Dominick Petronne beat Lew Perfetti and did it thoroughly. The slighter Petronne did not seem to absorb the heftier Perfetti's blows, but he out-hit him all the way. The boys have met a number of times. This time Dominick had Lew's number. It was one of those socking matches that fans love to watch.

Willie Siegel and Walter Babcock met in the first eight. It was stopped in the fifth round with the match being awarded to Willie.

Big doings are expected again this week, Jack Delaney nad Tom Heeney meeting tomorrow (Thursday) night.

John Price, Hotel Mgr., Accused as Defaulter

Mystery surrounds the arrest of John Price, for five years manager of the Martha Washington Hotel, for women, at 29 East 29th street. Price is 45. He was arrested by detective Joseph F. Fitzgerald, of the West 47th street station. Price is specifically charged with the defalcation of $166 of the hotel's money on Feb. 18.

He was arraigned in West Side Court before Magistrate William C. Dodge on a short affidavit alleging larceny. At first the amount stated in the Court papers read "$5,000 larceny". When bail was suggested of $2,000 the Court was bewildered to have lower bail requested than the alleged amount taken. However, the affidavit was changed and Joseph Broderick, attorney for the defendant, obtained $2,000 bail for Price.

Reports were current that Price had embezzled $40,000. This rumor was quickly dissipated by Fitzgerald and Lester Hills, general manager of the Manger System, of which the Martha Washington is part. The complainant against Price is "Henry Euster," according to the police record. Mr. Euster turned out to be Henry Knester, an executive of the Times Square Hotel.

Reports had it that Price had borrowed large sums of money from women guests at the Martha Washington. Whether this was so could not be learned. Hills is quoted as saying if such were the fact the executives of the Manger system would hardly know of it. Why the arraignment took place in West Side Court is a mystery, as Price should have been arraigned in Yorkville Court.

The defendant is married and comes from Indiana. "We have received no complaints that Price received money from guests," said Mr. Hills. "We have checked up carefully and know where we stand," he said. "It won't come to more than $1,500. There were just a few accounts he held out for himself," concluded Hills.

Raymond Hitchcock and attorney Phil R. Davis of Chicago are writing a play in collaboration, tentatively titled "The Old Medicine Show," in which Hitchcock intends starring.

Pari-Mutuel Betting Bill Introduced in New York

Albany, Feb. 28.

A new attempt was made to legalize pari-mutuel betting in New York state in the introduction of a bill by Louis A. Cuvillier, in the Assembly last week. It's similar to the Illinois statute on pari-mutuel wagering. Measure provides that each corporation licensed to conduct horse races may, on application to the Secretary of States and the payment of a fee of $10,000 for each racing day, receive a license to conduct or supervise the pari-mutuel system.

A tax of five per cent on gate receipts is provided and the secretary of state is authorized to have a representative present at each meet to examine the books. Three and a half per cent of the money wagered would be retained, out of which two per cent. would go to the state as taxes and the remainder applied to the association's expenses.

RITZY

Tappe's Clientele

Herman Patrick Tappe, modiste and milliner, has many customers from the show business as well as from society. A sensation was created, years ago, when he married the widow of James McVickar, mother of grownup sons. She had been Anna Jaffray, daughter of the late Edward Somerville Jaffray, a prosperous New York merchant. This lady, considerably older than Tappe, was an aunt of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, of the smart set. After being divorced, Tappe married Anna, who had acquired some money on her own account, without having to cable for it.

Later Herman and Anna separated, and she now has a select shop of her own. A few years ago Herman kindheartedly advanced the lad who had been dressed in uniform, to serve as page-boy, to a position in the business, and, smartly clad, this handsome fellow became nicknamed "the Prince of Wales." Although the Mrs. Harriman above referred to may not have been overjoyed at once having to consider Tappe her "uncle," it is an amusing incident that her daughter, the divorced Mrs. Harriman Russell, a "grand-niece" of Herman, is a customer at his shop. She occasionally drops in with her inseparable companion, Mrs. Vincent Astor. Tappe has recently been in London and Paris.

Evening Dress Movie House

Friday night is the fashionable evening at Colisee, on the Champs Elysee, in Paris, this movie house being patronized by men and women in evening dress. Recently, when "Kid Boots" was the attraction, a hum of comment circulated when Malcolm Waite appeared on the screen, for, as the second of the three husbands of Olive Celeste Moore, he was well known in Paris.

The American college athlete succeeded Archibald White, of Cincinatti, as Olive's mate. She hails from Brooklyn, and was once in musical comedy, appearing a generation ago at the Broadway theatre with the Bostonians and with Grace Van Studdiford in "The Red Feather."

Mrs. Corey Entertains

Mrs. William Ellis Corey continues her custom of many years past, and still entertains lavishly in London and Paris, generaly with many titles in evidence. An older generation recalls her as Mabelle Gilman. Born in San Francisco, she was educated at Mill's College, Alameda, and first acted in New York at Daly's theatre in the early '90s. She returned there to appear in "The Geisha" in 1896 with James T. Powers, and was in those other successful musical comedies, "The Circus Girl" and "The Runaway Girl" in support of Virginia Earle. In 1899 she was at the Casino in "In Gay Paree," and then starred in "The Casino Girl," "The Mocking Bird" and "Dolly Varden." In 1904 she starred in "Amorelle," and, after being reported engaged to her leading man, Edgar Atchison-Ely, she married William Ellis Corey, president of the steel trust, after he was divorced from his wife.

She later separated from him, receiving an enormous settlement. During subsequent visits to New York from her home in Europe, she has not been regarded seriously by American society. At the time of her marriage to the multi-millionaire, a sister arrived from San Francisco, but was not welcomed by the bride.

Florence Walton's Shop

Florence Walton, who has a fine home in Paris, has just opened a millinery shop there. She is in very comfortable circumstances, and wears magnificent jewels.

Looking remarkably well, she is as attractive as when, almost a generation ago, she graduated from the chorus and became a solo dancer. Then she married and divorced the famous Maurice, and is now married to Leon Leitrim.

Titles on the Stage

From time to time authentic connections of the British aristocracy come to America to appear in Broadway productions. This season Gyles Isham appeared in a minor role in "And So to Bed." He is the son and heir of Sir Vere Isham, 11th baronet of the line, the title having been bestowed by King Charles I in 1637.

Gyles graduated from Oxford University a year ago, and was editor of the Isis, a weekly publication, and President of the Oxford Union Dramatic Society. Several seasons ago La Lillian Maxwell-Willshire was in the chorus of "Afgar," a Broadway musical comedy. Later she divorced her husband, Sir Gerard Maxwell-Willshire, and he returned to New York with another wife, formerly Vera Gainsford of Sydney, Australia. Still later, when a child was born in New York, the christening was attended by a picturesque coterie, including the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Boris, Prince Kadja of Persia, Viscount and Viscountess de Frise (great admirers of the late Florence Mills) and Robert Lee Keeling, socially registered movie extra.

Some years ago Lord Dangan appeared in New York in a musical comedy, and, marrying an American girl, they appeared in vaudeville as Lord and Lady Dangan. Prior to that, the Earl of Yarmouth acted at the Broadway theatre in a melodrama, "The Price of Peace," and at the Casino at Newport with May Robson. Then he was married to and divorced by Alice Thaw, sister of Harry K. Thaw. Alice is now the wife of Geoffrey G. Whitney of Milton, Mass. Yarmouth became Marquis of Hertford, and a few months ago went into bankruptcy. The Earl of Rosslyn also acted on Broadway under the management of Charles Frohman. He was an intimate friend of Perugini (whose real name was Chatterton), one of the series of husbands of the late Lillian Russell. After having been divorced from Violet Vyner, the Earl married Anna Robinson, American actress. Anna had left Broadway for a career in Paris, and was escorted there by the late W. K. Vanderbilt and the late King Leopold of Belgium. As Countess of Rosslyn she sought social recognition in London, but found it not, so again the Earl was divorced, and chose as his third wife Vera Bayley.

Anna Robinson, losing her fortune even more rapidly than she had found it, returned to America practically penniless, and, dying, her body was claimed by a sister, Margaret Robinson of Philadelphia, formerly an actress.

Sheets' First Trip

George Sheets, who has many friends in the show business, has been abroad for the first time, and is much in evidence in Paris, especially in the night life, at such popular places as, to translate literally, "The Bull on the Roof."

For many years with Henri Bendel, he is now with Bergdorf-Goodman, and has been buying spring models. His mother, to whom he is devoted, is a handsome woman who has played small parts in the movies.

Beth's Burning Wires

Some one should have told Beth Berri while she was in Paris recently that, as the old adage affirms, "walls have ears," and just because she is in France she should not imagine neighbors cannot speak English. Some of her telephone conversations might be described as "burning up the wires."

"From America"

Kirby and De Gage, billed as "direct from Hollywood," have been appearing at the tea dances and dinners at the smart Restaurant des Ambassedeurs, Monte Carlo, earning applause for a number called "Chicago Gangland."

Just as in America, artists used to be called as "From London" or "From Paris," all over Europe "From America" is now the slogan.

Count's Family Quarrel

Temperamental American actors, male milliners, interior decorators, etc., visiting Paris are likely to frequent the Select Bar in the Champs Elysees, and, once there, are likely to encounter the young Count de Castellane. He is the son of Anna Gould, daughter of the late Jay Gould of New York.

This heiress to many millions first married Count Boni de Castellane, and, after divorcing him, married his cousin, the Duke H de Talleyrand, by whom she had another son, cousin as well as half-brother of the young man who knows so many Americans. He has quarreled with his family.

Poli stock at the Lyric, Bridgeport, Conn., suspended Saturday. The players will be distributed amongst other Poli companies. A. F. Winstrom, who now has the house under lease, will play pictures, changing four times weekly.

The Dillingham Butlers

A slight mix-up at the meal of a house party the other evening recalled to someone a similar happening at the Long Island home of the Charles B Dillinghams, at the time Dillingham was operating the New York Hippodrome.

On the morning of the day when Mrs. Dillingham had prepared to entertain the 400 of the Island with a dinner in the evening, her serving staff walked out. Phoning her husband, he soothed his wife, saying butlers were the easiest thing to find on 6th avenue; it would be okay and not to fret, he guaranteed it.

About five that afternoon three foreign-looking fellows with bundles under their arms appeared at the Dillingham estate, sent by Mr. Dillingham.

Everything looked lovely as the dinner started, until the butlers commenced to serve. Such lumbering awkward butlers had never been heard of on Long Island. They were always just missing, with the guests in a panic, until Mrs. Dillingham, between courses, thought the best way out was an explanation. This she made and added that if the next course were served no better, they would dismiss the waiters, taking care of the remainder of the dinner themselves.

The guests, relieved, thought that quite a novel scheme and awaited the return of the butlers. As the three trouped in with arms full of plates, they took stations around the room and commenced tossing crockery over the heads of the guests. From that they proceeded to juggle the ornaments on the dining table, with the party meanwhile catching the idea. It provoked laughter and a most pleasant evening from what had appeared to be a disaster to Mrs. Dillingham.

The 6th avenue butlers her husband had secured were of the Agoust Family, foreign jugglers, then appearing at the Hip.

TELLING 'EM OFF

Evelyn Brent's Chin

Emil Jannings is fine in "The Last Command" and "The Last Command" is fine too, rare combination. No signs have yet appeared "How many times have you seen. . . ." But this picture is more worthy of it than some of his others.

And Evelyn Brent is always a pleasure because she has intelligence as well as beauty. She has the nicest chin to tuck furs under and it was probably her sable scarf, not her face, that the women watched in a close-up as she slowly pulled it around her neck. There wasn't even a hint of any baggage, but she had a black velvet gown with flaring collar of black lace and another beautiful white satin one with not much bodice, but the full skirt touching the floor in back and encrusted with pearls, where there was room. Her pearl necklace, glowing in a close-up of its own, could only be adequately described by a poet.

Garry Cooper's Build

Garry Cooper may have been picked for "Beau Sabreur" because he was built so much like a sword and had just about as much feeling. Evelyn Brent has been associated with such real parts she seemed a bit too serious for such juvenile foolishness as a desert romance.

The sands of the desert may grow cold but her hero wouldn't if clothes could prevent it.

Hope Phillips' Prison Sentence for Auto Killing

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Hope Phillips, San Francisco actress, was sentenced to San Quentin for from one to 10 years on a manslaughter charge. Helen Knudson died after being struck by an automobile. Mrs. Phillips was driving.

Judge Hardy passed sentence after he had denied application for probation. Mrs. Phillips collapsed in the courtroom.

GREENWICH VILLAGE

about to come out again and tell the truth about our unserene celebrities. Roi Tolleson is threatening to spring another green sheet. Cynthia White will give no more revels this season.

The Dial Press has put out a book of Robert Clairmont's poems: Henry Harrison has done ditto for Goldie Becker, and Boni and Liveright have published another volume of Maxwell Bodenheim's rhythms. Abraham Wechsler has returned to his 23d street coffee business, no more to patronize Village poets.

"Cato" Hurt

Leslie Catton, known as "Cato" from Boston to Broadway, tumbled down the stairs of the Newspapermen's Club a week ago and fractured his skull. He is lingering at Bellevue for a long time for repairs. Carol Frink has returned to Chicago and is "Herald-Examiner" after getting service in a new suit against her husband, Charles MacArthur.

Book and Racquet Club gave a theatre party Saturday at the Chinese theatre on the Bowery. The same evening the Mayfair Players opened their basement theatre at 45 Grove street, the same place Christine Ell and her Bohemian rendezvous several years ago. Miss Borden's Grove Street theatre is still for rent by the Guarantee Trust Company.

Sam Schwartz's Bad Break

Sam Schwartz, of the Black Knights Tavern, has had two bad breaks with life recently. New Year's Eve his place on Macdougal street was raided by prohibition agents just in time to completely wreck the receipts for the night. But that was a mild one compared with the loss of his wife in California.

Sam's wife had been west for her health for some time and he sent her substantial checks regularly. When she died a few months ago Sam was not notified. A clever crook typed weekly letters to Sam signed the wife's name to them and cashed the checks that kept on coming. Eventually a friend from the west coast visited the Tavern here and offered his condolence.

Schwartz immediately boarded a train for California, had the confidence man jailed and returned the other day much sad and more wise.

Naughty Nanette

Nanette is her name, and naughty and naive is her nature. For two years she has drifted drowsily and dreamingly from studio to tea room. Her unsophisticated innocence and saucer-like eyes and brunettish beauty and wondering demeanor have charmed and cheered and created many a thrilling throb. A gay Musetta, an indolent prestidigitator—Nanette.

And now her willingness to live without work or worry has landed her in a police line-up and an enforced and unpleasant vacation. She admits that she bit the hand of a Broadway manicurist who fed her for seven weeks. At Police Headquarters she was charged with robbing her friend of $3,500 worth of clothing, jewelry and cash.

Nanette Paul wonders about it all as she awaits her turn in our Jefferson Market prison. Three years ago she left her unhappy home in Philadelphia by design and found the Village by accident. Police records show occupation for derelicts, and Nanette labels herself a cabaret dancer.

Pen pushers have a perfect passion for passing off persons with moral weaknesses on our much-visited quarter. This wayward one had a suppressed desire to be a movie star, a night club hostess, a paid entertainer, a musical comedy queen, but she lacked IT and never made the grade at anything.

"I was crazy, I guess," said Nanette to the police. "I intended, when I took the things, to go to some small town, open a tea room and earn enough money to pay her back. You can see I was only borrowing, because I didn't pawn or sell a thing."

A few Villagers know Nanette, and to know her is to like her. She lived last year in the Minettas and elsewhere. She has been arrested for lesser lassitude before now. She admits her crime. Bars and bolts and locks and a narrow prison cell have bruised and cowed her.

Now Nanette needs a friend. As a technical first offender she may receive a suspended sentence and probation. Perhaps someone will vouch for her and avoid the otherwise inevitable and hardening horror of institutional care. Nanette is 20 and beautiful. Some patient person might teach her that work is the wisest way. But if assuming the responsibility be sure you have plenty of patience.

A TIMES SQUARE GAL WRITES BACK HOME

(Another letter sent by Adelaide Smithson, of 46th street, to her chum, Louisa Chesterbrook, of Cumbersome, Idaho.)

New York, Feb. 25.

Dear Louisa:

A little surprised not having heard from you. I'm so curious about what the folks back home are saying about me.

Did you speak to ma? Or the boys? And how does Joshua seem to take my going away so suddenly? Joshua wouldn't be a nice boy in any place but Cumbersome. There he was so nice I didn't have to wear bloomers.

Not much to tell you about Times Square. Am still in the same 46th street place I told you about. It's hard to get acquainted here. I don't even know who has the room next to me, but there's always a sweetly pretty smell around. It's some perfume I never smelled before.

A Polite Fellow

When I get to know my way I'll look for a job. It's not hard to get a job, I'm sure. Have had a couple of chances while walking along Broadway. One fellow—and very polite, too—stopped me, saying:

"Babe, are you out for business or pleasure?"

He was so nice I told him I didn't want to talk business; but, and I had a hard time getting rid of him. Dumbbell that I am, I forgot to ask what his business was.

The worst time for me is in the evening. It's so lonely. I'm afraid to go anywhere because everybody looks at me. Just as soon as I get a job I'm going to buy a dress like I see in the windows. Guess my Cumbersome home-mader makes so many look.

All day long, when I'm walking I'm looking for that man I met on the train. Please don't tell ma. I'm sure he'd give me lots of advice. Losing his card was so silly of me, wasn't it?

Have enough money left to take my time looking around, and am afraid to spend it on clothes until I go to work. Don't tell ma. She always said I had crazy notions.

This 46th street is funny. On every corner there's a crowd of men, just talking. It reminds me of the postoffice on Saturday night. You get some awful bumps when walking through them. They seem the clumsiest fellows I ever saw.

Hard-Boiled Landlady

Some are good looking, too, but I've no way to get to know anyone because I don't know the first who might introduce me to someone else. That's why I would like to meet the people in this house. I have been thinking of talking to the landlady, but she's very uppish, and didn't even smile when I paid her the rent.

If the men would keep away from me I could spend all day listening in front of the shops with radios or phonographs. That's as good as going to a show. But whenever I stop for that, somehow all the men seem to fall against me. I suppose I'll have to look for a job right away, as I can't get used to being around all the time doing nothing, without ma or the boys here.

Think I was a little fool not to stop off in Chicago, where I had letters, but that man on the train did it. Just terrible I lost his card. Please don't tell ma, because I wrote her it was just as cheap to come to New York as Chicago, so I came right through.

Please write me as fast as you can. Don't forget to address Mrs. Adelaide Bracer, although I got a letter from ma addressed properly, and I had to steal it off the hallrack when no one was around. I don't see that pretending I'm married has made any difference yet. No one has even asked me about my husband.

Remember me to Hank, but you'd better not read these letters to him, for maybe he'd think you were coming on, too, and then he would want to come along. And, Louisa, there's no use telling you how Hank would look around here, even if he had a new suit.

Lots of love. Addie.

P. S.—A man just knocked and asked if I had a stamp. I'm so excited. He lives next door. Will probably know more now. Don't tell ma.

Among the Women

By the Skirt

The Best Dressed Women of the Week
ALBERTINA RASCH GIRLS
Designed by Dolly Tree—Executed by Brooks
Capitol Theatre, New York

Clothes Disappointment

Mildly amusing is the latest Norma Shearer film, "The Latest From Paris." Expected plenty of dressing, but not.

Miss Shearer is a saleswoman for a cloak and suit house, and her only clothes are a few tailored frocks. Miss Shearer and her husband, Irving Thalberg, were also in the weekly news reel, and it was noted she wore a costume from the film.

Two box coats made double breasted had very short skirts. A velvet jumper's plaid skirt was carried out in the facing of a hat and the lining of a coat. What seemed to be a gray outfit was sumptuously trimmed with fox. Black velvet was adorned with lynx. The dress had a white front of two wide reveres.

Capitol's Smartest Stage Show

The Capitol's stage presentation this week is quite the smartest it has had. Called "Tick Tock," a drop first has a huge gold clock in direct center. Hands are pointed at three, and from the rear "Three O'Clock In the Morning" is played by the Walt Roesner band. The drop ascending reveals the band in black patent leather smocks with red belts and collars. Mr. Roesner was in morning costume. Two French clocks make up the back drop, with swinging pendulums.

Al and Gussie Bloom do an eccentric dance, the girl wearing a green dress with purple ruffles and yellow bloomers. Helen Yorke, with a voice far above the average, wore a white chiffon frock. Her bodice sported a wide panel hanging back and front. A diamonte girdle was caught at one side with a huge pink flower. Later, Miss Yorke appeared in a flame colored hoop skirt. It was elaborately embroidered in silver and brilliants. A crescent of silver adorned the head. Silver slippers were worn.

The Albertina Rasch Girls are gorgeously gowned. Their first costumes consisted of black net ballet skirts picked out with a silver edging. Bodices white and tights black. Head dresses were silver caps with black and silver ruchings. The girls came back for their second number in ankle-length dresses made of yellow taffeta. The very full skirts had three flounces edged with net. Each flounce carried a pink rose. Tight bodices were finished with tiny puffed sleeves. Huge yellow straw hats were trimmed with wide green ribbons in two shades. For the finale, the girls appeared in long capes of white taffeta painted in brilliant colors. Hats were of satin made with exceedingly high crowns and green plumes.

"The Royal Family" a Wow!

"Abie's Irish Rose" ran five years, "The Royal Family," at the Selwyn, should run forever.

Here is a show for every generation. It will never grow old-fashioned. Only one word for this production—gorgeous.

David Burton has done a superb bit of direction. The same can be said of the casting.

Performances of Haidee Wright, Jefferson DeAngelis, Ann Andrews and Otto Kruger are as perfect as can be found on any stage.

Miss Andrews is gowned beautifully in the three acts. Black velvet was one gown and another was of a sand colored velvet, both made with a blouse waist line. Each had square cut panels hanging below the hem. Her tea gown was of mauve chiffon and satin. Miss Andrews also showed a mahogany colored velvet coat, trimmed with red fox.

Miss Wright was a regal dowager in her flowing robes of white, black and purple. Sylvia Field appeared in a riding habit consisting of tan jadpurs and brown coat. She wore a coolie coat of brocade and a pink chiffon negligee. Besides a squirrel coat and a cloth dress of grey and green. Catherine Calhoun-Doucet was smartly gowned in a mulberry velvet street dress with hat matching. A black velvet dress was very nicely made.

What a wow this show will be in London.

Cohan's Padded Play

George Cohan's latest, called "Whispering Friends," at the Hudson, is lively enough all of the time. There are two acts and five scenes with only the drop of the curtain to indicate the passing of hours. It could be boiled down to a 25-minute vaudeville sketch.

Anne Shoemaker is smartly dressed in the two acts, and also Elsie Lawson. Miss Shoemaker is first in an evening frock of ivory chiffon made with the blouse effect and long ends at the side. Her second was of a shade of roses, called ashes. The skirt had a two-flounce circular motif. Low girdle was bowed at the side. A very short boudoir gown was carried out in mauve and silver.

Miss Lawson chose green chiffon for her first gown. The long straight line was relieved by a black panel of matching coke feathers. A caped ensemble was grey with the dress made jumper fashion. Small brown hat. Edith Gresham was a neat maid in a black costume, followed by one of grey with the inevitable lace-trimmed aprons.

Funnier Than Ever

The Parody Club means Eddie Durante, Eddie Jackson and Lew Clayton, funnier than ever. What a show they are doing now, and these boys have surrounded themselves with plenty of femininity.

Jarret and Listz, two misses with harmonizing voices, are in black dresses made in ruffles of net with a bodice adornment of pink roses. Mlle. DeLye, who is stepping on Mlle. Fifi's toes, is wearing a dress made up of strands of white and black beads. Miss Carleton, tall blonde with an exquisite figure, does her bending number in a black and white fringed costume. The toga of a Roman covers her diamond trunks and brassiere for a second number.

Likes Frances Shelley

There is a young miss up at the Benny Davis nite club, Frances Shelley, who will bear watching. She should go far if properly handled. Miss Shelley sits on a low stool and croones sweet melodies, holding attention in a cabaret and that is going some in this day.

What Miss Shelley needs is to go to some smart dressmaker and have a distinctive costume designed for her. In looks she resembles the Jane Cowl of a few years back. A powdered blue buffante is the present costume. More leg and less skirt would be better.

No Film History This Week

The pictures showing on Broadway this week will not make film history. Bebe Daniel's latest, "Feel My Pulse," is but passingly fair.

Miss Daniels is wearing some fetching costumes. A negligee of white satin has a chinchilla collar and sleevcs of a crystal embroidery. A black velvet one is trimmed with white fox. Dyed ermine coat with fox trimming is worn over a chiffon dress.

Up at the Roxy is Madge Bellamy in "Soft Living," another ordinary film. Miss Bellamy is first as a lawyer's assistant in the usual type of office clothes. As a bride she is lovely in a filmy dress of satin and net and a huge hat. Very lovely is a black velvet dress made with a clever lace yoke. There is also a black taffeta buffant.

Mary Duncan, of "Shanghai Gesture" fame, will make a name in picture, if given the breaks. She wore a metallic jumper frock with a fur piece and good looking hat.

Gladys Rice is singing from one of the corner balconies in a white and crystal gown. Miss Rice's voice sounds fuller and richer than ever.

You Figure It Out; Too Much for a Man

Conrad Veidt's wife, who went to Germany before Christmas, returned to New York last week, bringing her infant daughter and a 15-year-old girl named Ruth Holl, who is the daughter of Mrs. Emil Jannings.

Mrs. Jannings was formerly Mrs. Veidt, and Miss Holl, the child of Mrs. Jannings' first marriage, was the step-daughter of Veidt before she was Jannings' step-daughter. It sounds something like the old gag, "Is there any reason why a man shouldn't marry his widow's sister.'

Veidt and Jannings are close friends and Mrs. Jannings (former Mrs. Veidt) and the present Mrs. Veidt are also very friendly.

SOME GIRLS ON AND OFF THE SCREEN

Half the girls baited by the title to see "The Latest from Paris" were squawking because the picture didn't make good on it. Norma Shearer wore only the standard ready-to-wear models from 37th street.

Norma plays a cloak and suit traveling saleswoman.

Whether or not the title belies the dressing, the film is a good bet for the women. The girls will like to see a business girl heroine who really looks, acts and dresses like a business girl. Miss Shearer's a business girl a boss might hire to do a little work.

"The Latest from Paris is all Norma. She'll have a chance to prove her draw in this picture. It's a flimsy. And Madge Bellamy played the identical yarn at the Roxy less than a month ago.

But with Norma and with Ralph Forbes playing the competitive salesman, it's a girls' picture with a girls' star.

Double-Crosser

A lad who pulls a thousand a week writing a syndicated column sidesteps even Leblang's when he wants to throw a theatre party. He wrote a note to a sell-out last week asking for five for Friday.

The press agent had to hustle around to buy up the seats. And the column carried a description of the lad's swanky guests and party without even mentioning the show.

"The Leopard Lady" is one of those exceptional films which could have been sold to the wise guys for two dollars as a burlesque. Photographically, it's a gem.

The story is one of those heebejeebe mysterious gorilla-killer affairs which lend themselves perfectly to burlesque. But in acting—well, probably it's Jacqueline Logan who establishes the burlesque pace. The school of vamping which went out with Theda Bara is here revived by the Logan lady. Arch, no end. And as for her flirtation scene, where as a lady detective she sets out to win her suspect, there just isn't a man on 8th avenue who wouldn't suspect something phoney in such desperate coquettery.

It's a lot of fun to see this old eye-rolling hip-undulating style of vamping again. Both the girls and boys will enjoy it. It will take them back to the old days when a wiggle was a promise instead of an out.

Another lovely voice came to light during the "Gay Musketeer" stage bit. It belonged to Marie Sampson.

The Roxyettes, girls, were in mauve velvet pants and crystal brassiers. Down one leg were coke feathers. Head dresses of silver and coke were perched saucily upon these girls.

Very lovely indeed was a three-toned ballet. One set of girls were in white chiffon made to cling to the figure with long ends floating from the shoulders. Another set were in full tarleton costumes of many colors. Each girl represented a different flower, that being carried out in the high medici-like collar. Silver fringe was used for the third group of girls.

The brightness of the Capitol stage presentation stood off the gloominess of its picture, "The Crowd," last week. Here is a picture enough to give one the willies. Some shots of New York are interesting enough to be in a travelog and of interest to the middle classes of this country who never have hopes of seeing the big city.

Also the picture might have been called Gum. Its director had the idea the American poorer classes must chew gum. The only time gum could be called artistic was in that little bit in "The Big Parade" between John Gilbert and Reenie Adorce. As King Vidor directed both perhaps the gum was continued.

The stage at the Capitol was brightly hung for the Walt Roesner band. Huge chains of white balls became coral or any precious stone in the many changing lights. Sixteen girls on an elevated platform over the band in full black tights over black net dresses. The silver trimming was matched in the slippers that had a tendency to make the wearers' feet look large. White wigs made an interesting note.

The girls appeared in another number dressed in blue costumes. Huge bows of variegated colored ribbons formed the very short skirts. Legs were bare and on the feet were green slippers. On the heads were three cornered hats on blue with shaded green plumes.

Dennis Sisters looked well in pink mull dreses made with full skirts and at one side were wide sashes of blue ribbon combined with a flowered decoration. The three girls were draped around a beautifully decorated piano in the orchestra pit. The girls appeared later in black net dresses made in ruffles.

Pauline Garton did a novelty dance in pink net ruffles and plain satin bodice.

GRAY MATTER

By MOLLIE GRAY

(TOMMY GRAY'S SISTER)

Noisy and Terrible

Bennett's "Big Banner" troupe at the Columbia were certainly shouting the battle-cry of burlesque. Nobody has ever understood the words, but this company gets the prize for volume. Each voice was as soothing as a subway turnstile. Together it could have been battle practice by the navy.

And as gentle as the singing was, the humor was worse.

The wardrobe was given credit on the program, and that didn't call for as much courage as would ordinarily in burlesque. One set of rose velvet costumes had evidently been mistaken by someone for dust cloths, but it was a natural mistake. A black and white satin and velvet ensemble was effective, and several taffeta frocks were, too. Two white shawls rose embroidered were pretty. Most of the other costumes would have been scant on midgets.

Isabelle Van wears tights when she wears a costume—that is, one without an intriguing scarf—and she looks much better than her runway girls who scorn them.

Renewing Your Youth

"Rose-Marie," the picture, proves the credit due the chorus of the musical. Of course, the show also had the music when it was new. Now it's more of a liability than an asset.

Joan Crawford is always a pleasure, but it's unusual how Creighton Hale could bring her such a perfectly fitting black satin gown unless she had sent him a plaster cast of herself.

Like renewing your youth to see House Peters again. He was an unjustly accused woodsman when the Northwest Mounted were on kiddie cars, and he doesn't look a day older. More film to 'im.

Not Much Change

In "Fashion Madness" Claire Windsor wears a trailing velvet negligee with flowing crepe sleeves. Liking her idle life Reed Howes got behind his tiny moustache and carried her off to Canada so she could cook beans for him. Her costume for the involuntary trip was of white net, the bodice embroidered with small silk flowers and the floor length skirt a mass of ruffles. The metallic scarf worn with it has ostrich trimming all around. Neither man, woman nor methods have changed much since Shakespeare tamed the shrew.

Double Lewis Day

Lewis Day at the New York, George as "The Four Flusher" and Ralph as "Casey Jones." Ralph has engineered so many trains into the New York it should be called a station, not a theatre. Kate Price has her usual big part in "Casey Jones" and the Oh! so slender heroine made herself even more slender by wearing a black velvet gown with skirt that fell to the floor. The bodice was long and tight and the full skirt shirred where they met. A dark cloth dress had a striped ribbon belt at the natural waist line and a rolled brim velour hat was becoming. She drove in a coat of rubberized crepe de chine.

"Casey Jones" provcs the practical value of innocence when the undermined bridge stayed up for the train of five or six cars with the innocents aboard and crashed when the villian's lone engine tried to cross.

Winter Stuff

The extraordinarily beautiful snow and mountain scenes in "Peaks of Destiny" would make it worth seeing, even without the added thrill of the race on skiis with the camera following the racers. This helped counteract the usual German failure to excite anything like interest in the players.

The heroine, pretty but nameless on the screen, sported a white fur coat and cap when she wasn't wearing crochet shawls of various kinds. As a dancer, too, she was graceful as the slow motion shots proved. Other slow motion views of the ice carnival were well done.

From Woolens to Chiffon

"Red Riders of Canada" gives the complete picture in a few words —red riders (couple of uniforms) —canada (scenery). Movies have changed their motto to include woman—getting a man requires no skill these days. It's getting rid of 'em that's being perfected now.

In this case it was really Patsy Ruth Miller who trapped the villain's gang, four men. The main menace had a nice black silk shirt and three sharp points of hair as a moustache. Patsy wore comfortable woolens, sweaters, skirts and plaid jackets in the day, but sheer silk and a chiffon negligee at night.

Satisfying

"Aflame in the Sky" is guaranteed to satisfy every kind of fan. Sharon Lynn was lovely in a Spanish wedding gown of white lace. A flowered chiffon with shoulder bow and long ends was pretty, too, as well as a light color silk with round collar of black lace and a band of the same at the bottom of the skirt. The dog fans will be disappointed at Ranger for taking a day and night to get his man when he was apparently at his heels the entire time.

Best Dresser First

In "Outcast Souls" Priscilla Bonner looked smartest before she married money. Her cloth coat then had buttoned lapels with standing collar and wide belt topped by a dark beret. A light silk frock had the embroidered peasant blouse and skirt shirred about the hips.

Her lounging pajamas were black embroidered in color and a two skin black fox scarf was worn with a box pleated skirt and short coat.

A Slap Covers Everything

"Grandma's Boy" isn't a day older than when he was first seen, as far as enjoyment goes.

Above the laughter there was a slap heard round the theatre. The woman looked as though she could throw Dempsey over a fence. Slapee walked without a word. As she hadn't said anything either, it was an impressive conversation.

15 YEARS AGO

(From Variety and "Clipper")

William Fox won his long fight against the "film trust." Fox had refused to sell out his rental exchange and the "trust" had cancelled his license. Fox obtained an injunction by virtue of which he continued to distribute trust films. Attorney General summoned trust officials to Washington, and as a result the cancellation was withdrawn. The Government had a dissolution suit pending against the Patents Co., and the end of that concern was in sight.

Famous Players was coming rapidly forward. Cherry Kearton had made a successful animal picture in Africa and it was being shown in New York at $2 at the Playhouse. Zukor sent Kearton back to the jungle to make another record of wild animal life.

Broadway cabarets continued to gain in popularity. Shanley's was reported doing $30,000 gross a week. Miller's at the old Metropole, and the Pekin on the north side of Times Square, were in trouble over all night operation. Maurice and Florence Walton left Martins' and took up an engagement at Reisenweber's.

Kelsey Allen quit the "Clipper" advertising staff and went to work on "Woman's Wear."

The opening of the Palace, New York, was only three weeks distant, but it was still officially denied that it would play vaudeville. However, Martin Beck in London had just offered a Palace engagement to Clarice Mayne, British vaudeville star.

50 YEARS AGO

(From "Clipper")

It was well past the middle of February in 1878 and the town was having its first snow and sleighing, storm starting on the night of the Charity Ball, which combination of events brought out newspaper comment of "women's modern undress" even in cold weather.

Another observation that has a familiar ring is protest against the persistency of legit managers in keeping up high box office prices. "The Clipper" feels that the $1.50 legit are doomed, since the crowds are flocking to the popular-priced variety and minstrel performances.

Talk of Barnum going abroad that year was ended with the circus man's statement that he was undecided whether to open season in Philadelphia or in the Rink, 3d avenue and 63d street, New York. It had been reported that high railroad charges would force the big show out of the country.

The Academy, Chicago, Halsey near Madison street, burned down. Nick Norton (who died recently) was stage manager. The Academy was Chicago's first West Side house.

A lot of routine gags were current even that far back. Arrest of a Chicago criminal charged with wholesale disposal of murdered bodies, inspired the "Chicago crime" gag; while "The Clipper" is moved to observe that the annual ruin of the Delaware peach crop is already overdue.

J. W. Emmett, playing in Detroit, turned away 300 at the box office in spite of a raging blizzard.

Alfonso, King of Spain, was married and all political prisoners were released in Cuba.

Pope Pius IX died in Rome.

Yale and Harvard had their own exclusive baseball league. They had just arranged their own schedule for the coming season, playing five games to determine the championship in best three wins.

INSIDE STUFF

ON PICTURES

Through the replacements in the Stanley Company's board at the meeting last week, it looks as though that company is now more fully controlled from the New York than the Philadelphia end. One report is that the Stanley people placed Mrs. Jules Mastbaum on the board in an effort to induce Mrs. Mastbaum to retain her active interest in the organization her late husband directed to its present eminence.

No mention has come out as to how the New Yorkers in the Stanley Company view the present outlook, or what their thoughts may be on a merger.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer seemed to be in the air over "The Crowd" during and after its making on the coast. The picture required almost a year and is said to have cost a million dollars.

The same indecision followed the picture's opening at the Capitol, New York, in and outside of the trade, with the reviewers of the dailies giving the Vidor film the best break.

Moving the picture from the 99c Capitol to the $2 Astor, if only to fill in time at the latter and with the exploitation angle in mind, while odd for Broadway, was accepted as a smart maneuver for the two or three weeks only "The Crowd" can go there. It did $5,000 over the week end at the $2 scale, indicating a gross of around $11,000 for its first full week.

With the Astor on Broadway, the picture has the advantage of location. That Broadway is most favorable for the $2 pictures for drop-ins and overflows is undeniable. Disadvantages of side street houses even on 42d, for that class of pictures are also evident.

The Aaron Sapiro movement to create a co-operative group of independent exhibitors with a centralized purchasing power, in Greater New York, is creating considerable interest throughout the country. Exhibitors in several of the larger key cities have asked Sapiro for details, and inquiring if the movement would be extended throughout the country. It was announced that the group movement would be concentrated at the beginning to Greater New York.

Signed contracts and agreements from the independent groups to the Sapiro organization are coming in slowly on account of the rigid provisions made by Sapiro. It is necessary for each holding and operating company, to call a meeting of their board of directors, for approval of the contract in full, authorizing the president of the company to enter into this agreement before it can be valid. The conditions of the contract are so stringent and severe that many of the lawyers to whom the exhibitors have referred the contract have asked for more time to study its text.

The Sapiro office has been swamped with applicants for positions in the new organization. Mr. Sapiro expects to create a large office with seven or eight different departments, in charge of able executives. The most important department will be that of Film Purchase, and Jules Levy, now the manager of the First National Exchange in New York, has been particularly mentioned in connection with that position.

A smart but somewhat tactless scenarist, title writer and playwright heard a man tell a story about the career of a prize fighter. Having his playwright instinct, the smart guy put two and two together and figured it would make a great play. He got hold of a chap who has a couple of surefire box office plays and pictures to his credit and asked the latter to collaborate with him. The latter okayed it and went to work on the play.

He worked out two acts and then went to the suggester and told him it would be a good idea for him to supply the material for the third and final act. The answer was that he was busy but as he had given the idea and premise for the play he would make a bargain with the playwright which provided that the latter get the stage rights to the opus and the suggester get the screen rights. This was satisfactory.

About two weeks later, he who had heard the story and concocted the idea for the play told his pal, who had done the work, that he had already disposed of the screen rights to a company he was employed by for $10,000, and hoped the other guy would get as much out of the stage rights. In the meantime, the guy who supplied the original idea is waiting for his pal to say "Thank you" for the wherewithal.

Freddie Schader, having joined with the Fox executive organization, is to step into a unique position for the film business. Freddie will be virtually a personal representative of Winnie Sheehan's, stationed in his own (Schader's) office on Broadway, in search of story and talent material for the Fox studios. This will include recommendation of stage plays as well.

It's understood that Freddie's range is unlimited, that is under no restrictive rules and that his selections of scripts or people will require only the Sheehan approval. This unusual scope is said to have been placed with Schader through Winnie's confidence in his judgment, they having been friends during the many years Freddie Schader was a newspaper man in New York, a profession once followed by Winnie.

Besides Freddie knows his Broadway backwards and also the picture business, a combination Sheehan considers of much value to his picture productions.

The scientific theory of the development of man through the ages has found its way to the screen in a five-reel picture produced by Louis H. Tolhurst, scientist, who has done a great amount of miscroscopic motion picture experimenting during the past 10 years.

The picture is at present riding along under three different titles: "The Tree of Knowledge," "The Theory of Evolution," and "The Creation of Life," one of which will be finally selected. The film starts with the theory of the beginning of life on earth and carries through the various stages of life development by means of moving microscopic studies of each stage.

Tolhurst, who made a series of scientific one-reelers for Educational several years ago, is said to have spent over five years in making the picture, with a cash investment of about $100,000.

The large increase of picture house advertising in Detroit dailies and the seeming unwillingness of the editors to increase the volume of reading matter in accordance with paid lineage, has brought about a unique situation.

Joining with the press agents in the squawks are the critics and theatrical scribes who find their stuff discarded, important or not. On several occasions one Detroit daily carried a full page of theatrical advertising without a line of reading matter. On each day the film reviewer of the respective paper had a juicy column and set up a loud wail upon finding his stuff entirely omitted. But to no avail, for the ad manager told him where to get off—and he did get off.

With no relief in sight, the situation has evolved into a test for p. a.'s as to who can write the most attractive advertising copy.

It is seeping through the show trade that the big chains in the picture end are so systematizing their theatre operation that house managers and press agents are under a maximum salary limit with no minimum. It is said that one large chain has placed the top salary for any house manager at $100, with that amount seldom paid; the scale running from $90 to as low as $50 a week. With press agents, the top is reported at $65.

The matter of swivel chair operation of a big chain always has been under dispute. Showmen rather raise their eyebrows nowadays when hearing of this latest departure. The maximum scales seem to apply to the very expensive houses as well as those of lesser cost and capacity on the circuit.

Reports persist of a seemingly close working understanding between Paramount-Publix and Loew's, the latter with pictures and theatres also. There doesn't seem to be any contradiction that Publix and Loew's have an understanding on theatre building within Greater New York. Loew's is to do the building with Publix declared in. That understanding may extend outside of New York also, with either to build in open territory, offering the other a piece with the understanding possibly also taking in United Artists.

If there is an agreement on picture producing, sales or operation, the extent is not known. Competing picture firms allege the understanding all around but profess to believe no part of it is in writing.

It is reported government claims for income taxes outstanding against film companies are close to $14,000,000 and that suit may be brought to force payment. In some cases the difference lies between the actual earnings of the companies and the statements issued for stock selling purposes. Income tax officials may have seen the stock selling statements and compared them with the low returns shown on the books to collectors.

One company which issued a statement showing around $2,500,000 net profit last year, prior to the floating of a bond issue, made less than $500,000.

The actual salary Al Jolson received for his one week this month at Loew's State, St. Louis, was about $16,500. It exceeded the flat salary of $15,000 paid him by the Metropolitan, Los Angeles, some months ago. His terms at St. Louis were guarantee of $10,000 up to $30,000 and 50-50 over that amount. The house did $43,000 on the Jolson week. Al just fell below the house record of $45,000, the latter piled up by "The Big Parade," running by itself and to an extraordinarily turn over daily, meaning more performances by the picture than Jolson could possibly have given in person.

Independent holders and distributors of short subjects in New York and New Jersey are bumping into a new phase of market conditions not regarded as helping in a financial way. It is price cutting on "shorts" to force exhibs into taking them, in preference to established brands heretofore consistently used at the different houses.

The large increase in short subjects by the big producing concerns has made it hard for the independent handlers of the briefs to keep up their prices with other years.

Arch Selwyn's announced intention of bringing "Dawn," English film, over here recalls that Joe Plunkett, of the New York Strand, played a picture called "The Cavelle Case" at the Strand in October, 1918. This feature marked Julia Arthur's first screen appearance. It was written by Anthony Paul Kelly, J. G. Adelphi directed, and it was released, at that time, through Select.

Whether the film will be brought back, because of the "Dawn" publicity, is not known.

Fox production heads are mulling over the angles of remaking "A Connecticut Yankee." The Mark Twain story was originally made by Fox after Douglas Fairbanks had re[illegible]ted it.

"Yankee" was one of the early full length comedies, opening around Christmas in 1920 at the Miller theatre, Los Angeles, for a run. Emmett J. Flynn directed, Bernard McConville adapted and Lucien Andriot was cameraman. Besides Harry Myers in the title role, the cast included Pauline Starke, Rosemary Theby, W. V. Mong and George Siegmann.

One of the tea drinking dames who writes movie chatter for a leading newspaper syndicate was invited to the home of a celebrated screen actress for afternoon tea. It was one of those exclusive parties that started out serenely and ended in a poker game with some wild betting from the writer, who lost $200 to the film girl.

The actress, however, tried to console the visiting writer by placing the $200 in her coat pocket, which was not discovered until after the writer had returned home.

Recent picture theatre deals and mergers, gone through with without the approval of the Department of Justice requested or extended, has not prvented that department from talking over, from accounts, some of the combinations or possibilities in mergers. That the Fox deals have been made with indifference to the Dept. of Justice opinion is in vivid contrast to some of the former theatre maneuvers that were deemed requisite for official sanction.

According to an old Chinese proverb, one picture is equivalent to 10,000 words. If this holds true today, the average feature length motion picture of 5,500 feet with 16 pictures to the foot is equivalent to 880,000,000 words. Dividing this by the average number of words contained in a novel one will find that every time a person looks at a motion picture feature, he absorbs the equivalent of 880 novels.

Opening of the Lubliner & Trinz Regal, first de luxe colored picture-presentation house in the country, has given Chicago's dark belt smaller houses a distinct shock. The Regal has 3,000 seats and a 50-cent week night top.

First week showed an average $500 drop in the smaller house grosses, with a report the new house will have to struggle to overcome a big "nut."

Motion Picture Salesman, Inc. (New York District), has an organization periodical called the "Film Salesman." It celebrated its first year by getting out a special number edited by Jack Goldstein, alias Ippish (Commonwealth Film Exchange).

Goldstein made the special number pay by collecting ads and accepted anything from 25 cents up.

M-G-M is readying a picture which will have its exteriors taken in Africa and Algiers.

Valentin Mandelstamm, under contract to that producing firm as a writer, sailed from New York last week to supervise the location work and leaves for Africa next month. Neither principals or director have been selected as yet.

A race appears to be on between E. V. Richards and Joe Kennedy for the fathership champ. Both have equal record to date, eight children each, and both fathers still young. Joe is a bit handicapped, being away from home more than E. V.

"Exhibitors' Review" announced this week that, owing to picture business conditions, it had cut its advertising per page to $60, under a year's contract. Otherwise, it's $100, and it was $175. It needed two letter-head pages for the "Review" to explain it.

Rose Pelswick has had her contract with the New York "Journal" renewed for another year at a raise. Miss Pelswick handles the picture reviews and radio news for the paper.

THEATRE GUILD OVER U. S.

"MORE TEETH" IN N. Y. TICKET AGENCY BILL

Assembly Measure Amended—Mr. Tuttle Leads in Making Regulation Severe

Albany, Feb. 28.

Sharper teeth are added in a series of amendments to the ticket agency measure in the Assembly One provides that no tickets may be sold at any place other than the place of business of an agent licensed under the proposed measure. Other amendments include:

That the amount of tax on main agencies be increased from $100 to $200, the tax on branch agencies remaining at $50.

That any place used as a theatre brokerage office must be used for that purpose exclusively.

That the records must be kept by the licensee, showing his sales and profits and the amount paid for tickets, open and subject to inspection.

That receipts must be issued to customers on demand, showing the original box office price of the ticket and the price paid by the broker. The first draft of the bill provided that this information must be conspicuously posted in the place of business, and this provision is continued, with the additional safeguard of the new amendment.

That no commission, gratuity or bonus may be given by any broker to any theatre or theatre employe as part of the ticket transaction.

Maurice Bloch, minority leader of the Assembly, said the greatest evil of ticket scalping in the city has been the man who had his office in his hat. He said such a broker was impossible to regulate. He circulated everywhere and practiced all sorts of deceptions on the public.

The new amendments were introduced on recommendation of a committee headed by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle. Others on the committee are Dr. S. Parker Cadman, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Lucius R. Eastman, Elmer E. Brown, chancellor of New York University; Martin Conboy and Raymond S. Fiero.

"WHITE AND BLACK" LIST OF AGENTS

Equity's Survey About Finished—Names Shortly Issued—For Information Mostly

Equity's compilation of a "white and black list" for casting agents is due for issuance shortly. Equity has been investigating New York and elsewhere for the past year.

It was prompted by complaints of various abuses inflicted upon members by certain casters in order to obtain employment through their offices.

Equity's list will certify casters charging the regular fee of five per cent of the first 10 weeks' salary. Others making extortionate charges will be posted as a warning and for information.

Although Equity officials have been reticent to state at whom the investigation especially takes a slap, it is understood casters evading the license law and masquerading under the guise of "artists representatives" are the chief targets.

Personal managers offering players equitable contracts, guaranteeing a minimum quantity of work during a season have been given a clean bill by the Equity investigators, according to reports.

FRANCES SHELLEY IN LEAD

Ralph G. Farnum has arranged for Frances Shelley to replace Nancy Welford in the ingenue lead of "Rain or Shine."

It is expected Miss Shelley may go into the part Thursday of this week. She has been doubling in the nite clubs.

"King's Henchmen" Blows Up on Salary Claims

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 28.

"The King's Henchman," the Taylor-Hillay opera, was to have wound up its tour at the Academy here Saturday night, but the final performance was not given. Instead one of the singers announced to the waiting audience their money would be returned.

Trouble started when Attorney Harry Nogi arrived at the theatre prepared to lay an attachment to cover a printing bill of $498 presented by the Atlanta Printing company, of New York city. Then R. Stevens, chorus man, hired Attorney Myer Kabatchnick to try to collect his salary claim of $120. Three members of the orchestra joined in the action.

The troupe gave a performance in the afternoon, with M. Zlatin conducting. The evening customers got their money back at the box office. The night top was $4.

"RITA" AT MAJESTIC; NO BOOKING THROTTLE

Ziegfeld's Show Moving to Chanin House at $3.85 Top "Musketeers" at Lyric

"Rio Rita" will move from the Lyric to the Majestic March 12. This spots "Three Musketeers" as the 'suceeding attraction at the Lyric, first slated to get "Show Boat." Instead "Rio" was moved into the house from the Ziegfeld, "Show Boat" going to the latter house.

There was some speculation along Broadway over the Majestic booking of Ziegfeld's holdover "Rio," as the Shuberts are jointly interested in the Majestic with the Chanins. It was stated there are no strings on the date, as regards out of town bookings, which will go through the Erlanger office.

The Majestic date was made directly with the Chanin office, through Harry Kline, general manager of the Chanin theatrical activities, with Ziegfeld. When moved, "Rio" will use a $3.85 top scale, as against $5.50, the present top. The show was believed due for touring but is still making money.

Jammed Oppenheimers

The switch which spotted "Show Boat" in the Ziegfeld is blamed for placing the Oppenheimer brothers in a financial jam over the Lyric. With the prospect of getting "Show Boat" the house was remodeled at a cost of over $120,000, that figure being about three times the original estimate.

The expected receipts not being forthcoming the Oppenheimers were faced with creditors in the form of the contractors who made over the house. The mortgagee also stepped in. The latter, represented by Attorney T. S. Vorhees, has been inclined to favor the Oppenheimers.

Although foreclosure proceedings have been begun as a protective measure, it will take three months to complete the proceedings, during which time it is anticipated that the Lyric financial troubles will have passed.

When it was reported Ziegfeld might place "Musketeers" elsewhere, Vorhees is said to have advised the manager the booking contract must be carried out. Vorhees also stated his principals did not desire to regain possession of the Lyric and did not care to operate it. He takes the position that the brothers are the victims of circumstances.

The Oppenheimers purchased the Lyric from the S. and S. Lyric Co., a corporation in which the Smathers estate and the Schaffer interests of Chicago are principally concerned. The sellers became the mortgagees.

Forbes' "Old Man's Darling"

Rosalie Stewart can not just resist—she must do another stage production, although having previously sworn off for this season.

It is to be a comedy, "The Old Man's Darling," by James Forbes.

ERLANGER ROUTE EAST OF MISS.

Playing Big Cities For One or Two Months Next Season — With Subscription Lists Locally — Touring Company Enlarged—"Strange Interlude" on Road—Shaw Plays, Too

JUST AN ART GROUP

Theatre Guild next season will install its subscription seasons in the major week stands east of the Mississippi. Instead of a week, the Guild will go in for a month and two months. It will continue its New York operations as in the past, the extensive touring being in the nature of the organization's greatest expansion since its organization.

This past season marked the Guild's first attempt at any touring. Playing their acting company for a week in Cleveland, eight weeks in Chicago, week in Baltimore and a year ago for a week in Philadelphia, they averaged almost $20,000 weekly in receipts. In addition to this, a touring repertory company headed by George Gaul and Florence Eldridge has played one and three-night stands as far west as Denver and as far south as Texas. That company, which started early in October, winds up next month in Montreal, where it began, after a good season.

It was the demand for the Guild attractions on tour which has led the organization to expand. Although the one and three-night stand troupe has been booked on the concert (guarantee) plan through the Daniel Mayer office, the demand for re-engagements next season, of which 11 weeks have been booked already, stamps the repertory troupe as a definite success. That this company, which constituted, along with the engagements of the acting company, a "feeler" toward demand for the Guild, decided the touring plans for next season.

Subscription seasons in the various cities will be booked in Erlanger theatres and that circuit will cooperate with the Guild in putting the local subscription seasons over. Under this plan seats for the four productions (one a week) will be sold in a block, but at a reduction on the box-office price.

25,167 N. Y. Subscribers

This has been the Guild's New York system, and at the moment their subscription list here stands at 25,167. That, the Guild declares, is its limit, and the books have been closed to new subscribers for several months. A waiting list of considerable proportions has been formed.

The New York subscription guarantees a subscription run of at least five weeks to any play produced, and, with six annual productions guaranteed the subscription list, means a minimum season for the Guild of 30 weeks in the metropolis. The Guild theatre has been closed for about 10 weeks only since opened three years ago.

Enlarging Company

To provide for the touring plans, the Guild's acting company will be enlarged. It will be separated at times, with part of the troupe playing in a repertoire on the road and part playing in New York and vice versa. This is necessary because the Guild's obligations in New York call for six annual productions.

"Porgy," current at the Republic and the Guild's first production of this season, will be sent on tour this spring to break the ice in those cities which have not been touched by the acting company's short tour. "Porgy" opens at the Hollis Street, Boston, for two weeks, starting April 9. After that it plays Washington, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Cleveland and some other spots. When "Porgy" plays, the subscription plans will be announced locally to the various cities.

In Baltimore early this season, when "The Doctor's Dilemma" played for a week on its way back to New York from Chicago, 4,950 subscription applications were made in case a Baltimore season was held. It will be. In Chicago there were about 10,000 applications made during the last fortnight of last fall's engagement.

"Porgy" will also tour next season, having been booked for about the whole list. "Strange Interlude," too, will probably go to the road. This, in addition to the repertoire of the acting company, which will be sufficient to take up four weeks in any one of the cities. It means that the Guild may fill about six weeks' time in most of the major stands. Whether "Strange Interlude" will begin at 5:30 p. m. on tour and take an hour out for dinner hasn't been decided. There is the alternative of starting about 7 p. m. and running until midnight. At all events the Guild rates the show as a road proposition. Eugene O'Neill, its author, is said to look at it in the same light.

Lunt-Fontanne on Road

Heretofore, the Guild has leased its plays, after it was through with them in New York, to other producers for the road. About 20 of their shows have been so taken out. One of its biggest hits, "The Guardsman," has never been released to anyone for the road and not toured except for two weeks in Chicago last year. That may be taken to mean that it will be used as one of the pieces for Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne when they go out with the acting company. There are also the Shaw plays for potential road use and at least one of these will be included in each year's out of town plans.

All of these plans represent the successful development of the Guild's subscription idea, which has grown from 500 subscribers in 1919 to the present figure of over 25,000.

Craig, New on 53rd For Indie Legits

Craig will be the name of the new legit theatre opening about April 15 on 53rd street, between 6th avenue and Broadway. It will have a capacity of 1,500 seats. Its gross rental, from accounts, will not exceed $40,000.

To date Mr. McGregor, manager of the house, has made no booking connections and it is said the Craig will be independently operated.

The site backs up against the 53rd street L, with an entrance on 54th street. Plot is reported an assembled one, with its reasonableness of cost explaining the low rental.

Another new theatre proposed for the northeast corner of 53rd street and 7th avenue is reported being held at $200,000 annual rental, by its builder, an attorney named Steinkampt.

Tulane, N. O., Dark; No Road Shows South

New Orleans, Feb. 28.

With the shortest stretch it has ever known, the Tulane, only legit theatre in this city playing combination road attractions, has closed for this season.

There are no road shows booked in and nothing in sight, despite the many legit plays on Broadway this and last season.

Most of the shows the Tulane has played so far since October have been of the shameful kind, for production and acting.

"Captive" on Coast

Horace Liveright has arranged for the revival of "The Captive," a Little Theatre group in Cleveland putting it on Saturday and Leslie Pierce and Ed Rowland sponsoring it in Los Angeles at the Mayan opening March 26. Pierce and Rowland may bring a name to California for the west coast production.

Both groups will offer the play indef. "The Captive," originally produced by Charles Frohman, Inc. (Paramount-controlled), was withdrawn following official complaint. Liveright subsequently purchased all rights and threatened to mount it again in New York until official objection interfered.

PHONEY PERFUME AT $7—BUT NOT SOLD

Julia Sanderson Happened to Know Real Brand—Smelly Bootleggers in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.

Julia Sanderson uncovered a smelly bootlegger trying to sell a phoney perfume, when he called upon her Saturday at the Alvin where "Oh Kay" was playing. He offered a bottle of alleged Coty's Chypre, regularly retailing at $32, for $7.

Miss Sanderson knows the brand and would not purchase, but her maid did. After the salesman had left the contents were analyzed. Alcohol and cheap violet water, the whole perhaps costing 10c, composed the mixture.

The phoney appeared to have the brand's real labels from old and original bottles, although the labels could have been forged. It's believed that a drop or so of the genuine perfume had been spilled over the neck of the phoney.

Frank Crummit, Miss Sanderson's husband, revealed the swindle for the purpose of protecting show people, whom the fakirs are evidently trying to sell.

Variety printed some weeks ago of a band of phoney perfume sellers operating in the Times Square district. It's evidently the same bunch, now traveling.

SHUBERTS ADVERTISE TO SELL CUT TICKETS

"Wholesale Ticket Salesmen" Wanted — Filling Theatres Big Worry Just Now

A special theatre party department operated by the Shuberts has advertised for "wholesale ticket salesmen" in the classified section of a Sunday newspaper. The scheme is to sell in blocks to social clubs, fraternal orders, employers in large establishments and the like.

This idea of filling theatres is an adjunct to the cut rate schemes but appears to apply to houses which are being bolstered by two-for-one coupons. A party rate is made, with no special percentage of reduction applying. As a rule theatre parties of the kind are arranged for by women solicitors who work on a 10 per cent. basis.

One adv using 39 lines of agate type stated that in "back of this proposition is the largest theatrical producing organization in the country." Only five attractions on Broadway were mentioned, all Shubert shows. The headquarters of the party sales department are located in a Shubert office building.

That the filling of such a large group of theatres such as controlled by the Shuberts here and on the road is the hardest problem of the moment is not doubted. Whether the ticket party plan applies to attractions not produced by the Shuberts but playing in their theatres is not stated.

Bledsoe, Bankrupt

Julius Bledsoe, professionally Jules Bledsoe of "Show Boat," went into voluntary bankruptcy this week with debts of $2,500 and no assets. The colored singer and actor resides at 281 Edgecombe avenue, New York.

Principal liabilities are for advertising and $100 to the Provincetown Players, Inc.

STAGE MANAGER IN LEAD

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

William O'Donnell, formerly stage manager with Coast production of "Sunny," is now playing the lead in the show in San Francisco.

He replaced William Valentine.

SHOWS IN N. Y. AND COMMENT

Figures estimated and comment point to some attractions being successful, while the same gross accredited to others might suggest mediocrity or loss. The variance is explained in the difference in house capacities with the varying overhead. Also the size of cast, with consequent difference in necessary gross of profit. Variance in business necessary for musical attraction as against dramatic play is also considered.

Classification of attraction, house capacity and top price of the admission scale given below. Key to classification: C (comedy); D (drama); R (revue); M (musical comedy); F (farce); O (operetta).

"A Connecticut Yankee," Vanderbilt (18th week) (M-882-$5.50). Washington's Birthday fell on Wednesday, natural so far as matinees were concerned; only few shows played additional afternoon show; "Yankee" did and bettered $26,600.

"A Free Soul," Klaw (8th week) (C-830-$3.30). Extra matinee here, too, with afternoon trade excellent; but for lull later in week pace would have topped normal gait; around $8,000 and profitable.

"And So to Bed," Bijou (18th week) (C-605-$3.30). "The Cherry Orchard" to be revived for special matinees here; costume comedy continues to fairly good money; over $9,000 estimated.

"Artists and Models," Winter Garden (16th week) (R-1,492-$5.50). New "Greenwich Village Follies" due here soon, current revue probably going on tour, although removal to another house hinted; estimated around $25,000.

"Behold the Bridegroom," Majestic (10th week) (CD-1,776-$3.30). Moved here from Cort Monday; large capacity of Majestic indicates show will be generously cut-rated for balance of engagement; $9,000 lately; "Rio Rita" booked to follow in March 12.

"Burlesque," Plymouth (27th week) (CD-1,041-$3.85). Extra matinee last week, when takings bettered previous week; $19,000.

"Cook Robin," 48th St. (8th week) (CD-960-$3.30). Eased off last week; probably makes some money at moderate grosses; figured around $8,000.

"Coquette," Maxine Elliott's (17th week) (D-942-$3.85). No extra matinee, but holiday scales tilted gross somewhat; went over $19,000, all house can get at scale.

"Diversion," 49th St. (8th week) (C-704-$3.30). Light gross show with draw limited to orchestra floor; around $5,000.

"Dracula," Fulton (22d week) (D-914-$3.30). House figuring on attraction sticking until warm weather; new melodramas do not appear to have affected consistently profitable trade here; over $12,000.

"Escape," Booth (19th week) (D-704-$3.30). Although not smash among consistent money-makers, lately between $9,000 and $10,000, satisfactory for this house.

"Excess Baggage," Ritz (10th week) (C-945-$3.30). Started out like hit, and while getting good grosses, did not climb to capacity as expected; $13,000.

"Five O'Clock Girl," 44th St. (21st week) (M-1,490-$5.50). Three musical heavyweights are listed alphabetically; this one grossing $38,000 and over.

"Funny Face," Alvin (15th week) (M-1,400-$5.50). Class and numbers making it one of favored attractions of season; again close to $39,000.

"Good News," Chanin's 46th St. (26th week) (M-1,413-$5.50). May outlast any musical on list; capacity for six months, with weekly takings normally almost $40,000.

"Interference," Lyceum (20th week) (D-957-$4.40). Going along to profitable business and making run; nine performances last week, approximating $11,500.

"Jimmie's Women," Frolic (23d week) (C-602-$3.30). Properly spotted in roof theatre (atop New Amsterdam); modest tie-up pace of $5,000 to $6,000 satisfactory.

"Lovely Lady," Sam H. Harris (10th week) (M-1,051-$5.50). Wilda Bennett entered cast last week, Edna Leedom being out through operation; business claimed around $20,000, although agency sales reported dropping.

"Manhattan Mary," Apollo (23d week) (M-1,168-$5.50). Holding to real business against newer musical successes and ought to run out season; $38,000 estimated.

"Marco Millions," Guild (C-914-$3.85). Under alternating system "Marco" last week over $18,000, with extra matinee; "Doctor's Dilemma" (12th week) current.

"Marriage on Approval," Wallack's (1st week) (CD-892-$3.30). Added to the week's premieres; presented independently; opens March 1.

"Maya," Comedy (2d week) (C-682-$3.30). Drew attention of police on account of salacious theme and may be forced off; reported doing real business since opening; over $9,000 (small house).

"My Maryland," Jolson's (25th week) (O-1,777-$5.50). Will probably run well into spring; after slipping away down, picked up by means of cut rate drive; approximately $21,000.

"Our Betters," Henry Miller's (2d week) (C-946-$4.40). Revival of Maugham's comedy off to capacity start; smart draw to real trade; first week over $20,000.

"Paris Bound," Music Box (10th week) (C-1,000-$3.85). Not far from $24,000 again last week; nine performances; one of big money shows among non-musicals.

"Porgy," Republic (21st week) (C-896-$3.30). Not leaving for another month or more; still profitable at between $12,000 and $13,000.

"Quicksand," Masque (CD-700-$3.30). Taken off Saturday after playing two weeks to slim pickings; house dark.

"Rain or Shine," George M. Cohan (4th week) (M-1,111-$5.50). Drawing great volume of business; second week bettered first and gross over $39,000; standees all performances.

"Revels," Shubert (14th week) (R-1,395-$5.40). Final week; revue going to Phila.; estimated at $15,000; "Furies" next week.

"Rio Rita," Lyric (57th week) (M-1,395-$4.40). Moves to Majestic after another week; Lyric will get "Three Musketeers," which opened out of town last week; "Rita" went over $31,000, but had excellent run behind it.

"Rope," Biltmore (2d week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Opened Feb. 22; business fair; better line this week, although moderate business indicated.

"Rosalie," New Amsterdam (8th week) (M-1,702-$6.60). Holds to great business and only exceeded by "Show Boat"; usual eight performances last week; almost $48,000.

"Sh! The Octopus," Royale (2d week) (C-1,117-$3.30). Farce mystery piece won rather good notices, but business moderate to date; over $7,000 first seven performances.

"She's My Baby," Globe (9th week) (M-1,416-$5.50). Final week; not run and something of disappointment; around $25,000 of late, but not profitable at that figure; house goes over to pictures.

"Show Boat," Ziegfeld (10th week) (M-1,750-$6.60). Another high gross record claimed for list's leader last week; with added matinee and $6.60 over entire lower floor Washington's Birthday and Saturday night, $60,000 grossed.

"Spring 3100," Little (3d week) (D-530-$3.30). Getting some trade but must improve to stick very long; first full week approximated $5,000.

"Still Shufflin'," Daly's (1st week) (M-997-$3.30). Presented by Con Conrad; colored musical, starring Miller and Lyles; same house started negro show craze with "Shufflin' Along"; opened Monday.

"Strange Interlude," John Golden (5th week) (D-900-$4.40). One of standout attractions of season; five and one-half hour show packing 'em; $11,500 and over; after subscription season of seven weeks expires grosses will leap.

"Sunny Days," Imperial (4th week) (M-1,446-$5.50). Trying to put this one across; new musical doing fairly good business but not up to expectations; $20,000 at scale and capacity could get much more.

"Take the Air," Waldorf (15th week) (M-1,111-$4.40). Getting profitable business despite house handicap; quoted over $20,000 weekly right along.

"The Bachelor Father," Belasco (1st week) (C-1,000-$3.85). Presented by David Belasco; opened Tuesday.

"The Clutching Claw," Forrest (3d week) (D-1,015-$3.30). Mystery play appears to have moderate money-chance but must do better; last week around $6,000.

"The Command to Love," Longacre (24th week) (C-1,019-$4.40). Not big now but better than plenty of others; originally among gross leaders; trade lately averaged $12,000 weekly.

"The Golden Dawn," Hammerstein's (15th week) (O-1,265-$6.50). Appears to be set for balance of season; colorful operetta playing to profitable business; average gait around $29,000.

"The Ladder," Belmont (73rd week) (D-517). Several performances out because of additional changes to script; rewritten several times; tickets still given away.

"The Madcap," Casino (5th week) (M-1,477-$4.40). Moved here from Royale last week; in present berth cut rating resorted to; last week, $15,000.

"The Merry Malones," Erlanger's (23rd week) (M-1,500-$5.50). Reports of road tour apparently premature; Cohan's musical due to stick well into spring; $25,000 weekly.

"The Mystery Man," Bayes (6th week) (D-860-$3.30). Not much heard about roof attraction. Appears to be getting by with cut rates; around $5,000.

"The Queen's Husband," Playhouse (6th week) (C-879-$3.85). Getting fair trade but failed to live up to out of town prospects; last week over $10,000, satisfactory.

"The Racket," Ambassador (15th week) (C-1,067-$3.30). Final week; going on tour; average for most of engagement over $10,000 though less recently; "Kidnapper" due here next week.

"The Royal Family," Selwyn (10th week) (C-1,067-$3.85). No added matinee last week but with holiday prices gross went to $25,000; still tops non-musical field.

"The Shannons of Broadway," Martin Beck (23rd week) (C-1,198-$3.30). Engagement may extend into spring; played to moderately profitable business with average around $10,000 and more.

"The Silent House," Morosco (4th week) (D-893-$3.30). Standing up to real money; last week again around $21,000 or bit more; easily leads new crop of mystery plays.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan," National (24th week) (D-1,164-$3.85). Still best of melodramas, over $23,000 weekly.

"These Modern Women," Eltinge (3d week) (C-892-$3.30). Has not climbed as it should and will move to another house or close this week; fair last week at $7,500; "Her Unborn Child" next week.

"The Wrecker," Cort (1st week) (CD-1,043-$3.30). Presented by Guy Bates Post; opened Monday.

"Whispering Friends," Hudson (2nd week) (C-1,094-$3.30). Cohan's newest comedy started moderately well. First week between $9,000 and $10,000. Good ticket call reported.

Outside Times Sq.—Little—Special

Sir Harry Lauder, Knickerbocker (5th week). One week more before Scotch star starts touring.

"The Merchant of Venice," Broadhurst (7th week). One more week, then the road.

"The Spider" followed "The Shanghai Gesture" into the Century Monday; two week date and then "Chicago."

"The Taming of the Shrew," Garrick (19th week). "Twelve Thousand," new play, due to follow modern dress Shakespeare next week; both attractions alternating bi-weekly.

"Improvisations in June" added to Civic Repertory, 14th Street, Monday.

American Laboratory. Repertory.

"Passing of Third Floor Back," Wallack's. Revival moved here from downtown but passed out Saturday; "Marriage on Approval" follows in this week.

"Hoboken Blues," New Playwrights.

"Hot Pan," Provincetown.

"Meek Mose," Princess.

"The Ivory Door," Charles Hopkins; sticking to a profit.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," Triangle.

"Caponsacchi," Walter Hampden's; another week to go.

CHICAGO TREASURERS ARE A. F. OF L. BOUND

86 Box Office Men Organizing —$100 Initiation and $1 Monthly

Chicago, Feb. 28.

The first decisive step in organizing a treasurers' union and affiliating with the American Federation of Labor, was made at a meeting attended by 86 box office men last week.

Previous rates set for a tentative union, $15 initiation and $1 monthly, were raised to $100 initiation fee and $1 monthly. Of the initiation fee, $15 will be turned over to the Federation and the remaining $85 added to an emergency fund.

For some time Chicago treasurers have been making strenuous but diversified attempts to organize. Recently they were spurred into concentrated action when ticket takers and ushers, backed by a strong local union, tried to establish jurisdiction over the box office. Their desire for a union was further increased when one downtown treasurer, who went to dinner at 6 p. m., was fired without notice when he returned an hour later.

While activities of the Chicago Treasurers' Club will not be affected by the new organization, almost 100 per cent. of the club members are included in the union.

Complimentary letters were received from New York, Philadelphia and Boston treasurers, who are watching the local union's progress with considerable interest.

L. A. Music Box Leased

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Hollywood Music Box, which has had a checkered career since Carter De Haven built it, has been leased for four months by the Robert Sherwood Players. "Women Go On Forever" opens March 18.

Fire Shouter

A capacity matinee crowd at the Henry Miller to see "Our Betters" last Saturday, was dinsconcerted by a disturbance upstairs. Many women present left the theatre but returned when assured nothing was wrong.

It seems someone in the ladies' retiring room on the gallery floor threw a lighted cigaret into a metal container filled with paper.

There was some smoke and the same person is said to have shouted fire. The porter quickly doused the container.

FRISCO GROSSES

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

Washington's birthday helped the legits round out a satisfying week. Pauline Frederick is holding up well at the Geary, where "The Scarlet Woman" has caught on. One more week to go and then a possible ten weeks at the Belasco in Los Angeles.

"Broadway," at the Curran, has two more weeks to go. Business was off a little, but the holiday crowd spelled profit. Likewise "Sunny," which ended its three-week stay at the Columbia.

Henry Duffy's "The Night Stick" wound up at the President after six prosperous weeks, making way for "The Shannons of Broadway."

No letup in sight for "New Brooms," at the Alcazar, now in 11th week and holding up. This one may set a new record for the house.

Sid Goldtree closed "The Bridal Bed" after four weeks at the Green Street. House goes dark for a week, while "Love a la Carte" is being readied. Players' Guild had a satisfactory week with "The Rivals." One more to go.

Estimates for Last Week

Curran—"Broadway." Grossed a little better than $12,000 on its sixth week; considered big at $2.50.

Geary—"The Scarlet Woman." Lou Wiswell has a big winner. Following its Los Angeles engagement plan is to road it for a couple of weeks and then put it into the warehouse until early fall, when it will likely go into Chicago. Third week bettered $12,500.

Columbia—"Sunny." Musical did not click as it should have, and with extremely heavy "nut" had difficulty. Final week close to $15,000, but not much profit.

Alcazar—"New Brooms" continues merrily. Is most talked of show in town. Tenth week garnered $5,800. Figured for 15 or 16 weeks.

President—"The Night Stick" out a couple of weeks earlier than first figured. Final week's intake around $3,800. No loss.

Green Street—"The Bridal Bed." Variety predicted three or four weeks for this one. It struggled through four, with final week's gross under the $1,000 mark.

L. A. GROSSES

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

"Desert Song," in its fifth week at the Mason, did approximately $23,000. "Chauve-Souris," at the Belasco, chalked up a total of $13,500 in its sixth week. Shrine Auditorium, with Sally for one week, around $17,000.

At the Downtown Playhouse "Triumphant Bachelor" did an estimated $7,750 in its fourth week. "Two Girls Wanted," in sixth week at the El Capitan, got $6,000, with "Service for Two," doing around $5,000 in the first week at the Morosco.

"Undertow," at the Hollywood Playhouse, in ninth and final week, got $5,500, with one extra performance. "The Married Virgin," fourth week at the Egan, brought $2,000, and "Kongo," in ninth week at the Orange Grove, did around $5,000.

Minneapolis Off

Minneapolis, Feb. 28.

Adverse weather conditions, with none too popular attractions, proved a Waterloo for legit.

The critics were moderately liberal in their praises of "Twelve Miles Out," but Shubert theatre patrons apparently did not care for the offering of the Bainbridge Players (dramatic stock). Takings barely hit $5,000.

A tabloid musical comedy version of "Alias the Deacon" was only good for about $5,300 for the McCall-Bridge Players at the Palace. Not so hot.

Metropolitan dark.

"FLAME" ON COAST?

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Matt Grau, who promoted the series of light operas at the Shrine Auditorium, is contemplating bringing "The Song of the Flame" to the Coast.

LENT'S START KEPT PHILLY'S LEGITS DOWN

"Paris" Only Stand Out as Gross Getter—"G.V.F." Very Bad in Final Week

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

Moderate grosses were reported in most instances in the local legit houses last week, except for Irene Bordoni's new "Paris." It continues to be a complete sellout. For the rest, whatever benefit might have been realized from Washington's Birthday was nullified by the beginning of Lent.

Next Monday finds a batch of openings, led by Tyler's "She Stoops to Conquer" all-star revival at the Erlanger (one week only) and also "The Racket" at the Walnut, "Four Walls" at the Broad and Delmar's "Revels" at the Shubert, all for two weeks only. "The Nightstick," at the Garrick, is the 12th's only show.

Although "The Nightstick" is the only official booking on March 12, the Erlanger is unaccounted for on that date. Except for the Mask and Wig show, the only April booking in sight is two weeks of Robert Mantell at the Broad.

Estimates for Last Week

"Tommy" (Broad, 2d week). Moderately hooked up comedy; felt effects of Lent, but probably broke even at $8,500.

"The Great Necker" (Shubert, week only). Sudden booking and unusual one, light, straight comedy in a big house. "Greenwich Village Follies," $18,000 or less last week, very bad at $4.40.

"Abie's Irish Rose" (Garrick, 1st week). Perennial in for return engagement, this time at syndicate house. Original company, $1.50 top, two weeks only.

"Kidnapper" (Walnut, 2d week). Melodrama disappointing in comparison to "Crime" last season. "The Racket" Monday.

"The Love Call" (Chestnut, 8th week). This operetta, which has had surprisingly fine run, now slipping, will probably go out after another two or three weeks. $15,000 last week.

"My Maryland" (Lyric, 1st week). Return engagement. "The Spider" left after five profitable weeks.

"Paris" (Adelphi, 3d week). Irene Bordoni comedy still only smash hit in town. Last week, with extra matinee, between $23,000 and $24,000.

"The Patent Leather Kid" (Erlanger, 3d week). Picture slipped some with about $12,000 claimed last week. "She Stoops to Conquer" in for single week Monday.

"Yours Truly" at $25,000 Very Big in Boston

Boston, Feb. 28.

Take fair weather, add one holiday, preferably Washington's birthday, and the result is a good week for the theatre.

The Hollis housed "Grimaldi" for five days last week with business pretty tough. A sure-fire hit was booked back for an opening Monday in "The Baby Cyclone," second visit to Boston. Jane Cowl's sixth week in "The Road to Rome" was almost as high as any of the previous five. She stays until March 19, when "Just Fancy" arrives. Wm. Hodge's engagement at the Majestic is until March 19, when "Good News" opens.

Estimates for Last Week

"Gay Paree" (Shubert, 2d week). Did not open as strong as previous revues in house. $25,000.

"The Road to Rome" (Wilbur, 6th week). Jane Cowl within few hundred of capacity every week. $18,500.

"Yours Truly" (Majestic, 4th week). Over better in Boston than in other spots. High at $25,000.

"Straight Through the Door" (Plymouth, 4th week). Ran better than ever last week, hitting $16,000.

"Wings" (Tremont, 11th week). Film got $16,700.

"The Three Musketeers" (Colonial, 1st week). "Diplomacy," with all-star cast, in one week, capacity of $38,000.

"The Baby Cyclone" (Hollis, 1st week). "Grimaldi" played but five days, opened Tuesday. Disheartening attendance. Gross $3,000.

March 5, "Saturday's Children," Plymouth; March 12, "Hit the Deck," Tremont; "Countess Maritza," Shubert; March 19, "Good News," Majestic; "Just Fancy," Wilbur.

"Who" Claims Paid

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Salary claims of the cast of "Who," the mystery melodrama, which lasted two weeks at the Hollywood Music Box were paid five days after the show closed.

They amounted to $1,042 and were collected from the National Surety Company, which had posted a $1,500 bond by Wedgewood Nowell, the A. E. A., deputy here. John B. and M. H. Riewerts were the producers of the show. The former was author of the play, and is the son of the latter who operates the State restaurant, in San Francisco.

TRADE DENTED, WEEDING OUT WEAK SHOWS HOPE OF LEADERS

Grosses Slipped Before Lent—Approach of Tax Date Hurts—Many Dark Houses Imminent—"Our Betters" Gets $20,000—"Maya," Dirt, Capacity, but Out—"Show Boat," $60,000

Broadway is wondering how many dark houses will dot New York's amusement district before spring is half over. It is forecast that so many shows will pass out, business for the better plays will be stabilized. The demand for recognized established successes has recently dropped so much some are saying the season is over already.

It is patent that any number of mediocre attractions must leave the list for the simple economic reason the bankrolls back of them cannot hold out. There are not enough new productions on tap for replacements.

Bargain tickets are being offered galore. Two-for-ones are being thrown in open competition with the regulation cut rate tickets, it being claimed that better locations are afforded at the cheaper ducats. Theatre parties are being solicited in greater volume than ever before.

Outside Lenten Influence

All of that was mentioned when Monday night turned out to be one of the dullest evenings of the season. There was little box office selling. Showmen insist the advent of Lent meant little or nothing in the general slump. General business conditions are probably more truly reflected in slack theatre trade. To be considered, too, is the approaching income tax season. Heretofore the two weeks prior to March 15 when Federal taxes are due, have been distinctly down-grade. This year it came almost a month ahead.

Last week's new offerings were led by the revival of "Our Betters," which got more than $20,000 at Henry Millers. "Whispering Friends" got nearly $10,000 at the Hudson and is expected to develop into a success; "Maya," through police notoriety jumped to virtual capacity at the Comedy, but is slated to be taken off Saturday, because salacious; "Rope," a mid-week event at the Biltmore is believed to have a chance; "Sh, the Octopus," at the Royale, is in doubt, though claimed to have climbed.

Washington's Birthday, coming on Wednesday, was a natural matinee day, but only some attractions gave an extra performance. One was "Show Boat" (usual matinee Thursday), and another new record was claimed in a gross close to $60,000. For the holiday night and Saturday, $6.60 was charged for the entire lower floor. Next in business standing was "Rosalie," the runner-up since opening; it got nearly $48,000; "Good News," holding to eight performances, $40,000; "Rain or Shine," better than $39,000; "Funny Face" and "Five o'Clock Girl," $39,000; "Manhattan Mary," $38,000.

Next Lower Group

There was a wide gap separating the other musicals, but "Rio Rita" jumped to nearly $32,000 and will move instead of touring; "Golden Dawn," over $29,000; "Connecticut Yankee," $26,600 (capacity, nine performances); "Merry Malones, $25,000; "Artists and Models," about the same; "Take the Air" and "My Maryland," over $20,000; "Lovely Lady," a bit less; "The Madcap," better with cut rating, $15,000.

The figures of the leaders sound impressive, but there was plenty of lament concerning the business of the others. "The Royal Family" again topped the non-musicals at $25,000. There was no extra matinee, but most attractions did the usual thing of charging Saturday prices for the holiday performances; "Paris Bound," $24,000 (nine times); "Trial of Mary Dugan," $23,000; "The Silent House, $21,000; "Burlesque," $19,000 (nine shows); "Coquette," $19,000; "Marco Millions," $18,000, with the same gap between the leaders and the field as with the musicals.

"Excess Baggage" claimed $13,000; "Dracula" about $12,000; "Strange Interlude," $11,500 (but capacity); "The Command to Love," $12,000; "Porgy" about $12,500; "Interference," $11,500; "Queen's Husband" and "Shannons of Broadway, $10,000; "Escape," "Behold the Bridegroom" and "And So to Bed," $9,000; "Cock Robin" and "A Free Soul," $8,000; "These Modern Women, $7,600; "The Clutching Claw," $6,000; "Diversion," $6,000 and so on down the scale.

Half a dozen shows are off the list with four new ones due in next week. "Quicksand" stopped Saturday and left the Masque dark again; "She's My Baby" departs from the Globe which goes into pictures; "The Racket" tours from the Ambassador which gets "Kidnapper"; "Revels" leaves the Shubert which gets "The Furies"; "Napoleon" relights the Empire; "Twelve Thousand" will alternate with "Taming of the Shrew" at the Garrick; "These Modern Women" must find another berth since the Eltinge gets "The Unborn Child"; "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" passed out at Wallack's.

In the Agencies

Only one of last week's entrants was taken by the premium agencies as a buy-out, it being "Our Betters." Several buys expired and the division now totals 24 attractions. They are: "Funny Face" (Alvin), "Manhattan Mary" (Apollo), "The Bachelor Father" (Belasco), "Good News" (Chanin's 46th St.), "The Five O'Clock Girl" (44th St.), "Rain or Shine" (Cohan's), "She's My Baby" (Globe), "Golden Dawn" (Hammerstein's), "Our Betters" (Henry Miller), "Sunny Days" (Imperial), "Rio Rita" (Lyric), "Coquette" (Maxine Elliott), "The Silent House" (Morosco), "Paris Bound" (Music Box), "The Trial of Mary Dugan" (National), "Rosalie" (New Amsterdam), "The Queen's Husband" (Plymouth), "Exeess Baggage" (Ritz), "Lovely Lady" (Sam H. Harris), "The Royal Family" (Selwyn), "A Connecticut Yankee" (Vanderbilt), "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden), "Show Boat" Ziegfeld.

Plenty of Bargains

There were 35 shows listed in cut rates on Tuesday. Agencies dumped in others on one of the dullest Mondays of the winter. The carded list is: "My Maryland" (Jolson), "Harry Delmar's Revels" (Shubert), "Take the Air" (Waldorf), "Lovely Lady" (Harris), "The Madcap" (Casino), "Artists and Models" (Winter Garden), "Sunny Days" (Imperial), "Parisiana" (Edyth Totten), "Jimmie's Women" (Frolic), "The Shannons of Broadway" (Martin Beck), "Taming of the Shrew" (Garrick), "And So to Bed" (Bijou), "Spring 3100' (Little), "The Queen's Husband" (Playhouse), "Whispering Friends" (Hudson), "Hot Pan" (Provincetown), "The Ivory Door" (Hopkins), "Command to Love" (Longacre), "The Wrecker" (Cort), "The Merry Malones" (Erlanger), "The Racket" (Ambassador), "Interference" (Lyceum), "Cock Robin" (48th St.), "A Free Soul" (Klaw), "Diversion" (49th St.), "The Mystery Man" (Bayes), "Behold the Bridegroom" (Majestic), "Sherlock Holmes" (Cosmopolitan), "The Clutching Claw" (Forrest), "Escape" (Booth), "These Modern Women" (Eltinge), "Meek Mose" (Princess), "The Spider" (Century), "Rope" (Biltmore), "Sh! The Octopus" (Royale).

Geo. Kelly on Own

George Kelly and Rosalie Stewart have severed business relations, the playwright sailing for Naples within a fortnight to write and rest. Miss Stewart may retire for the time being, at least.

Charles Stewart, no relation to the producer, has severed connections as her general manager, and is managing Margaret Lawrence's "Behaviour of Mrs. Crane," due on Broadway next week.

Kelly is said to have been disappointed in the flop of his "Behold the Bridegroom," which moved from the Cort to the Majestic Monday. The perfect set of notices the show received failed to react at the gate.

Kelly intends to mount his own shows in the future, with Charles Stewart as his general manager, the playwright having done likewise with his scripts under the Stewart entreprencurship.

6 SHOWS OUT

Six attractions on Broadway's departure list. One may switch to another theatre, while another is of the low power revival class, none really being in the money.

"She's My Baby," presented by Charles Dillingham at the Globe, goes to the road after playing nine weeks, brief engagement for a major musical here. Business was over $30,000 for the first weeks, then slipped under $25,000, a figure said to be unprofitable.

"SHE'S MY BABY"
Opened Jan. 3. Woollcott ("World") said: "dreary rubbish." Other critics inclined to hedge on show, concentrating comment on star (Beatrice Lillie).
Variety (Sid) wrote: "lukewarm show . . . won't greet May 1 at 46th street."

"Quicksand" presented at the Masque by Anna Held, Jr., was taken off Saturday, playing two weeks, to average trade around $4,000.

"QUICKSAND"
Opened Feb. 13. Dale ("American") only first stringer to cover, wrote: "nobody could say it was bad and nobody could say it was good," which probably set Alan down for another "no opinion."
Variety (Abel): "pretty thin."

"The Racket," presented by Alexander McKaig at the Ambassador, will leave for the road after a moderately good date of 15 weeks. Average takings were rated over $10,000 weekly, the pace having slipped off lately.

Harry Delmar's "Revels," produced by Delmar and Sam Baerwitz at the Shubert, will try the road starting Monday. The revue has played 14 weeks but is deep in the red. There were few weeks when the show broke even. Mostly it steadily lost money. Average takings estimated around $15,000.

"DELMAR'S REVELS"
Opened Nov. 28. Second string chore.
Variety (Sid) found it overscaled but "a fair evening's entertainment which Joe Leblang will get."

"These Modern Women" at the Eltinge must find another house for next week or fold up. "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," revived by Butler Davenport downtown and brought to Wallack's last week, stopped Saturday.

"THESE MODERN WOMEN"
Opened Feb. 13. Hammond ("Herald Tribune") thought it had "qualities of a thoroughbred." Anderson "Journal") panned it as a "phony expose of the modern woman."
Variety (Ibee) figured it would be "at least moderately successful."

Can't Find Miller for Warrant Over Stage Scrap

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Harry E. Miller, former comedian with the Coast production of "Sunny," is ducking a bench warrant and $500 bail because of his failure to appear in Judge Blake's court to answer charges of battery preferred against him by Peggy Hope, comedienne with the same show.

Alleged socking took place on the stage of the Mayan theatre Jan. 16, with Peggy thirsting for a public trial.

Chorister Sues School

Doll Britten, dancing chorister, is suing for $1,000 for breach of contract alleging deValery-Tarasoff, Inc., guaranteed her 26 weeks at $55 a week as a member of the dancing tutors' troupes with Ziegfeld's "Three Musketeers." Miss Britten is waiving the difference and asking $1,000 for speedy trial in the Municipal Court through Louis P. Randall.

The dancing school alleges Miss Britten quit of her own volition after opening with the Ziegfeld musical.

'NEWS' AT $27,000 CHI'S SMASH; HOLIDAY HELPS—TWO OPENINGS

Irish Players, $11,000—"Vanities," $30,000—"Silver Cord," $13,000—Rush for "News" Slowed Up Call for Other Shows—"Just Fancy," $16,000

Chicago, Feb. 28.

"Good News'" arrival and a phenomenal all-around-town Washington's birthday matinee draw were the outstanding features of a week that suggested plenty of sand must be tossed about immediately to prevent wholesale slipping.

Under shrewd showmanship "Good News" headed for a $4.40 scale record in this town. The Monday opening was one of those old-time enthusiastic affairs. The critics left it alone until Tuesday and then uncorked praise, like o. which hasn't been read in toto for years in Chicago dramatic pages. Hotels are getting $6.60 for $4.40 tickets, and the street specs have found a $3.30 call for the $1.65 tickets. The Selwyn, always a good mail order house, is stacked high with the money order requests for reserves tions that proves the attraction is "solidly in the air." A row of seats had to be removed for the Lyman orchestra.

"Irish Players" (Blackstone), the other opening of the week, drew the staunch Tyler office backing. It's probably figured that the Irish Players will only draw a certain following, which the opening week's reported gross suggested.

The rush for "Good News" tickets slowed up calls for all the others. This was somewhat noticed for both "Vanities" and "Night in Spain." Both "Criss-Cross" and "Hit the Deck" got their last week's call, and there was but little demand for either at the stands.

The fact the holiday came this year on Ash Wednesday had no effect because every house was sold out by noon. After the holiday matinee the town went into a Lenten slump.

For the first time the Barrymore engagement at the Harris felt the effects of the general let-down. To offset any possible wide drop the Harris attraction has again started to bill. Figured till Easter.

"Cardboard Lover" is now announced to go out in another week, but arrangements are so speedily changed for "Lover" that a definite departure won't be considered until the final week is actually played.

Newcomers' Usual Take

Despite the slump outside of the holiday trade, "Silver Chord" (Studebaker) threw out sufficient encouragement in pick-up of trade to warrant extending the engagement. The two openings of the week ("Oh Kay" and "Exeess Baggage") attracted the usual Sunday keenness, although there was no punch to either of the sales, and neither show checks an advance sale for the balance of the first week.

New "Artists and Models" is mentioned for early booking, and with the pending arrival of the two Bowling shows (Erlanger and Woods), along with the "She's My Baby" to follow "Vanities" at the Illinois, the musical play calendar will hold high during Lent, with no doubt of "Good News" setting the pace if the specs don't slay the Selwyn for in their keenness to make up for a while of a lot of season's losses. Luckily the producers of "Good News" have a representative in Company Manager Batchelder, who knows the uncertainty of this man's town from a speculative standpoint.

Estimates For Last Week

"Oh Kay" (Garrick, 1st week). After long spell with film, this house returned to the musical field, pulling the customary big gross for Sunday opening.

"Excess Baggage" (Princess, 1st week). Hurried to town before it was decided to hold off "Burlesque" until next season. Another new one without advance sale.

"Just Fancy" (Olympic, 8th week). Recent grosses probably in excess of actual figures, caused by inability to check monies derived from special ticket parties. Heads for Pittsburgh in another week enroute to Boston. Gross of $16,000 helped by holiday matinees.

"Desert Song" (Great Northern, 26th week). Out-of-towners head here first and remarkable has been the gait of this one due to local repeaters and the out of town reservations. Sticks to the $25,000 gross average which is the season's engagement record for the town.

"Night in Spain" (Four Cohans, 14th week). Spicy revue draws the word of mouth plugging that shot the attraction to high figures and for a longer stay than the conservatives marked off. Slowed up at the stands through the competitive sales for "Good News." Slightly missed $30,000.

"Vanities" (Illinois, 6th week). Slipped with all others, yet holds a powerful call, particularly for early lower floor sellouts week ends. Figures to keep present gait for at least three weeks more. Reported around $30,000.

"Wooden Kimono" (Cort, 3d week). Mild call but figures profit with $8,500 gross.

"Kongo" (Central, 8th week). Neighborhood stock companies now campaigning in the ad columns of the downtown theatres, reputed to be slowing up the party call at this house, although shrewd showmanship continues to pull $4,000 to $5,000 grosses here.

"Silver Cord" (Studebaker, 3d week). Lincoln's Birthday matinee figure overlooked in last week's estimate with marked pickup in business good enough to add weeks to the limited four weeks' stay. Holding around $13,000. Attraction qualifies at local success.

"Cardboard Lover" (Adelphi, 5th week). All's well with the lower floor sales, but can't get 'em for the balcony. Now definitely slated to go enroute in another week with highly profitable local engagement.

"Irish Players" (Blackstone, 2d week). Class of attraction drew the critics Monday. Press laudation was 100 percent. Town's highbrows brought $11,000 gross from lower floor sales. Nil in balcony call.

"Good News" (Selwyn, 2d week). Smashed in. Specs have forgotten everything else in town. Only weakness was Thursday matinee but the call in a house less 1,000 seats capacity totaled a premiere week's gross of close to $27,000. Newspaper notices haven't been touched for box office value in this town in memory of present day house managers. A. W. Batchelder is directing a campaign that is the talk of the insiders.

"The Constant Wife" (Harris, 10th week). Went off Wednesday and Thursday nights, but still in the big coin ($17,200). The matinee demand is capacity with no variation.

$4,500 Profit on Minn. Woman's Guild Gamble

Minneapolis, Feb. 28.

Mrs. Carlyle Scott, local musical impresario, made an outright buy of the local engagement of the New York Theatre Guild repertory company after all professional theatrical managers here had turned down the Guild proposition.

Her net profit on the five performances was $4,500, it just has been revealed. Twenty degree below zero weather prevailed during the first two days at the Lyceum.

Mrs. Scott has induced 10 Minneapolis merchants to underwrite the local engagement, March 30, of the Chicago Grand Opera company to the extent of $5,000 each.

COAST "BAGGAGE" MARCH 4

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

"Excess Baggage," Jack McGowan's show, will have its Coast premiere at the Playhouse, March 4. Arthur F. Smith, lessee and manager of the house, has made arrangements for heavy exploitation handled by Jean Armand.

Robert Woolsey is to be featured with William Hanley, Ursa Manning, Cecil Bruner, Mabel Forrest, Claude Saunders and Herbert Evans principals in the cast. About 30 specialty people have also been engaged.

Ralph W. Bell is directing.

"57 Bowery" Folds Up

"57 Bowery" folded up last Wednesday at the Majestic, Paterson, N. J., with the cast refusing to go on after having been paid the week previously with bouncing checks.

George Boyd, downtown broker reported financing C. W. Morgenstern, accredited producer of the piece, is reported as having withdrawn finances before the show steered into Paterson.

No. 2 Co. Squawk

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., has issued an ultimatum to producers that in the future shows routed over their time must hold the exact casts seen in the show by San Francisco ans.

There were squawks following an inferior company of "Hit the Deck" that played the smaller West Coast towns at $3.30.

A melodramatic study of intolerance and ignorance in Tennessee, where the natives evidently make monkies of themselves without believing in them. As a rather studious and sometimes interesting work, with the scale at $3, plenty of southerners in New York, and cut rates handy, this play should get from 10 to 16 weeks, according to advent of hot weather.

It's a James W. Elliott production from a very good book seller, "Teeftallow." Elliott is doing a comeback as a play maker and is understood to hold 100 percent of this show. Others are on his string and Elliott seems to have nabbed a healthy b r for the return trip, with "action" plays preferred.

"Rope" here signifies lynching. White Caps which could be the kay-kay in black, and a bunch of illiterates in a Tenn. mining town. They get religion, booze and the kill frenzy in the first act. Egged on by a local lady reformer, sharp of face and tongue, it goes to the near-virtualized roping of Peck Bradley, a localite who bumped off one of the gang, for the second act finale.

To keep in training they also hang a harmless colored boy, and the only error is T. S. Stribling's reluctance to let them all hang each other or together.

On the reverse is the hard working gal of the village, with a clear field from the non-appearance of other girls. The leader of the mob of mighty drivers was in love with her. He's a big slovenly, opened-mouthed numbskull who surprised the native skinflint by being able to spell out "quit claim deed." But the girl loved him too, and what makes this piece a painintheneck is that Henry Ditmas, railroad constructor from the east, could fall violently in love with the same gal, knowing she was fond of the bumpkin roughneck.

The same Ditmas wouldn't join the church, not even during the revival and was placed in the infidel class by the locals. They thought of hanging him, too, but as he moved around freely, called them names and didn't carry a gun, he escaped with only a drunk for the grand finale. That finale was the wedding of the gal to the bumpkin, for, although the boob didn't know much, he knew passion when it hit and when it did he had ruined the girl.

Plenty of swearing, probably considerable fidelity of type, and enough action to draw this play as a meller rather than the drama the program alleges. As a bit of playwrighting, its only mar is jerkiness here and there, and a little overdose of moaning by the girl when she starts the wecps.

A rather lengthy list of principals holds for its best performance. The Railroad Jones character taken by Ralph Cummings. Somewhat peculiarly the wise ones in front at the opening wouldn't credit Mr. Cummings until the play was nearly over. None accepted that he might have suggested his own creation of the role. A couple of slips in dialog by him in the first act seemed to cinch this conclusion by the expert observers. Several bit parts nicely cast, tending to mold the whole, and a psalm singing revival of the first act stamped the staging, with the direction (entire play in one exterior set) notable for handling.

Elizabeth Patterson, as Mrs. Roxie Biggers, the high pressure trouble maker, is a stand out. Anyone from a small town will get a grouch against her before she starts to talk. Crane Wilbur took the Ditmas role well enough, though it's impossible, and Ben Smith as the uncouth youth, did well as the shambler.

Mary Carrol is the pensive girl who goes wrong and gets right after crying on every post in sight. Herbert Heywood with but a moment as Peck Bradley, the killer, got some applause for that moment, and the author, Mr. Stribling, made quite a speech, for an author, after the final curtain. David Wallace, in the house, didn't join on the author's honors. Report says Mr. Wallace is about solely responsible for the play, although standing for the collaboration billings.

As an expose of how they bump 'em off by mob formation in Tennessee and other points south, not a bad educational.

Simon Gantillon's original French play, "Maya," is the "Abie's Irish Rose" of the continental type of "God of Vengeance" opit, having enjoyed extensive runs in virtually every metropolis in Europe, done in French, Hungarian, Roumanian, Russian and including the Scandinavian. It was with considerable promise and expectation that "Maya," adapted by Ernest Boyd, was anticipated, but after the half of it had come and gone one wondered what all this palpitation was about. With the end of the play's progress it was patent that "Maya," at its best, or worst, was just dull, excepting that the action transpires in Bella's Mediterranean seaport brothel at Marseilles.

As the mothers of all loving, Bella and her sisters in the world's oldest profession are frank in their professional discussions, good-naturedly competing with one another on the street, but all concerned with the problem of the morrow's food and shelter in the event of a poor intake the day before. Clothes mean nothing to them, their permanent attire being a wrapper or negligee, ever in readincss.

"Maya" loses whatever it had to offer in becoming symbolic by attempting to interpret the mental reaction with which each visitor views the prostie.

Through it all, the prostie, well-nigh literally the playground of the world, is serene, calm and almost dignified in her reactions.

In attempting to dramatize the symbolism "Maya" misses completely. It's a grand bore after the first act.

The prolog and epilog are extraneous. The first act proper, with its brashly frank discussions by the sheet sisters makes for whatever sensationalism the play has to offer. Unlike "God of Vengeance," with its quasi-moralistic purpose, "Maya" shapes up as little of anything and much of nothing.

There are some good performances by Aline MacMahon as Bella, Sylvia Fenington, Harold de Becker, Marc Loebell—names recognizable as alumni of the now defunct Grand Street Players—but they will not attract consistent trade to the 41st street playhouse. The dirt phase will be a lure for a time, but unless the gendarmes are foolishly inspired into official action as has been their wont in the past in similar instances, "Maya" will die a natural death in short order.

The title, according to the East Indian's interpretation, is from the Hindu, meaning Mother of Desire.

The Actor-Managers, Inc., may for a time attract the arty bunch of fans, but as a stage entertainment it's pretty dull stuff, although that first act is a kicker. Abel.

SH! THE OCTOPUS

Farce mystery play by Ralph Murphy and Donald Gallaher. Presented at the Royale Feb. 21 by Donald Gallaher and J. M. Welch in association with G. Amusements, Inc. Staged by Gallaher.

Mr. Dempsey.....Clifford Dempsey
Mr. Kelly.....Harry Kelly
Vesta Vernon.....Beatrice Allen
Three Mysterious Figures....James B. Lindsay, John Jones, Luigi Balestre
Mr. Cobb.....Francis Martinotti
Paul Morgan.....Gavin Gordon
Capt. Hook.....Francis M. Verdi
Polly.....Mabel Windsor
Nanny.....Lynne Clarke
A Stranger.....Bernard J. McOwen

Hokus pokus in a lighthouse. That is "Sh! the Octopus," conceived as a farce mystery piece and turning out just that way. In entertainment value the new piece is questionable. For those who enjoy the squeals of women in an audience and who like a creepy spine or two, that is provided. But the comedy element is not up to expectations. It's all a dream, anyhow, and the climax should provide a punchy laugh, which was not forthcoming Tuesday night, two evenings after the premiere. A fair house was present.

"Sh! the Octopus" is naturally a tricky play calling for as many light cues and offstage effects as did "The Gorilla." Donald Gallaher, who collaborated in writing the new show, was interested in the production of "The Gorilla." So was Jack Welch, who, with Gallaher, is presenting "Octopus" for several unnamed backers.

The new piece may have been handicapped by being brought to Broadway a bit too soon. The opening night was admittedly off in performance. Harry Kelly worked with a broken middle finger on his right hand, the injury coming at dress rehearsal and blamed on a trap door. Clifford Dempsey, the other lead, was very hoarse, because of excitement and crammed rehearsals. The same condition existed through the week.

Ralph Murphy and Gallaher, in writing "Octopus," took a pair of comedy detectives, along the lines of the comical duo of "The Gorilla." Perhaps they did as well as Ralph Spence, but the idea isn't as fresh.

Dempsey and Kelly are riding in a taxi from some place down on Long Island. They have been on a case and are going back to headquarters. There is a puncture, and while they wait and banter each other, comes a scream in the night.

From out of the dark aisles, a girl. Her step-father has been killed in an offshore deserted lighthouse. The show goes into action. There is a mysterious bad man known as The Octopus, operating with a submarine. A supposed artist comes to the lighthouse. Villainous seaman with a hook in place of a hand gives promise of creepy things. Another girl wanders in, saying her motorboat broke down. Then arrives an old lady.

Action switches to the basement and there for the first time appears the tentacles of an octopus. That devil of the deep sea appears to know his way about, although not so much as the gorilla in "The Gorilla." The man known as The Octopus is snared by the real papier mache beast that thrusts its arms through a trap door. The plans of some death-dealing engine that might prevent war is the main object of the search in the lighthouse. Most of the characters turn out to be detectives or investigators from Washington, even one from Scotland Yard.

Like the regulation mystery play, lights go out, and on without cause. Doors open and shut the same way. Mysterious arms protrude from the walls. Pistol shots are fired aplenty. Where the finish came from nowhere, but the characters know. Ailing. In all, it's a woolly but not really exciting evening in the theatre.

Aside from the handicaps mentioned, Messrs. Kelly and Dempsey limbered up in comic vein. Beatrice Allen was fair as a Russian girl in fear. Adele Windsor impressed more favorably as the other girl, cool and wisc-cracking. Francis M. Verdi as Capt. Hook, the raucous details, was terrifying in his way and provided as good a performance as any player present.

"Sh! the Octopus" has little change for agency trade. It must depend on cut rates for sustenance, and there is too much competition in that direction to indicate a profitable engagement. Ibee.

THE WRECKER

Melodrama in three acts presented at the Cort Feb. 27 by Guy Bates Post by arrangement with E. J. Carroll and Harry J. Conway; written by Arnold Ridley and Bernard Merivale; directed by the producer.

Gladys Elliot.....Phyllis Harding
Milly Kirkham.....Dorothy Haden
Noah Twomblett.....Alfred Hemming
Mary Shelton.....Elsie Wagstaff
Edgar Thornton.....Jack Leslie
Joshua Barnoy.....Clifford Walker
Inspector Ratchett.....Pacie Ripple
Sir Gervaise Bartlett.....Douglas Garden
A secretary.....Frank Arundel
Lady Beryl Metchley.....Annabella Murray
Chester Kyle.....Roland Hogue
The train.....Lyman Bowman
Alf.....Lyman Watts
Horace Skeat.....John M. Troughton
Holmes.....Tracy Graham
John Smith.....Carlton Rivers

It is reported that "The Wrecker" scored in England, where it was written and scened. That goes too for "The Ghost Train," which failed to catch on here. Arnold Ridley wrote the latter play and collaborated with Bernard Merivale in doing "The Wrecker." Both are of similar type, mysterious and something to do with English railway trains.

"The Wrecker" impressed as crude melodrama, given a mystery atmosphere, but it was not difficult to guess anything. Somebody has wrecked five trains within as many weeks. The matter is discussed with some concern in the office of the Grand Trunk, where it was rumored the wrecker was out to get one of the line's crack trains.

The first dragged on, until a special indicator went out on commission, telling the story of disaster some miles away. That was not so exciting. But to make things more difficult the general director of the road is mysteriously shot while bemoaning the loss of the train. The murder takes place within the office, filled with people, but there is no sound of a gun.

The best scene comes within a switch tower late in the second act. The wrecker has succeeded in gassing the towerman and an aide. In rushes "lucky" Roger Doyle, young official of the road, and with him been thrown. They know one lever will save the train and on the girl's suggestion Doyle tosses a coin to decide. He picks the right lever as the train roars by with a cloud of smoke filling the tower.

Before that scene the first nighters at the Cort Monday were disposed to do a bit of spoofing over the melodramatic incidents and the comecting of the hero's affair of the heart.

It all may be quite exciting to the English, but on this side it will probably be but mildly thrilling and then only at odd moments.

"The Wrecker," patently melodrama, makes little attempt at humor. Few successful mystery plays of American make have been able to achieve success without the light and shade of comedy mixed with melodramatics. That the importation has any better chance is not to be expected.

Guy Bates Post, a star of other years, turned producer to present "The Wrecker." He appears to have several others not familiar to the theatre as partners. What seemed a thoroughly English cast is used. Few of the names are recognized. The leads are played with fair purpose, though the actors could not gloss over the ridiculous bits. Some of the smaller parts seemed to be better acted.

"The Wrecker" can look to little else than cut rates and probably not enough revenue from that source to keep it going longer than a few weeks. Ibee.

DR. KNOCK

American Laboratory Theatre production of Jules Romains' three-act farce translated by Harley Granville-Barker, directed by Richard Boleslavsky; settings and costumes by Clement Wilenchick. Opened Feb. 28 at Am. Lab. Theatre, 222 East 54th street playhouse, New York.

Jean.....Harold Hecht
Dr. Parpaiad.....Herbert V. Gellendre
Dr. Knock.....Robert R. Gordon
Madame Parpaiad.....Florence House
A nurse.....Mary Martin
Mother Tore.....Ann Schmidt
The town crier.....Francis Burk
Bernard.....Donald Hartman
Madame Pons.....Ann Schmidt
A farmer's wife.....Erna Obermeier
A country fellow.....William D. Post, Jr.
Another country fellow...Francis Fergusson
Madame Remy.....Frances Wilson

Whatever charm or value "Dr. Knock" had in its original French, when Louis Jouvet produced it with himself in the title role in 1923 at the Comedie de Champs Elysees, is said to have been totally lost in the Granville-Barker English translation.

Discounting the adaptation, it is difficult to perceive the value of a farce like "Dr. Knock" or why it should have run six months in Paris unless, of course, the Gallic humor and the native tastes are as far apart as the two hemispheres. That is easy to conceive. Also the great name and fame of Jouvet, who ranks among the world's foremost histrionic stars, obviously had much to do with it.

The experimental American Laboratory Theatre group's treatment unquestionably also accounted for the negative impression. Robert H. Gordon, personating the title role in a Desperate Desmond make-up so striking it was almost a burlesque impression of mid-Victorean ten-twelt-thirt melfer villains, was completely out of his element.

The general idea held promise, but proved thin. Dr. Knock (pronounced as spelled) admits an extraordinary memory for patent medicine recipes. While not a registered physician, his business acumen in voting an entire community population on the sick list, and then collecting their fees is a tribute to his perspicacity.

And so, when he takes over the impecunious Dr. Parpaiad's practice at St. Maurice, he demonstrates his unique talents as a business man, if not as a medico.

The general playing was in keeping with the standard of the American Laboratory Theatre, which, under Richard Boleslavsky's direction, is now tenanted at the converted brewery at 222 East 54th street.

A subscription enterprise. Abel.

PARISIANA

Revue presented by Associated Artists, Inc., by arrangement with Vincent Valentini; written and staged by the latter. At the Edyth Totten theatre starting Feb. 9. $5.50 top.

If this one is still at the Edyth Totten by the time this notice appears it will be because everyone in the cast has lots of relatives. A hopelessly amateur affair from beginning to end.

The show is a strange and tedious mixture of extreme naivete and pseudosophistication, ranging from a noisy rendition of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody by a plump young lady on a badly tuned piano, to the exhibition of an almost entirely nude cutie on a papier mache cross.

Several skits following the accepted formula of dramatizing slightly risque jokes, lose whatever slight merit they might have, at the hands of a singularly inept group of performers. The score, presumably by the same Vincent Valentini, who is credited as author and director, is accutely undistinguished, which doesn't matter, because even if it was good, there would be nobody to sing it. The only redeeming feature is some fair-to-middling hoofing.

A youth whose name seems to be George Laird (program was confusing) has some excellent kicks, and a blonde girl named Peggy Heavens, with a beautiful figure and an attractive personality, makes the best of some bad numbers. There is a Paul Specht orchestra in the pit, but even that suffered Thursday night from the general amateurishness of the occasion, and couldn't seem to get together with the cast.

Just who Vincent Valentini is, nobody, not even the press agent, seemed to know. There was some talk in the lobby about most of the stuff having been given in Paris last year. This is not the original cast.

The biggest laugh of the evening was the scale, $5.50.

PLAYS OUT OF TOWN

This latest Ziegfeld effort is beautiful physically. It is cast and played magnificently, too, but—and there it is again.

Warning is given in the "credits," where it is pointed out that the "operatic version," etc., is done by McGuire and the music by Friml. The latter has taken the "operatic" thing too seriously. Auditors, before his score has run its course, experience an ever-mounting feeling that they wish the number were over. That is not so good for something that is meant for the public to support. American municipal governments seldom, if ever, subsidize.

Not one single number possesses, as it now stands, bit possibilities. Let it be granted Ziegfeld wasn't looking for hits, in the popular sense, then, at least, there should be something written "down to the people." Even the high hats won't enthuse.

Friml has supplied number after number, all in the same slow moving strain. They pile one on top of the other. A flash here and there, but right back he goes. "Love is the Sun," a waltz, aroused some interest. "Musketeers," a little more. "Ma Belle," too, and finally one little tingling number with a twist to the lyrics in the final stanza called "Gossip." But never once was there that combustible sort of applause that so clearly states the song has clicked. Turning to the handling of the story that has served the stage in every possible guise, including the screen, it has been done well. Exceedingly well. Dennis King again scores, and how! He played here in stock some few years ago, and drew two full weeks' salary in 11. He spoke of it himself in a speech of thanks. Now he is the star, and rightfully, of a lavishly presented musical.

Detmar Poppen, Douglass R. Dumbrille and Joseph Macaulay, as the three musketeers, are a splendid study in contrast. Each is individually perfect. Reginald Owen, as Richelieu, smooth, sure of himself, and great. Clarence Derwent, as the King; Louis Hector, as Rochefort; John Clarke, as Buckingham; John Kline, as Treville are each the personification of perfect casting. A dramatic revival of the Dumas classic could not have been done better.

And then Lester Allen. As the lone comedian, Allen is carrying a giant's burden on his four feet five. He's okay—but Allen can't be on all the time, and this is a musical. He does the only two individual dance numbers in the show. Maybe there will be some building up to assist

COHAN'S SQUAWK IS JUSTIFIED BY B'WAY—GEO.'S ANSWER TO HEY

Had Broun Called Cohan Rotten Actor, but Good Loser, Hey Would Be Famous, Says George M. —1st Line Reviewers Passed Up Premiere

Cohan Writes to Broun

Dear Hey:

For the first time in years my attention has been called to your column.

For some reason or another you have again mentioned by name.

I daresay all great journalists run short of stuff every now and then, and are forced to repeat themselves.

But why call me a bum sport and try to boost the dramatic critics?

I never heard anyone boost you when you were a dramatic critic.

The funny part of it is that your boost was a knock.

I'll show you why.

You say "it used to be the fashion to speak of him as possibly the greatest of American playwrights."

(If this is true you've been holding out on me.)

Then you state "certain critics date everything in the musical comedy field from the time of his revues."

(A secret you never before divulged.)

And you continue "a devoted few have always felt that 'The Tavern' was the finest piece of dramatic foolery ever to come from a native pen."

(Another unveiling of the truth.)

And then after going on record that these cracks had all been made, you openly declare that you entirely disagree with the critics who made them and claim that I have been praised far beyond my worth.

How did you find out how much I'm worth?

The point I'm trying to make is that in your mad effort to defend the critics you took a much bigger slam at them than ever I did.

You Just Won't Believe Anything I Say

Well, well, well! For a guy who used to write baseball I'll say you had your foot off the bag.

There was no more sense to it all than there was to the stuff I read in your column the last time you mentioned my name. And that was away back in days of the horse-cars.

Listen, kid, I wasn't kicking about the critics' criticisms. I was hollering because they'd passed up an American opening in favor of an English revival.

I know a bird who goes to all the revivals and he reads your column, too.

You missed a great chance when you tabbed me as "a good actor, but a rotten loser."

That meant nothing.

Had you called me "a good loser, but a rotten actor" the Lambs Club would have cheered and you'd be a famous man today.

I think you are perfectly horrid not to have made some mention of the flag. George M. Cohan.

P. S. Tell Mr. Woolworth, the critic, that I'm going to send him one of my photographs for Christmas. G. M. C.

The Cause

George M. Cohan had his say about New York's critics last week, taking extra space in the dailies to say it. The author-actor-manager took issue with the custom of critics to attend first nights of revivals rather than new plays.

The case in point was that of Cohan's new comedy, "Whispering Friends," written and presented by him at the Hudson Monday of last week. On the same evening "Our Betters" was revived at Henry Miller's, the decade-old Maugham play drawing all the first line reviewers save three. Cohan had stated not long ago that he never really had a quarrel with critics and commended their ability to sense the merit of a play.

What burned Cohan was the passing up of his new work for an old play. Cohan did not object to the comment of the second string reviewers, in fact advertised excerpts from the notices.

Cohan's squawk was justified, in the opinion of Broadway. It frequently occurs that there are opposed premieres on the same night, the critics electing to go to whatever play is indicated to be more important, whether by reputation of the author, producer and so forth. That they frequently favor attending the first night of revivals has never been quite explained.

Cohan Advertised

Wednesday there appeared in the amusement columns this copy:

"To the theatre going public of New York City—If you want to get a real line on how surely 90 per cent. of the so-called dramatic criticism in this town has become a matter of pure personal likes and dislikes, go to the Hudson and see 'Whispering Friends.' If you don't agree with me that it is a great little American comedy and the best constructed play in years—then never take my word again. George M. Cohan."

Other copy billed the play, with the added lines: "Not an English revival but a new American play." Other copy in extra space appeared daily thereafter.

Several newspapermen called on Cohan for an explanation. He stated that he felt his "Whispering Friends" had been high-hatted by the first line critics. After saying he was quite satisfied with the notices, Cohan explained he did not figure he rated indifference by the leading reviewers: "I am an American and I think that fact might have influenced them to come to my play instead of seeing one by an Englishman. I am not waving a flag. I should have gotten a better break from the better known critics."

Cohan when further asked about the matter objected to the conduct of a woman reviewer who left the theatre during a quiet scene before the show was over. He said she disturbed persons around her during the performance.

Two columnists replied to Cohan, regarding his objection as petulant. One misstated the case by mistakenly taking issue with Cohan as to the matter of the reviews. The latter was Heywood Broun of "The World." Cohan answered him.

Several years ago Cohan's "So This Is London" was the subject of a newspaper advertising campaign. The notices were adverse. Cohan believed the play would get across and it did, only, however, after he had spent $12,000 in extra space advertising to counteract the notices.

"Whispering Friends" is regarded having a good chance to land also.

"Quicksand" Goes On; Equity O. K.s Layoff

Anna Held, Jr., has received a special dispensation from Equity to lay off "Quicksand" for rehearsals next week, with provision the show reopens the week following. The ruling was made at the request of the cast.

"Quicksand" was scheduled for scrapping after closing at the Masque, New York, last week (Feb. 25). Miss Held later decided to send it to Chicago, but figured it needed an additional week rehearsals for a new third act. She put the proposition up to the cast, with the latter agreeing to the extra week's rehearsal and signing a round robin letter to that effect to Equity.

AHEAD AND BACK

Carl Bernstein, press representative for "Funny Face," also Werba theatres, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Howard Potter, ahead, Fred Bradna's Indoor Circus.

Leo Leavitt, back, Frank Gunn, ahead, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," film, in Pennsylvania.

"Optimists" Touring

Melville Gideon and the Shuberts will tour the flopping "Optimists," as were on the Century Roof, New York.

The show, English in conception, will probably try its luck in Canada.

Future Plays

"The Buzzard," George Leffler producing, opens at Mamaroneck, N. Y., March 7. In cast: William Tilden, Leona Hogarth, Clyde Filmore, Leonard Doyle, Ruth Hunter and others.

"Doubling in Brass," circus comedy by Warren Lawrence, is the next on production list for Anna Held, Jr.

"Romance Road," musical by S. J. Frietel and Leslie De Lores, went into rehearsal this week with James A. Osborne producing. It's destined as a road attraction.

"Present Arms," Lew Fields' new musical, from an original script by Herbert Fields, stars rehearsals next week at the Mansfield. Rogers and Hart will do the words and music. Harry Delf's "Atlas and Eva" leaves the Mansfield this week.

"Another Bottle, Doc" (formerly "The Medicine Show"), has resumed rehearsals and opens at the Majestic, Paterson, N. J., Feb. 27. Piece produced by Thomas McElphany, who authored the original, revised by Don Mullally.

"So Big," another of Edna Ferber's novels, is to be adapted for musical comedy, with Florenz Ziegfeld as possible producer. Miss Ferber is adapting, with musical score by Jerome Kern.

James W. Elliott has taken over production of "The Scarlet Fox," Willard Mack's new play, which was to have introduced Mack in the capacity of author-star-producer. Mack will head the cast and also stage the piece. The support will include Marie Chambers, Joseph Sweeney, Beatrice Banyard, Clark Marshall, A. J. Herbert and Sam Lee.

"Bunko Brown" started a preliminary out-of-town tour Monday at Paterson, N. J.

"Diamond Lil" is the new title of Mae West's play, originally called "Chatham Square." It goes into rehearsal this week.

Duffy's 8th Stock House Has Coast Sewed Up

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

Henry Duffy, negotiating for the eighth theatre on his Pacific coast chain, has a 99-year lease from Charles E. Tobermann, Los Angeles realtor, for a site on Highland avenue, just off Hollywood boulevard. He will begin the erection of a 1,500-seat house.

Duffy will finance the venture himself. It will be an office and store building, with theatre in rear, equally pretentious with El Capitan, on which Duffy holds a 20-year lease.

With two houses in Hollywood, two in San Francisco, one each in Portland, Seattle and Vancouver, and the new Duffwin, underway in Oakland, Duffy's position will be an impregnable one in the Pacific coast region.

The Duffwin in Oakland will be ready for opening next Labor Day and will mark the temporary return to the stage of Duffy and Dale Winter (Mrs. Duffy).

All-Mute Panto Cast

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

A dramatic performance, entirely in pantomime, by a group of deaf mutes, will be given here in April. These amateur thespians, most of them youngsters, are known as the Elfen Treat, and sponsored by the San Francisco League for the Hard of Hearing.

It will probably be the first performance on record ever given entirely by lip reading methods. The totally deaf players are being rehearsed by Rosebud Lane, a grad of Walter Hampton's School of the Theatre, New York. In directing the cast no signs, pencils or blackboards are used. Everything is done by lip reading.

NEWARK EMPIRE IN STOCK

R. Blyth has succeeded A. J. Mack as manager of the Empire, Newark, N. J. The house recently reverted from a burlesque wheel stand to dramatic stock and with Blyth going in because of his familiarity with that field.

In London for Sissle

Harold Tillotson, who sailed Saturday for London, goes over to become the personal representative of Noble Sissle.

Sissle is to produce several shows in London including "Shuffle Along," and Tillotson is expected to handle arrangements.

Whiteman Quits Music Publishing Alliance

Paul Whiteman Publications, Inc., has been formally dissolved at Whiteman's request because of a desire not to hinder his orchestral presentations through any music publishing affiliation. Whiteman and Jack Robbins, head of the Robbins Music Corp., were allied in the subsidiary.

Whiteman continues amicably with Robbins and the Robbins Music Corp., which takes over the many copyrights and holdings of the Whiteman Publications, Inc., including several noteworthy catalog editions.

Whiteman explained that should he desire a George Gershwin instrumental creation, or a Leo Sowerby or Ernest Bloch or kindred composition, he was technically bound to induce Gershwin et al, to publish their stuff through Paul Whiteman Publications, Inc. Such was a contractual provision, eliminating Gershwin who has a long-term contract with Harms, Inc.

Whiteman will share on a royalty basis in the profits of the several copyrighted pieces Robbins Music Corp. has taken over from the dissolved corporation.

Wash. Opera a Bust

Washington, Feb. 28.

Washington Opera Company's two weeks' festival of grand opera ended in a bust Thursday night of the second week at Poli's.

Several Metropolitan stars were imported to sing leads while chorus was composed of local singers, latter without pay.

Support at box office was exceptionall low, with principals receiving only partial payment

Edouard Albion, director general, says he will try it again next year. Past several years two or three nights in a season has been enough, the two-week festival being a new venture.

A Coast Outlet For Musical Shows

Sam Salvin, who has the Mayan, Los Angeles, on a 20-year lease, will use it for musical productions, coast produced.

Salvin's eastern concern, Lyons and Lyons, has been angling this week for the coast rights to "Good News." It was previously reported under sale for that territory, but the deal was not completed through the Macloons failing to make the advance deposit demanded.

The Mayan seats 1,200 and is well located.

"Laugh" in Arbitration

The question of salaries for the final week of "It Is to Laugh" has been put to arbitration. After staggering along at the Eltinge, New York, recently, it closed but a week later, was revived at the Forrest. The curtain failed to rise Friday night of that week because a check given the stage hands bounced. The house was secured on a rental basis, the reason why the crew demanded to be shown.

It was claimed by Barbour, Crimmins and Bryant, who originally put the Fannie Hurst play on, that they were only interested one-half of whatever profits made when the show went on at the Forrest.

Murray Agid made a statement to Equity that the same contracts as originally made, still stood when the show reopened and that he was not responsible.

Agid was supposed to represent a group of East Siders, who planned continuing the play and plugging it by liberal advertising. The money for that purpose never materialized.

Decision on the salary claims has not been made.

Poli's Hartford Stock

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 28.

The Poli Players will open dramatic stock at the Palace March 5.

Frank Lyons will be leading man of the company and Ruth Nugent leading woman. "Crime" will be the first play.

Harry Fisher, comedian, is the only member of last year's company who will be in the group this year.

"Wasp's Nest" in L. A.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

"The Wasp's Nest," mystery comedy, opens March 4 at the Morosco, succeeding "Service for Two," which lasted two weeks.

PRESS STUFF FOR DIRT SHOW ACTION

"Maya," a play from the French, opening at the Comedy last week, is reported having attracted the attention of the police and the district attorney's office.

Some suspicion that the alleged objection by the authorities was more or less a press stunt. That was emphasized by telegrams received by critics who particularly favored the play, urging editorial support to keep the play going, because of "stimulating entertainment."

The wired messages were credited coming from the Shubert press department and also individuals, inspired similarly. There appeared to be a difference of opinion regarding the play's merits, some reviewers rating it something of a bore.

From sources other than the Shuberts who booked the play and the Actors-Managers, formerly the Grand Street Follies group, it was stated "Maya" would probably close Saturday. The district attorney, while not having taken any direct action, is said to have agreed to continuance this week in order that the cast be given a week's notice.

The Comedy was the starting point of the dirt play furore two years ago, when "A Good Bad Woman" was forced off.

Seasonally agitation over alleged dirt plays seems to start about the same time. Censorship was threatened last spring and the padlock bill was the result. It was figured that that statute would curb raw performances. Early this season several plays were under police scrutiny, but received official o.k.'s upon being toned down.

Macloon Can't Produce But He Wins Debates

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Although Lillian Albertson is officially known as the producer of "The Desert Song," now playing at the Mason, it appears as though Louis O. Macloon, her husband, whom Equity would not permit to function as a producer, is in authority.

It was Macloon who informed Ernest Grooney, the musical director, that the show would open in San Francisco on March 10 and that he wanted a score prepared so that it would not be necessary to take musicians to the northern city.

Grooney argued against the move on the ground it would impair the success of the show to open without lead instruments. Macloon told Grooney that what he said went. However, no agreement was made as to preparing the score.

The next night, when Grooney went into the pit, he was handed his two week's notice, signed by Lillian Albertson.

'Grimaldi' Doesn't Pay Off

"Grimaldi," which opened in Boston last week, halted in that city Saturday, and the company was brought back to New York. The sponsors of the show are seeking a date nearby, expectant later of coming to New York. No salaries were paid.

Out of a cash bond of about $3,000, deposited with Equity, the latter was requested to remit $1,000, which was sent to the deputy with the company. The money was distributed on the basis of $50 to each player.

The play was presented by Cohen, Roemer and Frazee, the latter a girl not connected with the manager of that name. The first two names are young press agents.

PLAY'S SCREEN LEADS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Hollywood Music Box is to reopen March 13 with "Women Go on Forever," produced by George Sherwood, of the Sherwood Players. Bessie Barriscale, former screen actress, in the lead.

Helen Jerome Eddy, also from pictures, will be featured with support cast including Ruth King, Barbara Winthrop, Howard Hickman, Benjamin Hewlett, Jack Stamhagh, Harry Van Meter, Arnolf Gray and Kelrey Cook. William Trumbull remains as manager of the house.

POLI STOCKS QUIT

Dramatic stock is out at two of the Poli houses, Lyric, Bridgeport, and Jacques, Waterbury, Conn., both companies winding up last week (Feb. 25).

Straight film policies for both.

him before the show hits Manhattan.

Feminine side of the cast hands its honors to Vivienne Osborne, as Lady de Winter. She gives a straight dramatic performance and does it exceedingly well. Of course, Vivienne Segal, as the lady in waiting to the queen and the "love interest," and Yvonne D'Arle, as the queen, are just right. Harriet Hoctor was out for the opening, due to a strained ankle during rehearsals, which left the dancing entirely to a group of Rasch girls. They were the honest applause winners of the proceedings. New routines, all beautiful girls and beautifully costumed.

Production is beyond the descriptive powers of this reporter, and no shame is felt in confessing it. Massive set pieces, lighting and coloring makes each set produce an uneonseiously expressed "ah!" Costuming, too, brings exclamations. It all represents plenty of money spent to produce the ultra in stage pictures.

All the panning of the seore, as well as the expression of regrets to boot in that regard, won't stop this one from going over. It's a cinch everybody will want to see it and gladly pay the toll. But if Ziegfeld doesn't bring that Friml score just a little more down to earth, they are going to leave it with expressions of praise tempered.

THE GREAT NECKER

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

"The Great Neeker," faree comedy by Elmer Harris, opening last night at the Shubert, is not a new stage offering, it played last summer on the Pacific coast with the current star, Taylor Holmes. Now it is after Broadway affirmation and has been decked out in the matter of production and cast as befits a New York tryout.

It has a definite chance to crash through for a moderate degree of success. Not a first rate farce and cannot be made one, but the laughs are thick and the staging is able. Between these two factors, there is no reason for supposing that it will not go to fair success.

The story has two or three angles that might very well put it over. The first is an interpolation in the first act, of a screening of a supposedly off-color film. This is staged for the benefit of one of the characters in the story, a woman censor who, without any doubt whatsoever, is based on a very well known censor in the east about a year ago. It gives "The Great Necker" the benefit of a number of good, nearty laughs, and adds little touch of novelty to the performance

The story conceerns a middle-aged bachelor who has two or three affairs on his hands, but who has set his heart on whining a 18-year-old flapper. The girl's mother happens to be a "lady censor" and the hero's second object is to get a certain film (which he has sponsored) past the keen and fussy eyes of this lady. A youthful nephew, pennliess, but romantic, captures the girl and the "Great Neeker" has to content himself with one of his former (and older) flames.

Mr. Holmes gives a plausible and laughable performanee of the leading eharaeter. In support, the best performers are Marjorie Gateson, who plays the old admirer to whom the Great Neeker finally turns, and Irene Purcell, as the flapper. Hal Thompson, as the nephew, and Ray Walburn as a philandering friend, deserve mention.

The play, set in a New York apartment and on Long Island, is in three acts, the first two of which have the same scene.

Both from the viewpoint of staging and setting, "The Great Necker" is O. K.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES

Act 1—Room of inn on road to Paris, March, 1815.

Act 2—Ante-room in Elysee Palace, May, 1815.

Act 3—Scene 1, same as Act 1, July, 1815. Scene 2, St. Helena six years later.

The sombre and profound "Napoleon" opened to a good audience but found it hard to seore much of a punch last evening.

Story is heavy. It has to do with the thrilling three days before the momentous Paris siege and with the attempt on the life of the impulsive Napoleon.

This new "Napoleon" pleee shows the emperor in all the splendor of his dominanee and will.

Once more the influences of a traitorous wife, an inconstant mistress and tho never-ending loyalty of the Countess Walewska have been treated effectively by Mr. Orkow.

Then the great man of France in a miserable cottage in the island of his exile. Never broken, he carries on with the same consistent doggedness, never defeated, and majestic even in humiliation.

If there is anything truly worth while in the play at all, it is this closing scene, where in his exile at St. Helena, Napoleon remains, after he has sent his loyal friends to freedom, only to dic himself when he is making a grand speech to the natives assembled before him at a great dinner which he sees himself giving in his pitiful insanity.

"Napoleon" was no doubt a difficult play to attempt, as well as difficult to produee. Too much exposition and explanatory business. The points that are good for dramatization are too far apart, and no audience can be expected to wait patiently for them to arrive.

Last night's offering was almost too tiresome to be considered even good entertainment, with 25 characters, many without too distinguishing personalities. The opening performance may be no indication of what will be done with the play, but if it is to open next week at the Empire, more than two or three of the cast will have to spend time learning lines and studying business.

Mr. Atwill gave a performanee that indicates his talent as being that of one of the best actors on the American stage. He was Napoleon from first to last, and saved the night. It was evident that he sensed the slowness of the play and that some uneasiness was getting into his acting, for he was among the many in the east who could not put the trainers on the right lines at the right moment. Albert Bruning as Fourche did a fine performance, and Thais Lawton and Selena Royle portrayed their lines with distinction.

The heavy narrative qualities of "Napoleon" seem to make it nearer to a historical pageant than to a play in the popular sense of the word.

KILLERS

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 25.

In three acts and four scenes, presented at the Worcester theatre by Contemporary Theatre, Inc. Written by Louis E. Bisch and Howard Merling. Staged by Howard Merling. In cast: Charles Dingle, Walter de Rush, Earl Mayne, Adelyn Bushnell, Albert Berg, Cynthia Blake, Harold Vermilyea, Edith Elliott, Fred E. Strong, Marshall Bradford, Harry Clarens, Harvey Hays, William B. Calhoun, H. R. Chase, Paul Rek, Conway Washburn, Donald Thompson, Pennington Young, Joseph Prosser, Charles Seel, Frank A. Howson, A. S. Byron, Jethro Warner, Ernest Howard, Victor Shipley, Frank J. Hettrick, Harold Friend, Hallam Bosworth, Marshall Hale, James Clarence Johns, George Saunders, Mel Tyler, George J. Williams, Harry Johnson, Jerry Ryan.

There has been no more greusome play written for the American stage than this production which, with its extensive cast, and some of them mighty clever actors, is going to have a difficult job to find a sufficiently morbid public to enjoy it. It is a treatise on murder, killing and other horrors and ends with a terrifying jolt as a murderer is bumped off in the "chair."

Audience does not see the execution but the clever arrangement and the incidental talk leave little to the imagination. It sends the speetator out into the cold with chills.

Story opens with a man and a woman in a night club. Enter the wife, who, with injured air, goes to another part of the club and bargains with a gang for the life of her rival. She departs. Enter the injured husband. Struggle, shots, two of them, and the murder is committed.

The crime is fastened on the injured husband, and the scene turns to the jury room, where 12 men are trying to reach a verdict from conflicting evidenee. The verdiet is guilty. Then the jail, where interest is maintained through an attempted jail break, but finally the uncanny jolt of the electroeution. Setting is perfect, with the electrician puttering around the switches and connections, the priest and the terrified victim.

Cast is not too perfect but it is sufficient to unravel the theme which the authors try to drive home, namely, that the instinct of the killer lies buried in all of us.

Dr. Bisch, New York allenist and eo-author, came here with the play and defended this point of view, that all of us are potential killers. Dr. Bisch told reporters that people ought to be more cautious in their condemnation of criminals because all of us have the same harmful impulses, and that is the point he is trying to put over.

"All of us have our murder point," said Dr. Bisch, and this sentence best illustrates what the play reveals. "It depends entirely on environment, heredity or training whether we actually kill. You may not think you would kill, but you would, without considering the consequences."

The difficulty is the public goes to the theatre to be entertained. Themes and theories rather go begging unless they have a measure of entertainment. It is much less expensive to write books on such things than it is to stage plays.

Guilfoyle.

INSIDE STUFF

ON MUSIC

Whiteman's Old Ones

On Paul Whiteman's Victor recording bookings the maestro is "canning" some old favorites, including "Dardanella" and "Smiles," demands for which have been expressed on the Orthophonic disks.

Victor paid Whiteman his Publix contract salary, additionally, to bring him into New York off the road for recordings.

Mendoza Back—Bowless

David Mendoza, whose temperamental outbreaks resulted in his being ordered by Major Bowes to remain out of the Capitol, New York, is back directing the pit orchestra. He returned to his post after an absence of four weeks. His feature billing, formerly prominent, is now missing.

Mendoza nearly got jammed on his first day back when bringing up his men to share bows with the Capitol ensemble.

Despite instructions not to bring the elevating pit up for the finale, Mendoza repeated the maneuver on the second show, his men all but shutting from view the girls on the stage. Mendoza went bowless the rest of the week.

Conductor Got a Break

Emanuel Baer, assistant conductor at the Paramount, New York, became stage band leader at the house last week, almost without notice. It was "Take-a-Chance Week" for the billing, and it fitted in. Through Kosloff leaving the Par suddenly to take up the stage work in Chicago (Publix), the post at the Par seemed forgotten until it was recalled Baer had done similar work in the south when in a Publix house. He was immediately impressed, responding with nothing but one rehearsal call, going into the performance late Saturday.

Bernie Cummins is one of the exceptions in New York to prove that a band means something as a draw. From sources, competitive and otherwise, it has been asserted that Cummins has improved the Hotel Biltmore's restaurant intake as much as 400 or 500 per cent. A personal check-up at a tea session substantiated that and the supper business is also brisk.

With bands meaning little one way or another these days in cafes, since it has reached the stage where they are all good and few are bad, the Cummins' draw is the more surprising.

A rival band booking corporation, writing to Variety, concludes that "instances of this kind prove that music is a factor in building cafes" and while that is happily so in Cummins' case there are instances galore on Broadway and the metropolitan environs when good music does not mean a thing as a draw.

7-MANUAL ORGAN AS SURPRISE STUNT

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 28.

Wade Hamilton, feature organist at the Ritz here and staff organist of Station KVOO, converted a four-manual Robert Morton console into a seven-manual instrument through makeshift appliances.

Tom Terry, at Loew's State, St. Louis, similarly built a seven-manual organ, although Hamilton's resourcefulness, with the mechanical assistance of his brother, H. B. Hamilton, also an organist, also figured in the use of scrap material.

Hamilton introduced the improved organ with a surprise stunt, the organ apparently working mysteriously of its own accord until disclosing the soloist behind the curtains at the stage console.

BROOKLYN OPENINGS

Jimmy Carr and orchestra opened this week at Loew's Melba, Brooklyn, succeeding Tommy Christian and band, who were at that stand for a run. Carr closed last week at the Jardin Royal (restaurant), New York, being succeeded by Paul Specht.

At another Brooklyn Loew house, the Kameo, Irving Felder opened this week as the m. c. and orchestra leader.

BAKALIENEKOFF IN PIT

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Constantin Bakalienekoff has been signed by West Coast as director of the new orchestra at the Criterion. Pit crew was dispensed with here during the run of "The Jazz Singer."

Bakalienekoff goes in this week with the opening of "Patent Leather Kid."

COAST MUSIC SALES

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

A check made on best sellers in sheet music for February in Los Angeles discloses more than a dozen hit numbers that have been selling at a rapid pace. This has been compiled from sales reports of leading music jobbers and syndicate stores here.

From De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, "Together" has forged to the top, with "Souvenirs" a close second. Leo Feist has two winners in "A Shady Tree" and "Blue Heaven," the first named having the edge. Sherman and Clay are clicking with "Diane," while Waterson, Inc., has "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella."

Ager, Yellen and Bornstein are up with "Is She My Girl Friend"; Ted Browne, Inc., has "Oh, Look At That Baby"; Shapiro-Bernstein is okay with "Did You Mean It" and Villat Moret are strongest now with "Chloe."

"The Desert Song" and "Just a Memory" give Harms, Inc., a big lead with the first topping.

U. S. Music Instrument Exports Up $1,500,000

Washington, Feb. 28.

Final check on exports of musical instruments by the Department of Commerce discloses an increase in value of more than $1,500,000 for 1927 over the preceding year.

Total trade amounted to $17,673,207. A gain of 11 per cent. over 1926 with $15,978,396.

Though the 1927 figure is below the peak year of 1920, which was a year of extreme inflation and fluctuating prices, the department characterizes the increase last year as "very satisfactory" to the trade.

These figures include all instruments with player pianos topping the list with over $5,000,000 in exports. Phonographs were next with more than $3,000,000, while the disks ran to $2,222,000.

Band instruments went from $637,570 last year (1926), to $690,325 for 1927.

Latin America is the best market for the musical instrument manufacturers with Australia and New Zealand second. Canada is third.

DRUMMER'S BREAK

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 28.

Joe Sinai, drummer at the T. & D., who leaped into the breach when E. Max Bradfield was unable to arrive from the south in time, has been awarded the post of leader, and opens next month at the new Wilson theatre in Sacramento, West Coast house.

Sinai was formerly drummer with the San Francisco Symphony. He got his jazz experience with Paul Ash, who is his brother-in-law.

WALKER FAR AFIELD

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 28.

The Brown hotel, here, is building a roof garden for opening May 18, a departure for the hostelry. Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, will preside at the opening, according to plans in connection with Derby Day festivities.

Jimmie Joy and his orchestra, currently at the Brown in their second year, will continue indef booked by the M. C. A.

1927 MUSIC CHAIN STORE SALES DROP

Washington, Feb. 28.

Average monthly sales for 1927 in the four chains of music stores is recorded at $991,000 by the Department of Commerce in a statement just made public.

This is a drop from 1926 average of $1,161,000 monthly as well as being under 1925 with its monthly average sales of $1,101,000.

For the past nine years the average monthly intake were as follows: 1919, $905,000; 1920, $989,000; 1921, $775,000; 1922, $914,000; 1923 $1,026,000; 1924, $917,000; 1925, $1,101,000; 1926, $1,161,000, and 1927, $991,000.

Average number of stores in operation monthly in 1927 was 62. This was two more than in 1926, though the returns were less, and an average of four more stores than in 1925; 1927 was the highest average recorded as far as stores in operation.

As an indication of where the drop took place in 1927 the following table will be of value:

Sales by Month:	1927.	1926.	1925.
Jan.	$852,000	$911,000	$831,000
Feb.	888,000	932,000	893,000

Futuristic Jazz Next

The manner in which the foremost radio orchestral maestros are groping for new phases of American music augurs well. Conductors like Nathaniel Shilkret and Walter G. Haenschen who between them have the most important sponsored hours on the air are constantly on the lookout for new futuristic musical studies as features of their programs.

Ultra-modern composers and the publishers of futuristic compositions are gratified by Shilkret and Haenschen's desire to develop and further a new American music. Instead of plugging just a succession of pop tunes, or revamping and repeating familiar American operetta and musical comedy compositions the progressive maestros recognize their responsibilities as purveyors of a type of music that is capable of influencing public tastes.

Aarons & Freeley, whose musical comedy productions with the George Gershwin music follows the same thought, will assist in the propagation of a new American music when Ben Bernie and his Hotel Roosevelt orchestra open with "Here's Howe," the new A. & F. musical which Roger Wolfe Kahn is composing. In a series of Sunday night concerts at whichever house the musical attraction will be housed, Bernie will present some important jazz ideas he has long nursed.

J. V. HUFFMAN ELOPES

Washington, Feb. 28.

J. Virgil Huffman, organist at Loew's Palace, slipped over to Alexandria, Va., last week and married Gladys Churchill, non-pro of Burlington, Vt.

That was enough for the local dailies to brand it as an elopement, calling it the second occurring from the same house, both organists.

Huffman came here from the B. & K. houses in Chicago.

Pollack to Show East

Ben Pollack, Victor recording artist, opens with his band at the Little Club, New York, March 8. Pollack is from Chicago and highly touted as something new in dansapation. Lyons & Lyons.

Coast Recording

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Earl Burnett, Coast band leader, has recorded "Nothing Could Be Sweeter" for Columbia, with Buddy Wattles, from local "Hit the Deck," vocalizing.

BOOZE IN DETROIT AT LOWEST PRICES

Detroit, Feb. 28.

For the past few months and up to the present time booze in Detroit has been sold at its lowest price since the advent of prohibition. Radical reductions are accounted for by the larger operators as a result of perfected methods and consequent lower cost of transportation.

Quotations are, per case: Imperial (rye), $42; 3-star Hennessy, $70; Champagne, moderate grade, $70; Bacardi, $70; gin, $30; Sloe gin, $40.

American whiskey, most of it distilled on this side, ranges from $35 to $75, the latter being the McCoy. Beer and ale cheap, with a plentiful supply brewed over here, and much of it equaling the Canadian product.

The low rates of recent date are said to have put a crimp in Canadian pilgrimages, especially to Ontario. A trip over there for quenching purposes necessitates a $2 permit, the establishment of a "residence," or the friendship of someone with both.

With the stuff scaled only slightly higher on this side and simple to procure, only the most particular are now hopping the ferry.

Still, a certain amount of phony over here, but it's outbulked and disappearing fast.

Garbage Can Fly Spot

Irwin S Strouse is promoting an intimate nite club labeled The Garbage Can, with Jack Osterman at the helm as a fly spot for the wise mob. With the label what it is, anything can go, and Osterman's comedy need not necessarily be under wraps. That's the dope for the Broadway following.

Strouse is the p. a. who made popular the new ballad, "Go Jump in the Lake—Lopez Speaking," in connection with Roseray and Capella. Incidentally, business the past week at the Casa looked up, credited as a direct reaction to the "suicide" publicity.

Strouse has turned in his notice as p. a. to Gene Geiger, terminating in two weeks, when he will tackle The Garbage Can.

Bloom's Leg Amputated

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Ike Bloom, formerly proprietor of the Midnight Frolics cafe, and more recently the owner of Deauville, loop night club, is seriously ill at Mercy hospital following the amputation of a leg.

Bloom is perhaps the best-known cafe and night-life figure in Chicago.

Club Mirador Dark

The Club Mirador, New York, called it a season Monday because of poor trade. Moss and Fontana, at one time the shining attraction of the class cafes two years ago, went in on a gamble following Eleanora Ambrose and Charles Sabin, but couldn't rehabilitate the place.

Road House Man Bumped Off

Elgin, Ill., Feb. 28.

Frank Leonatti, 40, owner of Pleasure Inn., four miles east of here on the Lake street highway, flaunted warning given a month ago that if he left his home he would never return alive. Thursday he ventured forth from the inn, and before walking 20 feet he was shot down and died before police arrived.

Leonatti is said to have operated a dive in Chicago where the "Forty-four," Chicago juvenile gang that recently threatened to blow up St. Charles home, State reformatory, made its headquarters.

Leonatti had had his scrapes with the police, once for murder and another time on a charge of attempting to force a girl to an immoral life.

KNICK GRILL BRODIES, NOW GOES CHOP SUEY

Knickerbocker Grill on 42d street and Broadway opened and closed in short order, the place flopping almost from the start, despite the radio popularity of Ernie Golden and his orchestra, who were enticed away from the McAlpin hotel to be featured at the restaurant.

The Knick was taken over by Herbert Pokress, who was connected with Mineralava in that beauty clay's heyday. With several others he opened flashily, but mostly on the cuff.

The place is labeled "for rent," although the Jardin Royal Chinese restaurant syndicate is said to be closing for the basement restaurant as another link in the chop suey chain. If they take it over it will be a departure for Chinese restaurants, which are averse to basement locations ever since the Bamboo Gardens, now the successful Janssen's midtown Hofbrau-Haus, flivved so decisively.

Since then the Chinese restaurants have confined themselves to one flight up locations as in the past, Yoeng's at 1607 Broadway proving a surprise success as a ground floor enterprise.

10-Yr.-Old Boy's Recovery Keeps Parents Out of Court

The recovery of 10-year-old Michael Fields, whose miraculous convalescence from a complication of physical hurts is now the subject of profound medical discussion, has resulted in his parents dropping their suits and counter suits.

Arthur Fields, the phonograph singer and vaudevillian, counter sued Mrs. Selma Fields following the latter's reception of an action for separate maintenance.

The Fields' domestic imbroglio has been a tragic one, revolving about the youngster, who is now back in school after recovering from an automobile accident that is a tribute to medical science in besting a 2½-inch fractured skull, punctured liver and punctured gall bladder which the youngster suffered from the smash-up, following which general peritonitis and pneumonia set in. The physical debris attracted the attention of the metropolitan savants from a biological as well as a humane viewpoint and the "American Medical Review" is publishing a special treatise on it.

It was in the midst of this accident that Mrs. Fields left their Larchmont home. The understanding now is that both live their separate lives, the songster at Larchmont and the wife in midtown.

Fields gave a total of 2½ quarts of blood in three transfusions to the boy.

Young Michael's mother died four years ago. The present Mrs. Fields is his stepmother of one year.

The lad's recovery eased the general bitterness between the Fields, and while there will be no reconciliation, their differences will be kept out of the courts.

Posting Writ Not Enough

St. Louis, Feb. 28.

St. Louis cabarets, night clubs and restaurants won a victory in the Federal Court here when United States Judge Faris, long known as an enforcer of laws, ruled that the pasting of a copy of an injunction on the door of a place of business is not sufficient to convict the proprietor or one of his employees, in the event of a subsequent violation of the injunction pertaining to the dry law.

Contempt proceedings were instituted against the Linmar Cafe, St. Louis. An injunction was issued in July, 1927, and a copy of it was pasted on the doors of the cafe three days later. Prohibition enforcement officers charged that the violation of the injunction against the sale of liquor took place Dec. 16, 1927.

In his opinion Judge Faris declared that the government produced no evidence that either John Scott or Louis La Presto, charged with the violation, had read the notice and therefore had knowledge of the injunction.

Montmartre's Dance Team

They come from the Hotel Ambassador, Los Angeles. Henry H. Dagand booked.

Arrest Jai-Lai Prop.

Chicago, Feb. 28.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Fred Mann, proprietor of the Rainbo Gardens cafe and the Rainbo Jai-Lai Fronton, charging him with the operation of a gambling resort. The Fronton, on which the charge is based, is operated on a "profit sharing" or "mutuel betting" basis.

Rev. Elmer Williams, self appointed vice crusader, swore out the warrant, stating that he had engaged in a "betting game" there.

Marathon Dancers

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.

Marathon dancing for 61 hours and 54 minutes in a dance hall got Albert Bonnach and Marianne Jaque a booking in the Harris vaudeville, and a warrant for Manager Milton Crandall, charging violation of a state law against having a dance hall open after 1 a. m.

Five years ago in an East Youngstown, O., dance hall Frances Mercer and Harry Wagner danced 182 hours. The New York "Times" reported that C. Nicholas, Paris grocer, two years ago danced 266 hours in Tangiers, Africa.

N. T. G. became the debutant "Wise Cracker" of a new Wise-Cracking Melody Boys Hour via WHN this weekend. The Wise Shoe Co., sponsoring the hour, is making use of a name the National Biscuit Co., cracker manufacturers, were understood contemplating using. It was a brisk half hour, the Tom Timothy orchestra from the Frivolities Club officiating. Timothy is otherwise a midnight radiocaster thrice weekly through the same station.

The Happiness Boys were in fine fettle Friday evening plugging the new Happiness restaurant on Fifth avenue and 44th street, on the site of the old Delmonico's, broadcasting before an invited audience from the restaurant premises. The audience approbation was clearly picked up, adding to the comedians' efforts, which prompts the idea that even a prop audience might be a good stunt. The effect of the laughter and audience response, simultaneous with the listener-in's reaction, is more convincing than the usual broadcastings from a sound-proof studio.

Billy Jones and Ernest Hare perpetrated their usual assortment of fierce puns and gags, although with excellent showmanship and great effect, in between doing some novelty ditties. Their ballad, "Wife o' Mine," for all its banality, is a departure from pop song themes.

A decorous brand of dansapation was broadcast by Eddie Davis from the Lorraine Hotel. Davis is famed as a society dance music purveyor, and his song taste is excellent. Besides which he plays them with charm and finish not encountered with every dance aggregation.

On the topic of charming dance music, the B. A. Rolfe syncopation particularly on the Coward Comfort Hour, is impressive. Rolfe paces

FACULTY CONTINUITY

A couple of academic literateurs, Henry Fiske Carleton and William Ford Manley, of the English instruction faculty of New York University, are the continuity writers for the new Socony Hour schedule commencing tonight (Feb. 29).

Broadcasts will have to do with historical dramatizations for microphonic transmission.

$360,000,000 Worth of Radio Sold in 1927

Washington, Feb. 28.

Dealers selling radio sets and accessories thereto, did a business totaling $360,000,000 in 1927, the Department of Commerce discloses.

Over 30,000 dealers were questioned by the electrical division of the department and 25 per cent answered, giving the intake on the year as $90,000,000. As this was one-quarter of the dealers queried the department thus reached the $360,000,000 figure.

Prefer Favorites on Air

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

An answer to the debated question of whether radio listeners want to hear the same talent over and over again is probably had in the experience of West Coast Theatres on their latest broadcast over KYA.

Frank Whitbeck announced that Helene Hughes, just returned from a northern tour for Fanchon and Marco, would favor with request numbers, as would also Bo-Peep Carlin and Maxine Doyle, two of the West Coast regulars on the air.

During the 30 minutes the program was on hundreds of requests were phoned in for Miss Hughes and a number for the other girls, indicating that these entertainers have "clicked" and that listeners-in want to hear them frequently.

Numerous DX hounds throughout the country are picking up the West Coast Theatres' broadcasts, as attested by letters and telegrams received.

Free as Air

Omaha, Feb. 28.

Riviera theatre (vaudefilm) orchestra agreed to a broadcast of the stage performance without compensation, and the first free radio went on the air Monday. It will be a weekly feature.

Union officials and the orchestra men of the house were in accord on the idea.

MENTAL CARTOONS

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

Something new in broadcasting is the mental cartoons drawn by Robert Wildhack over KHJ every Thursday night.

Wildhack has been sketching for many years in a number of humor publications. His present work on the radio are ideas taken from life.

Radio Bill Protests

Washington, Feb. 28.

House committee, in reporting the radio bill with amendments, has caused a storm of protest to break loose at the Capitol.

Complaints from industry centres around the plan of allocation wherein it will be necessary to give the sparsely populated states such as Nevada an equal number of wave lengths as New York or Illinois.

It is predicted here the plan will not go through.

OBITUARY

I. M. WEINGARTEN

Israel (Izzy) M. Weingarten, about 60, identified for many years in burlesque producing, died Feb. 20 of pneumonia at his home in Chicago. At the time of his death Mr. Weingarten was contemplating stock burlesque operation in the Windy City.

Mr. Weingarten in the Chicago burlesque days of Sam T. Jack was stage carpenter of that house for a long time. When Tom Miaco opened the Trocadero there he went over as stage carpenter. When the manager, Bob Fulton, died, Mr. Weingarten was elevated to the management.

His close association with burlesque resulted in his entry into producing, his first "Star and Garter" show going on the Columbia Wheel, managed by the late Frank Weisberg, formerly Variety's first Chicago representative.

Later he became connected with show operations on the old American Wheel. Litigation ensued when George W. Peck, then with the American, cancelled the Weingarten show and revoked his franchise. Before it came to trial I. H. Herk straightened things out by having Mr. Weingarten's franchise restored and the case was dropped.

Mr. Weingarten next devoted his time to producing colored shows. When the Mutual Wheel was organized he made repeated efforts to put a colored troupe on it, but as Negro companies were taboo he failed. Three weeks of time were given him with his colored show, one week at the Lyric, Newark, and the other two at the Howard, Boston, at the end of the burlesque season four years ago.

In late years Mr. Weingarten ran a costume and scenic establishment in Chicago.

ROBERT T. STICKNEY

Robert T. Stickney, internationally famous circus rider and leaper, died Feb. 24 in Miami, Fla., following a brief illness. He was 82.

Born in New Orleans, at the height of his career he was featured under the big tops as "The Apollo Belvidere of the Arena" and was almost a national idol.

He was said to be one of the only two performers who performed the feat of a triple somersault in a running leap over live stock in the days when the leaps were a feature of all circuses.

He was twice married, his first wife being the daughter of John Robinson, founder of the circus of that name. A son, Robert T. Stickney, Jr., formerly was a circus rider, but is now playing vaudeville. There is also a daughter, Emily. Burial services will be held in the Stickney home in Cincinnati March 1.

JAY HERMAN

Jay Herman, vaudevillian, died Feb. 20 of pneumonia at Bridgeport, Conn. Herman was best remembered in vaudeville for his partnership with Al Kane, the team of Kane and Herman.

He leaves a daughter, Gloria, three and one-half years old, by his former wife, Thelma Pritchard, actress, who last appeared in George M. Cohan's production, "Los Angeles."

Herman was a member of the Friars, N. V. A., Grand Street Boys, Business Men's Association and the Elks.

AL WEBER

Al Weber, 29, vaudevillian, died suddenly, Feb. 24, in Chicago. His body was brought to New York accompanied by his brother, Harry Weber, also on the stage, but no relation to Harry Weber, the agent.

Young Weber had played a number of small parts in several acts. One of his last engagements was with the Bobby Carbone act.

LARRY COMER

Lawrence Comer, 40, vaudevillian, died Feb. 22 in Bellevue Hospital, New York, of bronchial pneumonia. Comer recently suffered a mental collapse. At the time of his removal to Bellevue, arrangements were being made to have him taken to Bellemeade, N. J., for treatment.

Comer had been in vaudeville about 15 years, at times working with a partner, but generally doing a single. His most important double formation was some years ago with the late Emma Carus.

Comer never married, but was devoted to his mother whom he brought on from Findlay, O., to live with him in New York. His mother was with him at the time of his demise. He was a member of the N. V. A., Elks (Anderson, Ind.) and the Masons (Chicago Shriners).

Body was shipped from New York Friday night for interment in his home town, Findlay.

ROBERT CANNEFAX

Robert Cannefax, 37, champion three-cushion billiard player, formerly in vaude, died in Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 27.

Cannefax belonged to the Friars and the Elks, and it was at the former's Monastery 10 years ago that he achieved his cue championship by defeating De Oro.

When Cannefax's lungs became impaired it was his Friar buddies who came to his financial aid. Several benefits were arranged, one netting $6,000. Elks also helped, and it was under Phoenix Elks' auspices he was buried, as Mrs. Cannefax is remaining in Arizona in the hope of benefiting her health, which failed through care of her husband.

Cannefax was a St. Louis boy. He is survived by his wife and one child.

ROBERT A. DUMARY

Robert A. Dumary, actor, died suddenly in a New York City hospital, Feb. 10, of heart trouble. A graduate of the New York College of Oratory, Dumary married Flavia Colle, actress, in 1882, and with her formed a traveling stock known as the Flavia Colle Players.

The Co. was on the road from 1882 to 1894 playing eastern theatres. On the death of his wife, Dumary retired from the stage and entered the contracting business in Albany with his brother. He amassed a small fortune, giving up work entirely in 1914. Dumary is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Dana Burnet, New York. Interment in Albany.

EDWARD DOUGLAS

Edward Douglas, English actor, over here about 10 years, died Feb. 28 at Seaton Hospital, New York, of tuberculosis. He had been under treatment about three months.

Mr. Douglas appeared in several Woods attractions including "Ladies Night" and "Too Many Husbands." He is survived by a wife, non-professional, and several children. The Actors' Fund will be in charge of the funeral.

Marcus Loew

EDWARD LIBERTY

A musician since he was 12, Liberty became a clown with the Dan Rice circus and later appeared with minstrels.

Interment in Rochester.

AL MAHR

Al Mahr, 62, for 30 years a Broadwayite and previously an actor, died Feb. 24 in New York of cancer. A more detailed account appears in the Times Square department (On the Square) of this issue.

MARKHAM B. MILLER

Markham B. Miller, 56, of the Hippodrome, Youngstown, O., committed suicide Feb. 22. Details will be found on the news pages of this issue.

Mrs. Mitties Butterfield-Mott, 36, daughter of Col. W. S. Butterfield, died Feb. 27 at Tucson, Ariz. Death due to tonsilitis, with which she had been ill for only a week. Mrs. Mott, only child of the Michigan theatre operator, was the former wife of Walter Rathbun, film actor. Recently she married Charles S. Mott, vice-president of General Motors.

Col. and Mrs. Butterfield have been notified in Europe, where they are vacationing. Besides her parents and husband, two children by the Rathbun marriage survive.

The mother, 52, of Mae Marsh, picture actress, died at California Lutheran Hospital, Los Angeles, Feb. 22, of a cerebral hemmorhage. Other children surviving are Frances Marsh, film editor with Paramount; Oliver T. Marsh, cameraman at United Artists; Mildred and Leslie Marsh, screen actresses; and Mrs. George Berhelon, wife of the production manager with DeMille. Interment at Forest Lawn cemetery, Glendale, Cal.

Leslie Catton, 30, newspaperman, died Feb. 24 from a fractured skull in Bellevue Hospital. Catton, unmarried, is survived by his mother, who took his remains to Auburn, N. Y., for interment.

Catton had worked for newspapers in Boston and Springfield and with the "Mirror" and "American," New York, also doing publicity for the rodeos at the Garden.

Mrs. Rose Cowle, 53, the mother of Lillian St. Leon, who, with her circus troupe, is filling an engagement for Ringhon and Moore on the Pacific coast, died Feb. 17, at the St. Leon home in Los Angeles.

The mother of Edith B. Swan (Farrell Taylor Co.) died Feb. 19 in Sterling, Conn., of pneumonia.

Recent deaths among the ranks of the Brooklyn stagehands local, No. 4, are as follows: Edward Mullaney, 47, property man at Loew's Metropolitan since it opened, died Feb. 20 in St. John's hospital, Ozone Park, L. I., of pneumonia. Dave Levy, 63, road man for years and later property man in different Brooklyn theatres, his last connection being the Fulton when it was playing stock, died Feb. 6 of a complication of diseases. Edward Spears, 62, flyman at Werba's Brooklyn theatre, died Feb. 14 of heart trouble. Russell McClure, 74, electrician, Academy of Music, Brooklyn, died Feb. 15 of complication of diseases resulting from old age. Robert Steadele, 37, died Feb. 20. A news account of his death appears elsewhere in this issue.

New York Theatrical Protective Union, No. 1, reported one death last week. George Davis, 55, property man, Imperial theatre, New York, died Feb. 24 of heart trouble. Davis was a brother of Max Davis, formerly with the Shuberts stage crews for years.

Deaths Abroad

Paris, Feb. 19.

Jules Mouret, 62, French physician and author, died at Montpellier, France.

Mme. Rainville (Vve. Berne), French actress (mother of Lucile Norbert, comedienne), died in Paris.

M. Fradel, Sr., 75, former manager of Casino theatre, Geneva (Switzerland).

Louis Sonolet, 53, French author.

RADIO RAMBLES

Marguerite Hurther's program direction activities on behalf of the New York "American" programs via WPAP-WHN evidence considerable diligence on her part. She assembles some particularly impressive periods.

Keller Sisters and Lynch took advantage of the "American" auspices prior to sailing Feb. 23 on the Olympic for London engagements to broadcast a farewell program.

WJZ has it all over WEAF of a Sunday afternoon in radio entertainment. With the red network station strong on gospel spieling, WJZ is lighter in tenor. The Gold Strand Group Orchestra, directed by Walter G. Haenschen, struck a happy compromise with operetta and musical comedy numbers as well as vocal interludes by Marjorie Horton, soprano, and Frank Munn, tenor, of popular numbers of a lighter vein.

Immediately following, the Jospe Woodwind Ensemble, headed by Samuel Jospe, offered several classical compositions scored for novel flute, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon combinations.

Devora Nadworney of the NBC stock company was featured in a 30-minute recital with Herbert Borodkin, viola soloist. The contralto and the viola player alternated.

The Acousticon Hour is a Sunday afternoon commercial on WEAF. The old-time song idea is the general motif, primed for chief appeal to the old folks. Since the Acousticon Co. is exploiting a device to improve the hearing, the greatest market is among the old folks.

Little Jack Little, the midwest radio sensation, is now in the East and broadcasting locally. His unique style of song delivery has created a large demand for his personal appearances in picture houses.

The bands continue stronger than ever. Hotel Shelton ensemble is more of the concert. Lorraine Hotel's aggregation is conservative jazz. Saxi Holtsworth, from the Fordham Gardens, Bronx chowmeinery, blasts forth of midnights via WMCA. From Roseland their jazzique is a WOR entry. Ditto Ernie Golden's orchestra, from the Knickerbocker Grill, with Golden currently out of town for a week on a special booking. Johnny Johnson and his Statler Pennsylvanians, from the Pennsy, relieve their stuff with trios and vocal interludes that distinguish them above some of the others.

Tuning on WMCA of an afternoon brings a barrage of bands and jazz in hourly periods, sponsored by Littman's, Equitable, Wilson, Queen Shop, Biltmore Shores, Hudson Bay Furnishers,—et al,—including enterprises ranging from wearing apparel to real estate. The band is probably the same aggregation throughout, switching programs and numbers to suit.

Broadcasting from the Chicago studios of the NBC, WJZ and a network picks up Jules Herbuveaux's unique syncopation on behalf of the Ward Montromery Co.'s Riverside Hour. The Riverside Trail Blazers, as the band is labeled, each week has a guest soloist with it.

NEW TRIAL GRANTED JACK LANCE IN GA.

Sentenced to Die for Murder of Bert Donaldson—Errors in Trial Gain New Chance

Atlanta, Feb. 28.

Jack Lance, former outdoor showman, convicted of the killing of Bert Donaldson last July and sentenced to the chair, has been granted a new trial by the Supreme Court of Georgia. It was ruled that much of the evidence employed by the prosecutor was inadmissible, such as one-sided phone conversations.

Donaldson was an assistant to the solicitor general, but federal investigators compiled information to the effect that he was a peddler of dope, his real racket. The local underworld understands that the murder was the result of a threat by Donaldson to turn in a band of "junk" dealers and that he was shot by some confederate hiding in a closet in the Georgian Terrace. The sporting element did not believe Lance was guilty and the verdict was a surprise.

Lance was a gambler, working the trains principally. Although a friend of Donaldson, who was known to have turned in several associates, the worst Lance could have gotten was a few months in the pen for the misdemeanor of gambling.

The convicted man has been working for a new trial, aided by former friends in the carnival field. It is expected that a retrial will result in his exoneration and it is hoped he will be freed on bail pending the new trial. The hint of a dope ring feud was found in the piece of oilcloth discovered in the room the crime was committed in. The cloth is the usual covering of an opium pipe.

CANADA'S SLAP ON TENT SHOWS

Special $250 Fee for Circuses Alone

Toronto, Feb. 28.

Heavy, heavy hangs the sock over the heads of a tented outfits invading Canada next summer. This goes for circuses, carnivals and all outside shows. Canada has named a special officer from the department of national review to see that said sock is paid accordingly.

Circuses come under the special provision that they are to be admitted into Canada on a special fee of $250, operative for one month or a fractional part thereof. An inventory is also to be filed showing all goods in the possession of the shows.

Politicians when sounded on the proposed duty declare that advance men have been smooth and oily workers in the past.

The duty is set as follows: Each dog, 75c; mule, etc., $2.50; and on riding devices, merry-go-rounds, whips, ferris wheels, etc., tax is derived on the full value, in the condition of the article at time of importation.

Duty is also exacted on all tobaccos, cigars, cigarets, programs, tickets, ice cream cones, toy balloons, toy whips, whistles, novelties, peanuts, candy, popcorn and any and all goods offered for sale.

GAMBLING LEGISLATION

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 28.

A move is on hand to abolish the old shell game and other forms of gambling at county fairs by the New York State Association of Agricultural societies. It is the aim of the association to provide a cleaner and higher standard of fair.

The body met here last week with numerous showmen, who came to the city to arrange for future bookings. The association endorsed the bill of Senator Leigh G. Kirkland, providing stringent rules against gambling and improper midway shows at county fairs. The measure charges the state police with enforcement of the proposed law and formulation of new and higher standards of quality for county fairs and also increased state aid be given these exhibitions.

Park for Lake Shore

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Dunes Park, just across the Chicago-Indiana line, and fronting on Lake Michigan, is to be equipped with parking space and bathouses for 5,000 bathers.

There are 2,135 acres, 135 will be improved and 2,000 left in the original wild state. A pier for lake excursion boats and a picnic ground are included on the improvement program.

Lew Wheeler's New Berth

Lew H. Wheeler, known along the Great White Way to theatrical folks generally and for years advance man of the Ringlings, has severed his connection with the Ringlings and is now allied with "The Circus Magazine," wild west and animal review.

The idea is a program proposition which will solicit advertising and print the programs of the amusements interested in the venture.

Wheeler is concerned in the handling and circulation of the programs with E. H. Snedeker, mayor of Haverstraw, N. Y., and will soon start out on the road as advertising manager for the concern.

ARCOLA PARK REORGANIZED

Arcola Amusement Park, near Hackensack, N. J., has been reorganized, following its recent financial difficulties that forced it into the hands of the receiver.

New president is J. J. List of the List Lumber Co. Other officers elected at a meeting Feb. 23 are Moe Katzman, vice-president and general manager; J. B. Walden, treasurer; W. P. Hemingway, secretary.

Construction work will start immediately on a swimming pool 200x250.

Majestic holding true to form this week with fair show. On the screen, Reginald Denny in "On Your Toes" (Universal), Aesop's Fables and newsreel. Bush Bros., gob garbed, were a good opener. Bristol and Belle present weak humor, their tapping in imitation of a railroad train being their only bet. Eddie Carr and Co. (3) have a reasonably funny bit, in which an oil "salesman" from the city comes to a rube town to sell oil wells. Green and Dunbar, just another male duo, aiming at comedy, but not always hitting. Johnny Barry and Co. (5) have a hoke matrimonial bureau and furnish a few laughs. Jack Strouse, blackface, in interpretative songs, introduces the first real applause and deserves most of it. "Rosebuds," girl orchestra, with two boy tappers and nice scenery, plays well. A girl banjo player togged out in blue overalls does a tap novelty. Business good.

The most pronounced draw of the season was the Mexican Tipica orchestra at the Palace this week. Sunday matinee the house was 25 per cent. Mexican, and the additional patronage caused almost capacity.

Under direction of Miguel Lerdo de Tejada, 25 musicians and five singers in native dress presented a program of Spanish and American numbers in distinctive Latin arrangement. Instrumentation is unique, several musicians handling instruments entirely foreign to American ears. Closing the first half the orchestra was a riotous hit.

Economy was the keynote of the remaining acts, with the program going to press minus an act for next to closing. Jack Norworth and Dorothy Adelphi were given the spot, being moved from sixth, and handled it okay. Ruby Norton was brought in to fill, singing her regular routine of published numbers with Clarence Senna at the piano in sixth position.

Pasquali Bros., acrobatic trio, opened with some fancy head-balancing and tumbling. Leo Bill, ventriloquist, who uses his hand for the dummy's face, lost plenty in appreciation because of a hammering dialect. Theodore Bekefi and Co., dancing troupe of three girls and two men, replaced Day and Aileen suitably. The act is mostly specialties, worked fast and clicking in the majority. One of the two comedy turns on the bill, Harry Holmes, got across with his wild nut stuff. He carries a girl, man and rooster for props, all working a senseless jamboree that is still good entertainment.

Kluting's Entertainers, animal act, closed. The mixed-up bill necessitated printing special leaflet programs, with the last act still not billed. Loop.

Fair entertainment at the Congress last week, with "Across the Atlantic" (Warner Brothers) the feature, and Earl Abel at the organ. Abel's entire program devoted to extolling the merits of the late Ernest A. Ball, composer.

Gabby Brothers opened with their straw hats of boomerang propensities, eccentric diablo tossing and smartly-passed Indian clubs. Their work is up to par with the possible exception of the hat stuff, which is overdone. Harry Fiddler in impressions did Chinaman, Theodore Roosevelt and other characters, was fair. His Chink impersonation was a stand-out.

Bernie Mignon's revue opens with a fair five-piece male orchestra. A girl did some near-contortionist work that had merit, a bit of dancing, and a boy with some mediocre tap steps. Mild entertainment for average time.

Congress patrons obviously felt that the bill was not up to snuff and applauded by smatters until Manley and Baldwin appeared with their hack-stand and saloon skit and introduced some rather creditable humor, well presented.

Caul sisters (4) were among those present. These girls, displaying plenty of flesh in a series of interpretive poses, registered effectively. One sister sings an explanatory preface to each pose, the other with two girls doing the posing. What the young lady with the voice lacks in vocal quality she makes up in appearance. Business just fair.

Fred Ardath and Co. were sole survivors, with Ardath as a drunk scoring on his comedy. He doesn't rely on gags, and doesn't have to. His straight and girl assistant were capable support. The other billed headliner, Virginia Bacon and Co., has a flash in appearance but nothing in dance talent to bring more than polite applause. Miss Bacon takes three spots with toe and ballroom dancing, failing to show anything the picture house ballet girls can't handle. Her four chorines are small and fairly clever, and would make good background for more convincing solos. A juvenile and fill-in hoofer complete.

Borde and Robinson Co., four men and a girl in skits and songs, can make reasonable headway in a decently receptive house. They are using a cigar store salesman bit and a courtroom scene that are funny enough. A singing quartet gag from burlesque, with the members being led offstage for shooting one by one, is finished weakly. Eva Mandel with her special songs and gags didn't quite make it here in the deuce spot, although clicking the previous week in next-to-closing at a smaller house.

Mlle. Marce and her Pals, meaning dogs, ponies, monkey, and a mule, opened suitably. The mule provides a good family finish for the act. "San Francisco Nights" (Gotham) on screen.

Benny Kreuger, master of ceremonies and stage band leader, Tivoli theatre, returns to that house, having completely recovered from injuries received in a fight.

Milton Weil, Chicago music publisher, and deputy state commerce commissioner, was feted at a testimonial banquet at the Hotel Sherman by fellow politicians. Weil was presented with a new Lincoln sedan.

It was going a little too far to advertise the Tower's last-half bill as "a huge double-headline vaudeville show." What would be okay normally looked pretty disappointing under the magnavox billing. A pitiful house for the first show Thursday night.

Jack Crawford was granted permission to cut short his Arlington hotel, Hot Springs, Ark., engagement so he could start on a 26-week K-A-O tour. He will play two weeks in each town with his band. Ted Weems and his orchestra takes his place at the Arlington.

Alex Swidler, manager of the Bert Levey office, has taken over the Broadway Strand, Embassy and the Shore theatres. He will book vaudeville Saturday and Sunday starting this week.

Frank Milton, formerly with the Noble Sisters, has given up management of the Rivoli theatre, Denver, to return to vaudeville.

Mort Goldberg, former theatre manager, will open a Russian tea room above the Adams theatre, East Monroe street.

TORONTO

By G. A. S.

Royal Alexandra—"The Desert Song"; next, "Blossom Time."
Princess—Dark.
Victoria—"Craig's Wife" (Glaser stock).
Empire—"Queen High" (Kepple stock).
Gayety—"Land of Joy" (Mutual).
Hip—"Sailors' Wives"-vaude.
Pantages—"Land of Hope and Glory"-all-English vaude bill.
Loew's—"The Divine Woman"-vaude.
Tivoli—"The Circus" (3d week).
Uptown—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"-stage show.
Regent—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" (2d week).
Hart House—Three Canadian short plays (University of Toronto).
Massey Hall—Toronto Symphony Orchestra.
Toronto Canoe Club—"In Gay Paree."
Bloor—"The Big Parade"-vaude.
Palace—"The Student Prince"-vaude.
Runnymede—"The Gaucho"-vaude.
Capitol—"Helen of Troy"-vaude.
Parkdale—"The Noose"-vaude.

Jack Arthur puts his orchestra back on the stage this week and brings in Bobby Jones as master of ceremonies, with a show built around "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The Ercelle Sisters are featured.

Ellaline Terris and Lyn Harding featured in the British film, "Land of Hope and Glory," current at Pantages, were on the legit stage here with Seymour Hicks last week. They have gone west, and the picture is billed over the same route.

Vincent de Vita, scenic boss Vaughan Glaser players, is opening a scene-painting shop here. He plans advice and work for the many amateurs springing up.

Tom Daley is shooting special matinees for children at 25c. top for "The Circus." Leon Victor is also making a play for loose change through the schools with "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Practically a sell out in advance at Hart House theatre (University of Toronto) for the three Canadian short plays, "The Prize Winner," by Merrill Dennison; "The Velvet Muzzle," by J. E. Middleton, and "The Return of the Immigrant," by Mazo de la Roche. Staging by Carroll Aikens.

With three operettas in a row going over the top at the Royal Alexandra the Shuberts decided to keep them going as long as the dough holds out. Result is "Blossom Time" to play its ninth Toronto week March 5. "The Vagabond King" and "My Maryland" each went better than $25,000, and "The Desert Song" is expected to reach $30,000 this week. "Queen High" is being put on in stock by George Kepple at the Empire and "Hit the Deck" is headed this way.

The Dickens Fellowship, Toronto amateurs, have made the fifth to start in the Little Theatre movement this month. They will put on "Barnaby Rudge."

Vaughan Glaser Players will play "Craig's Wife," followed by "The Fortune Hunter" and "If I Was Rich." Philip Shefield has joined as stage director. George Keppie will try his first musical attempt with "Queen High" next week.

Despite plenty of howls from Aldermen Summerville and Luxton, Toronto city council advanced day light saving from May 8-Sept. 1 to April 29-Sept. 30 for 1928. Summerville owns four of the larger neighborhood houses here. Luxton has just opened his first picture house.

The University of Toronto in their annual course in journalism have turned to dramatic criticism this winter. Augustus Bridle, editor, music and dramatic, on the Toronto Star, is lecturing on how to spot the good ones.

Creatore's Band (Pantages) hooked up with CFCA on double broadcasts this week. Leon Victor also swung in a broadcast on the music accompanying "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Regent. Same station. Mike Shea has Sunday broadcasts from CKCL.

Stock Donaldson, Scotch comedian, playing Ontario picture houses, broke a leg when he fell through a rotten plank in a bridge at Guelph, Ont. He sued the city for $5,000 and has been given judgment for $3,200 cash.

Loew's are going in for short subjects. They have lined up the "Our Gang" output and a series of shorts in technicolor.

The Star, small picture house in Carleton Place, Ont., caught fire Saturday night and 600 patrons got out safely. In the excitement Fire Chief William Mellquaham dropped dead.

Shubert—"Broadway."
Grand—Thurston (2d week).
Cox—"Ladies of the Evening" (stock).
Empress—Mutual burlesque.
Palace—Films and vaude.
Albee—"The Love Mart."
Capitol—"Sorrell and Son" (2d week).
Lyric—"The Crowd."
Keith's—"The Circus."
Walnut—"Annie Laurie."
Strand—Doomsday."
Gifts—"Wickedness Preferred."

Ned Wayburn's Revue and Ernie Golden's orchestra were professional features of the spring fashion show at the Hotel Gibson Roof Garden last week. Attendance big. Modeling by local talent.

Shriners' Indoor Circus is on this week, twice daily, in Taft Auditorium. John Robinson again in charge of program. Dandy lineup of acts.

Keith's reopened Saturday with continuous movie policy at 30 to 50c. scale. Organ installed and stage changes made since close of two-a-day vaude policy.

BRONX, N. Y. C.

Two theatre robberies the past week. Hold-up at the Luxor, operated by Consolidated, netted $2,500. At the Metro, Steiman house, burglars carried off a 300-pound safe containing $1,500. Safe cost some money, too.

Raymond Elder, manager of Keith-Albee Royal, ill at home for many weeks. J. Hill temporarily in charge.

Marble Hill, 1,800-seat picture house at Broadway and 232d street, opened Friday. Part of $10,000,000 real estate development in that vicinity carried on by Naples Realty Corp. Cocalis Amusement Co. operating theatre.

Gladys Florsheim, press agent for the Windsor, road and subway circuit house, now Mrs. Gladys Leich. Her father, Manny Florshcim, manages the house.

Because of the large German population in this borough, Loew's has effected a tie-up with two local German singing societies to do their stuff at the Grand and National in conjunction with the showing of "The Student Prince." Each of the organizations has 50 voices and are getting paid.

ATLANTA

Erlanger—Dark.
Howard—"Sporting Goods" and Publix unit.
Metropolitan—"The Jazz Singer" (second week).
Georgia—"Freckles" and Keith vaude.
Capitol—"Two Girls Wanted" and Pantages acts.
Forsyth—"Lost Battalion."
Rialto—"My Best Girl."
Loew's—"The Big City" and Loew acts.

Al Jolson's Vitaphone appearance here in "The Jazz Singer" something of a sensation. The house, wabbly financially, was closed last week for a change in management. Then came the Jolson picture, which packed the house all week and warranted the second week.

Dempsey-Tunney fight films ran all week at Tudor without molestation. Howard and Metropolitan tried the racket several months ago and films were taken out of houses by federal agents.

Palace—"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and Publix presentation.

Rialto—"Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Max Lowe, former New York booker but now with Meyer Davis here, came through an operation last week okay. However, he was released from the hospital too soon and had to return for a short stay.

Theatre Guild attractions will now come into the National through the Erlanger offices. Previously these productions brought much business to the Belasco.

This same station, WRC, nightly at 6:30 has a list of "What's at the Movies Tonight." Attraction, location and name of theatre are given for nominal cost. All but the Loew houses, Palace and Columbia, are in on it.

John J. Payette, booker and supervisor of theatres for the local Stanley-Crandall chain, is in Florida. Shortly after his return Payette will marry Harry Crandall's daughter.

Local K-A house is to play Joseph-Josephine, the 50-50 man and woman next week.

NEWARK

By C. R. AUSTIN

Broad—"Saturday's Children."
Shubert—"Diplomacy."
Proctor's—Vaude; "The Secret Hour."
Loew's State—Vaude; "Rose-Marie."
Newark—Vaude; "My Friend From India."
Branford—"Vaude; "Sporting Goods."
Fox Terminal—"Sunrise" and Movietone (4th week).
Mosque—Vaude; "Private Life of Helen of Troy."
Rialto—"The Circus" (3d week).
Capitol—"Two Girls Wanted"; "The Girl From Chicago."
Goodwin—"Shepherd of the Hills."
Empire—"Spooks" (stock).
Lyric—"Hello, Paree."
Orpheum—"Butterbeans and Susie"; films.
Sanford, Irvington—Vaude; "Baby Mine."

"The Circus" seems to prove what "The Gold Rush" indicated, namely, that Chaplin has lost his draw here—at least, downtown. The newest Chaplin has done business, but nothing compared to what Chaplin used to do, and it is ending its run after three weeks.

A verdict for $15,000 has been awarded John J. Colegary in his suit against Olympic Amusement, Inc. (Olympic Park). His claim was for injuries suffered July 17, 1926, while on a park "ride."

The Milburn (S-F) is closed Sundays by an order of the township committee there, which has everything closed but stores selling drugs, papers and milk.

Abraham Kassower has sold the Broadway, Broadway and Elwood avenue, to Charles L. Robinson, who owns the Mt. Prospect and Palace. Work on the new Broadway, 2,000-seater, has only just started.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Keith's—Vaude-film.
Temple—Dark. Reopens next week with Dewitt Newing stock in "The Barker."
Loew's State—"Gems," stage show, and "Love," picture.
Savoy—"Burleskers," stock.
Empire—"Freckles"-show.
Eckel—"Patent Leather Kid," 2d week.
Syracuse—"Ben-Hur."
Rivoli—"Wagon Show."
Crescent—Vaude-film.
Swan—"Loves of Carmen."
Palace—"Dress Parade."
Regent—"Soft Cushions" and "Foreign Devils."
Harvard—"Way of All Flesh."

Curls Mason and Tom Phillips, producer and straight, have rejoined the Palace stock burlesque at the Savoy and will remain for the rest of the season.

W. Snowdon Smith, owner of the Gurney Building, in which the Empire theatre is located, is reported now interested in the operation of that house, under lease to the Harrisons. The theatre has been finding the going stormy and difficult for some months.

The Medbery Mummers of Hobart College, Geneva, will produce a bill of three short plays on March 8 in the Little theatre, embracing "The Last Straw," "Copy" and "Minikin and Manikin."

The past week on the local Rialto—the first marked by the intensified opposition resulting from Loew's State—brought not a few upsets. One of the most striking was the failure of "The Circus" to last out the two full weeks for which it was announced at the Strand, the Chaplin picture being pulled on Monday, with "Tragedy of Youth" going in Tuesday. The second was the unexpected holdover of "The Patent Leather Kid," which, in for a single week, developed surprising strength at the Eckel. Next to Loew's, the Eckel undoubtedly had the best break at the box office of the week.

All other houses, from the Crescent at 10c. to the others with 40-50 top, felt the Loew's opposition. "The King of Kings," road show at the Wieting at $1.65, was a box-office disappointment, failing to do much until the tail end of the week, in spite of heavy exploitation in advance and newspaper praise.

Keith's felt the Loew cut-in particularly during the matinees. The Temple did starvation business and the Empire was undeniably hurt. Neighborhood houses, too, were affected by the show-going trend to the downtown district.

Manager Otto Schroeppel of the Syracuse is canvassing patron sentiment via questionnaires, embracing five questions. The first asks for an opinion on double-feature programs as compared with a single feature and supporting shorts. The second asks the patron to check a preference among society drama, comedy, melodrama, romance, historical, western and mystery stories. Third lists scenics, cartoons and short comedies for preference. The fourth asks the patron to indicate his four male and female stellar favorites. The fifth requests an expression, favorable or unfavorable, on policy and management.

The Myrkle-Harder Players, in Utica since June 20 last, will close March 10, moving to the Park, Youngstown, O.

English's—"Criss-Cross."
Indiana—"The College Widow."
Circle—"When a Man Loves."
Apollo—"The Showdown."
Ohio—"The Harvester."

"My Best Girl" (Mary Pickford) opens the Palace, which has been taken over by Loew, March 3. "Dream Garden" will be stage presentation the first week. Emil Seidel will lead the grant concert orchestra and the Palace syncopating band. Lester Huff is organist.

Araby Theatre Corp. will build a new $1,400,000 house at Fort Wayne. A ballroom is planned for the third floor.

The Ritz, new Bloomington, Ind., house, opens Feb. 29 with "Dress Parade." D. M. Wells is manager, with Lloyd Wells assistant.

A. H. Blank, head of Blank Theatres, has been elected first vice-president of the Hawkeye Life Insurance Co.

Two picture names were on the Orpheum bill last Monday night, which headlined no one in particular. Herbert Rawlinson and Buck Jones have sidestepped screen work to play vaudeville. Eddie Leonard, topliner of the week, held over.

Robin and Hood, who were to have opened the show, were in an auto accident, which forced the bookers to bring in the Orange Grove Trio, male harmonists, who had just closed with "The Connecticut Yankee" at the Mayan. The boys were not hitting on all cylinders and appeared more or less lost in their surroundings. Willing workers, however, and doing more than enough. Peg Wynne, as thin as ever, made the most of her figure by turning and twisting it on a few real laughs. She got serious once with a ballad well delivered. After that the show started and ended with the Six Galenos. Doubt existing in the minds of those as to why an acrobatic act was spotted third soon was dispelled. For the spectacular stuff that brings punch after punch, the Galenos have no rivals.

Tough for Rawlinson to follow, but he stepped on and declared himself in which the first couple of gags he pulled. Leo Carrillo, in the front row, broke him up several times, but just the same shilled some laughs for him. Rawlinson's monologue is okay enough without outside help and, besides, he has a personality that will carry him anywhere. A sob ballad—something about weeds and roses—has no place in his routine. It can be eliminated to advantage.

Eddie Leonard's minstrelsy closed the first half in much the same way as the previous week. They liked the blackfaced singers and hoofers, and hung on to Leonard to the last. Carrillo attempted to start something with Eddie, but the old-timer was too smart for him. Buck Jones (New Acts) opened the intermish. The screen cowboy showed that he was one on or off, and there was no mistaking. His horse partner, "Silver," is on the stage with him most of the time. Next to closing was Gaston Palmer, French humorist, otherwise an expert juggler. Never a closing act, but good anywhere else. The kids should go for Palmer's stuff, the adults doubtful. Ida May Chadwick with a peeking good girl flash act were left to close the show. Miss Chadwick, assisted by his Six Dizzy Blondes, put speed and pep in their work that, spotted earlier, might have come in handy. Production is nifty and the gals right on the spot. Full stage layout has more than ample changes with Miss Chadwick putting herself and the others through fast paces.

All told the bills here are still in the making.

Not a strong show at Pantages last week. Enough material with regulation six acts but for first time in long while disadvantageously spotted. Several full stage turns may have accounted for the moves made.

Business about normal first show Monday afternoon. Downstairs getting the usual full play, but higher up still a problem. Name attraction was Francis X. Bushman, Jr. (New Acts) in a spooky sketch that did not spook so much. From the reception he received they seemed to know him. Nifty opener were the Nagyfys, standard fire eaters, always interesting. A lot of showmanship is tied up in the blazing tricks and presented in style different from others. As stage was set full ahead and back the silver sheet came down to intervene with an Aesop's Fable strutting some cuts and nice stuff. Bushman skit followed, then Miss Marcelle, blonde tressed dame, who fooled 'em for a long time under cork. This gal certainly knows her make-up. She yodels a mean blue note in true darktown fashion and delivers. Until she pulled off the wig response was more or less slow, after that something else again. Flash dance act and known here were Caranas and Barker, youthful and capable. Company of five in toto. Team did three routines with best bets tango and varsity drag. Boy-girl comedy dancing couple scored by themselves with the gal clicking soloistically in acrobatics. Song interlude had a tenor with lusty pipes but in need of new numbers. Piano accompanist is a woman not doing specialty.

Next to closing was the Jolly Four, old time minstrels. Nothing in particular outstanding except some falls by George W. Cunningham. More comedy would help. Sandy Lang and Co. were good closers. The skating turn is always a good bet and can be spotted anywhere. Emeralde Sisters know what's what with ball-bearings too, and flash some neat twirls. "Come to My House" (Fox) on screen.

Executive offices to house the Samuel Goldwyn organization at United Artists studios are being provided on the lot by adding second and third stories to the present building. Goldwyn will move over to U. A. about April 1.

"Speakeasy" will follow "Kongo" at the Orange Grove. Casting and rehearsals will begin this week.

San Francisco

By JACK EDWARDS

Variety's San Francisco Office
Loew's Warfield Bldg.
(Room 615) Prospect 1363

With more than 1,800 regular subscribers and with a number of successes already to its credit, San Francisco Players Guild entrenched itself among that clientele that craves the unusual, and some of the better things, of the theatre. Currently, the Guild is presenting Sheridan's "Rivals," with what is probably the best cast so far assembled under its auspices. The veteran Emelia Melville is Mrs. Malaprop, and gives a delightful performance. Allen Connor plays Capt. Jack Absolute well, while the Bob Acres of Victor Rodman and the Sir Lucius O'Trigger of Cameron Prud-homme are outstanding. Virginia Phillips is pleasingly sweet as Lydia Languish and Fay Wynne is captivating as Lucy.

Scenically, the Guild revival is somewhat unique. A single set suffices for the nine scenes. This is done through means of an arch, back center, back of which a street drop, an interior, or an exterior drop, brings about the desired effect. Old-time candle footlights with plain tin reflectors give a touch of English atmosphere. "Foots" are lighted by two footmen with tapers, who also act as prop boys. This is all done while the main drapes are apart, and is not unlike the Chinese theatre method, excepting that there is no interference while the performers are on stage.

Reginald Travers directed with the aid of Junius Cravens. Engagement is for two weeks only, after which the Guild will play "In Abraham's Bosom."

Community Playhouse, where the Guild plays are given, seats about 675. Top, $1.50. Regular Wednesday and Saturday mats and nightly excepting Sunday.

Flo Kelly, assistant to Gae Foster, Fanchon & Marco production department, went to Portland to stage F. & M. presentation for Broadway theatre, week March 1.

Hood (Robin and Hood), Orpheum Act, severely injured and forced to cancel Los Angeles Orpheum booking, when an auto in which he was returning here from Santa Cruz collided with a car driven by students, one of the latter being killed. Hood was taken to a hospital suffering injuries and shock.

Horace Heidt and orchestra (Grand-Lake, Oakland) have started recording 14 sides of records for Victor, all for national release. This is the biggest recording contract ever given a Pacific coast organization. The recording is being done here by Roy Shields. Lee Lykens of the Heidt band is being groomed for baritone solo records.

West Coast Theatres KYA programs are being made up largely in response to fan letters, with special preference given to the sick. The twice-a-week broadcasts are usually dedicated to some sick person who has requested certain selections. West Coast Theatres in Oakland are now broadcasting over Radio KLX.

Radio Station KYA (Examiner and West Coast Theatres) has been awarded a new wave length by the Federal commission, effective April 1. Recently the station's wave length was increased from 309 to 357.7. On April 1 it will go to 361.2, and at the same time will increase its power from 500 to 1,500 watts.

Goldtree and Biebel will produce for the first time in this country "Love a la Carte," scheduled for the Green Street here early in March. It is an adaptation of a French comedy. The cast will be headed by Ruth Stewart, with James Durkin, late of the Morosco Stock, Los Angeles, directing.

Charles Thall, West Coast Theatres booking manager for Northern California division, broke into print when he advised the newspapers, in response to queries, that under no circumstance would West Coast Theatres book any films of the Hickman trial.

Owen Sweeten and his Granada stage band is currently featuring a waltz ballad, "Endora," written by Charles M. Donald, a convict doing a long stretch in San Quentin.

Vitaphone openings scheduled for this territory during the next few weeks include the Capitol (West Coast Theatres), Sacramento, opening March 3, with "My Best Girl" on the screen; Mission (West Coast Theatres), San Jose, opening March 11, and State, Fresno, March 12.

"Sunny," musical, produced by Gerhold Davis, and which just concluded a three weeks' stay at the Columbia here, has been sold for six nights in Texas and Arizona.

Zelda Sears, author of "The Scarlet Woman," in which Pauline Frederick is starred at the Geary, retired from the cast of "Undertow," which has been running in Hollywood, and will replace Marie Shotwell in local production. The part in "The Scarlet Woman" was written by Miss Sears with herself in mind for the role, but her engagement with "Undertow prevented her joining for the first three weeks. Miss Sears is the wife of Lou C. Wiswell, producer of both shows mentioned.

Jack Brehany, until recently personal manager for Louis R. Lurie's theatres, will turn producer. Brehany is sponsoring a four weeks' engagement at the Community Playhouse, starting March 19, of "Appearances," the brainchild of a former San Francisco colored bellhop.

Marjorie Rambeau opened a season of dramatic plays at the Fulton, Oakland. Currently she is appearing in "Declasse."

Phil Phillips, who handles publicity for West Coast Theatres in Oakland, has tied up with Radio KLX (Tribune) for a weekly broadcast of talent appearing in the West Coast houses.

Al Kaplan, m of c in West Coast theatres in the Los Angeles territory, has joined E. Max Bradfield, new m of c at the T & D, Oakland, for a few weeks. He sits with the band and "specializes," including clowning.

Pantages (San Francisco) and Fox films have tied up with the S. F. News for a screen test contest whereby the News is sponsoring tryouts for local girls with movie ambitions.

U. S. Judge Kerrigan signed an order permitting Harry Burke, former New York newspaper man, and his son, H. W. (Billy) Burke, to remain out of the court's jurisdiction until July 30. They are awaiting trial here on conspiracy charges in connection with the bringing here and showing of the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures last fall. The two Burkes are now in the East.

Martin Olsen, former night watchman at Pantages, was brought back from Nogales, Mexico, to face trial on the alleged theft of $3,500 of the theatre money from a bank safety vault. Olsen's wife, who returned with him, but against whom there is no charge, said that intoxication following his marriage to her in December, prompted him to take the dough.

Walker Whiteside opened a two weeks' engagement of "Sakura" at the Columbia Feb. 27. After two weeks on the road Whiteside returns here for two weeks i "The Hindu."

Royal, at Polk and California, and Alhambra at Polk and Green, about 12 blocks apart, both owned and operated by T. & D. Junior circuit, are now playing day and date pictures.

August F. Schlaicher has presented the San Francisco public library with more than 1,000 old-time theatre programs, dating back to the real pioneer days of the city.

Joe Sinai, drummer, T. & D. (Oakland) stage band, has been appointed musical director and m. of c. at the Wilson (West Coast), Fresno. Sinai is a brother-in-law of Paul Ash and formerly worked with him.

Pete Conley, local ticket broker, is opening a chain of box offices in the Bay district, chiefly Alameda and Berkeley, and will handle seats for all legit attractions playing here.

Gayety—Burlesque (Mutual).

New time schedule went into effect this week at Fay's with the discontinuance of vaude. "The Jazz Singer" (Al Jolson) is held over for second week, with five performances daily.

Encouraged by Canandaigua's success, other upstate towns are going after Sunday movies. Penn Yan wants a vote on the proposition and Newark will have one at the election March 20. This is the third vote in Newark, the Sunday shows losing in 1925 and 1927, although by a narrow vote last year. Canandaigua's first Sunday show last week drew 1,500 more than was expected.

Olcott Beach had its second disastrous fire within a year last week, when fire started in the Castle theatre destroyed the block with $35,000 damage. Last spring an $80,000 blaze destroyed the Albright roller rink, adjoining concessions, and the Episcopal church.

Richard Knost, former Schibe manager in Geneva, has been transferred to the Temple, Fairport, succeeding Elmer Bailey.

Perry Grange at Perry Center has organized the Perry Grange Players, a Little Theatre group, directed by Marie Hawley. Three one-act plays will be presented next month.

Albert F. Hettig, former Rochester druggist, has purchased the interests of George Gamble, Rochester, and Harry Altman, Buffalo, in the Arcadia ballroom here. Irving Fox will manage. Captain Warnack and his Algerians now furnish music, suceeding Ted Ray's Arcadians.

The Schine Theatrical Co., beginning May 1, will erect a new theatre on the site of the Princess theatre in Corning. The house will seat 1,000.

Richard Spier, Oregon Division manager, West Coast Theatres, has brought up from California two expert floor managers to install a new system of seating and handling of crowds at the Broadway.

Eddie Hitchcock is handling the new Publix theatre opening, on March 3.

"The Oregonian," morning sheet, cleaned house recently and gave five vets in their advertising force the ozone. Ray Perry, in charge of theatre advertising, was one of them.

Henry Duffy, reported arranging with Calvin Heilig, owned local Heilig, to lease the house, commencing May, 1928. The Duffy Players at present are at Warner's Music Box theatre, which is to be razed in May.

Will King is assembling a company for his local engagement at the West Coast Liberty, the early part of March. King, it is understood, will have Lew Dunbar, Bessie Hill and Sylvia and Clemence back with him. "Hermie" King, brother, and at present m. of c. at the Fifth Avenue, Seattle, is to follow Ollie Wallace, into the local Broadway some time in March.

Irvin Wauterstreet is handling Gene Dennis' exploitation.

Bob Blair, formerly with Texas Publix theatres, comes here as manager of the new Publix theatre.

A large new amusement park, to be known as the Hayden Island Amuscment Park, is to be opened, March 25. This park will supplant the old Columbia Beach, which has been a landmark here for many years. Fred L. Boalt, editor, Portland News, is vice-president of the corporation.

Movietone is to go into the West Coast Broadway, commencing on March 2. Movietone is now at Hamrick's Blue Mouse, while Fox News is showing at the West Coast Liberty.

Liborius Hauptmann, pianist, former leader of the Broadway theatre orchestra, was one of the victims in the failure of Overbecke & Cooke, brokers. Hauptmann is now in charge of radio music at the "Morning Oregonian."

Court Street—"The Unwanted Child" (stock).

The M. P. Theatre Owners, Buffalo zone, appeared as sponsors for a paid advertisement in the theatrical columns of local newspapers warning the public to beware of fake stock issues concerned with the promotion of theatres and theatrical enterprises.

Jules H. Michael, chairman of the M. P. T. O.; Arthur Da Bra of Cleveland, publicity man for the Hays organization, and Zeta Yumans of Chicago, child labor worker, appeared before the Social Workers' club at the Hotel Touraine here this week in an effort to secure co-operation by the theatre owners and social workers in providing suitable moving picture programs for children. The local owners, through Mr. Michael, have offered to co-operate.

Manager H. M. Addison of the Great Lakes advertised for two couples who would consent to be married on the stage. After the paid had been selected and the names and photographs published in the newspapers, Rev. James C. Crosson, local pastor, broke into print with a vehement condemnation of the procedure. The protest was good for two columns and Manager Addison's reply for two more.

MONTREAL
By C. W. L.

Princess—"The Vagabond King."
His Majesty's—Dark.
Orpheum—"Take My Advice" (stock).
Capitol—"The Divine Woman" (M-G-M).
Palace—"The Dove" (F. N.).
Loew's—"Alias the Lone Wolf" (Col.) and vaude.
Imperial—"The Irresistible Lover" (U.) and vaude.
Strand—"Law of the Range" (M-G-M); "Stage Kisses" (Col.); "An Artist's Lover" (Warner) and "Hero for a Night" (U.).
Gayety—"Social Maids" (Mutual).

Montreal Theatre Managers' Association is holding meetings these days trying to solve the two big attacks threatening the industry. The "under 16" barring out clause and the "dark Sunday." Nothing definite decided. Half page ads in local press no longer anonymous, but over signature "Retail Manufacturers' Association." All sorts of letters in papers, mostly against Sunday closing and shutting the teen age fans out.

Announced here the Palace theatre sold to Famous Players for $175,000. It looks like a cheap price but may be only fulfillment of some legal requirement since it has been long known the house was under F. P. management.

Despite attacks on movies in this province, a new house will shortly open in Three Rivers, about 100 miles from here up the St. Lawrence.

Capitol theatre, after trying out short vaude with orchestra on stage, has pulled latter back into orchestra pit and is now talking of bringing Public Presentations after Lent. So far only hitch is railway arrangements, Boston run leaving that city at 9 p. m. for Montreal which would be too early for finish of show there.

DENVER

Aladdin—"Jazz Singer" (3d week).
America—"Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (2d week).
Broadway—Dark.
Colorado—"Sailors' Wives."
Denham—"The Green Hat" (Inde stock).
Denver—"The Divine Woman"; stage show, "Steppin' High."
Empress—"The Jelly Bean" (Inde musical stock) and "The River of No Return," Inde travel picture.
Orpheum—Vaude, John Steel, tenor, and Johnny Burke.
Rialto—"Old Ironsides."
Victory—"Silver Valley" (1st half).

Fanny Brice, who played Orpheum here last week, told a reporter that she had been signed to make a Vita picture for Warner Bros. Production on the story, as yet unwritten, probably will start in June, she said.

Mrs. Mary Specht has obtained divorce from organist husband, Francis V. B. Specht, now in Seattle, Wash. Spechts were married in Denver on Nov. 2, 1927, and lived together only six weeks. Alleged failure to provide, plus alleged cruelty.

Dog racing, which got quite a start in Denver last summer, has received possibly a death blow at the hands of a district judge, who declared it illegal and sentenced the track owners to jail. They will appeal.

Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor, his actress wife, will come to the Pike's Peak region in March as guests of Spencer Penrose, millionaire sportsman.

MILWAUKEE
By HERB ISRAEL

Davidson—"2 Girls Wanted" (Legit).
Empress—German stock.
Gayety—Mutual Burlesque.
Alhambra—"That's My Daddy."
Garden—"Sorrell & Son" (2d week).
Majestic—"San Francisco Nights"-vaude.
Merrill—"Baby Mine."
Miller—"Foreign Devils."
Palace—"Let 'Er Go Gallagher"-vaude.
Strand—"Flying Romeos."
Wisconsin—"Divine Woman."

Joe Lawrence and John Levin, Chicago, have taken over the Golden Pheasant, roadhouse, from Max Maglio. Barney Glatt has the band.

"I Lost My Heart in Heidelberg," German film, was shown at the Auditorium last week. It follows close on M-G-M's "Student Prince," but got a big play from the Germans here.

Padlock proceedings have been started against the Frisco Inn, cabaret, which was raided a few weeks ago.

D. F. Kelliher is building a new movie house at Delavan. He recently sold the Majestic at Lake Geneva; Grand at East Troy and Plaza at Burlington to the Community Theatres, Inc., new small-town syndicate organized here several months ago.

Leases totaling $200,000 have been signed by Fox and Metro-Goldwyn for space in the new Film Exchange building here.

Incorporation of the Parkway Investment Co., for the building of picture houses in Racine, was announced last week by Frank P. Marino, Joseph Dominik and John Rallo.

FOX'S COSTUMES

Mostly imported models will drape the Fox stars and featured players, with Sheehan having decided that all Fox films calling for "clothes" will get clothes as iz. The engagement of the Collins' stamps this as a fact. No terms are reported.

First Fur on Dress

Outstanding among the class modiste shops, Harry Collins established himself as an extremist some years ago, when he furnished Julia Sanderson, then in a Frohman musical, with the first gown ever ornamented with fur. Miss Sanderson protested against wearing it upon the stage. She said it would make her look like a masquerader. It was only through the insistence of her manager that the star was finally prevailed upon to carry the gown that had a wide band of chinchilla around it.

It cost $650 in those days and could not be duplicated in present times under $2,000.

Millie Leonard, who withdrew from the Wilton Agency some weeks ago to open her own agency, has closed the latter to go with Johnny Collins' office.

Wakefield, Laconia and Burke theatres, operated by Bolty Bros., in the Bronx, have added one day presentations booked by Stern and Green.

Cast Changes
Peggy Wood out of "The Merchant of Venice" at the Broadhurst with a heavy cold. Eleanor Stewart replaced her. Miss Wood is due back this week.

Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., has been added by the Sun Agency, New York. Five acts on a split week.

THE RAGE OF PARIS

DOLLIE AND BILLIE

STARRING AT THE MOULIN ROUGE

"'Two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one.' Billie-Dollie, dual personality, irresistibly comic. 'It' carries clowning to the highest power. Dollie-Billie dances amazingly and amusingly, and sings very originally. It is a double star that gives lustre to the new bill at the Moulin Rouge."
—"DAILY MAIL" (Paris Edition).

"Dollie and Billie, American sisters of talent, incorporate all the fantastical imagination of the first pictures of MacSennet."
—"L'INFORMATION."

"There are two pretty poupees anglaises, Dollie and Billie, a couple of real little clowns, graceful yet full of fun."—"LE GAULOIS."

"Dollie and Billie, with their delightful and charming fun which won them a triumphant success."
—"EXCELSIOR."

"Billie and Dollie are deliciously full of pep. The divers phases of their act cannot be recorded in a few lines, and we take off our hats to them."
—"LE PETIT JOURNAL"

"Charming Dollie and Billie sing like a bird; they are full of gaiety, with the sense of humor we are not accustomed to find in such young ladies."—"LE FIGARE."

"Two frail little dolls, with blonde curls, graceful while brimming over with antics, Dollie and Billie, of incomparable clown-like fantasies."—"LA LIBERTE."

"'Paris aux Etoiles!' What a luxurious show. Again the Moulin Rouge adds a jewel to its world renown. Dollie and Billie sent us into raptures and proved their title of big stars."—"COMOEDIA."
